DIGEST OF CASES

DETERMINED IN THE

SUPREME COURT OF CANADA

ON APPEAL FROM DOMINION, PROVINCIAL AND TERRITORIAL COURTS, AND UPON REFERRED QUESTIONS FROM THE ORGANIZA-TION OF THE COURT IN 1875 TO 20TH OCTOBER, 1903.

Comprising all cases reported in volumes 1 to 33 of the official reports, inclusively, the cases specially reported in Cassels's Digest (2nd ed.), and a number of cases, hitherto unreported, decided during the same period.

COMPILED BY

LOUIS WILLIAM COUTLÉE, K.C. (Que.), B.C.L. (McGill), SOMETIME AN OFFICIAL LAW REPORTER OF THE COURT.

TORONTO, CANADA.
THE CARSWELL COMPANY, LIMITED.
1904.

B 9878

Entered according to the Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year one thousand nine hundred and four, by THE CARSWELL COMPANY, LIMITED, in the Office of the Minister of Agriculture.

PREFACE.

This digest has been compiled with a view to supplying a more comprehensive and classified index to the jurisprudence of the Supreme Court of Canada, in concise form, than has hitherto been within reach of the profession and other persons interested in following the decisions of the highest appellate tribunal in Canada. The decisions digested in Mr. Cassels's work have been, as a rule, incorporated as found in the head-notes of the official reports, and the cases that were specially reported by Mr. Cassels have been digested in more convenient shape. The remainder of the officially reported cases, with numerous unreported decisions, have been brought down to the date of the first judgments on appeals heard during the last Autumn Sessions of the court, 20th October, 1903, and some important notes added since that date. Many useful additions have been made to the official head-notes based upon careful re-consideration of the reasons for judgments, and, in some instances, new syllabi have been constructed, errors and omissions have been corrected where necessary, and it is hoped that the present work as revised, condensed and re-framed, will afford greater facility for consultation and shew more clearly the principles involved in the decisions of the court than any work of the kind heretofore published.

References to the decisions of the courts appealed from are given in all cases reported in the courts below, and the decisions of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, in cases reviewed on appeal from the Supreme Court of Canada, have been inserted wherever it was possible to do so.

In the Appendices, A and B lists appear of cases judicially noticed and the dispositions made in Supreme Court cases on appeal to the Privy Council.

In order to bring the work within convenient size without limiting its usefulness, copious cross-references have been inserted in the nature of further analytical index of the subjects, which should meet all ordinary needs of the profession in getting at the side-lights and having ready reference to the jurisprudence established since the organization of the court.

The names of the eminent jurists of whom the Supreme Court of Canada has been constituted since its organization, in 1875, will be found at page vii. A tabular statement of the business of the court is given at page xi.

It is suggested that in citations from this work a convenient abbreviated reference would be "Cout. Dig." (without mentioning it as a second edition, which it, in fact, is not), and that the column paginations should be treated as pages.

ACCOUNT.

1. Charges against succession—Débats de comptes—Sale of stock-in-trade—Onus probandi—Evidence.]—In a débats de comptes between the tutor to a minor child and the universal legatee who had possession of the minor's property items, $5,466.63 (for stock of goods sold by L. R. to his son) and $451.07 and $90.76 for "cash received at the counter," were contested. In 1871, L. L. R., the minor's father, by his contract of marriage obtained from his father, L. R., immoveable property, en avancement d'hoirie. At the same time L. R. retired from business and left L. L. R. the whole of his stock-in-trade, valued at $5,466.63. L. L. R. died in 1872, leaving one child, said minor. There was no evidence that the stock-in-trade had been sold by the father and purchased by the son, or that the father gave it to his son, but in making an inventory of the succession of L. L. R. he was charged with this amount of $5,466.63: Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (2 Dor. Q. B. 74), that it was for the universal legatee to prove that there had been a sale of the stock-in-trade by L. R. to L. L. R., and there being no evidence of such a sale, she could not legally charge the minor child with that amount.—The other two items were allowed by the Court of Queen's Bench on the ground that, although they had been entered as cash received at the counter, there was evidence that they had been already entered in the ledger. The only evidence to support this fact was the affidavit of the book-keeper of L. R., since deceased, filed with the reddition de comptes before a notary, prior to action: Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (2 Dor. Q. B. 74), that the affidavit of the book-keeper was inadmissible as evidence, and, therefore, these two items could not be charged against the minor. Gagnon v. Prince, vii. 386. The Privy Council refused leave to appeal; 8 App. Cas. 103.

2. Reddition de compte—Contradictory pleas—Unsworn account—Practice.]—In an action en reddition de compte by an assignor against his assignee, the assignee by his plea answered that he was not bound to render an account, and at the same time alleged that he had already accounted for the moneys as garnishee in another suit, but he produced an unsworn account, and asked the court to declare the same to be a true and faithful account of his administration, and prayed for the dismissal of the plaintiff's action: Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (11 Q. L. R. 342) and restoring the judgment of the Court of Review at Quebec, that although the parties had joined issue and heard witnesses to prove certain items of the unsworn account produced, the plaintiff was first entitled to a judgment of the court ordering the defendant to produce a sworn account supported by vouchers, and therefore his action had been improperly dismissed. L'Heureux v. Lamarche, xii., 460.

3. Taking accounts—Charge to jury—Inability to deal with accounts.]—Counsel for plaintiff requested the judge to instruct the jury to take certain accounts into consideration. The jury stated that they were unable to deal with the accounts: Held, that the case could not be properly decided without taking accounts and that it could be more properly dealt with as an equity case. Griffiths v. Boscowitz, xviii., 718.

4. Curator—Administration—Form of action—Indivisibility—Release—Specific performance—Mandate—Purchase of trust estate—Parties to suit—Art. 1484 C. C.—Art. 920 C. C. P.]—Respondent, representing the institutes and substitutes under the will of the late J. D., brought an action against appellant, one of the institutes who acted as curator and administrator of the estate for a certain time, for an account of three particular sums, which plaintiff alleged defendant had received while curator: Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (18 R. L. 647), that an action did not lie against the appellant for these particular sums apart and distinct from an action for an account of his administration of the rest of the estate.—Plaintiff alleged that he represented S. D., one of the substitutes, in virtue of a deed of release and subrogation by which it appeared he had paid to S. D.'s attorney for and on behalf of defendant £447 7s. 6½d., defendant having in an action of account settled by deed with S. D. for $4,000 which he agreed to pay and for which plaintiff became surety: Held, that as the deed gave defendant a full and complete discharge of all accounts as curator or administrator of the estate, plaintiff could not claim a further account of these particular sums.—Plaintiff also claimed to represent F. D. and E. D. two other institutes, in virtue of assignments to him by them on 21st January and 15th November, 1869, respectively. In 1865, after defendant had been sued in an action of account, by a deed of settlement, F. D. and E. D. agreed to accept as their shares in the estate $4,000 each, and gave defendant a complete and full discharge: Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the defendant could not be sued for a new account, but could only be sued for the specific performance of the obligations he had contracted under the deed of settlement.—By the judgment appealed from (18 R. L. 647), defendant was condemned to account for his own share transferred to plaintiff in 1862, and also for C. D.'s share, another institute who in 1882 transferred his rights to plaintiff. The transfer by defendant was as co-legatee of such rights and interests as he had at the time of transfer, and he had at that time received the sixth of the sum for which he was asked to account: Held, reversing the court below, that plaintiff took nothing as regards these sums under the transfer, and even if he was entitled to anything, the defendant would not be liable in action to account as mandatory or negotiorum gestor of plaintiff. 2. That F. D. and E. D., having acquired an interest in C. Z. D.'s share after the transfer of their shares to plaintiff in 1869, plaintiff could not maintain his action without making them parties to the suit.—Quære, Were the transfers made by the institutes to plaintiff while curator, null and void under art. 1484, C. C.? Dorion v. Dorion, xx., 430.

5. Partnership—Settled accounts—Releases—Setting aside releases and opening accounts.]—One of two members of a firm not possessing business capacity the other managed and controlled all its affairs, presenting at intervals to his partner statements of account which the latter signed on being assured of their correctness. In 1891 mutual releases of all claims and demands against each other, based upon statements so submitted by the active partner, were executed by each. In an action against the active partner to set aside these releases and open up the accounts: Held, that all it was necessary to establish was, that in the accounts as settled there were such errors and mistakes as would inflict material injustice upon the plaintiff if the accounts should be held to be closed. West v. Benjamin, xxix., 282.

6. Appeal—Débats de compte—Issues en reddition—Amount in controversy—Jurisdiction.]—In an action en reddition de compte, where items in the account filed exceeding in the aggregate two thousand dollars have been contested, the Supreme Court of Canada has jurisdiction to entertain an appeal. Bell v. Vipond, xxxi., 175.

7. Action for account—Agent's returns—Compromise—Subsequent discovery of error—Rectification—Prejudice.]—P. was agent to manage the wharf property of W., and receive the rents and profits thereof, being paid by commission. When his agency terminated W. was unable to obtain an account from him and brought an action therefor which was compromised by P. paying $375, giving $125 cash and a note for the balance, and receiving an assignment of all debts due to W. in respect to the wharf property during his agency, a list of which was prepared at the time. Shortly before the note became due P. discovered that, on one of the accounts assigned to him, $100 had been paid and demanded credit on his note for that sum. This W. refused, and in an action on the note P. claimed that the error avoided the compromise and that the note was without consideration or, in the alternative, that the note should be rectified: Held, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, that as it appeared that P.'s attorney had knowledge of the error before the compromise was effected, and as, by the compromise, W. was prevented from going fully into the accounts and perhaps establishing greater liability on the part of P., W. was entitled to recover the full amount of the note. *Peters v. 1. ACCOUNT.

1. Reddition de compte — Contradictory pleading — Practice — Right of action.] — Where incompatible pleas have been filed and no sworn account regularly rendered in an action en reddition de compte, the point to be first decided is the plaintiff's right to have an account properly rendered. Judgment appealed from (11 Q. R. R. 342), reversed. L'Heureux v. Lamarche, xii, 460.

2. Reddition de compte—Mandate—Settlement without vouchers—Réformation de compte — Errors and omissions.] — If a mandator and a mandatory, labouring under no legal disability, come to an amicable settlement about the rendering of an account due by the mandatory without vouchers or any formality whatsoever, such a rendering of account is perfectly legal; and if subsequently the mandator discovers any errors or omissions in the account his recourse against his mandatory is by an action en réformation de compte, and not by an action asking for another complete account. Judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 3 Q. B. 167), affirmed. Gulespie v. Stephens, xiv, 709.

3. Account—Dealings through third party—Lien on raft—Interest of plaintiff—Proceeds of sale of timber—Advances.] — The plaintiff as owner in possession of a raft of timber, valued at $30,000, being in want of money, applied to the defendant for a loan of $3,000, which he obtained on transferring the raft as security. The defendant disposed of the timber, but did not account for the proceeds. The plaintiff, admitting that the defendant was entitled to re-pay himself the advance of $3,000, and expenses, prayed for an account, or, in default, $30,000, the alleged value. The defendant pleaded that the raft was received, not from the plaintiff, but from one B., whose property it was, under whose instructions he had disposed of it, and to whom he had, before suit, accounted: Held, affirming both courts below, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the account for which he asked, the dealings of defendant having been with B., to whom alone he was accountable, and plaintiff having no real interest when his action was brought. Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissented. Doran v. Ross, 23rd June, 1884; Cass Dig. (2 ed.) 829.

4. Municipal corporation—By-law—Railway aid—Subscription for shares—Debentures—Division of county—Erection of new municipalities—Assessment—Sale of shares at discount — Action en reddition de comptes — Trustee — Debtor and creditor — Arts. 78, 164, 939, Mun. Code, Que. — 24 Vict. c. 30 (Que.)—39 Vict. c. 50 (Que.)] — An action en reddition de comptes does not lie against a trustee invested with the administration of a fund, until such administration is complete and terminated. — The relation existing between a county corporation under the provisions of the municipal code of the Province of Quebec and the local municipalities of which it is composed, in relation to money by-laws, is not that of agent or trustee, but the county corporation is a creditor, and the several local municipalities are its debtors for the amount of the taxes to be assessed upon their rate-payers respectively. — Where local municipalities have been detached from a county, and erected into separate corporations, they remain in the same position, in regard to subsisting money by-laws, as they were before the division, and have no further rights or obligations than if they had never been separated therefrom, and they cannot either conjointly or individually institute actions against such county corporation to compel the rendering of special accounts of the administration of funds in which they have an interest, their proper method of securing statements being through the facilities provided by article 164, and other provisions of the municipal code. *Township of Ascott v. 3. CONDUCTIO INDEBITI.

12. Contract — Sale of patent — Future improvements — Money had and received. — By contract under seal M. agreed to sell to B. and S. the patent for an acetylene gas machine for which he had applied and a caveat had been filed, and also all improvements and patents for such machine that he might thereafter make, and covenanted that he would procure patents in Canada and the United States and assign the same to B. and S. The latter received an assignment of the Canadian patent and paid a portion of the purchase money, but when the American patent was issued it was found to contain a variation from the description of the machine in the caveat and they refused to pay the balance, and in an action by M. to recover the same, they demanded by counterclaim a return of what had been paid on account: Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, that the agreement was not satisfied by an assignment of any patent that M. might afterwards obtain; that he was bound to obtain and assign a patent for the machine described in the caveat referred to in the agreement; and that as the evidence shewed the variation therefrom in the American patent to be most material, and to deprive the purchasers of a feature in the machine which they deemed essential, M. was not entitled to recover. Held, further, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that as B. and S. accepted the Canadian patent and paid a portion of the purchase money in consideration thereof, and as they took the benefit of it, worked it for their own profit and sold rights under it, they were not entitled to recover back the money so paid as money had and received by M. to their use. Bingham v. McMurray, xxx., 159.

13. Condictio indebiti — Title to land — Exposure to eviction — Sheriff — Vacating sale — Refund of price of adjudication — Substitution not yet open — Prior incumbrancer — Petition — Arts. 706, 710, 714, 715, C. C. P.] — The provisions of article 715 of the Code of Civil Procedure of Lower Canada do not apply to sheriff's sales which have been perfected by payment of the price of adjudication and the execution of a deed, nor does that article give a right to have such a sale vacated, and the amount paid refunded. The actio condictio indebiti for the recovery of the price paid by the purchaser of lands lies only in cases where there has been actual eviction. Mere exposure to eviction is not sufficient ground for vacating a sheriff's sale. The procedure by petition provided by the Code of Civil Procedure for vacating sheriff's sales can only be invoked in cases where an action would lie. Trust and Loan Co. v. Quintal (2 Dor. Q. B. 190), followed. Deschamps v. Bury, xxix., 274.

14. Condictio indebiti — Répétition de l'indu — Fictitious claims — Misrepresentation — Evidence — Onus probandi — Arts. 1047, 1048, 1140 C. C. — Railway subsidies — 54 Vict. c. 88 (Que.) — Insolvent company — Construction of railroad by new company — Payment of claims by crown — Transfer by payee. — A company formed for the construction of a subsidized railway having failed, another company undertook to complete it, and the government of Quebec agreed to pay all the actual debts against the road out of the unearned subsidies. A., the contractor of the former company, presented a claim for $175,000, which was approved of and paid, whereupon he paid over $100,000 of the amount to P. for services performed in organizing the new company and obtaining payment of the claim. The government afterwards brought an action against P. to recover back the $100,000 on the ground that A.'s claim was fictitious and was paid on false representations: Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, that the action must fail if it could not have been maintained against A., that the onus was on the Crown of proving A.'s claim to be fictitious, and that the Crown not only failed to satisfy such onus, but the evidence clearly established the claim to be a just and reasonable one. Held, further, that, in any case, the action could not be maintained, as it failed to ask for the cancellation of the order in council, the letter of credit and the payment made by the Crown thereunder. Held, further, that the payment to A., with the consent of the new company, was a discharge to the government pro tanto of the subsidy due to the company, and if wrongfully paid the latter only could recover it back. Held, also, that even if the Crown could have recovered the amount from A., it could not succeed against P., who, as the record shewed, had ample reason for believing that the company was indebted to A., as claimed. Pacaud v. The Queen, xxix., 637.

15. Municipal taxes — Railways — By-laws — Voluntary payment — Action to recover back moneys paid to corporation. — Held, per Strong C.J., that where taxes have been paid to a municipal corporation voluntarily and with knowledge of the state of the law and the circumstances under which the tax was imposed, no action can lie to recover the money so paid from the municipality. Judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench (Q. R. 8 Q. B. 246) affirmed. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. v. City of Quebec. Grand Trunk Ry. Co. v. City of Quebec, xxx., 73.

4. CONDITION PRECEDENT.

21. Bailees — Common Carriers — Express company — Receipt for money parcel — Conditions precedent — Formal notice of claim — Pleading — Money had and received — Special pleas — "Never indebted."] — Where an express company gave a receipt for money to be forwarded with the condition indorsed that the company should not be liable for any claim in respect of the package unless within sixty days of loss or damage a claim should be made by written statement with a copy of the contract annexed: Held, that the consignor was obliged to comply strictly with these terms as a condition precedent to recovery against the express company for failure to deliver the parcel to the consignee. Richardson v. The Canada West Farmers' Ins. Co. (16 U. C. C. P. 430) distinguished. — In an action to recover the value of the parcel, on the common count for money had and received, the plea of "never indebted" put in issue all material facts necessary to establish the plaintiff's right of action. Northern Pacific Express Co. v. Martin, xxvi., 135.

22. Damages — Quasi-delit — Limitations — Arbitration — C. S. L. C. c. 51.] — The mode of proceeding provided by C. S. L. C. c. 51, does not exclude the right of proceeding by action. (See 7 Q. L. R. 286; 15 R. L. 514). Breakey v. Carter, 12th May, 1885. Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 463.

23. Compensation — Defence — Taking advantage of one's own wrong.] — In an action to recover an amount received by the defendant for the plaintiff, the defendant pleaded inter alia that the action was premature inasmuch as he had got the money irregularly from the treasurer of the Province of Quebec on a report of distribution of the prothonotary before all the contestations to the report of collocation had been decided: Held, affirming the judgment of the court below, that this defence was not open to the defendant, as it would be giving him the benefit of his own improper and illegal proceedings. Bury v. Murray, xxiv., 77.

24. Accident insurance — Condition in policy — Notice — Condition precedent — Action.] — A policy contained a condition that written notice should be given within thirty days of accident, to the manager at Boston, or the agent whose name was endorsed thereon. Insured having died from an accident, the beneficiary brought action on the policy to which the company pleaded want of notice under the condition. The plaintiff's demurrer was allowed. Held, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that notice in conformity with the condition was a condition precedent to action, and that the demurrer must be overruled. Employers' Liability Ass. Co. v. Taylor, xxix., 104.

25. "Mortgage clause" — Fire insurance — Assignment of interest in property insured — Arbitration — Award — Condition precedent.] — A mortgagee of insured premises to whom payment is to be made in case of loss "as his interest may appear" cannot recover on the policy when his mortgage has been assigned and he has ceased to have any interest at the time of the loss. — Where a condition in the policy provided that no action should be maintainable against the company for any claim under the policy until after an award should have been obtained in the manner therein provided fixing the amount of the claim: Held, that the making of such an award was a condition precedent to any right of action to recover a claim for loss under the policy. Guerin v. Manchester Fire Assurance Company, xxix., 139.

26. Fire insurance — Condition in policy — Time limit for submitting particulars of loss — Condition precedent — Waiver — Authority of agent.] — A condition in a policy of insurance against fire provided that the assured "is to deliver within fifteen days after the fire, in writing, as particular an account of the loss as the nature of the case permits." Held, following Employers' Liability Ass. Corp. v. Taylor, (29 Can. S. C. R. 104), that compliance with this provision was a condition precedent to an action on the policy. The Atlas Assurance Company v. Brownell, xxix., 537.

27. Condition precedent — Allegation of performance — Burden of proof — Waiver — Insurance policy.] — Under the Ontario Judicature Act the performance of conditions precedent to a right of action must still be alleged and proved by the plaintiff. Home Life Association v. Randall, xxx., 97.

28. Mines and minerals — Adverse claim — Form of plan and affidavit — Right of action — Condition precedent — Necessity of actual survey — Blank in jurat — R. S. B. C. (1897) c. 135, s. 37 — R. S. B. C. (1897) c. 3, s. 16 — 61 Vict. c. 33, s. 9 (B.C.) — B. C. Supreme Court Rule 415 of 1890.] — The plan required to be filed in an action to adverse a mineral claim under the provisions of s. 37 of the "Mineral Act" of British Columbia, as amended by s. 9 of the "Mineral Act Amendment Act, 1898," need not be based on an actual survey of the location made by the provincial land surveyor who signs the plan. The filing of such plan and the affidavit required under the said section, as amended, is not a condition precedent to the right of the adverse claimant to proceed with his adverse action. *Paulson v. 5. DAMAGES.

41. Tort — Lease of pew — Disturbance in possession — Rights of pew-holder — Measure of damages.—J., an elder and member of the congregation of St. Andrew's Church, Montreal, had been a pew-holder in St. Andrew's Church continuously from 1867 to 1872, inclusive. In 1869 and 1872 he occupied pew No. 68, and on payment of the rental of 1872 obtained a receipt in the following words: "Montreal, January 9th, 1872. $66.50. Received from James Johnston the sum of sixty-six dollars and fifty cents, being rent of first-class pew No. 68, in St. Andrew's Church, Beaver Hall, for the year 1872. For the trustees, J. Clements." It appeared by the by-laws, custom, and usage of the church that pew-holders, being members of the congregation were entitled to have their pews re-let to them from year to year on payment of the annual rental. On the 7th December, 1872, the trustees notified J. that they would not let him a pew for the following year. J. thereupon tendered them the rental for the next year, in advance. On several occasions in 1873, and while still an elder and member of the congregation, he was disturbed in the possession of pew No. 68, by the respondents, the pew having been placarded "for strangers," strangers seated in it, his books and cushions removed, and so forth. For these torts he brought an action against respondents, claiming $10,000 damages. Held (the Chief Justice and Strong, J., dissenting), that as J. continued an elder and member of the congregation and tendered the rent of his pew in advance, he was entitled to a continuance of his lease for the year 1873; that the disturbance complained of gave him a right of action for tort, and that reasonable, but not vindictive, damages should be allowed. Johnston v. Minister and Trustees of St. Andrew's Church, i. 235. The Privy Council refused leave to appeal from this judgment and held that Her Majesty's prerogative to allow an appeal, preserved by 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 47, should not be exercised either because of the magnitude of the case or its effect upon other cases. (3 App. Cas. 159.)

42. Maritime Court of Ontario — Jurisdiction — R. S. O. (1877) c. 128 — Negligence — Action in rem — Damages for death of servant — Lord Campbell's Act — Right of action.—Petition against "The Garland," labelled under the Maritime Court Act (O.), claimed $2,000 damages for the death of appellant's son and servant, caused by the negligence of its officers. The respondent intervened, and demurred on the ground that the petition did not set forth a cause of action against "The Garland" within the jurisdiction of the court. Held, Fournier and Taschereau, J.J., dissenting, that the Maritime Court of Ontario has no jurisdiction apart from R. S. O. (1877) c. 128 re-enacting Lord Campbell's Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 98), in an action for personal injury resulting in death, and therefore the appellant had no locus standi, not having brought her action as the personal representative of the child. Per Fournier, Taschereau, Henry, and Gwynne, J.J., reversing the judgment of the Maritime Court of Ontario that Vice-admiralty Courts in British possessions and the Maritime Court of Ontario have whatever jurisdiction the High Court of Admiralty has over "any claim for damages done by any ship, whether to person or to property." Per Fournier and Taschereau, J.J., dissenting, that apart from and independently of the Act, R. S. O. (1877) c. 128, the Maritime Court of Ontario has jurisdiction in a proceeding in rem against a foreign vessel for the recovery of damages for injuries resulting in death and that the appellant, either in the capacity of parent or of mistress, was entitled to claim damages for the loss of her son or servant. Monaghan v. Horn, "The Garland," vii., 409.

43. Malicious prosecution — Evidence — Favourable termination.—Where a party pays under protest a penalty imposed upon him by a justice of the peace in proceedings taken against him under the provisions of c. 22, C. S. L. C., "An Act respecting Good Order in and near Places of Public Worship," and afterwards brings an action in damages against the person, whom he alleged had maliciously instigated such proceedings, and at the trial before a jury there is no evidence of the favourable termination of the prosecution against him, the court were equally divided as to the right of such party to maintain his action. Sir W. J. Ritchie, C.J., and Strong and Taschereau, J.J., were of opinion that the action could not be maintained under such circumstances. Fournier, Henry, and Gwynne, J.J., contra. The appeal was in consequence dismissed without costs. Poitras v. Lebeau, xiv., 742.

44. Cause of action — Trade union — Combination in restraint of trade — Strikes —Social pressure.]—Workmen who, in carrying out the regulations of a trade union forbidding them to work at a trade in company with non-union workmen, without threats, violence, intimidation or other illegal means, take such measures as result in preventing a non-union workman from obtaining employment at his trade in establishments where union workmen are engaged, do not thereby incur liability to an action for damages. Judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench (Q. R. 6 Q. B. 65) affirmed. Perreault v. Gauthier et al., xxviii., 241.

45. Liquor laws—Municipal corporation—Discretion of members of council—Refusal to confirm certificate—Liability of corporation.]—In an action against a municipal corporation for damages claimed on account of the council of the municipality having, as alleged, illegally refused to confirm a certificate to enable the plaintiff to obtain a license for the sale of liquors in his hotel: Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (Q. R. 8 Q. B. 276), that the municipal council had a discretion under the provisions of the "Quebec License Law," (R. S. Q. art. 839), to be exercised in the matter of the confirmation of such certificates for the exercise of which no action could lie, and further, that even if the members of the council had acted maliciously in refusing to confirm the certificate, there could be no right of action for damages against the corporation on that account. Beach v. Township of Stanstead, xxix., 736.

46. Government railway—Injury to employee—Lord Campbell's Act—Art. 1056 C. C.—Exoneration from liability—R. S. C. c. 38, s. 50.]—Art. 1056 C. C. embodies the action previously given by a statute of the Province of Canada re-enacting Lord Campbell's Act. Robinson v. Canadian Pacific Railway Co., ([1892] A. C. 481) distinguished.—An employee on the Intercolonial Railway became a member of the Intercolonial Railway Relief and Assurance Association, to the funds of which the government contributed annually $6,000. In consequence of such contribution a rule of the association provided that the members renounced all claims against the Crown arising from injury or death in the course of their employment. The employee having been killed in discharge of his duty by negligence of a fellow servant: Held, reversing the judgment of the Exchequer Court (6 Can. Ex. C. R. 276) that the rule of the association was answer to an action by his widow under art. 1056 C. C. to recover compensation for his death. The Queen v. Grenier, xxx., 42.

C.—Waiver—Failure to plead limitation—Defence supplied by the court of its own motion—Reservation of recourse for future damages—Judicial admission—Interruption of prescription—Novation—Costs.*]—The prescription of actions for personal injuries established by art. 2262 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada is not waived by failure of the defendant to plead the limitation, but the court must take judicial notice of such prescription as absolutely extinguishing the right of action.—The reservation of recourse for future damages in a judgment upon an action for tort is not an adjudication which can preserve the right of action beyond the time limited by the provisions of the Civil Code.—When in an action of this nature there is but one cause of action damages must be assessed once for all. And when damages have been once recovered, no new action can be maintained for sufferings afterwards endured from the unforeseen effects of the original injury. City of Montreal v. McGee, xxx., 582.

C.—Practice on appeal—Irregular procedure.*]—C. on behalf of J. C. & Co., a firm of contractors of which he was a member, deposited a sum of money with the City of Montreal as a guarantee of the good faith of J. C. & Co., in tendering to supply gas for illuminating and other purposes to the city and the general public within the city limits at certain fixed rates, lower than those previously charged by companies supplying such gas in Montreal, and for the due fulfilment of the firm's contract entered into according to the tender. After the construction of some works and laying of pipes in the public streets, J. C. & Co. transferred their rights and privileges under the contract to another company and ceased operations. The plaintiff, afterwards, as assignee of C., demanded the return of the deposit which was refused by the city council which assumed to forfeit the deposit and declare the same confiscated to the city for non-execution by J. C. & Co. of their contract. After the transfer, however, the companies supplying gas in the city reduced the rates to a price below that mentioned in the tender so far as the city supply was affected, although the rates charged to citizens were higher than the price mentioned in the contract. Held, that the deposit so made was a pledge subject to the provisions of the sixteenth title of the Civil Code of Lower Canada and which, in the absence of any express stipulation, could not be retained by the pledgee, and that, as the city had appropriated the thing pledged to its own use without authority, the security was gone by the act of the creditor and the debtor was entitled to its restitution although the obligation for which the security had been given had not been executed.—On a cross-demand by the defendant for damages, to be set-off in compensation against the plaintiff's claim: Held, that, as the city had not been obliged to pay rates in excess of those fixed by the contract, no damage could be recovered in respect to the obligation to supply the city; and that the breach of contract in respect to supplying the public did not give the corporation any right of action for damages suffered by the citizens individually. Held, further, that prospective damages which might result from the occupation of the city streets by the pipes actually laid and abandoned were too remote and uncertain to be set-off in compensation of the claim for the return of the deposit. Finnie v. City of Montreal, xxxii., 335.

Held, that the verdict meant only that deceased had voluntarily incurred the risks attending the shunting of the cars in a careful and skillful manner, and that the maxim "volenti non fit injuria" had no application. Only a small part of the stock was sold and none was given to P., who took action against the purchaser and H., claiming that the latter was a partner of the purchaser and that the agreement was signed on behalf of both. The purchaser did not defend the action. Held, that no action could lie against H. on the agreement under seal not signed by him even if it was for his benefit and a seal was not necessary.—The court refused to interfere with the discretion of the court below in refusing an amendment to the statement of claim. *Porter v. An expressed or implied contract is not created with the Crown because an individual pays tolls imposed by statute for the use of a public work, such as slide dues for passing his logs through government slides. In such a case the Crown cannot be held liable as a common carrier. The Queen v. McFarlane, vii., 216.

110. Claim against Province of Canada—B. N. A. Act (1867) s. 111—Contract—Order-in-council—Petition of right.—Prior to confederation T. was cutting timber under license from the Province of Canada on territory in dispute with New Brunswick. To utilize the timber he had to send it down the St. John River, and it was seized by the authorities of New Brunswick and only released upon payment of fines. T. continued paying the fines for two or three years until he was obliged to abandon the business. After the two provinces had agreed upon the boundary, a commission was appointed to determine the state of accounts between them in respect to such territory. One member only reported finding New Brunswick indebted to Canada in $20,000 and upwards, and in 1871 these figures were verified by the Dominion auditor. Both before and after confederation T. frequently urged the Government of Canada to collect this amount, and indemnify licensees who had suffered while cutting timber owing to the dispute. Finally by order-in-council of the Dominion Government (to whom it was claimed the debt of New Brunswick was transferred by the B. N. A. Act) it was declared that a certain amount was due to T. which would be paid on the consent of the Governments of Ontario and Quebec. Such consent was obtained, and payments on account were made by the Dominion Government first to T. and afterwards to the suppliant to whom T. assigned. Suppliant proceeded by petition for the balance. The Crown demurred on the ground that the claim was not founded upon a contract, and was not properly a subject for petition of right. Fournier, J., overruled the demurrer (1 Ex. C. R. 356). Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, (Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting), that there being no previous indebtedness shewn to T. either from New Brunswick, the Province of Canada or the Dominion, the order-in-council did not create a debt between T. and the Dominion Government which could be enforced by petition of right. The Queen v. Dunn, xi., 385.

111. Contract—Public works—Progress estimates—Engineer's certificate—Revision by succeeding engineer—Action for payment on monthly certificate.—A contract with the Crown for building locks and other works on a government canal provided for monthly payments to the contractors of 90 per cent. of the value of the work done at the prices named in a schedule annexed to the contract, such payments to be made on the certificate of the engineer, approved by the Minister of Railways and Canals, that the work certified for had been executed to his satisfaction; the certificate so approved was to be a condition precedent to the right of the contractors to the monthly payments, and the remaining 10 per cent. of the whole of the work was to be retained until its final completion; the engineer was to be the sole judge of the work and materials, and his decision on all questions with regard thereto, or as to the meaning and intention of the contract, was to be final; and he was to be at liberty to make any changes or alterations in the work which he should deem expedient. Held, that though the value of the work certified to by the monthly certificates was only approximate and subject to revision on completion of the whole, yet where the engineer in charge had changed the character of a particular class of work, and when completed had classified it and fixed the value, his decision was final and could not be reopened and revised by a succeeding engineer. Held, also, that the contractors could proceed by action if payment on a monthly certificate was withheld, and were not obliged to await the final completion of the work before suing. Murray v. The Queen, xxvi., 203.

C. cc. 114, 115—Inquiry as to public matters—Remuneration of commissioner—Quantum meruit.*—The judgment appealed from (7 Ex. C. R. 351) held that a person appointed under R. S. C. c. 115, as commissioner to make inquiry and report on conduct in office of an officer or servant of the Crown, could not recover for his services as such commissioner, there being no provision for such payment; that such service was not rendered in virtue of any contract but merely by virtue of appointment under the statute and that such appointment partakes more of the character of a public office than of a mere employment under a contract express or implied. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment appealed from, Strong, C.J., and Girouard, J., dissenting. Tucker v. King, xxxii., 722.

C.*—Lands in the vicinity of the Lachine Canal were injuriously affected through flooding caused by the negligence of the Crown officials in failing to keep a syphon-tunnel clear and in proper order to carry off the waters of a stream which had been diverted and carried under the canal and also by part of the lands being spoiled by dumping excavations upon it. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (7 Ex. C. R. 1), (Davies, J., dissenting), that the owner had a right of action and was entitled to recover damages for the injuries sustained and that the Exchequer Court of Canada had exclusive original jurisdiction in the matter under the provisions of ss. 16, 23, and 58 of the Exchequer Court Act. The Queen v. Hart, i., 320.

119. Petitory conclusions—Removing trustee—Recovery of church property—Pleading—

38 Vict. c. 72 (Q.)]—By deed on 23rd November, 1871, duly registered, plaintiff, defendant, and two others as trustees of the Presbyterian Church of Côte St. George, in connection with the Church of Scotland, became purchasers of the ground upon which a church was subsequently erected. At the time of action the trustees, with the exception of the plaintiff and defendant, were dead. A union of the Presbyterian Churches of Canada took place in June, 1875. To further this union and remove any obstructions which might arise out of the trusts by which the property of any of the churches was held, the "Union Act," (38 Vict. c. 72 (Q.)) was passed, which by s. 2, provided "that if any congregation in connection or communion with any of the said churches decide, at any meeting of the said congregation regularly convened, according to the rules of the said congregation, or the custom of the church with which it is in connection, and held in the two years after such union, by the majority of the votes of those who, according to the rules of the said congregation, or the custom of the church with which it is in connection, are entitled to vote at such meeting, not to form part of the said union, but on the contrary to separate itself therefrom, then and in such case, the property of the said congregation shall not be affected by this Act, nor by any of the provisions thereof." Plaintiff claimed that no meeting of the congregation had been regularly convened, or conducted according to its rules, or the custom of the church, and that consequently the property was affected by the statute, and should be held and administered for the benefit of the congregation in connection with the united church, i. e., "The Presbyterian Church in Canada." Plaintiff also alleged that defendant had ceased to be a trustee, and, acting with a minority of the congregation who refused to enter into the united church, had taken forcible possession of the church property and excluded therefrom the plaintiff and the congregation, for which he was trustee. Plaintiff as sole surviving and acting trustee, suing for himself in his said quality, and for the congregation, claimed the property and that defendant be ordered to quit and abandon the same, and be declared not to be a trustee of said property. Defendant admitted that he was not a trustee, but, while saying that he had no quality to defend the action, alleged that 3 regularly convened meetings had been held, within the 2 years, the effect of which was to take the church and property out the union and that, at these meetings, trustees were legally appointed to replace those deceased. The Superior Court dismissed the action on the sole ground that because the trust deed said nothing about survivors, but provided for a succession, there could be no action unless the succession was first filled up. The Queen's Bench affirmed this judgment, the majority presumably on the ground stated, Cross, J., alone giving as his reason that the meetings referred to were sufficient compliance with the law to take the property out of the union. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the action being petitory, and defendant having pleaded and proved that he was not and had never pretended to be in possession of the property, plaintiff must fail; and that he was not entitled to a judgment declaring one not a trustee who did not pretend to be and admitted that he was not a trustee, Henry, J., dissenting. Morrison v. McCuaig, 19th June, 1883; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 642.

C.—Arts. 176, 177 (b) 1064, 1066 C. P. Q.—Possessory action—Réintégration—Dénonciation de nouvel œuvre.]—An instrument by which lands were leased for sixteen years at an annual rental, subject to renewal for a further term of twelve years, provided for the construction of certain buildings and improvements by the lessee upon the leased premises, and hypothecated these contemplated ameliorations to secure payment of rent and performance of the obligations of the lessee. The leased premises were transferred by the lessee by deed of sale, and on disturbance an action, with both petitory and possessory conclusions, was brought by the transferee against an alleged trespasser, who pleaded title and possession in himself without taking objection to its cumulative form. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that under the circumstances the action should be treated as petitory only; that the contract under the instrument described was neither emphyteusis nor a bail à rente (lease in perpetuity), but merely an ordinary contract of lease which did not convey a title to the land nor real rights sufficient to confer upon the transferee the right of instituting a petitory action in his own name. Held, also, that the transfer by the deed of sale of such leased premises would not support the petitory action, as the lessee could not convey proprietary rights which he did not himself possess. Price v. LeBlond, xxx., 539.

19. POSSESSORY ACTIONS.

125. Trespass — Possession annale — Possessory action — Equivocal possession—Right of way.]—In a possessory action by P. against H., the latter denied P.'s possession and pleaded that he was proprietor and had exercised a right of way over the lands in dispute, a roadway between their adjoining properties, for a number of years. At the trial defendant put in his title. The plaintiff proved possession for a year by closing up the roadway with a fence and putting his cattle there, and that at times he allowed defendant and others to use the roadway to get to the river, but that when defendant took down the fence he immediately restored it, and that defendant then asked him to let him use it; that it was after defendant had again taken forcible possession that he instituted the present action. The courts below held that both parties had only proved an equivocal possession and dismissed the plaintiff's action, ordering that their rights should be tried au pétitoire. Held, Fournier, J., dissenting, that as plaintiff had proved possession animo domini for a year and a day, he should be reinstated and maintained in peaceable possession of the land, and defendant forbidden to trouble him by exercising a right of way over the land in question, reserving to the latter his recourse to revendicate au pétitoire any right he might have. *Pinsonneault v. 126. Action on disturbance—Possessory action—“Possession annale”—Arts. 946, and 948 C. C. P.—Nature of possession of unenclosed vacant lands—Boundary marks—Delivery of possession.—In 1890, G. purchased a lot of land 25 feet wide, and the vendor pointed it out to him, on the ground, and shewed him the pickets marking its width and depth. The lot remained vacant and unenclosed up to the time of the disturbance, and was assessed as a 25 foot lot to G., who paid all municipal taxes and rates thereon. In 1895 the adjoining lot, which was also vacant and unenclosed, was sold to another person who commenced laying foundations for a building, and, in doing so, encroached by two feet on the width of the lot so purchased by G., who brought a possessory action within a couple of months from the date of the disturbance. Held, that the possession annale, required by article 946 of the Code of Civil Procedure, was sufficiently established to entitle the plaintiff to maintain his action. Gauthier v. Masson, xxvii., 575.

20. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

128. Sale of goods—Action by undisclosed principal—Contract by agent—Option to take bill of lading or reweigh—Deficient delivery—Pleading—Tender and payment into court—Acknowledgment of liability—Estoppel.—Action for $3,038.44, price of 810 tons, 5 cwt. of coal sold by their agents T., M. & Co., through a broker, as per following note. “Messrs. T., M. & Co.:—I have this day sold for your account, to arrive, to the V. Hudon Cotton Mills Co., the 810 tons, 5 cwt. . . . coal per bill of lading, per ‘Lake Ontario,’ at $3.75 per ton of 2,240 lbs., duty paid, ex ship; ship to have prompt dispatch. Terms, net cash on delivery, or 30 days adding interest, buyers’ option. Brokerage payable by you, buyer to have privilege of taking bill of lading, or re-weighing at sellers’ expense.” Defendants pleaded that the contract was with T., M. & Co. personally, that plaintiffs had no action; that the cargo contained only 755 tons, 580 lbs. = $2,868.72, which they had offered T., M. & Co., together with the price of 10 tons more to avoid litigation, in all $2,890.72, which they brought into court, without acknowledging their liability to plaintiffs, and prayed dismissal of action as to any greater sum. Held, per Ritchie, C.J., and Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ., (Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting,) that it was unnecessary to decide the question as to whether the action could be brought by the undisclosed principal, for by their plea of tender and payment into court the defendants had acknowledged their liability to the plaintiffs, although such tender and deposit had been made “without acknowledging their liability.”—Per Strong, J. That the action by respondents (undisclosed principals) was maintainable.—Per Fournier and Henry JJ., (dissenting), that the action by respondents (undisclosed principals) was not maintainable, and that the appellants were not precluded from setting up this defence by their plea of tender and payment into court.—It was proved that defendants agreed to take the coal as per bill of lading without having it weighed. They, however, caused it to be weighed in their own yard, without notice to the vendors, and the cargo was found to contain only 755 tons, 580 lbs. About three weeks after having received the bill of lading, when called upon to pay, they claimed a reduction for the deficiency. Held, Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting, that defendants had no right to refuse payment for the cargo on grounds of deficiency in delivery, considering that the weighing was done by them in the absence of plaintiffs without notice to them, and at a time when defendants were bound by the option they had previously made of taking the coal in bulk. Judgment appealed from (2 Dor. Q. B. 356) affirmed. V. Hudon Cotton Co. v. Canada Shipping Co., xiii., 401.

22. REPLEVIN AND REVENDICATION.

130. Replevin—Confusion of chattels—Common property—Trespass—Title to land—Possession—Unmarked logs.—L. claiming lands under a paper title, built a barn and camp in 1875, commenced and continued logging all that winter and in subsequent years. In 1877 McD., setting up title under pretended authority of a town-meeting, entered upon and cut trees on the lands and put the logs, unmarked, on the ice outside and inside L.’s boom, mixing them with logs already cut by L., in such a way that they could not be distinguished. In an action of replevin by L.: Held, that L.’s possession of the lands was sufficient to entitle them to recover, in the present action against the wrongdoer, all the logs cut on the lands.—Per Strong, J. When a party wrongfully commingles his chattels with those of another, all the latter can require is, that he should be permitted to take from the whole an equivalent in number and quality for those which he originally possessed. McDonald v. Lane, vii., 462.

131. Revendication — Replevin — Criminal Code, s. 575—Confiscation of gaming instruments, moneys, etc.—Moneys were seized in a gaming house, under a warrant issued under s. 575 of the Criminal Code, and confiscated by the judgment of a police magistrate sitting in the City of Montreal. In an action against the Attorney-General to recover the moneys so seized: Held, per Strong, C.J., that a judgment declaring the forfeiture of money so seized cannot be collaterally impeached in an action of vindication. O'Neil v. Attorney-General of Canada, xxvi., 122.

132. Trust — Principal and agent — Advances to agent to buy goods—Trust goods mixed with those of agent—Replevin—[Equitable title.]—If an agent is entrusted by his principal with money to buy goods, the money will be considered trust funds in his hands, and the principal has the same interest in the goods when bought as he had in the funds producing them.—If the goods so bought are mixed with those of the agent the principal has an equitable title to a quantity to be taken from the mass equivalent to the portion of the money advanced which has been used in the purchase, as well as to the unexpended balance.—Under the present system of procedure in Ontario an equitable title to chattels will support an action of replevin. *Carter v. 23. RIGHT OF ACTION.

134. Cheese factory supply agreement — Sale of personal rights—Prête-nom.—Warranty—Eviction—Restitution de deniers—Bulk price—Arts. 1510, 1517, 1518, C. C.]—Respondent, owner of a cheese factory, made agreement with farmers by which the latter agreed to give the milk of their cows to no other cheese factory. He subsequently sold to appellant, the factory and sous la simple garantie de ses fait et promesses, whatever rights he might have under his agreement with the farmers, for the bulk sum of $7,000. Appellant assigned to B. the factory and the same rights, but excluding warranty, for $7,500. A company, subsequently formed to whom B. assigned the factory and rights, sued one of the farmers on original agreement for having sold milk to another cheese factory, but the action was dismissed on the ground that respondent could not validly assign personal rights he had against the farmers. Thereupon appellant brought action against respondent to recover the price paid for rights which he could not assign. It was proved that although the price mentioned in the deed and paid was a bulk sum for the factory and the rights, the parties at the time valued the rights under the agreement with the farmers at $5,000, and that the action was taken for the benefit of present owners of the factory. Held, affirming the Court of Queen's Bench, Strong and Fournier, JJ., dissenting, that inasmuch as appellant, by the sale made to B., had received full benefit of all that he had bought from respondent and had no interest in the suit, he could not claim to be reimbursed a portion of the price paid.—Per Taschereau, J. If any action lay, it could only have been to set the sale aside, the parties being restored to the status quo ante if it were maintained. Demers v. Duhaime, xvi., 366.

135. Recovery of funds entrusted for investment—Condition precedent—Limitation of action—Evidence—Transfer—Prête-nom.—Judicial admission.]—Money was entrusted to M. for the purpose of being invested in a land speculation, under special conditions, that were disregarded. A claim against M. therefor was transferred sous seing privé to J., who brought an action for the amounts so entrusted. Objection was made that the transfer had not been proved. Held, that as it appeared that the transfer had been admitted by M., the transferee, even if considered a prête-nom, had sufficient interest to bring the action. Moodie v. Jones, xix., 266.

136. Chattel mortgage — Mortgagee in possession—Negligence—Sale under powers—Practice—Assignment for benefit of creditors—Revocation of.]—Under the provisions of R. S. O. c. 122, in order to enable the assignee of a chose in action to sue in his own name, the assignment must be in writing, but a written instrument is not required to restore the assignor to his original right of action.—Where creditors refused to accept the benefit of an assignment under R. S. O. c. 124, and the assignor was notified of such refusal, and that the assignment had not been registered an action for damages was properly brought in the name of the assignor against a mortgagee of his stock-in-trade, who sold the goods in an improper manner. Rennie v. Block, xxvi., 356.

137. Right of action — Conveyance subject to mortgage — Obligation to indemnify—Assignment of — Principal and surety—Implied contract.] — The obligation of a purchaser of mortgaged lands to indemnify his grantor against the personal covenant for payment may be assigned even before the institution of an action for the recovery of the mortgage debt and, if assigned to a person entitled to recover the debt, it gives the assignee a direct right of action against the person liable to pay the same. Maloney v. Campbell, xxviii., 228.

138. Cancellation of contract — Fraud — Misrepresentation—Life insurance—Wager policy — Endowment — 14 Geo. 3. c. 48. s. 1 (Imp.)—Return of premiums.]—If the beneficiary of a life insurance policy has no interest in the life of the insured, has effected the insurance for his own benefit and pays all the premiums himself, the policy is a wagering policy and void under 14 Geo. 3. c. 48. s. 1 (Imp.). The Act applies to an endowment as well as to an all life policy. Judgment of the Court of Appeal (2 Ont. L. R. 559) affirmed.—In an action by the company for cancellation of the policy under said Act a return of the premiums paid will not be made a condition of obtaining cancellation. Judgment of the Court of Appeal (2 Ont. L. R. 559) reversed. Davies and Mills, JJ., dissenting. Brophy v. North American Life Assurance Co., xxxii., 261.

139. Assessment of damages — Reservation of recourse for future damages — Expropriation — Res judicata — Right of action.]—A lessee of premises used as an ice-house recovered indemnity from the city for injuries suffered in consequence of the expropriation of part of the leased premises and, in his statement of claim, had specially reserved the right of further recourse for damages resulting from the expropriation. In an action brought after his death by his universal legatee to recover damages for loss of the use of the ice-house during the unexpired term of the lease: Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the reservation in the first action did not preserve any further right of action in consequence of the expropriation and, therefore, the plaintiff's action was properly dismissed by the courts below, as, in such cases, all damages capable of being foreseen must be assessed once for all and a defendant cannot be twice sued for the same cause. The City of Montreal v. McGee (30 Can. S. C. R. 582), and The Chaudière Machine and Foundry Co. v. The Canada Atlantic Railway Co. (33 Can. S. C. R. 11) followed. Ancil v. City of Quebec, xxxiii., 347.

Where the petitory action has been brought by the lessor with a demand for damages for injuries caused to the leased lands by the defendant, the lessee may be added, on application to amend, as a party plaintiff to the action for the purpose of recovering the damages. *Massawippi Valley Ry. the ground that the defendant has not been duly served with the action, which also alleges the defendant's grounds of defence upon the merits, should not be dismissed merely for the reason that the rescisoire has thus been improperly joined with the rescindant. Turcotte v. Whitfield; Whitfield v. Merchants Bank of Canada, xxvii., 94.*

167. *Suretyship—Promissory note—Qualified indorsement.]—D. indorsed two promissory notes, pour aval, at the same time marking them with the words "not negotiable and given as security." The notes were intended as security to the firm of A. & R. for advances to a third person on the publication of certain guide-books which were to be left in the hands of the firm as further security, the proceeds of sales to be applied towards reimbursement of the advances. It was also agreed that payment of the notes was not to be required while the books remained in the possession of the firm. The notes were protested for non-payment, and, A. having died, R. as surviving partner of the firm and vested with all rights in the notes, sued the maker and indorser jointly and severally for the full amount. At the time of the action some of the books were still in the possession of R., and it appeared that he had not rendered the indorser any statement of the financial situation between the principal debtor and the firm. Held, that the action was not based upon the real contract between the parties, and that the plaintiff was not, under the circumstances, entitled to recover in an action upon the notes. Held, further, per Sedgewick, J., that neither the payee of the promissory note nor the drawer of a bill of exchange can maintain an action against an indorser, where the action is founded upon the instrument itself. Robertson v. Davis, xxvii., 571.*

*funds—Suspension of civil remedy—Stifling prosecution—Partnership.]—The Imperial Act, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 54, s. 12, provides that "nothing in this Act contained, nor any proceeding, conviction or judgment to be had or taken thereon against any person under this Act, shall prevent, lessen, or impeach any remedy at law or in equity which any party aggrieved by any offence against this Act might have had if this Act had not been passed . . . ; and nothing in this Act contained shall affect or prejudice any agreement entered into, or security given by any trustee, having for its object the restoration or repayment of any trust property misappropriated." Held, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, that the class of trustees referred to in said Act were those guilty of misappropriation of property held upon express trusts. Semble, that the section only covered agreements or securities given by the defaulting trustee himself. Quere, Is the said Imperial Act in force in British Columbia? If in force it would not apply to a prosecution for an offence under R. S. C. c. 164 (The Larceny Act) c. 58.—An action was brought on a covenant given for the purpose of stifling a prosecution for the embezzlement of partnership property under R. S. C. c. 164, s. 58, which was not re-enacted by the Criminal Code, 1892. Held, that the alleged criminal act having been committed before the Code came into force, was not affected by its provisions and the covenant could not be enforced. Further, the partnership property not having been held on an express trust, the civil remedy was not preserved by the Imperial Act. Major v. McCraney, xxix., 182.*

169. *Suretyship—Conditional warranty—Notice—Possession of goods—Art. 1959 C. C.]—T. wrote a letter agreeing to guarantee payment for goods consigned on del credere commission to R., on condition that he should be allowed, should occasion arise, to take over the goods consigned. Shortly afterwards the creditor, without giving any notice to T., closed the agency, withdrew some of the goods and permitted others to be seized in execution and removed beyond the reach of T. The creditor did not give T. any authority to take possession of the goods as stipulated in the letter of guarantee. In an action by the creditor to recover the amount of the guarantee: Held, that the condition of the guarantee had not been complied with by the creditor, and that he could not hold the warrantor responsible. Brown v. Torrance, xxx., 311.*

28. TRESPASS.

170. *Trespass by individual corporators—Corporation suing members—R. S. N. S. (4th ser.) c. 23, s. 30—Pleading—Stay of proceedings.]—Defendants, while trustees of a school section, entered upon the school plot of their section, removed the school-house from its foundation and destroyed a portion of the stone wall. Subsequently their successors as trustees brought action for trespass quare clausum fregit and de bonis asportatis against them for injury to the school-house, the property of the section. The defendants pleaded justification, asserting that the acts were legally performed by them in their capacity of trustees. Sub-section 4 of s. 30, c. 23, R. S. N. S. (4 ser.), declares that the sites for* school-houses shall be defined by the trustees, subject to the sanction of the three nearest commissioners residing out of the section. In this case the sanction of the three nearest commissioners was not obtained. On appeal from rule of Supreme Court of N. S., setting aside a verdict for plaintiffs: Held, reversing the court below, that under c. 23, R. S. N. S. (4 ser.), the defendants were not authorized to remove the school-house from its site in the manner mentioned; that defendants having subsequently abused their right to enter upon the lands of the corporation by an overt act of spoliation, the plaintiffs, who are a corporate body identical with the corporation which existed at the time of the trespass, can maintain trespass against the defendants for the injury done to the corporate property. That when an action is brought in the name of a corporation without due authority, it is not sufficient for the defendants to plead that the plaintiffs did not legally constitute the corporation, but in such a case defendants ought to apply to the summary jurisdiction of the court to stay proceedings. Pictou School Trustees v. Cameron, ii., 690.

171. Municipal corporation — Construction of sidewalks — Trespass — Action en bornage — Petitory action — Amendment of pleadings — Practice — R. S. C. c. 135, s. 65. — The plaintiff brought action to recover the value of a strip of land of which the defendant was illegally in possession. The courts below dismissed the action on the ground that the proper remedy was by action en bornage or au pétitoire. In order to cease litigation the Supreme Court of Canada, without directing any amendment of the pleadings, reversed the judgments of the courts below, directed that the record should be remitted to the trial court for the purpose of ascertaining the extent of the property affected by the trespass and ordered the restoration thereof to the plaintiff. *Burland v. ADMINISTRATION.

1. Administratrix purchasing estate—Assets sufficient to pay incumbrance—Parol agreement to sell land—Compensation for land expropriated—R. S. N. S. (4 ser.) c. 36, s. 40—Married woman.]—About 1837 Mc.M. devised his land to his wife for life with remainder to M. K. Administration with the will annexed was granted to the widow. At the testator's death the lands were mortgaged for £150. In a suit after testator's death, a foreclosure was obtained, and the property sold, and purchased by the administratrix for £905. Administratrix received personal assets of the testator sufficient to have paid off the mortgage, had she chosen so to apply them. The sum of £725 was lent to the administratrix by A. K. The administratrix then sold the property to the public authorities for £1,750, out of which she paid A. K. £400. From 1858 A. K., with the leave of the administratrix, occupied $\frac{3}{4}$ of an acre of the land, until ejected in 1873, under expropriation, the commissioner taking in all 3 acres $\frac{3}{10}$ ths of this property, the balance being in the occupation of M. K., and her husband (the appellants). These 3 acres $\frac{3}{10}$ ths were appraised at \$2,310, which was paid into court. A. K. claimed title to the whole land taken under parol agreement, that she should have it in satisfaction of £325, the residue unpaid of the loan, and obtained a rule nisi for the payment to her of the \$2,310, awarded as compensation. In May, 1872, the administratrix executed an informal instrument under seal, purporting to be a lease of her life estate to the appellants in the whole property, reserving a rental of \$80 a year and liberty to occupy two rooms in the dwelling house. On motion to make this rule absolute, affidavits were filed, including those of appellants. On the 18th January, 1875, the matter was referred to a master to take evidence and report thereon, subject to being modified by the court or a judge. The master reported that the appellants had the sole legal and equitable rights in the property. On motion to confirm that report, the court made an order apportioning the \$2,310 between A. K. and the appellants, the former being declared entitled to be paid \$1,015.61, and the latter, on filing the written consent of the widow, to the residue of the \$2,310. Held, on appeal, 1st. That the administratrix, having personal assets of the testator sufficient to discharge the mortgage, was bound in the due course of her administration to discharge said incumbrance, and that the parol agreement made by her with her daughter was null and void. 2ndly. That when the land is taken under authority similar to R. S. N. S. (4 ser.), c. 36, s. 40, et seq., the compensation money, as regards the capacity of married women to deal with it, is still to be regarded in equity as land. Kearney v. Kean, iii., 332.

ADMIRALTY LAW.

1. Collision — Negligence — Rule of the road—Steamer—Sailing vessel — Opinion of assessors—Delegation of judicial powers.]—In a case of collision, the marine protest by the captain of the schooner stated that the cause of the accident was that the steamer's wheel was put to port when it should have been put to starboard just before the collision. The action was twice tried, the first trial having been set aside on the ground that the judge by adopting the opinion of the assessors, had delegated his judicial functions (19 Ont. App. R. 298). The second trial resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff, which was affirmed by the Court of Appeal for Ontario. The Supreme Court of Canada affirmed the judgment of the Court of Appeal, sustaining the plaintiff's verdict, and dismissing the appeal with costs. Collier v. Wright, xxiv., 714.

2. Collision—Rules of the road—Narrow channel—Rules of navigation—R. S. C. c. 79, s. 2, arts. 15, 16, 18, 19, 21, 22, and 23—“Crossing” ships—“Meeting” ships—“Passing” ships—Breach of rules—Presumption of fault—Contributory negligence—Moiety of damages—36 & 37 Vict. (Imp.), c. 85, s. 17—Manœuvres in “agony of collision.”—If two vessels approach each other in the position of “passing” ships (with a side light of one dead ahead of the other), where unless the course of one or both is changed, they will go clear of each other, no statutory rule is imposed, but they are governed by the rules of good seamanship.—If one of two “passing” ships acts consistently with good seamanship and the other persists, without good reason, in keeping on the wrong side of the channel; in starboarding her helm when it was seen that the helm of the other was hard to port, and the vessels rapidly approaching; and, after signalling that she was going to port, in reversing her engines and thereby turning her bow to starboard, she is to blame for a collision which follows.—The non-observance of the statutory rule (art. 18), that steamships shall slacken speed, or stop, or reverse, if necessary when approaching another ship, so as to involve the risk of a collision, is not to be considered as a fact contributing to a collision, provided the collision could have been avoided by the impinging vessel by reasonable care exerted up to the time of the collision.—Excusable manœuvres executed in “agony of collision” brought about by another vessel, cannot be imputed as contributory negligence on the part of the vessel collided with.—The rule that in narrow channels steamships shall, when safe and practicable, keep to the starboard (art. 21), does not override the general rules of navigation. The Leverington, (11 P. D. 117) followed. The Cuba v. McMillan, xxvi., 651.

3. Collision—Appreciation of evidence—Findings of fact—Appeal—Proper navigation—Negligent lookout—Anchor light.—In an action claiming compensation for loss of the fishing schooner “Carrie E. Sayward” by being run into and sunk while at anchor by the “Reliance” the decision mainly depended on whether or not the lights on the lost schooner were burning as the admiralty rules required at the time of the accident. The local judge gave judgment against the “Reliance.” Held, that though the evidence given was contradictory, it was amply sufficient to justify the said judgment which should not, therefore, be disturbed on appeal. Santanderino v. Vanvert (23 Can. S. C. R. 145), and The Village of Granby v. Ménard (31 Can. S. C. R. 14), followed. Schr. Reliance v. Conwell, xxxi., 653.

4. Collision—Ship at anchor—Anchor light—Lookout—Weight of evidence—Credibility—Findings of trial judge—Negligence.—The S. S. “Lake Ontario” was proceeding in charge of a pilot to her dock in Halifax harbour, N. S., on a blustery night in January, 1900, came in collision with and sank appellant's coal barge “A. L. Taylor” lying at anchor north of George's Island. The S. S. had signalled by guns and whistles for a medical officer at the quarantine grounds before the collision and her officers and crew testified that they were alert, anxiously working the S. S. through anchored vessels in the darkness and blustery weather and came suddenly upon the “Taylor” and that no lights were seen on her. The barge caretaker, who was not on deck at the time, swore that a proper anchor light was burning on the barge, his statement being corroborated by the captain of a schooner lying close by and by several boatmen and labourers on the wharves. The trial judge accepted the evidence of the defence as correct and found that the collision and loss were wholly attributable to negligence of the “Taylor” in failing to have an anchor light and to keep a sharp lookout, and dismissed the action. On appeal the Supreme Court of Canada affirmed the decision at the trial (7 Ex. C. R. 403). Dominion Coal Co. v. S. S. Lake Ontario, xxxii., 507.

5. Collision—Undue speed—Ship in default—Rule 16—Navigation during fog.—The judgment appealed from (7 Ex. C. R. 390) decided that the “Pawnee” a steamship, was wholly to blame for colliding with the schooner “Roland” in a thick fog near the entrance of St. John Harbour, N. B., in July, 1901, and awarded damages to the owner of the schooner. It was held that on hearing fog signals sounded by the schooner, the S. S. should have stopped her engines as far as possible and navigated with caution till danger of collision was past and that, having neglected these precautions, she was wholly to blame. On appeal the Supreme Court (Girouard, J., dissenting), affirmed the principle of the trial court decision but reduced the damages and allowed no costs on the appeal. S. S. “Pawnee” v. Roberts, xxxii., 509.

6. Admiralty law—Navigation—Narrow channels—“White law,” r. 24—Right of way—Meeting ships—Collision.—Rule 24 of the “White law” governing navigation in United States waters provides “that in all narrow channels where there is a current, and in the rivers St. Mary, St. Clair, Detroit, Niagara, and St. Lawrence, when two steamers are meeting the descending steamer shall have the right of way and shall, before the vessels shall have arrived within the distance of one-half mile of each other, give the signal necessary to indicate which side she elects to take.” Held, that this rule has no reference to the general course of vessels navigating the waters mentioned but applies only to meeting vessels. Therefore, a steamer ascending the St. Clair with a tow was not in fault when she followed the custom of up-going vessels to hug the United States shore.—The “Shenandoah” with a tow was ascending the St. Clair River in a fog hugging the United States shore. The “Carmona” was coming down the river and they sighted each other when a few hundred yards apart. They simultaneously gave the port and starboard signals respectively and the port signal was repeated by the “Carmona.” The “Shenandoah” then gave the port signal and steered accordingly. The “Carmona,” thinking there was not room to pass between the other vessel and one lying at the elevator dock, reversed her engines. She passed the “Shenandoah” but on going ahead again collided with the vessel in tow.

Held, reversing the judgment of the local judge (8 Ex. C. R. 1), that the "Shenandoah" was not in fault, and that as the local judge had found the "Carmona" not to blame, and as her captain's error in judgment, if it was such, in thinking he had not room to pass between the two vessels was committed while in the agonies of collision, his judgment as to her should be affirmed. *Davidson v. 1. ABATEMENT OF APPEAL.

1. Abatement of appeal—Death of plaintiff — Actio personalis moritur cum persona — Lord Campbell's Act—C. S. N. B. c. 86.—P.'s action against a railway conductor for injuries received in attempting to board a train and alleged to have been caused by the negligence of the conductor in not bringing the train to a standstill, was nonsuit, and, on motion to the full court, the nonsuit was set aside and a new trial ordered. Between verdict and judgment ordering new trial, P. died, and a suggestion of his death was entered on the record. On appeal from the order of the full court: Held, that under Lord Campbell's Act, or the equivalent statute in New Brunswick, an entirely new cause of action arose on the death of P., and the original action was entirely gone and could not be revived. There being no cause before the court, the appeal was quashed without costs. White v. Parker, xvi., 699.

2. APPEAL BOND.

2. Prosecution — Form of bond — Objections — Application in chambers to dismiss —

Waiver.—The bond for security for costs of appeal to the Supreme Court should provide for the prosecution of the appeal. Objections to the form of the bond should be taken by application in chambers to dismiss the appeal, and if not so made objections will be held to have been waived. Whitman v. Union Bank of Halifax, xvi., 410.

3. Security Bond — Parties interested — Quashing appeal.—Where the bond for security of costs of appeal has not been given to the parties really interested in the appeal and before the court, the appeal will not lie. Scammell v. James, xvi., 593.

4. Security for costs — Condition precedent to appeal.—Except in cases specially provided for, no appeal can be heard by the Supreme Court unless security for costs has been given as provided by R. S. C. c. 135, s. 46. In re Cahan, xxi., 100.

5. Security for costs — Appeal to Supreme Court — Amount of bond.—Per Osler, J.—The court has no discretion to increase the amount of security on an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, fixed by R. S. C. c. 135, s. 46, at $500, because of the number of respondents. Archer v. Severn, xii., Ont. P. R. 472.

6. Bond on appeal — Separate issues — Number of respondents.—Upon application to file bond of security for costs of an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, several respondents who had appeared separately in the Superior Court and in the Court of Appeal, urged that they were respectively entitled to separate security bonds for each of four appellants, i.e., four bonds of $500 each. Held, per Hall, J., that leave to appeal should be granted on the furnishing of a single bond for $500. Archer v. Severn (12 Ont. P. R. 472) followed. Bonsack Machine Co. v. Falk, Q. R. 9 Q. B. 355.

3. APPLICATION OF STATUTES.

7. Jurisdiction — Right to appeal under 38 Vict. c. 11, ss. 26, 80—Judgments prior to establishment of Supreme Court of Canada.—The Supreme Court of Canada cannot entertain appeals from judgments signed, entered or pronounced prior to 11th January, 1876, when its judicial functions took effect by proclamation under s. 80 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, and no court proposed to be appealed from, nor any judge thereof, can, under s. 26 of the Act, grant leave to appeal from any such judgment. Taylor v. The Queen, i., 65.

8. Right of appeal — 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25—Construction of.—By 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3 (D.), passed on 30th September, 1891, the Supreme Court of Canada can hear appeals from the Court of Review "where and so long as no appeal lies from the judgment of that court when it confirms the judgment rendered in the court appealed from, which by the law of the Province of Quebec is appealable to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council." The judgment was delivered by the Superior Court on 17th November, 1891, and affirmed unanimously by the Court of Review, on 29th February, 1892, which latter judgment was by the law of Quebec appealable to the Judicial Committee. Plaintiff's action was instituted on the 22nd November, 1890, and was standing for judgment in the Superior Court in June, 1891. On appeal from the Court of Review respondent moved to quash for the want of jurisdiction. Held, Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting, that the right of appeal given by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, did not extend to cases standing for judgment in the Superior Court prior to the passing of that Act. Couture v. Bouchard (21 Can. S. C. R. 181), followed. — Held, per Fournier, J. That the statute is not applicable to cases already instituted or pending before the courts, no special words applicable to cases already instituted or to that effect being used. Williams v. Irvine, xxii., 108.

9. Right to appeal in Ontario cases—60 & 61 Vict. c. 34 — Retrospective legislation — Pending cases.]—The Act 60 and 61 Vict. c. 34, which restricts the right of appeal to the Supreme Court in cases from Ontario, as therein specified, does not apply to a case in which the action was pending when the Act came into force, although the judgment directly appealed from may not have been pronounced until afterwards. Hyde v. Lindsay, xxix., 99.

10. Construction of statute—Appellate jurisdiction—Court of Review—Art. 43 C. P. Q.—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3.

4. ARBITRATION AND AWARDS.

11. Arbitration — Reference by consent—R. S. O. (1877) c. 50, s. 189.]—Under R. S. O. (1877) c. 50, s. 189, an appeal will lie where that right has been reserved in a reference made to arbitration by consent of parties. Bickford v. Canada Southern Ry. Co., xiv., 743.

12. Expropriation of land — Arbitration — Award — Increase by Exchequer Court—Hearing of additional witnesses on appeal—Appreciation of evidence — Weight of evidence.]—In expropriation of land for a railway, the award of the arbitrators was increased by the Exchequer Court from $4,155 to $10,824.25, after additional witnesses had been examined by the judge. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (1 Ex. C. R. 291), that as it was supported by evidence, and there was no principle on which it was fairly open to blame, nor any oversight of material consideration, the judgment should not be disturbed, Gwynne, J., dissenting. The Queen v. Charland, xvi., 721.

13. Expropriation — 35 Vict. c. 32, s. 7 (Que.) — Interference with award of arbitrators.]—In a matter of expropriation the decision of a majority of arbitrators, men of more than ordinary business experience, upon a question merely of value should not be interfered with on appeal. Lemoine v. City of Montreal; Allan v. City of Montreal, xxiii., 390. (Leave to appeal was refused by Privy Council.)

14. Jurisdiction — Award of arbitrators—54 & 55 Vict. c. 6 (B.)—54 Vict. c. 2 (O.)—54 Vict. c. 4 (Q.)—In an award made under the provisions of the Acts 54 & 55 Vict.

c. 6, s. 6 (D.), 54 Vict. c. 2, s. 6 (O.), and 54 Vict. c. 4, s. 6 (Q.) there can be no appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, unless the arbitrators in making the award set forth therein a statement that in rendering the award they have proceeded on their view of a disputed question of law. Province of Ontario v. Province of Quebec and Dominion of Canada; In re Common School Fund and Lands, xxx., 306.

The Sailing Ship Troop Company*, xxix., 662.

6. CONTROVERSY INVOLVED.

18. Jurisdiction — Amount in dispute — Demande—Recovery—Right to appeal by defendant—Mitoyenneté.]—The Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 17, enacted that no appeal should be allowed from any judgment rendered in the Province of Quebec in any case wherein the sum or value in dispute did not amount to two thousand dollars. H. brought an action against J., praying that J. be ordered to pull down a wall, remove all new works complained of in the wall, and pay £500 damages, with interest and costs. H. obtained judgment for $100 damages against J., who was also condemned to remove the works complained of, or pay the value of mitoyenneté. Held, Strong, J., dissenting, that in determining the sum or value in dispute in cases of appeal by a defendant, the proper course was to look at the amount of the demand in the declaration, and not at the amount of the judgment, and that the court had jurisdiction to hear the appeal.—Held, per Strong, J., dissenting. That the amount in dispute was the sum awarded for damages and the value of the wall of which the demolition was ordered by the judgment appealed against, and that it was necessary to shew that the total recovery amounted to the sum or value fixed by the statute before an appeal could lie. Joyce v. Hart, i., 321. (Overruled by Allen v. Pratt (13 App. Cas. 780). See Nos. 19 and 24 infra.)

19. Jurisdiction — Value of amount in controversy—Assessment of damages—Discretion of trial judge—Interference on appeal.]—Where the right of appeal depends on the amount in controversy, the proper course in determining the amount in dispute is to look at the amount, etc., claimed in the prayer of the declaration, and not at the amount for which judgment has been recovered. Joyce v. Hart. (1 Can. S. C. R. 321), and Gingras v. Desilets (Cass. Dig., 2 ed. 212) reviewed and approved. Taschereau, J., dissented.—2. In an action of damages, if the amount awarded in the court of first instance is not such as to shock the sense of justice, and to make it apparent that there was error or partiality on the part of the judge, an appellate court should not interfere with the discretion exercised in determining the amount of damages. Levi v. Reed, vi., 482. (Overruled by Monette v. Lefebvre (16 Can. S. C. R. 387); followed in Cossette v. Dun (18 Can. S. C. R. 222). See Nos. 24 and 32 infra.)

20. Jurisdiction—Amount in controversy—Demande—Interest barred at time of suit.—Although the amount claimed by the declaration was made to exceed $2,000 by including interest which had been barred by prescription an appeal will lie to the Supreme Court of Canada. Ayotte v. Boucher, ix., 460.

21. Jurisdiction—Amount in dispute—Matter in controversy—Future rights—Hypothecary action—42 Vict. c. 39, s. 8—Church rules—Charge on lands.—In an hypothecary action to enforce a lien for $165, first instalment of a rate imposed on land for the erection of a Roman Catholic church, the judgment appealed from affirmed the decision of the trial court maintaining the plaintiff's action. Held, that the Supreme Court of Canada had no jurisdiction to hear an appeal, as the amount in dispute was less than $2,000, and there was no question involved relating to a title to land or like matters where rights in future might be bound, even although the rate might be payable by instalments, some of which were not yet due. Sauvageau v. Gauthier (L. R. 5 P. C. 494), referred to. Bank of Toronto v. Les Curé etc., de la Nativité de la Sainte Vierge, xii., 25.

22. Municipal road—Statute labour—Charge on land—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b).—By procès-verbal of a municipal council a portion of a public road fronting the land of R. was ordered to be improved by raising and widening it. Upon his refusal to do the work the council had it performed, paid $200 for it and subsequently sued R. for the cost. The Court of Queen's Bench affirmed a judgment in favour of the municipal council for that amount. Held, per Fournier, Henry, and Gwynne, J.J. (Strong and Taschereau, J.J. dissenting, and Ritchie, C.J., expressing no opinion on the point), that although the matter in controversy did not amount to $2,000, yet, as it related to a charge on the appellant's land whereby his rights in future might be bound, the case was appealable. Reburn v. Corporation de Ste. Anne du Bout de L'Isle, xv., 92.

23. Jurisdiction—Future rights—Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 29, s-s. (b).—In an action for $1,333.36, a balance of one of several money payments of $2,000 each, one whereof defendants agreed to pay to plaintiff every year so long as certain security given by plaintiff for defendants remained in the hands of the government, defendants contended that the security had been released by the action of the government and they were therefore not liable to pay the amount sued for, or any further instalments. The Court of Queen's Bench (appeal side) held that the security had not been released and gave judgment for the amount claimed. The defendants applied to one of the judges of that court and obtained leave to appeal, on the ground that if the judgment was well founded then future rights would be bound, and they had become liable for two other instalments of $2,000 each, for which actions were pending. Held, that an appeal would not lie, because even if the future rights of the defendants were bound by the judgment such future rights had no relation to any of the matters or things enumerated in s-s. (b) of s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act.—The words "where the rights in future might be bound" in this s-s. are governed and qualified by the preceding words and to make a case appealable when the amount in controversy is less than $2,000, not only must future rights be bound by the judgment, but the future rights to be so bound must relate to "a fee of office, duty, rent, revenue or sum of money payable to Her Majesty, or to some title to lands or tenements, or to annual rents out of lands or tenements, or to some like matters and things." Gilbert v. Gilman, xvi., 189.

24. Jurisdiction—Amount in controversy—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29—Acquiescement—Issue on Appeal.—Where the plaintiff has acquiesced in the judgment of the court of first instance by not appealing, the measure of value for determining his right of appeal under s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act is the amount awarded by the judgment of the trial court, and not the amount claimed by his declaration. Levi v. Reed (6 Can. S. C. R. 482), overruled; Allen v. Pratt (13 App. Cases, 780), referred to as overruling Joyce v. Hart (1 Can. S. C. R. 321). Monette v. Lefebvre, xvi., 387.

25. Jurisdiction—Quebec Judicial Deposit Act—Claims to money in court—Amount in controversy—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29.—An insurance company deposited $3,000 in court, being amount of a life policy issued by the company, which by its terms had become payable, but to one-half of which sum rival claims were made. Appellants, as collateral heirs of the deceased, claimed the whole, and respondent, widow of deceased, claimed as commune en biens, one-half; and, in her answer prayed that in so far as appellants' petition claimed any greater sum than one-half, it should be dismissed. The Superior Court awarded one half to appellants, and the other half to respondent. On appeal from the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench affirming the Superior Court: Held, that the sum or value of the matter in controversy between the parties being only $1,500, there was no appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. (Fournier, J., dubitante). Labelle v. Barbeau, xvi., 390.

26. Jurisdiction—Future rights—Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 29—Municipal taxes—Special assessments.—Appeal in an action to recover $361.90, special assessment for a drain along the property of the defendants (see M. L. R. 2 S. C. 265). Motion to quash for want of jurisdiction, on the ground that the matter in controversy was under $2,000, and did not come within any of the exceptions in s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Held, that the case came within the words "such like matter or things, where the rights in future might be bound," in paragraph (b) of s. 29, and was therefore appealable. Ecclesiastiques de St. Sulpice v. City of Montreal, xvi., 399.

27. Jurisdiction—Matter in dispute—Affidavit as to value—Bank shares—Actual value at time of action.—The actual value of bank shares at the time of action must determine the amount in controversy in a dispute respecting them, and such value may be shewn by affidavit. Muir v. Carter; Holmes v. Carter, xvi., 473.

28. Toll bridge—Ferry—Franchise—Interference—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b)—Future rights.—By 38 Vict. c. 97 (Q.), plaintiffs were authorized to build and maintain a toll bridge, and if the said bridge should by accident or otherwise be destroyed, become unsafe or impassable, they were bound to rebuild it within 15 months next following, under penalty of forfeiture of the advantages granted; and during any time that the bridge should be unsafe or impassable they were bound to maintain a ferry across the river, for which they might recover the tolls. The bridge was accidentally carried away by ice, but rebuilt and opened for traffic within 15 months. During reconstruction, although plaintiffs maintained a ferry across the river, defendant built a temporary bridge within the limits of plaintiff's franchise and allowed it to be used by parties crossing the river. In an action for damages, and demolition of the temporary bridge: Held, reversing the Court of Queen's Bench, that as rights in future might be bound, the case was appealable under R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b). Galarneau v. Guilbault, xvi., 579.

29. Jurisdiction—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b)—Future rights—Fee of office—Collateral matter—Action for penalties—Disqualification—R. S. Q. art. 429.—To give the Supreme Court jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the Province of Quebec, by virtue of s. 29 (b) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, the matter relating to fee of office, where the rights in future might be bound, must be the matter really in controversy in the suit in which the appeal is sought and not something merely collateral thereto.—This clause will not give jurisdiction in a case in which the action was brought to recover penalties for bribery under the Quebec Election Act, and the effect of the judgment may be to disqualify appellant from holding office under the Crown for seven years. Chagnon v. Normand, xvi., 661.

30. Trivial dispute—Action for small amount—Propriety of appeal.—Although the court cannot refuse to hear an appeal in a case in which only twenty-two dollars is involved, yet the bringing of appeals for such trifling amounts is objectionable and should not be encouraged. McDonald v. Gilbert, xvi., 700.

31. Jurisdiction—Amount in controversy—Partition and litation—Appellant's interest—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29.—In an action for the partition and litation of properties, that the proceeds might be divided according to the rights of the parties who had carried on business as partners, the judgment appealed from ordered the litation. On motion to quash the appeal on the ground that the matter in controversy was under $2,000, the appellant in answer to the respondent's affidavit filed another affidavit shewing that the total value of the property was $3,000, but, it being admitted that the respondent claimed but one-half interest in the property, it was: Held, that the matter in controversy, and claimed by the respondent, not amounting to the sum or value of $2,000, the appeal should be quashed with costs. Hood v. Sangster, xvi., 723.

32. Jurisdiction—Amount in controversy—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29—Damages—Discretion of trial judge.—The plaintiff in an action for $10,000 for damages obtained judgment in the Superior Court for $2,000, defendant appealed and the judgment was reduced below $2,000. Held, that an appeal would lie by the plaintiff to the Supreme Court, the value of the matter in controversy as regards him being the amount of the judgment of the Superior Court (Taschereau and Patterson, JJ., dissenting).—The amount of damages awarded by the trial judge in his discretion, should not be interfered with by a Court of Appeal, unless clearly unreasonable and unsupported by the evidence, or if there be some error in law or fact or partiality on the part of the judge. Levi v. Keed (6 Can. S. C. R. 482), and Gingras v. Desilets (Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 212), followed. Cossette v. Dun, xviii., 222.

33. Validity of by-law—Sup. & Ex. Courts Act, ss. 24 (g), 29 (a), 30 (b)—Constitutional law—Matter in controversy.—Action for $150, amount of business taxes, $100 as compounders and $50 as wholesale dealers, under municipal by-law. Defendants pleaded that by-law was illegal and ultra vires of the council, and the statute, 47 Vict. c. 84 (Que.), ultra vires of the Legislature. The Superior Court held both statute and by-law intra vires, the Court of Queen's Bench affirmed this judgment as to validity of statute, but set aside the tax of $100 as not authorized. Plaintiff appealed to the Supreme Court, against that part of the judgment declaring the business tax of $100 invalid. There was no cross-appeal. On motion to quash for want of jurisdiction; Held, that the appeal would not lie, s. 24 (g) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act not being applicable, and the case not coming within s. 29 of the Act, the amount being under $2,000, no future rights within the meaning of s. 29 being in controversy, nor any question as to the constitutionality of the Act of the legislature being raised. Strong, J., dissented on the ground that the judgment appealed from involved the question of the validity of the provincial Act. City of Sherbrooke v. McManamy, xviii., 594.

34. Saisie gagerie—Jurisdiction—Action within competence of Circuit Court—Superior Court—Title to land—Question raised by pleadings—Sup. and Ex. Courts Acts, ss. 24, 28, and 29 (b)—Arts. 873 887 C. C. P.—Art. 1624 C. C.—In an action in the Superior Court for arrears of rent with saisie gagerie, defendant pleaded that he had held the premises since the expiration of his lease under verbal agreement for sale. The Court of Queen's Bench, reversing the Court of Review, held that the action ought to have been instituted in the Circuit Court. Held, that as the case was originally instituted in the Superior Court and upon the face of the proceedings the right to possession of and property in real estate was involved, an appeal would lie, Strong, J., dissenting. Blachford v. McBain, xix., 42. See, also, 20 Can. S. C. R. 269.

35. Jurisdiction—Bill of costs—Reference to taxing master—Matter of procedure.—It is doubtful if a decision affirming the master's ruling on taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, which relates wholly to the practice and procedure of the High Court of Justice for Ontario, and of an officer of that court in construing its rules and executing an order of reference made to him, is a proper subject of appeal to the Supreme Court. O'Donohue v. Beatty, xix., 356.

36. Repealed by-law—Appeal as to costs—Jurisdiction—Sup. Court Act, s. 24—Practice.—After judgment refusing to quash a by-law, it was repealed. On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from the judgment in question; Held, that as the only matter remaining in dispute was a mere question of costs, the court would not entertain the appeal. Moir v. Village of Huntingdon, xix., 363.

37. Homologation of procès-verbal—Jurisdiction—Action to set aside procès-verbal—Supreme Court Act, ss. 24 (g), 29.—The County of Verchères homologated a procès-verbal defining who were to be liable for rebuilding and maintenance of a bridge. The Municipality of Varennes took action and had the procès-verbal set aside for irregularities. Held, that the case was not appealable, under s. 29 or s. 24 (g) of the Supreme Court Act, no future rights within the meaning of the former section being in question, and the appeal not being from a rule or order of a court quashing or refusing to quash a by-law of a municipal corporation. County of Verchères v. Village of Varennes, xix., 365.

38. Jurisdiction—Matter in controversy—Order to construct drain—Question of damages reserved—Future rights—Title to lands—Servitude—Supreme Court Act, s. 29 (b).—Defendants were condemned to complete certain drains, within a time fixed, in a lane separating defendant's and plaintiff's properties, to prevent water from entering plaintiff's house on a lower level. The question of damages were reserved. Held, that the case was not appealable, there being no controversy as to $2,000 or over, and no title to lands or future rights in question within the meaning of s. 29 (b) of the Supreme Court Act.—The words "title to lands" in this sub-section are only applicable to a case where a title to the property or a right to the title may be in question.—The fact that a question of the right of servitude arises would not give jurisdiction.—Wheeler v. Black, (14 Can. S. C. R. 242) referred to; Gilbert v. Gilman, (16 Can. S. C. R. 189) approved. Wineberg v. Hampson, xix., 369.

39. Jurisdiction—Matter in controversy—Subscription for joint stock shares—Action for call—Future rights—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29, s.-s. (b).—Suit for $1,000, being a call of ten per cent. on 100 shares of $100 each alleged to have been subscribed by B., in the capital stock of the company. During the suit, the company's business was ordered to be wound up under the Winding-up Act, and the liquidator authorized to continue the suit. The Superior Court found for plaintiff, but on appeal the Court of Queen's Bench dismissed the action. Held, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that no appeal would lie, the amount in controversy being under $2,000 and no future rights bound as specified in the Supreme Court Act, s. 29, s.-s. b. Gilbert v. Gilman, (16 Can.

S. C. R. 189), followed. Dominion Salvage & Wrecking Co. v. Brown, xx., 203.

40. Jurisdiction—Business tax—Action to set aside municipal by-law—Supreme Court Act, s. 24 (g).—By a by-law passed in the absence of the mayor, a councillor elected to the chair presiding, an annual tax of $800 was imposed on the Bell Tel. Co., and another of $1,000 on the Quebec Gas Co. In actions by appellants to annul the by-law, the Court of Queen's Bench reversed the Superior Court and dismissed the actions holding the tax valid. Held, that the cases were not appealable, the appellants not having taken out or been refused, after argument, a rule or order quashing the by-law in question within the terms of s. 24 (g) of the Supreme Court Act providing for appeals in cases of municipal by-laws. Varennes v. Verchères, (19 C. S. C. R. 365); Sherbrooke v. McManamy (18 C. S. C. R. 594), followed. Bell Telephone Co. v. City of Quebec; Quebec Gas Co. v. City of Quebec, xx., 230.

41. Amount in controversy—Jurisdiction—Disavowal—Parties—Issue on appeal.—In an action brought in 1866 for $800 and interest at 12½ per cent. against S. D. and W. D., amount of a promissory note signed by them, one copy of the summons was served at the domicile of S. D. at Three Rivers, the other defendant W. D. then residing in New York. On the return of the writ, respondent filed an appearance as attorney for both defendants and proceedings were suspended until 1874 when judgment was taken and in December, 1880, upon the issue of an alias writ of execution, appellant, having failed in an opposition to judgment, filed a petition in disavowal of respondent. The disavowed attorney pleaded inter alia that he had been authorized to appear by a letter signed by S. D., saying: "Be so good as to file an appearance in the case to which the inclosed has reference, etc.," and also prescription, ratification and insufficiency of the allegations of the petition in disavowal. The petition in disavowal was dismissed. On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada respondent moved to quash on the ground that the matter in controversy did not amount to $2,000. Held, that as the judgment obtained against the appellant, in March, 1874, on the appearance filed by respondent, exceeded $2,000, the judgment on the petition for disavowal was appealable. Held, also, that where a petition in disavowal has been served on all parties to the suit and is only contested by the attorney, whose authority to act is denied, the latter cannot on an appeal complain that all parties interested in the result are not parties to the appeal. Dawson v. Dumont, xx., 709.

42. Jurisdiction—Fraudulent conveyance—Deed of land—Action by creditor—Amount in controversy—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29.—In December, 1889, Ferland, a trader, sold to G., one of respondents, real estate in Montreal, mortgaged for $7,000, or $8,000, with a right of reméré for one year. In January, 1890, Ferland made an assignment, and Flatt, et al. creditors for $1,880, brought action against G. to have the deed of the property (valued at over $11,000) set aside as made in fraud of creditors. G. pleaded that he was willing to return the property upon payment of $1,000 advanced to F., and the courts below dismissed the action. Held, that as appellants' claim was under $2,000 and they did not represent Ferland's other creditors, the amount in controversy was insufficient to make the case appealable. Flatt v. Ferland, xxi., 32.

43. Jurisdiction—Road repair—Municipal by-law—Rights in future—Supreme Court Act, s. 29 (b).—Action by the corporation for $262.14 paid out for macadam work on a road fronting appellants' lands, the work of macadamizing and keeping it in repair being imposed by by-law. Appellants pleaded nullity of the by-law. Held, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that appellants' obligation to keep the road in repair under the by-law not being a charge affecting "future rights" within the meaning of R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b), the case was not appealable. County of Verchères v. Village of Varennes, (19 Can. S. C. R. 365), followed, Reburn v. Paroisse de Ste. Anne, (15 Can. S. C. R. 92), distinguished. Dubois v. Village of Ste. Rose, xxi., 65.

44. Jurisdiction—Monthly allowance of $200—Amount in controversy—"Future rights"—"Annual rents"—Rentes foncières—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b)—54 Vict. c. 96 (Que.)—R. claimed under a will and an Act of the Legislature of Quebec, from L., testamentary executrix of the estate, $200, an instalment of the monthly allowance L. was authorized to pay to each of testator's daughters out of the revenues of his estate. Held, that the amount in controversy being only $200, and there being no "future rights" which might be bound within the meaning of those words in s. 29 (b) of the Supreme Court Act, the case was not appealable.—Annual rents in R. S. C. c. 135 s. 29 (b), mean "ground rents" (rentes foncières) and not an annuity or any other like charges or obligations. Rodier v. Lapierre, xxi., 69.

45. Jurisdiction—Supreme Court Amending Act, 1891—Judgment of Court of Review—Case standing over for judgment—Amount in dispute—Arts. 1178 & 1178 (a), C. C. P.—Action by respondent for $2,006 was heard and taken en délibéré by the Court of Review on 30th Sept., 1891, date of assent to 54-55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, giving an appeal from the Court of Review to the Supreme Court of Canada. Judgment was rendered a month later. Held, per Strong, Fournier and Taschereau, JJ., that the plaintiff's right could not be prejudiced by the delay of the court in rendering judgment which should be treated as having been given on the day, when the case was taken en délibéré, and therefore the case was not appealable. Hurtubise v. Desmarceau (19 Can. S. C. R. 562), followed. Per Gwynne and Patterson, JJ., that the case did not come within 54-55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, inasmuch as the judgment, being for less than £500 sterling was not a judgment of right appealable to the Privy Council. Couture v. Bouchard, xxi., 281.

46. Matter in controversy—Bornage—Injunction—Jurisdiction—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b).—In a case between adjoining proprietors of lands, an encroachment was complained of, and it appeared that the limits had not been legally determined by bornage, the judgment appealed from (M. L. R., 7 Q. B. 196), held that injunction would not lie, the proper remedy being an action en bornage. Held, that as the matter in controversy did not put in issue any title to land, the case was not appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada. Emerald Phosphate Co. v. Anglo-Continental Guano Works, xxi., 422.

47. Jurisdiction—Amount in controversy—Opposition to seizure for less than $2,000—Objection taken by court—Costs.—Contestation on opposition by respondent to a seizure of lands by appellant on a judgment for $640. The opposition alleged that respondent was a creditor of defendant for $31,000, and asked that seizure be annulled on the ground that by agreement of 17th Oct., 1876, no property of the defendant should be sold without the respondent's consent. Defendant was a building society, and respondent alleged that appellant as a director had become a party to and bound by the agreement. The opposition was maintained by the Superior Court, and by the majority of the Court of Queen's Bench. Held, that the appeal did not come within any of the cases mentioned in 42 Vict. c. 39, s. 8, providing for appeals from the Province of Quebec. The demand was for $640; the opposition was not for any particular sum and did not ask for the payment of the debt of $31,000, but attacked only the seizure for $640 and sought to interfere with the execution of a judgment for that sum; the amount in dispute therefore was this $640, and the question of jurisdiction was governed by this amount and not by the value of property seized, although such value exceeded the sum of $2,000. Henry, J., dissented.—Appeal quashed for want of jurisdiction, but without costs, the objection having been raised by the court. Champoux v. Lapierre, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 426; Cass. Prac. (2 ed.), 40, 81.

48. Amount in controversy—Matter in issue—Jurisdiction—Opposition to seizure—Affidavit as to value.—The appellant was allowed to shew by affidavit that the amount in dispute was over $2,000. McCorkill v. Knight, 31st Jan., 1879; Cass. S. Ct. Prac. (2 ed.), 40.

49. Jurisdiction—Seizure of lands—Opposition afin de distraire—Amount in dispute—Supreme Court Act (1879), s. 8—Costs.—The appellants, having recovered judgments for $528.83, with interest and $231, with interest and costs, issued execution upon the last judgment, under which lands were seized. Respondents contested the seizure by opposition afin de distraire, alleging title to the land seized, acquired for the price of $2,000, and prayed that they might be declared owners, and the seizure set aside. Appellants contested this opposition, impugning the alleged sale and the title of respondents to the land in question. On appeal from the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, reversing the Superior Court on this contestation. Held, that the opposition having been filed in a suit in which the amount in dispute was less than $2,000, the appeal would not lie. Macfarlane v. Leclair (15 Moo. P. C. C. 181), referred to; also Champoux v. Lapierre, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 426; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.), 40, 81.—Appeal quashed for want of jurisdiction, but without costs, a motion to quash not having been made at the earliest convenient moment. Gendron v. McDougall, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 429; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.), 40, 81.

50. Jurisdiction—Superior Court—Evocation from Circuit Court—Limited contract—Rights in future—42 Vict. c. 39, s. 8 (D.).—D. entered into an agreement with the defendant and others, whereby they agreed to furnish for 20 years all the milk of their cows to D., to be manufactured into cheese, at a percentage rate, at his factory of which the plaintiff subsequently became proprietor and vested with all the rights of D. The defendant, among others, contrary to the agreement, sold his milk to an opposition factory, whereupon the plaintiff sued for damages in the Circuit Court. The action was evoked on the ground that future rights were in question, and the Superior Court gave plaintiff $8.51 damages for the breach of the agreement. The Court of Queen's Bench having reversed the judgment and dismissed the action, plaintiff applied to a judge of that court for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court, who refused on the ground that the future rights were limited, and that multiplied by their duration they would not reach the amount required for an appeal. On further application to Gwynne, J., of the Supreme Court, in chambers: Held, that the case was similar to one of a contract for payment of a sum by instalments to an amount of $170.20 in all, and also that it did not come within the meaning of "rights in future," as used in s. 8 of the Supreme Court Amendment Act of 1879, and an appeal did not lie to the Supreme Court of Canada. Beaubien v. Bernatchez, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 433; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.), 43.

51. Jurisdiction—Sup. Ct. Amendment Act, 1879, s. 8—Duty payable to the Crown—Future rights—Ex post facto legislation—Right of appeal.—Motion to quash appeal from Queen's Bench (Que.), on ground that amount involved ($222.80) was below $2,000, and that the case did not come within any of the exceptions provided for in 42 Vict. c. 39, s. 8.—Two actions (combined at trial,) which constituted the case in appeal, were brought by D., an importer of crockery, against the collector of customs at Montreal for the recovery of difference between 20 and 30 per cent. ad valorem duty on value of importations of "printed ware." The Tariff Act of 1879, 42 Vict. c. 15, sch. A, imposed 30 per cent. ad valorem duty on "earthenware, white granite or iron stoneware, and 'C. C.' or cream coloured ware," the only enumerated class under which the goods in question could come. At the end of the schedule all unenumerated goods and goods not declared free were subjected to a duty of 20 per cent. The collector insisted upon duty being paid by appellant under the class enumerated as above. D. claimed that they should not be classified, but came under the unenumerated class, and should only pay 20 per cent., paid the 30 per cent. and brought the actions to recover the difference. The importations in question were in spring and summer of 1883. Judgment was given (Jan., 1884), in favour of defendant, and the Queen's Bench dismissed an appeal in May, 1885. In 1884 (47 Vict. c. 30, s. 2, schedule), Parliament amended the Tariff Act as to earthenware as follows: "Earthenware, decorated, printed or spanged, and all earthenware, not elsewhere specified, 30 per cent. ad valorem," thus distinctly covering D.'s description of his own importations and declaring such goods subject to 30 per cent., and making it relate back to March, 1884. The collector contended that if before the Act of 1884 the matter in question was a proper subject of appeal, 42 Vict. c. 39 s. 8, by reason of its relation to a duty or revenue payable to the Crown in respect of which the decision appealed from might affect appellant's future rights, it ceased to be such a case by virtue of the Act of 1884, because that amending Act declared distinctly that from March, 1884, and for the future, the particular class of goods in question was to be subject to a 30 per cent. duty, and that therefore, appellant's future rights could not be affected. Held, 1. That there might have been importations of the same class of goods by D. subsequent to those in question in the appeal and before the amendment of 1884 effected a change, in respect of which the decision in the present cases would bind appellant, and that, therefore, the case in that respect at least would still come within the meaning of 42 Vict. c. 39, s. 8, that is to say, being in respect of a duty payable to the Crown, the decision of which might affect the then future rights of appellant. 2. That there might be a dispute still as to whether the amending Act of 1884 expressly covered the same class of goods as were in question in this case, in order to decide which the evidence and merits would require to be discussed, and that this should not be discussed on a motion to quash. 3. That if the appellant had a right to appeal, such right could only be taken away by express and clear words, and there was nothing to shew that such right was taken away.—Motion refused, with $25 costs. Darling v. Ryan, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 435; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.), 43.

52. Jurisdiction—Award by Drainage Referee—54 Vict. c. 51 (Ont.)—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24—Costs.—A judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, affirming the decision or award of a referee under the provisions of "The Drainage Trials Act, 1891" (Ont.), is not appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada under sub-section (f) of section 24, or any other provision of "The Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act." (Gwynne, J., dissented from the judgment of the majority of the court).—Memo. The question as to jurisdiction having been taken by the court, the appeal was dismissed without costs. Township of Harwich v. Township of Raleigh, 18th May, 1895.

53. Appeal—Amount in controversy—R. S. C. c. 135—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25—Costs.—C. brought an action against E., claiming: 1. That a certain building contract should be rescinded; 2. $1,000 damages; 3. $545 for value of bricks in possession of E., but belonging to C. The judgment of the Superior Court dismissed C.'s claim for $1,000 but granted the other conclusions. On appeal to the Court of Queen's Bench by E., the action was dismissed in 1893. C. then appealed to the Supreme Court. Held, that the building for which the contract had been entered into having been completed, there remained but the question of costs and the claim for $545 in dispute between the parties and that amount was not sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Supreme Court under R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29. Cowen v. Evans, xxii., 328.

54. Jurisdiction—Right to appeal—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, s.s. 4—Amount in dispute—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29.—The statute 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, which provides that "whenever the right to appeal is dependent upon the amount in dispute, such amount shall be understood to be that demanded and not that recovered, if they are different" does not apply to cases in which the Superior Court has rendered judgment, or to cases argued and standing for judgment (en délibéré) before that court, when the act came into force (30th September, 1891). Williams v. Irvine (22

Can. S. C. R. 108) followed. — In actions for damages claiming more than $2,000, the Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada on appeal in one case gave plaintiff judgment for $800, reversing the judgment of the Superior Court which had dismissed the actions, and in the other cases, on appeal by the defendants, affirmed the judgments of the Superior Court giving damages for an amount less than $2,000. Held, following Monette v. Lefebvre (16 Can. S. C. R. 387), that no appeal would lie to the Supreme Court in these cases by the defendants from the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench under s. 29 of c. 135 R. S. C. Gwynne, J., dissented. Coven v. Evans; Mitchell v. Trenholme; Mills v. Limoges. xxii., 331.

55. Jurisdiction—Amount in dispute—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, s.-s. 4 (D.) — Prior to the passing of the Act, 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, amending the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, and declaring that, where the right of appeal depended upon the amount in controversy, the amount in dispute should be deemed to be that demanded by the action, and not the amount recovered, if they were different, the Superior Court, at Montreal, dismissed an action for $5,000 damages by a judgment which was reversed on appeal, and the entry of judgment for $600 in favour of the plaintiff was ordered by the Court of Queen's Bench. The defendant then appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada. On motion to quash for want of jurisdiction: Held, following Coven v. Evans; Mitchell v. Trenholme, and Mills v. Limoges (22 Can. S. C. R. 331), that the Supreme Court of Canada had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. Montreal Street Railway Co. v. Carrière, 11th October, 1893. (See footnote at page 335 of Vol. 22, Can. Sup. Ct. Reps.)

56. Opposition afin de conserver on proceeds of a judgment for $1,129—Amount in dispute—Right to appeal R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29. — K. (plaintiff) contested an opposition afin de conserver for $24,000 filed by L. on the proceeds of a sale of property upon the execution by K. against H. & Co. of a judgment obtained by K. against H. & Co. for $1,129. The Superior Court dismissed L.'s opposition but on appeal the Court of Queen's Bench (appeal side) maintained the opposition and ordered that L. be collocated au marc la livre on the sum of $930, being the amount of the proceeds of the sale. Held, that the pecuniary interest of K. appealing from the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench (appeal side) being under $2,000 the case was not appealable under R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29. Gendron v. McDougall (Cass. Dig., 2 ed. 429), followed.—Held, also, that s. 3 of 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, providing for an appeal where the amount demanded is $2,000 or over has no application to the present case. Kinghorn v. Larue, xxii., 347.

57. Actio negatoria servitutis — Amount in controversy—Future rights—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b)—56 Vict. c. 29, s. 1. — In an action négoire the plaintiff sought to have a servitude claimed by the defendant declared non-existent, and claimed $30 damages. Held, that under 56 Vict. c. 29, s. 1, amending R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b), the case was appealable, the question in controversy relating to matters where the rights in future might be bound. Wineberg v. Hampson (19 Can. S. C. R. 369) distinguished. Chamberland v. Fortier, xxiii., 371.

58. Bond in appeal—School mistress—Fee of office—Future rights—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b)—C. S. L. C. c. 15, s. 68—R. S. Q. art. 2073. — B. Larivière, a school mistress, by her action claimed $1,243 as fees due to her in virtue of s. 69, c. 15, C. S. L. C., which was collected by the School Commissioners of the city of Three Rivers, while she was employed by them. At the time of the action the plaintiff had ceased to be in their employ. The Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada (appeal side) affirming the judgment of the Superior Court, dismissed the action. On motion before the Supreme Court of Canada to allow a bond in appeal, which had been refused by a judge of the court below, the Registrar of the Supreme Court and a judge of that court, in Chambers, on the ground that the case was not appealable: Held, that the matter in controversy did not relate to any office or fee of office within the meaning of s. 29 (b) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, R. S. C. c. 135. 2. Even assuming it did, no rights in future would be bound, and the amount in dispute being less than $2,000 the case was not appealable. 3. The words "where the rights in future might be bound" in s.-s. (b) of s. 29 govern all the preceding words "any fee of office, etc." Chagnon v. Normand (16 Can. S. C. R. 661); Gilbert v. Gilman, (16 Can. S. C. R. 189); Bank of Toronto v. Les Curé, etc., de St. Vierge (12 Can. S. C. R. 25), referred to. Larivière v. School Commissions for Three Rivers, xxiii., 723.

59. Amount in controversy—Pecuniary interest—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29—Contract of sale—Contre lettre—Principal and agent—Construction of contract. — The plaintiff, who had acted as agent for the late J. B. S., brought an action for $1,471.07 for a balance of account as negotiorum gestor of J. B. S., against the defendants, executors of J. B. S. The defendants, in addition to a general denial, pleaded compensation for $3,416 and interest. The plaintiff replied that this sum was paid by a dation en paiement of certain immovables. The defendants answered that the transaction was not a giving in payment but a giving of a security. The Court of Queen's Bench, reversing the judgment of the Superior Court, held that the defendants had been paid by the dation en paiement of the immovables, and that the defendants owed a balance of $1,154 to the plaintiff. Held, that the pecuniary interest of the defendants, affected by the judgment appealed from, was more than $2,000 over and above the plaintiff's claim and therefore the case was appealable under R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29. Hunt v. Taplin, xxiv., 36.

60. Right of appeal—Petition to quash by-law under art. 4,389 R. S. Q.—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24 (g). — Proceedings were commenced to quash a by-law passed by the corporation of the City of Sherbrooke under art. 4,389 R. S. Q. which gives the right to petition the Superior Court to annul a municipal by-law. The judgment appealed from, reversing the judgment of the Superior Court, held that the by-law was intra vires. On motion to quash an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada: Held, that the proceedings being in the interest of the public, are equivalent to the motion or rule to quash of the English practice, and therefore the court had jurisdiction to entertain the appeal, under s.-s. (g) of s. 24, c. 135, R. S. C. Sherbrooke v. McManamy (18 Can. S. C. R. 594), and Verchères v. Varennes

(19 Can. S. C. R. 356), distinguished. Webster v. City of Sherbrooke, xxiv., 52.

61. Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, R. S. C. c. 135, ss. 24 and 29—Costs.]—Held, that a judgment in an action by a ratepayer contesting the validity of a homologated valuation roll is not a judgment appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada under s. 24 (g) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, and does not relate to future rights within the meaning of s.s. (b) of s. 29, of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Held, also, that as the valuation roll sought to be set aside in this case had been duly homologated and not appealed against within the delay provided in art. 1061 (Mun. Code, Que.), the only matter in dispute between the parties was a mere question of costs, and therefore the court would not entertain the appeal. Moir v. Corporation of the Village of Hunt-Ingdon (19 Can. S. C. R. 363), followed; Webster v. Sherbrooke (24 Can. S. C. R. 52), distinguished. McKay v. Township of Hinchinbrooke, xxiv., 55.

62. Amount in dispute—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, s.s. 4.]—By virtue of s.s. 4 of s. 3 of c. 25 of 54 & 55 Vict., in determining the amount in dispute in cases in appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, the proper course is to look at the amount demanded by the statement of claim, even though the actual amount in controversy in the court appealed from was for less than $2,000. Thus where the plaintiff obtained a judgment in the court of original jurisdiction for less than $2,000, and did not take a cross-appeal upon the defendants appealing to the intermediate Court of Appeal where such judgment was reversed, he was entitled to appeal to this court. Levi v. Reid (6 Can. S. C. R. 482), restored, affirmed, and followed, Gwynne, J., dissenting. Laberge v. Equitable Life Ass. Soc., xxiv., 59.

63. Jurisdiction — Future rights—R. S. C. c. 135 s. 29 (b)—56 Vict. c. 29 (D.)]—By R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b), amended by 56 Vict. c. 29 (D.), an appeal will lie to the Supreme Court of Canada from the judgments of the courts of highest resort in the Province of Quebec, in cases where the amount in controversy is less than $2,000, if the matter relates to any title to lands or tenements, annual rents and other matters or things where the rights in future might be bound. Held, that the words "other matters or things" mean rights of property analogous to title to lands, etc., which are specifically mentioned, and not personal rights; that "title" means a vested right or title already acquired though the enjoyment may be postponed; and that the right of a married woman to an annuity provided by her marriage contract in case she should become a widow is not a right in future which should authorize an appeal in an action by her husband against her for separation de corps in which if judgment went against her the right to the annuity would be forfeited. O'Dell v. Gregory, xxiv., 661.

64. Jurisdiction — Winding-up Act — Amount in controversy — Aggregate liability — Joint or separate liability — Contributories.]—A decision of the Court of Appeal for Ontario reversed the order of the Master in Ordinary settling the respondents on the list of contributories under the Winding-up Act. Appeal lies to the Supreme Court of Canada, in proceedings under the Winding-up Act, only where the amount involved is $2,000 or over. In this case there were six persons placed on the list by the Master; one for $1,000, and the others for $900 each, and all were released from liability by the decision of the Court of Appeal from which this appeal was brought. The Supreme Court held that although the aggregate amount for which the respondents were sought to be made liable exceeded $2,000, there was no jurisdiction under the Act to entertain the appeal, because the position was the same as if proceedings had been taken separately against each of the contributories. The appeal was quashed with costs. Stephens v. Gerth; In re Ontario Express & Transportation Co., xxiv., 716.

65. Appeal for costs — Jurisdiction — Action in warranty — Proceedings taken by warrantee before judgment on principal demand.]—Though an appeal will not lie in respect of costs only, yet where there has been a mistake upon some matter of law, or of principle, which the party appealing has an actual interest in having reviewed and which governs or affects the costs, the party prejudiced is entitled to have the benefit of correction by appeal. Archibald v. DeLisle; Baker v. DeLisle; Mowat v. DeLisle, xxv., 1.

66. By-law—Petition to quash—Appeal to Court of Queen's Bench—40 Vict. c. 29 (Q.)—53 Vict. c. 70 (Q.)—Judgment quashing—Appeal to Supreme Court—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24 (g).]—Section 439 of the Town Corporations Act (40 Vict. c. 29 (Q.)), not having been excluded from the charter of the City of Ste. Cunegonde (53 Vict. c. 70) is to be read as forming a part of it and prohibits an appeal to the Court of Queen's Bench from a judgment of the Superior Court on a petition to quash a by-law presented under s. 310 of said charter. — Where the Court of Queen's Bench has quashed such an appeal for want of jurisdiction, no appeal lies to the Supreme Court of Canada from its decision. City of Ste. Cunegonde v. Gougeon, xxv., 78.

67. Mandamus—Judgment of Court of Review.]—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25 (D.) does not authorize an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from a decision of the Court of Review in a case where the judgment of the Superior Court is reversed and there is an appeal to the Court of Queen's Bench. Danjou v. Marquis (3 Can. S. C. R. 251) and McDonald v. Abbott (3 Can. S. C. R. 278) followed. Barrington v. City of Montreal, xxv., 202.

68. Amount in controversy—Pecuniary interest of appellant—Arts. 746, 747 C. C. P.]—L. having proved a claim of $920 against an insolvent estate contested a claim for which respondents had been collocated against the same estate amounting to $2,044.66. The contestation having been decided in favour of respondent, L. appealed to the Supreme Court. Held, that to determine whether or not there was a sufficient amount in controversy to give jurisdiction to the Supreme Court the pecuniary interest of the appellant only could be taken into consideration, and his interest being under $2,000 the appeal would not lie although the consequence of the appellant's contestation might result in bringing back to the insolvent estate a sum of over $2,000. Lachance v. Société de Prêts et de Placements de Québec, xxvi., 200.

69. *Appeal from Court of Review—Appeal to Privy Council—Appealable amount—Addition of interest—C. C. P. Arts, 1115, 1178, 1178a—R. S. Q. Art. 2311—54 & 55 Vict. (D.), c. 25, s. 3, s.-s. 3—54 Vict. (Q.), c. 48 (Amending C. C. P. Art. 1115).—Under 54 & 55 Vict. (D.), c. 25, s. 3, s.-s. 3, there is no appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from a decision of the Court of Review, which would not be appealable as of right to the Privy Council.—Article 2311, R. S. Q., which provides that “whenever the right to appeal is dependent upon the amount in dispute such amount shall be understood to be that demanded and not that recovered if they are different” applies to appeals to the Privy Council.—Interest cannot be added to the sum demanded to raise it to the amount necessary to give a right of appeal. Stanton v. Home Ins. Co. (2 Legal News 314) approved. Dufresne v. Guévremont, xxvi., 216.*

70. Appeal—Jurisdiction—Judicial proceedings—Opposition to judgment—Arts. 484-493 C. C. P.—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29—Appealable amount—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, s.-s. 4—Retrospective legislation.—An opposition filed under the provisions of articles 484 and 487 of the Code of Civil Procedure of Lower Canada for the purpose of vacating a judgment entered by default, is a “judicial proceeding” within the meaning of s. 29 of “The Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act,” and where the appeal depends upon the amount in controversy, there is an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada if the amount of principal and interest due at the time of the filing of the opposition against the judgment sought to be annulled is of the sum or value of $2,000. Turcotte v. Danse-reau, xxvi., 578.

71. Jurisdiction—Expropriation of lands—Assessments—Local improvements—Future rights—Title to lands and tenements—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b); 56 Vict. c. 29, s. 1 (D.).—A by-law was passed for the widening of a portion of a street up to a certain homologated line, and for the necessary expropriation therefor. Assessments for the expropriations for certain years having been made whereby proprietors of a part of the street were relieved from contributing any proportion of the cost, thereby increasing the burden of assessment on the properties actually assessed, the owners of these properties brought an action to set aside the assessments. The Court of Queen’s Bench affirmed a judgment dismissing the action. On an application for leave to appeal; Held, that as the effect of the judgment sought to be appealed from would be to increase the burden of assessment not only for the expropriations then made, but also for expropriations which would have to be made in the future, the judgment was one from which an appeal would lie, the matter in controversy coming within the meaning of the words “and other matters or things where the rights in future might be bound,” contained in sub-sec. (b) of sec. 29, Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, as amended by 56 Vict. c. 29 s. 1. Stevenson v. City of Montreal, xxvii., 187.

72. Action en bornage—Future rights—Title to lands—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b)—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3 (D.).—56 Vict. c. 29, s. 1 (D.).—The parties executed a deed for the purpose of settling the boundary between contiguous lands, of which they were respectively proprietors, and thereby named a provincial surveyor as their referee to run the line. The line thus run being disputed, M. brought an action to have this line declared the true boundary, and to revendicate a disputed strip of land lying upon his side of the line so run by the surveyor. Held, that under R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29, s.-s. (b), as amended by 56 Vict. c. 29, s. 1 (D.), an appeal would lie to the Supreme Court of Canada, first, on the ground that the question involved was one relating to a title to lands, and secondly, on the ground that it involved matters or things where rights in future might be bound. Chamberland v. Fortier (23 Can. S. C. R. 371) referred to and approved. McGoey v. Leamy, xxvii., 193.

73. Court of Review—Appeal to Privy Council—Appealable amount—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, s.-s. 3 and 4 (D.).—C. S. L. C. c. 77, s. 25—Arts. 1115, 1178 C. C. P.—R. S. Q. Art. 2311.—In appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada from the Court of Review (which, by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, s.-s. 3, must be appealable to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council), the amount by which the right to appeal is to be determined is that demanded and not that recovered, if they are different. Dufresne v. Guévremont (26 Can. S. C. R. 216) followed. Citizens Light & Power Co. v. Parent, xxvii., 316.

74. Jurisdiction—Appealable amount—Future rights—“Other matters and things”—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b)—56 Vict. c. 29 (D.).—The classes of matters which are made appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada under the provisions of s. 29, s.-s. (b) of “The Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act,” as amended by 56 Vict. c. 29, do not include future rights, and do not affect rights to or in real property, or rights analogous to interests in real property. Rodier v. Lapierre (21 Can. S. C. R. 69), and O’Dell v. Gregory (24 Can. S. C. R. 661) followed. Raphael v. Maclaren, xxvii., 319.

75. Jurisdiction—Title to lands—Municipal law—By-law—Widening streets—Expropriation—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b)—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3—56 Vict. c. 29, s. 1.—In an action to quash a by-law passed for the expropriations of land, the controversy relates to a title to lands, and an appeal lies to the Supreme Court of Canada, although the amount in controversy is less than $2,000.—The judgment on the merits dismissed the appeal for the reasons stated in the judgment of the Court below. (See Q. R. 6 Q. B. 345). Murray v. Westmount, xxvii., 579.

76. Jurisdiction—Judgment—Reference to court for opinion—54 Vict. c. 5 (B.C.).—R. S. C. c. 135, ss. 24 and 28.—The Supreme Court of Canada has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from the opinion of a provincial court upon a reference made by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, under a provincial statute, authorizing him to refer to the court for hearing and consideration any matter which he may think fit, although the statute provides that such opinion shall be deemed a judgment of the court. Union Colliery Co. of Brit. Col. v. Attorney-General of Brit. Col., xxvii., 637.

77. Jurisdiction—Title to land—Petitory action—Encroachment—Constructions under mistake of title—Good faith—Common error—

Demolition of works—Right of accession—Indemnity—Res judicata—Arts. 412, 413, 429 et seq., 1047, 1241 C. C.—An action to revendicate a strip of land upon which an encroachment was admitted to have taken place, by the erection of a building extending beyond the boundary line, and for the demolition and removal of the walls, and the eviction of the defendant, involves questions relating to a title to land, independently of the controversy as to bare ownership, and is appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada under the provisions of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Delorme v. Cusson, xxviii., 66.

78. Action — Jurisdiction — Appealable amount — Monthly allowance — Future rights — "Other matters and things"—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b)—56 Vict. c. 29 (D).—Established jurisprudence in court appealed from.—In an action en declaration de paternité the plaintiff claimed an allowance of $15 per month until the child (then a minor aged four years and nine months), should attain the age of ten years, and for an allowance of $20 per month thereafter "until such time as the child should be able to support and provide for himself." The court below, following the decision in Lizotte v. Descheneau (6 Legal News, 107), held that under ordinary circumstances such an allowance would cease at the age of fourteen. Held, that the demande must be understood to be for allowances only up to the time the child should attain the age of fourteen years and no further, so that, apart from the contingent character of the claim, the demande was for less than the sum or value of two thousand dollars, and consequently the case was not appealable under the provisions of the twenty-ninth section of "The Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act," even if an amount or value of more than two thousand dollars might become involved under certain contingencies as a consequence of the judgment of the court below. Rodier v. Lapierre (21 Can. S. C. R. 69), followed.—Held, also, that the nature of the action and demande did not bring the case within the exception as to "future rights" mentioned in the section of the Act above referred to. O'Dell v. Gregory (24 Can. S. C. R. 661); Raphael v. MacLaren (27 Can. S. C. R. 319) followed. Macdonald v. Galivan, xxviii., 258.

79. Jurisdiction — Amount in controversy—Affidavits — Evidence as to amount — The Exchequer Court Acts 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, ss. 51-53 (D).—54 & 55 Vict. c. 26, s. 8 (D).—The Patent Act—R. S. C. c. 61, s. 36.—On a motion to quash an appeal where the respondents filed affidavits stating that the amount in controversy was less than the amount fixed by the statute as necessary to give jurisdiction to the appellate court, and affidavits were also filed by the appellants, shewing that the amount in controversy was sufficient to give jurisdiction under the statute, the motion to quash was dismissed, but the appellants were ordered to pay the costs, as the jurisdiction of the court to hear the appeal did not appear until the filing of the appellants' affidavits in answer to the motion. Dreschel v. Auer Incandescent Light Mfg. Co., xxviii., 268.

80. Jurisdiction—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 2—Prohibition — Railways — Expropriation — Arbitration.—The provisions of the second section of the statute, 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, giving the Supreme Court of Canada jurisdiction s. c. d.—3 to hear appeals in matters of prohibition, apply to such appeals from the Province of Quebec as well as to all other parts of Canada. Shannon v. Montreal Park & Island Ry. Co., xxviii., 374.

81. Jurisdiction — Amount in controversy—Opposition afin de distraire — Judicial proceeding — Demand in original action — R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29.—An opposition afin de distraire, for the withdrawal of goods from seizure, is a "judicial proceeding" within the meaning of the twenty-ninth section of "The Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act," and on an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, from a judgment dismissing such opposition, the amount in controversy is the value of the goods sought to be withdrawn from seizure, and not the amount demanded by the plaintiff's action, or for which the execution issued. Turcotte v. Dansereau (26 Can. S. C. R. 578), and McCorkill v. Knight (3 Can. S. C. R. 233; Cass Dig. 2 ed. 694) followed; Champoux v. Lapierre (Cass. Dig. 2 ed. 426), and Gendron v. McDougall (Cass. Dig. 2 ed. 429), discussed and distinguished. King v. Dupuis dit Gilbert, xxviii., 388.

82. Jurisdiction — Future rights—Alimentary allowance—R. S. C. c. 135 s. 29, s.-s. 2; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3—56 Vict. c. 29, s. 2.—Actions or proceedings respecting disputes as to mere personal alimentary pensions or allowances do not constitute controversies where in rights in future may be bound within the meaning of the second sub-section of the twenty-ninth section of "The Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act," as amended, which allows appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada from judgments rendered in the Province of Quebec in cases where the controversy relates to "annual rents or other matters or things where rights in future might be bound." Macfarlane v. Leclaire, (15 Moo. P. C. 181), distinguished; Sauvageau v. Gauthier, (L. R. 5 P. C. 494), followed. Banque du Peuple v. Trottier, xxviii., 422.

83. Assuming jurisdiction — Amount in controversy — 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, s. 1, s.-s. (c).—Where the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Canada to entertain an appeal is doubtful, the court may assume jurisdiction when it has been decided that the appeal on the merits must be dismissed. Great Western Railway Company of Canada v. Braid (1 Moo. P. C. N. S. 101), followed.—By 60 and 61 Vict. c. 34, s. 1, s.-s. (c), no appeal lies from judgments of the Court of Appeal for Ontario unless the amount in controversy in the appeal exceeds $1,000, and by sub-section (f), in case of difference, it is the amount demanded, and not that recovered which determines the amount in controversy. Held, per Taschereau, J., that to reconcile these two sub-sections, paragraph (f) should probably be read as if it meant the amount demanded upon the appeal. To read it as meaning the amount demanded in the action, which is the construction the court has put upon R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29, relating to appeals from the Province of Quebec, would seem to be contrary to the intention of parliament. Laberge v. The Equitable Life Assurance Society (24 Can. S. C. R. 59) distinguished. Bain v. Anderson & Co., et al., xxviii., 481.

84. Jurisdiction — Matter in controversy—Interest of second mortgagee—Surplus on sale of mortgaged lands — 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, s.

1 (D.)—Statute, construction of — Practice.]—While an action to set aside a second mortgage on lands for $2,200 was pending, the mortgaged lands were sold under a prior mortgage, and the first mortgagee, after satisfying his own claims, paid the whole surplus of the proceeds of the sale amounting to $270 to the defendant as subsequent incumbrancee. Judgment was afterwards rendered declaring the second mortgage void, and ordering the defendant to pay to the plaintiff, as assignee for the benefit of creditors, the amount of $270 so received by him thereunder, and this judgment was affirmed on appeal. Upon an application to allow an appeal bond on further appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, objections were taken for want of jurisdiction under the clauses of the Act 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, but they were overruled by a judge of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, who held that an interest in real estate was in question and the appeal was accordingly proceeded with, and the appeal case and factums printed and delivered. On motion to quash for want of jurisdiction when the appeal was called for hearing; Held, that the case did not involve a question of title to real estate or any interest therein, but was merely a controversy in relation to an amount less than the sum or value of one thousand dollars, and that the Act 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, prohibited an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. Jermyn v. Tew, xxviii., 497.

85. Jurisdiction — Injunction—Ditches and watercourses—Title to land.]—Proceedings to restrain the owner of land from constructing a ditch thereon under the Ditches and Watercourses Act to prevent injury to adjoining property do not involve any question of title to land or any interest therein within the meaning of 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, s. 1, s.-s. (a) relating to appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada in Ontario cases. The fact that the adjoining land was to be taxed for benefit by construction of the ditch would not authorize an appeal under sub-section (d) as relating to the taking of a duty or fee nor as affecting future rights. Waters v. Manigault, xxx., 304.

86. Jurisdiction — Amount in dispute — Question raised by plea—Incidental issue.]—Issues raised merely by pleas cannot have the effect of increasing the amount in controversy so as to give the Supreme Court of Canada jurisdiction to hear an appeal. Girouard, J., dubitante. Standard Life Ass. Co. v. Trudeau, xxx., 308.

87. Jurisdiction — Matter in controversy—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b)—Tutorship—Petition for cancellation of appointment—Arts. 249 et seq. C. C. — Tutelle proceedings.]—The Supreme Court of Canada has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from a judgment pronounced in a controversy in respect to the cancellation of the appointment of a tutrix to minor children. Noel v. Chevreuil, xxx., 327.

88. Jurisdiction — Servitude — Action concessoire — Execution of judgment therein — Localization of right of way—Opposition to writ of possession—Matter in controversy—Title to land—Future rights.]—An opposition to a writ of possession issued in execution of a judgment allowing a right of way over the opposant's land does not raise a question of title to land nor bind future rights, and in such a case the Supreme Court of Canada has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal. O'Dell

v. Gregory (24 Can. S. C. R. 661) followed; Chamberland v. Fortier (23 Can. S. C. R. 371), and McGoey v. Leamy (27 Can. S. C. R. 193) distinguished.—If the jurisdiction of the court is doubtful the appeal must be quashed. Langevin v. Les Commissaires d'Ecole de St. Marc (18 Can. S. C. R. 599) followed. Cully v. Ferdaï, xxx., 330.

89. Jurisdiction — Action for penalties — Plea of ultra vires of statute—Judgment on other grounds—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (a).]—To an action claiming $325 as penalties for an offence against the Pharmacy Act, the pleas were:—1. General denial. 2. That the Act was ultra vires. In the courts below the action was dismissed for want of proof of the alleged offence. Held, Strong, C.J., and Gwynne, J., dissenting, that an appeal would lie to the Supreme Court; that if the court should hold that there was error in the judgment which held the offence not proved the respondent would be entitled to a decision on his plea of ultra vires and the appeal would therefore lie under s. 29 (a) of the Supreme Court Act. L'Association Pharmaceutique de Quebec v. Livernois, xxx., 400.

90. Jurisdiction — Action for séparation de corps — Money demand — Supreme Court Act.]—In an action by a wife for séparation de corps for ill treatment the declaration concluded by demanding that the husband be condemned to deliver up to the wife her property valued at $18,000. The judgment in the action decreed separation and ordered an account as to property. Held, that no appeal would lie to the Supreme Court from the decree for separation; O'Dell v. Gregory (24 Can. S. C. R. 661) followed; and the money demand in the declaration being only incidental to the main cause of action could not give the court jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. Talbot v. Guilmartin, xxx., 482.

91. Jurisdiction — Amount in controversy—60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, s. 1, s.-s. (c) and (f)—Inoperative provisions—Prior enactment.]—Section 1, s.-s. (f) of 60 and 61 Vict. c. 34, providing that in appeals from the Court of Appeal for Ontario "whenever the right to appeal is dependent upon the amount in dispute, such amount shall be understood to be that demanded, not that recovered, if they are different," is inoperative, being repugnant to s.-s. (c).—The fact that s.-s. (f) is placed last in point of order in the section does not require the court to construe it as indicating the latest mind of Parliament as the whole section came into force at the same time. City of Ottawa v. Hunter, xxxi., 7.

92. Jurisdiction — Amount in dispute — R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29 (b).]—In an action by the lessee of lands, leased for four years and nine months at a rental of $250 per annum, to have the lease cancelled as being simulated as he was, at the time of the lease, owner of the property leased; Held, that no amount of $2,000 or upwards was in dispute, and that as the appeal did not relate to any title to land or tenements nor to annual rents within the meaning of s. 29 (b) of R. S. C. c. 135, it could not be entertained by the Supreme Court of Canada. Fréchette v. Simmoneau, xxxi., 12.

93. Jurisdiction — Withdrawal of defence raising constitutional question — Quebec

Pharmacy Act.—Where a motion to quash an appeal has been refused on the ground that a decision upon a constitutional question is involved, the subsequent abandonment of that question cannot affect the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Canada to entertain the appeal. L'Association Pharmaceutique de Québec v. Livernois, xxxi., 43.

94. Jurisdiction—Débats de compte—Issues on reddition — Amount in controversy.—In an action en reddition de compte, where items in the account filed exceeding in the aggregate $2,000 have been contested, the Supreme Court of Canada has jurisdiction to entertain an appeal. Bell v. Vipond, xxxi., 175.

95. Jurisdiction — Amount in controversy—Secretion of estate by insolvent—Contrainte per corps — Arts. 885, 888 C. P. Q.—On a contestation of a statement of an insolvent trader by a creditor claiming a sum exceeding $2,000, the judgment appealed from condemned the appellant, under the provisions of art. 888 C. P. Q., to three months' imprisonment for secretion of a portion of his insolvent estate, to the value of at least $6,000. Held, that there was no pecuniary amount in controversy and there could be no appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. Clement v. Banque Nationale, xxxiii., 343.

96. Jurisdiction — Matter in controversy—Right of appeal — Personal condemnation — Action possessoire.—In a possessory action with conclusions for $200 damages, the defendant admitted plaintiff's title and claimed the right of occupying the premises as her tenant. The judgment appealed from affirmed the trial court judgment, dismissing the possessory conclusions and adjudging $200 for rent of the premises in question. Held, that the defendant had no right to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. Davis v. Roy, xxxiii., 345.

97. Appeal on special questions — Issues on appeal — Powers of appellate court.—Per Armour, J.—Where an appeal has been taken as to a part only of a judgment complained of the whole issues are before the appellate court and it has power to review them and render the judgment which ought to have been pronounced in the court below. *Ville de Maisonneuve v. 7. COURT APPEALED FROM.

102. Court of last resort in P. E. Island—Jurisdiction — 38 Vict. c. 11, ss. 11, 17.—An appeal lies direct to the Supreme Court of Canada from the Supreme Court of Judicature of the Province of Prince Edward Island, as being the highest court of final resort in that Province. Kelly v. Sullivan, i., 1.

103. Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 68 — Appeals from Exchequer Court decisions.—There is nothing in s. 68 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act confining appeals from that court to a recourse against final judgments only, the word used being "decision" which is applicable as well to rules and orders not final as to final decisions. (Per Strong, J., at p. 257.) Danjou v. Marquis, iii., 251.

104. Certificate as to deposit—Security for costs—Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act—Rule 6—Court of Review (Que.)—The deposit of $500, in the court below, by appellant, without a certificate that it was so made to the satisfaction of the court appealed from, or one of its judges, is nugatory and ineffectual as security for the costs of the appeal. —Per Taschereau, J. The case should, under such circumstances, be sent back to the court below in order that a proper certificate might be obtained. —Per Strong and Taschereau, JJ. An appeal does not lie from the Court of Review (Que.) to the Supreme Court of Canada. Henry, J., contra. (See Danjou v. Marquis (3 Can. S. C. R. 251), No. 103, ante).—This appeal was quashed with costs, which included the general costs of respondent up to time motion made. The full fee of $25 was taxed by the registrar on hearing of motion. This was increased by fiat of Fournier, J., to $100. Macdonald v. Abbott, iii., 278.

[Appeals now lie from the Court of Review in cases where it affirms the trial court judgment, provided appeal as of right may be had to the Privy Council (54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3; 56 Vict. c. 29, s. 2.)]

105. Jurisdiction — Original Court — Superior Court—Supreme and Exchequer Court Act, s. 17.—An appeal will not lie to the Supreme Court of Canada in cases in which the court of original jurisdiction is not a Superior Court, and the Court of Wills and Probate for the County of Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, is not a Superior Court within the meaning of s. 17 of "The Supreme and Exchequer Court Act," before amendment by 52 Vict. c. 37, s. 2. Beamish v. Kaulback, iii., 704.

106. Expropriation of land—Persona designata—Order by judge in chambers—Moneys deposited—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 28—R. S. C. c. 109, s. 8.—The respondent petitioned for an order for payment to them of $4,000 deposited by appellants for land taken for railway purposes and a judge of the Superior Court, in chambers, after formal answer and hearing of the parties granted the order under the Railway Act. The company appealed to the Court of Queen's Bench which affirmed the order. Held, that the order having been made by a judge sitting in chambers, and, further, acting under the statute as persona designata, the proceedings had not originated in a Superior Court within the meaning of s. 28 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, and the case was therefore not appealable. Canadian

107. Decision of Court of Revision—Appeal to District Court—Judgment of Supreme Court of North-West Territories—Court of first instance—R. S. O. c. 135, s. 24—51 Vict. c. 37, s. 3 (D.)—By N.-W. T. ordinance an appeal lies from the Court of Revision for adjudicating upon assessments for school rates to the district court of the school district; on such appeal being brought the clerk of the court issues a summons, making the ratepayer plaintiff and the school trustees defendants, which summons is returnable at the next sitting of the court, when the appeal is heard. The district court by 49 Vict. c. 25, became merged in the Supreme Court of the North-West Territories, on 25th October, 1888. Held, that an appeal will not lie from the judgment of the Supreme Court affirming a decision of the Court of Revision in such a case, as the proceedings did not originate in a Superior Court. Angus v. Calgary School Trustees, xvi., 716.

108. Jurisdiction—Question of procedure—Judgment simultaneous with passing of Act—Existing adjudication—Supreme Court Amending Act, 1891—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3—Appeal from Court of Review.—By s. 3 of the Supreme Court Act of 1891, an appeal may lie from the Court of Review in cases which are, by the law of Quebec, appealable direct to the Privy Council. A judgment was delivered by the Court of Review in favour of respondent, on the day on which the Act came into force. Held, that appellants not having shewn that the judgment was delivered subsequent to the passing of the Act the court had no jurisdiction. Quære, Whether an appeal will lie from a judgment pronounced after the passing of the Act in an action pending before the change of the law. Hurtubise v. Desmarceau, xix., 562.

109. Jurisdiction—Case originating in Circuit Court—Objection taken by the court—Costs.—Appeal from the Court of Queen's Bench reversing the judgment of the Circuit Court, Three Rivers, setting aside a seizure for a tax of $10 imposed by by-law of the City of Three Rivers on strangers and non-residents selling goods by samples. The case was settled and agreed to by both parties, who took no objection to the jurisdiction. Held, that an appeal will not lie to the Supreme Court of Canada in cases where the court of original jurisdiction, is the Circuit Court for the Province of Quebec. Appeal quashed without costs, the objection having been taken by the court. Major v. City of Three Rivers, 18 C. L. J. 122; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 422; Cass. Prac. (2 ed.) 27, 81.

[Followed in The Mayor, etc., of Terrebonne v. The Sisters of the Providence Asylum, No. 111, infra.]

110. Jurisdiction—Prosecution before Justice of the Peace—Certiorari—Court of original jurisdiction—Costs—Objection taken by court.—A conviction by J. P. for selling liquor contrary to the "Canada Temperance Act, 1878," and papers connected therewith were brought before the Court of Queen's Bench for Manitoba, by certiorari, and a rule nisi to quash the conviction was made absolute. Held, that an appeal would not lie, the cause not having arisen in a Superior Court of original jurisdiction.—The question of costs was reserved. The court subsequently determined that the respondent should have the costs of appeal, although the objection had been taken by the court. The Queen v. Nevins, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 427; Cass. Prac. (2 ed.) 27, 81.

111. Court of original jurisdiction—Circuit Court judgment—Future rights—Suit for land tax—Objection taken in factum—Costs—42 Vict. c. 39, s. 3 (D.)—The action was brought in the Circuit Court, District of Terrebonne, for $125 and interest for taxes imposed upon real estate. The respondents moved to quash appeal for want of jurisdiction, relying on s. 3 of the Supreme Court Amendment Act of 1879. Appellants contended that in Montreal and some other districts in the Province of Quebec, such an action, in which future rights would be bound, would be brought in the Superior Court, and only by virtue of a special statute was it brought in the Circuit Court in Terrebonne; that such statute was applicable to only some of the districts of the province, and that if the contention of the counsel for appellants was correct, the anomaly would arise that in such a case if the action were brought in one district there would be no appeal, while, if brought in another district, there would be an appeal and argued that, in this case, the Circuit Court must be considered as substituted for and in lieu of the Superior Court. Held, that the statute was clear, and in no case would an appeal lie in an action which originated in the Circuit Court. Major v. Corporation of Three Rivers (No. 109, ante), followed. Motion granted and appeal quashed with costs. The objection to the jurisdiction was taken by the respondents in the factum. Le Maire, etc., de Terrebonne v. Sœurs de la Providence, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 434; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 81.

112. Public street—Encroachment on—Building "upon" or "close to" the line—Charter of Halifax, ss. 454, 455—Petition to remove obstruction—Judgment on—Variance.—By s. 454 of the charter of the City of Halifax any person intending to erect a building upon or close to the line of the street must first cause such line to be located by the city engineer and obtain a certificate of the location; and if a building is erected upon or close to the line without such certificate having been obtained the Supreme Court, or a judge thereof, may, on petition of the recorder, cause it to be removed. On appeal from the decision of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia reversing the judgment of a judge under this section an objection was taken to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Canada on the ground that the petition having been presented to a judge in chambers the matter did not originate in a Superior Court. Held, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the court had jurisdiction. Canadian Pacific Railway Co. v. Ste. Thérèse (16 Can. S. C. R. 606), and Virtue v. Hayes (16 Can. S. C. R. 721) distinguished. City of Halifax v. Reeves, xxiii., 340.

113. Court of Review—Jurisdiction—Mandamus—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3 (D.)—Costs.—B. applied for a mandamus to compel the corporation of the City of Montreal to carry out the provisions of one of its by-laws. The writ of mandamus was granted by the Superior Court, but on appeal, this judgment was reversed by the Court of Review, and the petition for mandamus dismissed. B. then instituted an appeal from the latter judgment to the Supreme Court of Canada. On motion to quash the appeal: Held, that the case was not within the provisions of 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, allowing appeals from the Court of Review in certain cases, and that as the appeal was not from the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench (appeal side), the court of highest resort in the province, there was no jurisdiction in the Supreme Court of Canada to entertain it. Danjou v. Marquis (3 Can. S. C. R. 251), and McDonald v. Abbott (3 Can. S. C. R. 278), followed.—As the point upon which the appeal was quashed had not been taken in the factum, nor by the motion, the appeal was quashed without costs. Barrington v. City of Montreal, xxv., 202.

114. Jurisdiction—52 Vict. c. 37, s. 2 (D.)—Appointment of presiding officers—County Court Judges—55 Vict. c. 48 (Ont.)—53 Vict. c. 47 (Ont.)—Construction of statute—Appeal from assessment—Final judgment.]—By 52 Vict. c. 37, s. 2, amending "The Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act," an appeal lies in certain cases to the Supreme Court of Canada from courts "of last resort created under provincial legislation to adjudicate concerning the assessment of property for provincial or municipal purposes, in cases where the person or persons presiding over such court is or are appointed by provincial or municipal authority." By the Ontario Act, 55 Vict. c. 48, as amended by 58 Vict. c. 47, an appeal lies from rulings of Municipal Courts of Revision in matters of assessment to the County Court judges of the County Court district where the property has been assessed. On an appeal from a decision of the County Court judges under the Ontario statutes: Held, King, J., dissenting, that if the County Court judges constituted a "court of last resort" within the meaning of 52 Vict. c. 37, s. 2, the persons presiding over such court were not appointed by provincial or municipal authority, and the appeal was not authorized by the said Act. — Held, per Gwynne, J., that as no binding effect is given to the decision of the County Court judges, under the Ontario Acts cited, the court appealed from was not a "court of last resort" within the meaning of 52 Vict. c. 37, s. 2.—Quære, Is the decision of the County Court judges a "final judgment" within the meaning of 52 Vict. c. 37, s. 2? City of Toronto v. Toronto Railway Co., xxvii., 640.

115. Jurisdiction—Case originating in County Court—Transfer to High Court.]—There is no appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada in a case in which the action was commenced in the County Court and transferred by order to the High Court of Justice in which all subsequent proceedings were carried on.—Per Gwynne, J., contra. Where the case is transferred because the pleas ousted the County Court of jurisdiction an appeal lies.—Leave to appeal cannot be granted under 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, s. 1 (e), in a case not appealable under the general provisions of R. S. C. c. 135. Tucker v. Young, xxx., 185.

8. CRIMINAL APPEALS.

116. Crown case reserved—Questions of law—New trial—C. S. U. C. c. 112—C. S. L. C. c. 77, ss. 57, 58, and 59; 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 80—38 Vict. c. 11, s. 49.]—Since the passing of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 80, repealing so much of C. S. L. C. c. 77 as would authorize a court in Quebec to order a new trial in a criminal case, and of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 30, repealing C. S. L. C. c. 77, s. 63, the Court of Queen's Bench (Que.) has no power to grant a new trial, and the Supreme Court of Canada, exercising its ordinary appellate powers under 38 Vict. c. 11, ss. 38 and 49, rendered the judgment which the court appealed from ought to have given, reversed the judgment and ordered the prisoner's discharge. Laliberté v. The Queen, i., 117.

117. Criminal trial—Motion for reserved case—Unanimity on one of several grounds—Jurisdiction.]—Where the court appealed from has affirmed the refusal to reserve a case moved for at a criminal trial on two grounds, and is unanimous as to one of such grounds but not as to the other, the Supreme Court on appeal can only take into consideration the ground of motion in which there was dissent. McIntosh v. The Queen, xxiii., 180.

118. Jurisdiction—Criminal law—The Criminal Code, 1892, ss. 742-750—New trial—Statute, construction of—55 & 56 Vict. c. 20, s. 742.]—An appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada does not lie in cases where a new trial has been granted by the Court of Appeal, under the provisions of the Criminal Code, 1892, ss. 742 to 750 inclusively. The word "opinion" as used in s.-s. 2 of s. 742 of "The Criminal Code, 1892," must be construed as meaning a "decision" or "judgment" of the Court of Appeal in criminal cases. Viau v. The Queen, xxix., 90.

9. CROSS APPEALS.

119. Verdict—Reduction of damages by judgment appealed from—Cross-appeal—Relief for respondent—Restoration of trial judgment.]—Where there has been no cross-appeal taken relief against an improper reduction of damages assessed at the trial cannot be granted to the respondent. Stephens v. Chaussé, xv., 379.

120. Order for new trial—Issues on appeal—Failure to cross-appeal.]—A rule was discharged so far as it asked a nonsuit but was made absolute for a new trial. Held, on an appeal by defendant, that although the plaintiff was entitled to recover, yet, as he had not appealed from the order for a new trial, the rule should be affirmed and the appeal dismissed with costs. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. v. Lawson, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 729.

121. Cross-appeal pending in Privy Council—Stay of proceedings—Practice.]—At the hearing of the appeal it appeared that the respondent had taken an appeal from the same judgment to Her Majesty's Privy Council, and that the respondent's said appeal was then pending before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. The court, in consequence, stopped the arguments of counsel and ordered that the hearing of the appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada should stand over until after the adjudication of the said appeal to the Privy Council. McGreevy v. McDougall, 3rd March, 1888.

122. Cross-appeal—Rules 62 and 63—Compliance with.]—A cross-appeal will be disregarded by the court when rules 62 and 63 of the Supreme Court Rules have not been complied with. Bulmer v. The Queen, xxiii., 488.

123. Increasing damages without cross-appeal—Rule 61, Supreme Court Rules—Special statute.]—Under the Ontario Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, ss. 47 and 48, the Court of Appeal has power to increase damages awarded to a respondent without a cross-appeal, and the Supreme Court has the like power under its rule No. 61. Taschereau, J., dissented.—Per Strong, C.J. Though the court will not usually increase such damages without a cross-appeal, yet where the original proceedings were by arbitration under a statute providing that the court, on appeal from the award, shall pronounce such judgment as the arbitrators should have given, the statute is sufficient notice to an appellant of what the court may do, and a cross-appeal is not necessary. Town of Toronto Junction v. Christie, xxv., 551.

11. DISCRETIONARY ORDERS.

129. Jurisdiction—Section 22, Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act—Matter of discretion.]—Under s. 22 of the Supreme and Exchequer Court Act, no appeal lies from the judgment of a court granting a new trial, on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence, that being a matter of discretion. [See R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24 (d), as amended by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 2, enacted since date of above decision.] Boak v. Merchants' Marine Ins. Co., i., 110.

130. Jurisdiction of Appellate Court—New trial—Setting aside verdict to enter another—37 Vict. c. 7, ss. 32, 33 (Ont.)—R. S. O. (1877) c. 50, ss. 264, 283—38 Vict. c. 11, ss. 20, 22, 38 (D.)—Amendments to pleadings.]—In an action tried with a jury, under 37 Vict. c. 7, s. 32 (Ont.), the judge entered a verdict for the plaintiff upon the answers of the jury to questions submitted. Upon a rule nisi the Court of Queen's Bench entered a verdict for the defendants (41 U. C. Q. B. 497) and, on an appeal, the Court of Appeal for Ontario, being equally divided (3 Ont. App. R. 331), the Q. B. judgment stood. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the Court of Queen's Bench had no power to set aside the verdict for the plaintiff and direct a verdict to be entered for the defendants in direct opposition to the finding of the jury on a material issue; that the court below might have ordered a new trial upon the ground that the finding of the jury upon the questions submitted to them was against the weight of evidence, but they exercised their discretion in declining to act, or in not acting, on this ground and, therefore, no appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada would lie on such ground, under 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 22.—That before the Act 43 Vict. c. 34, if an amendment to a plea was authorized by the court below, but such amendment was never actually made, the Supreme Court had no power to consider the case as if the amendment had in effect been made.—Per Gwynne, J. That the plaintiff could not have been non-suited in virtue of 37 Vict. c. 7, s. 33 (Ont.), as it is only where there is no evidence in support of the plaintiff's case, that a non-suit can be entered; and that in this case, the proper verdict which the law required to be entered upon the answers of the jury was one in favour of the plaintiff. [NOTE.—The Privy Council (6 App. Cas. 644) affirmed the first holding and held that the Act, 38 Vict. c. 11, gave the Supreme Court power to render any judgment which the court below might or ought to have given, and might order a new trial on ground of misdirection or verdict being against weight of evidence; and that power was not taken away by s. 22 in case the court below did not exercise discretion as to the question of a new trial, and where the appeal from their judgment did not relate to that subject.] Moore v. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co., vi., 634.

131. Discretion of court below—New trial ordered by court below—Verdict against weight of evidence.]—Held, that the Supreme Court will not hear an appeal from a judgment of the court below, in the exercise of its discretion, ordering a new trial on the ground that the verdict is against the weight of evidence. Eureka Woollen Mills Co. v. Moss, xi., 91.

132. Discretion of court below—Interference on appeal.]—A Court of Appeal ought not to interfere with the order of the court below on a matter of discretion, unless it is made absolutely clear that such discretion has been wrongly exercised. Per Ritchie, C.J. Jones v. Tuck, xi., 197.

133. Matter of practice—Bail—Security for costs—Exoneretur—Parties—Discretion of court below—Jurisdiction.]—S. brought an action against J. and issued a writ of capias. Bail was given and special bail entered in due course, but the bail-piece was not filed, nor judgment entered against J., for some months after. On application to a judge in chambers an order was made for the discharge of the bail on account of delay in entering up judgment, and the full court refused to set aside the order. An appeal was brought to the Supreme Court of Canada entitled in the suit against J., from the judgment of the full court, and the bond for security for costs was given to J. Held, that as the bail, the only parties really interested in the appeal, were not before the court and not entitled to the benefit of the bond, the appeal must be quashed for want of proper security. Held, also, that the appeal would not lie as the matter was simply one of practice, in the discretion of the court below. Scammell v. James, xvi., 593.

134. Judicial discretion—Executors and trustees—Accounts.—The Supreme Court of Canada, on appeal from a decision affirming the report of a referee in a suit to remove executors and trustees which report disallowed items in accounts previously passed by the Probate Court, will not reconsider the items so dealt with, two courts having previously exercised a judicial discretion as to the amounts and no question of principle being involved. Grant v. McLaren, xxiii., 310.

135. Order to amend pleadings—Interference with—Discretion of court below—Procedure.—The Supreme Court will not interfere on appeal with an order made by a provincial court granting leave to amend the pleadings, such orders being a matter of procedure within the discretion of the court below. Williams v. Leonard & Sons, xxvi., 406.

136. Notice of action—Negligence of municipal corporation—Discretion of trial judge—Reviewing on appeal.—An appellate court should not interfere with the discretion exercised by the trial judge in dispensing with notice of action against a municipal corporation guilty of gross negligence as provided by the Ontario Municipal Act in respect to the condition of winter sidewalks. (23 Ont. App. R. 406, affirmed). City of Kingston v. Drennan, xxvii., 46.

137. Discretion of court appealed from—Costs.—It is only when some fundamental principle of justice has been ignored, or some other gross error appears that the Supreme Court will interfere with the discretion of provincial courts in awarding or withholding costs. Smith v. The Saint John City Railway Company; The Consolidated Electric Company v. The Atlantic Trust Company; Consolidated Electric Co. v. Pratt, xxviii., 603.

138. Issue on appeal—Church discipline—Domestic tribunal.—Where an appeal raised the question of the proper or improper exercise of disciplinary powers by the Conference of the Methodist Church, the Supreme Court refused to interfere, the matter complained of being within the jurisdiction of the Conference. Ash v. The Methodist Church, xxxi., 497.

139. Parties on appeal—Practice—Proceeding in name of deceased party—Amendment—Jurisdiction—Interference with discretion on appeal.—Between the hearing of a case and the rendering of the judgment in the trial court, the defendant died. His solicitor by inadvertence inscribed the case for revision in the name of the deceased defendant. The plaintiffs allowed a term of the Court of Review to pass without noticing the irregularity of the inscription but, when the case was ripe for hearing on the merits, gave notice of motion to reject the inscription. The executors of the deceased defendant then made a motion for permission to amend the inscription by substituting their names es qualité. The Court of Review allowed the plaintiffs' motion as to costs only, permitted amendment and subsequently reversed the trial court judgment on the merits. The Court of King's Bench (appeal side), reversed the judgment of the Court of Review on the ground that it had no jurisdiction to allow the amendment and hear the case on its merits, and that, consequently, all the orders and judgments given were nullities. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, (Q. R. 10 K. B. 511), the Chief Justice and Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the Court of Review had jurisdiction to allow the amendment and that, as there had been no abuse of discretion and no parties prejudiced, the Court of King's Bench should not have interfered. Price v. Fraser, xxxi., 505.

140. Practice—Adding alternative claims—Amendment—Discretionary orders—Duty of appellate court.—Where the courts below have, in the exercise of judicial discretion ordered or refused leave to amend the pleadings there ought not to be any interference with this exercise of their discretion on an appeal. Porter v. Pelton, xxxiii., 449.

12. ELECTION APPEALS.

143. Election law—38 Vict. c. 11, s. 48—Judgment on preliminary objections.—No appeal lay under 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 48, to the Supreme Court of Canada, from a judgment dismissing an election petition on preliminary objections. The Charlevoix Election Case; Brassard v. Langevin, ii., 319.

(NOTE.—See Amending Acts.)

144. Motion to quash—Parliamentary election—Notice—Setting down for hearing—Jurisdiction.—Held, notice of setting down an election appeal for hearing is a condition precedent to the exercise of any jurisdiction by the Supreme Court to hear the appeal. North Ontario Election Case.—Wheler v. Gibbs, iii., 374.

145. Controverted election—R. S. C. c. 9, ss. 32, 33, 50—Jurisdiction—Dismissal for non pros.—An appeal does not lie from a judgment on a motion dismissing an election petition because the trial had not been commenced within the six months limited by s. 32, Dominion Controverted Elections Act. L'Assomption Election Case; Québec Co. Election Case, xiv., 429.

146. Controverted election—Ruling at trial—R. S. C. c. 9, ss. 32, 33, 50—Jurisdiction—Want of prosecution.—Where the trial judge has overruled an objection on the ground of want of prosecution to trial within six months from the presentation of the petition, an appeal will lie to the Supreme Court of Canada. Glengarry Election Case, xiv. 453.—(Leave to appeal to the Privy Council was refused, (59 L. J. 279; 4 Times L. R. 664).)

147. Dismissing appeal—Controverted election case—Application to judge in chambers.—An application to dismiss an election appeal for want of prosecution should be made to a judge in chambers. Halton Election Case, Lush v. Waldie, xix., 1557; Chicoutimi and Saguenay Election Case, May 16th, 1892.

[NOTE.—All applications to dismiss for want of prosecution, should be made to the registrar in chambers.]

148. Controverted election—Discontinuance—Certificate to Speaker.—Upon respondent's counsel, in an election appeal, notifying the court that he had been served with notice of discontinuance, the court struck the appeal off the list, and the notice having been filed in the registrar's office, certified to the Speaker of the House of Commons that by reason of such discontinuance the decision of the trial judges and their report had been left unaffected by the proceedings in the Supreme Court. L'Assomption Election Case, Gauthier v. Brien, xxi., 29.

149. Irregular inscription—Hearing ex parte—Factum filed too late.—When appeal called, counsel for appellants appears. No one appears on behalf of respondent. The appellant's factum not having been filed till the morning the appeal is called on for hearing, instead of three clear days before the first day of the session, as required by rule 54, the court refuses to hear him ex parte while thus irregularly before the court. Levis Election Case, 30th Oct., 1884; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 686.

150. Election petitions—Separate trials—R. S. C. c. 9, ss. 30 and 50—Ruling on objection.—The ruling of the court below on an objection in proceedings on an election petition, viz.: That the trial judges could not proceed with the petition in this case, because the two petitions filed had not been bracketed by the prothonotary as directed by s. 30 of c. 9, R. S. C., is not an appealable judgment or decision. R. S. C. c. 9, s. 50. (Sedgewick, J., doubting.) Vaudreuil Election Case, xxii., 1.

151. Appeal—Election petition—Preliminary objection—Delay in filing—Objections struck out—Order in chambers—R. S. C. c. 9, s. 50.—The Supreme Court refused to entertain an appeal from the decision of a judge in chambers granting a motion to have preliminary objections to an election petition struck out for not being filed in time. Such decision was not one on preliminary objections within s. 50 of the Controverted Elections Act, and if it were no judgment on the motion could put an end to the petition. West Assiniboia Election Case, xxvii., 215.

152. Appeal—Preliminary objections—R. S. C. c. 9, ss. 12 and 50—Order dismissing petition—Affidavit of petitioner.—The appeal given to the supreme court of Canada by The Controverted Elections Act (R. S. C. c. 9, s. 50), from a decision on preliminary objections to an election petition can only be taken in respect to objections filed under s. 12 of the Act. No appeal lies from a judgment granting a motion to dismiss a petition on the ground that the affidavit of the petitioner was untrue. Marquette Election Case, xxvii., 219.

13. FINAL JUDGMENTS.

156. Final judgment—Demurrer—Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 11—R. S. N. S. (4 ser.) c. 94, s. 124.—An order setting aside a demurrer as frivolous and irregular under the Nova Scotia Practice Act is an order on a matter of practice and not a final judgment appealable under the 11th section of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Kandick v. Morrison, ii., 12.

157. Jurisdiction—Question raised by court—Rule setting aside judgment and execution—“Final judgment”—Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 17—Construction of s. 2 (d.).—The Supreme Court of Canada may, of its own motion, entertain a question of jurisdiction.—An order vacating a final judgment and setting aside an execution issued thereunder is a “final judgment” within the meaning of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, and subject to appeal under the provisions of that Act. (Strong, J., dissenting.) Wallace v. Bossom, ii., 488.

158. Summary jurisdiction—Order upon immediate officers—Application by third party on rule nisi—Final order—Interest on deposit.—An order by a Superior Court exercising its summary jurisdiction over its own immediate officers, on an application by a third party to obtain an order for the payment over of interest received by such officer on moneys held by him on deposit as an officer of the court, is a final order from which an appeal will lie to the Supreme Court of Canada, under 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 11. (Fournier, J., dissenting; Taschereau, J., dubitante.) Wilkins v. Geddes, iii., 203.

159. Mandamus—Final judgment—Decision—Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, 38 Vict. c. 11, ss. 11, 17 and 23—Costs—Motion to quash—Constitutional law.—Appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada in cases of mandamus, under 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 23, were restricted to decisions of the “highest court of final resort” in the province; and an appeal would not lie from any court in the Province of Quebec but the Court of Queen's Bench. (Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting.) Quære, Can the Dominion Parliament give an appeal in a case in which the Legislature of a province has expressly denied it? Semble, per Strong, J., that under the above Act, an appeal would lie from an Exchequer Court decision which was not final. (Note.—See amendment by 53 Vict. c. 35.)—The appeal was quashed with costs, which included general costs of the appeal up to hearing of motion to quash. The registrar taxed the full fee of $25 on argument of motion. This was increased to $75 by Henry, J. The objection to the jurisdiction was taken by motion, and also in respondent's factum. Danjou v. Marquis, iii., 251.

160. Final judgment—Order making rule absolute—Jurisdiction.—A judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia making absolute a rule nisi to grant rank and precedence to a Queen's Counsel is one from which an appeal would lie to the Supreme Court of Canada, Fournier, J., dissenting. Lenoir v. Ritchie, iii., 575.

161. Jurisdiction—Demurrer sustained in provincial Court of Appeal—Final judgment—Judicial proceedings—42 Vict. c. 39, ss. 3 & 9.]—The Superior Court sustained a demurrer, and, on appeal, the Court of Queen's Bench affirmed the judgment. On appeal to the Supreme Court, respondent moved to quash on the ground of want of jurisdiction: Held, that as the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench (the highest court of last resort having jurisdiction in the Province of Quebec), finally determined and put an end to the appeal, which was a judicial proceeding within the meaning of s. 9 of "The Supreme Court Amendment Act of 1879," such judgment was one from which an appeal would lie to the Supreme Court of Canada; and though an appeal cannot be taken from a court of first instance directly to the Supreme Court until there is a final judgment, yet, whenever a provincial Court of Appeal has jurisdiction, the Supreme Court can entertain an appeal from its judgment finally disposing of the appeal, the case being in other respects a proper subject of appeal. Chevallier v. Cuvillier, iv., 605.

162. Final judgment partly interlocutory—Effect—References to experts—Res judicata—Right of appeal—Waiver.]—In an action for balance due on a building contract, defendant denied the claim, and, by incidental demand, claimed damages from defective work. The Superior Court gave judgment in favour of the plaintiff for the amount of his claim, and dismissed the incidental demand. This judgment was reversed in review and, on appeal, the Court of Queen's Bench held plaintiff entitled to the balance claimed, from which should be deducted the cost of rebuilding the defectively constructed work, and in order to ascertain such cost, the case was remitted to the Superior Court, by which experts were appointed to ascertain the damage, and, on their report, the Superior Court held that it was bound by the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, and, deducting the amount awarded by the experts from the balance claimed, gave judgment for the difference. This judgment was affirmed by the Court of Queen's Bench on a second appeal. Held, that the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench on the first appeal was a final judgment on the merits, that the Superior Court, when the case was remitted, rightly held that it was bound by the judgment, and that plaintiff was entitled to the balance thereby found due to him. 2. That although on an appeal from a final judgment an appellant may have the right to impugn an interlocutory judgment rendered in the cause, yet he loses this right if he voluntarily and without reserve acts upon such interlocutory judgment. Per Fournier, J., that the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench on the first appeal, though interlocutory on that part of it which directed the reference to experts, was final on the other points in litigation, and could therefore have properly been appealed from as a final judgment. Shaw v. St. Louis, viii., 385.

163. Final judgment—Demurrer—Pleading—Equal division of opinion—Dismissal of appeal without costs.]—Although a judgment may be a decision on a demurrer to part of the action only, it is a final judgment in a judicial proceeding within the meaning of the Supreme Court Act and an appeal will lie. (Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ., dissented.)—The opinion of the judges who heard this appeal being equally divided, the appeal was dismissed without costs. Shields v. Peak, viii., 579.

164. Demurrer to plea—Entry of judgment—Appeal from judgment on merits—Final judgment—Supreme and Exchequer Courts Acts, 1875, s. 25, 1879, s. 9.]—In an action by the indorsee of a note the defendant pleaded that the amount of the note had been attached in their hands by one of the payee's judgment creditors and paid, under a judge's order. To this plea plaintiff demurred on the ground that the debt was not one which could properly be attached, and the Supreme Court (P. E. I.) sustained the demurrer. No rule for judgment on the demurrer was taken out by the plaintiff, and three months later judgment was signed for the plaintiff. On motion to quash an appeal for want of jurisdiction, on the ground that the appeal should have been taken from the judgment on the demurrer, and within thirty days from the date when it was rendered: Held, that the latter judgment was the "final judgment" in the case from which an appeal would lie to the Supreme Court. Roblee v. Rankin, xi., 137.

165. Capias—Petition for discharge—R. S. C. 135, s. 23—Arts. 819-821, C. C. P.—Final judgment—Judicial proceeding.]—A writ of capias having been issued against McK. under the provisions of art. 798 of C. C. P. (P.Q.), he petitioned to be discharged under art. 819, C. C. P., and issue having been joined on the pleadings under art. 820, C. C. P., the petition was dismissed by the Superior Court, that judgment being affirmed by the Queen's Bench (15 R. L. 34). Held, that the judgment was a final judgment in a judicial proceeding within the meaning of R. S. C. c. 135, s. 28, and therefore appealable—Taschereau, J., dissenting. Stanton v. Canada Atlantic Ry. Co. (Cass. Dig. 2 ed. 249) reviewed. MacKinnon v. Keroack, xv., 111.

166. Rule of court—Contempt—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24 (a)—Final judgment—Practice.]—By a rule nisi, E. was called upon to shew cause why an attachment should not issue against him, or he be committed for contempt of court, in publishing certain articles in a newspaper. The rule was made absolute, and a writ issued commanding the sheriff to have the body of E. before the court on a day named. By the practice in such cases in the Supreme Court (N. B.) the attachment issued merely to bring the party into court, where he might, by answering interrogatories, purge his contempt. If unable to do this the court would pronounce sentence. E. appealed from the judgment making the rule absolute. On motion to quash appeal: Held, that the judgment appealed from was not a final judgment from which an appeal would lie under s. 24 (a) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Ellis v. Baird, xvi., 147.

167. Contempt of court—Constructive contempt—Discretion of court—Final judgment—Sentence—Fine—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24, s-s. (a), s. 26, s-s. (1), s. 27.]—The decision of a provincial court in a case of constructive contempt is not a matter of discretion in which an appeal is prohibited by s. 27 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Taschereau, J., dubitante—The Supreme Court has jurisdiction to entertain such an appeal from the judgment of the Court of Appeal of the province, not only under s. 24, s.s. (a) of Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act as final judgment in an action or suit, but also under s.s. (1) of s. 26 of the same Act, as a final judgment "in a matter or other judicial proceeding" within the meaning of said s. 26.—The adjudication that the appellant, a solicitor and officer of the court and moved against in that quality, had been guilty of a contempt, is by itself an appealable judgment, although no sentence for the contempt has been pronounced by the court.—When the party in contempt has been ordered to pay the costs of the application to commit the court in effect inflicts a fine for the contempt. In re O'Brien, xvi., 197.

168. Jurisdiction — Final judgment — Demurrer to replication — Disposal of issues.—A judgment allowing demurrer to plaintiff's replication to one of several pleas (5 Man. L. R. 334), which does not put an end to the whole or any part of the action or defence is not a final judgment from which an appeal will lie. Shaw v. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co., xvi., 703.

169. Jurisdiction — Petitioner let in to defend — Non-compliance with terms — Final judgment — Discretion — R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24 (a) 27.—Judgment was recovered in Virtue v. Hayes, to realize mechanics' liens, and C., the owner of the land on which the work was done, petitioned to have judgment set aside as a cloud upon his title. On this petition an order was made allowing C. to come in and defend the action for lien on terms, which not being complied with, the petition was dismissed, and the judgment dismissing it was affirmed by the Divisional Court and the Court of Appeal. Held, that the judgment appealed from was not a final judgment within the meaning of s. 24 (a) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act or, if it was, it was a matter in the judicial discretion of the court, from which by s. 27 no appeal lies to the Supreme Court of Canada. Virtue v. Hayes, In re Clark, xvi., 721.

170. Jurisdiction — "Final judgment" — Interlocutory order — Matters of procedure — Special leave.—Art. 1116 C.C.P.—Amount in controversy—R.S.C. c. 135, ss. 28 & 29—Refusal of bond by court appealed from—Leave granted by Supreme Court judge.—The defendant's application to a judge of the court appealed from for an order settling the case and approval of an appeal bond, on appeal from a judgment quashing an appeal for want of regular procedure was refused, but on a subsequent application to a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada in chambers, the application was granted.—A judgment quashing a writ of appeal on the ground that it had issued contrary to the provisions of art. 1116, C. C. P., as to appeals from interlocutory judgments, is not "a final judgment" within the meaning of s. 28 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Shaw v. St. Louis, (8 Can. S. C. R. 387) distinguished.—The Supreme Court has no jurisdiction under s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, to hear an appeal by the defendant where the amount in controversy has not been established by the judgment appealed from. Gwynne, J., reserved his opinion on this question. Ontario & Quebec Ry. Co. v. Marcheterre, xvii., 141.

See 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3.

171. Jurisdiction — Final judgment—Mandamus — Judgment on demurrer — Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 24 (g) 28, 29 & 30.—Interlocutory judgments upon proceedings for and upon a writ of mandamus are not appealable to the Supreme Court under s. 24 (g) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. The word "judgment" in that subsection means the final judgment in the case. Strong and Patterson, JJ. dissented. Langevin v. Commissaires d'Ecole de St. Marc, xviii., 599.

172. Jurisdiction — Final judgment—Order for new trial — Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, ss. 24 (g), 30, 61.—Where a new trial has been ordered upon the ground that the answer given by the jury to one of the questions is insufficient to enable the court to dispose of the interest of the parties on the findings of the jury as a whole, no appeal will lie from such order which is not a final judgment and cannot be held to come within the exceptions provided for by the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act in relation to appeals in cases of new trials. Barrington v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co., xviii., 615.

173. Jurisdiction — Interlocutory judgment — Saisie conservatoire — Contestation.—R. S. C. c. 135, ss. 24, 28.—A judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, on appeal, reversing a Superior Court judgment, which had quashed a seizure before judgment, and ordering that the hearing, in contestation of the seizure should be proceeded with in the Superior Court at the same time as the trial of the merits, is not a final judgment appealable to the Supreme Court. Strong, J., dissenting. Molson v. Barnard, xviii., 622.

174. Jurisdiction — Mis-trial — Insufficient answers by jury — New trial — Final judgment — Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act ss. 24, 27, 28, 29, 30, 61—Costs.—The Court of Review dismissed plaintiffs' motion for judgment on the findings by a jury and on defendant's motion dismissed the action. On appeal this judgment was reversed and the Court of Queen's Bench set aside the assignment of facts to the jury and all subsequent proceedings and suo motu ordered a venire de novo on the ground that the assignment of facts was defective and insufficient and the answers of the jury were insufficient and contradictory. Held, that the order was not a final judgment and did not come within the exceptions allowing an appeal in cases of new trials, and appeal would not lie.—As the objection to the jurisdiction was not made by respondent the appeal was quashed without costs. Accident Ins. Co. of N. A. v. McLachlan, xviii., 627.

175. Jurisdiction — Application to set aside a writ of summons — Final judgment.—An application to a judge to set aside a writ of summons served out of jurisdiction on the grounds that the cause of action arose in England and the defendant was not subject to the process of the court, and if this court had jurisdiction that the writ was not in proper form was refused and this decision was affirmed by the full court. Held, Gwynne, J., hesitante, that the decision of the full court was not a final judgment in an action, suit, matter or any other judicial proceeding within the meaning of the Supreme Court Act, and no appeal would lie from such decision to the Supreme Court of Canada. Martin v. Moore, xviii., 634.

176. Jurisdiction — Final judgment — Judicial discretion — Summons and order for signing judgment.—An appeal does not lie from a decision of the Court of Queen's Bench (7 Man. L. R. 128) affirming the order of a judge, made on the return of a summons to shew cause, allowing judgment to be entered on a specially indorsed writ, which is not a "final judgment," within the meaning of the Supreme Court Act.—Per Patterson, J. Such decision is a "final judgment," but the order which it affirmed was one made in the exercise of judicial discretion as to which s. 27 of the Act does not allow an appeal. Municipality of Morris v. London & Canada Loan & Agency Co., xix., 434.

177. Jurisdiction — Final judgment — Judicial discretion—R. S. C. c. 135, ss. 2 (e), 27.—Defendants in the High Court of Justice of Ontario were made bankrupt in England, and plaintiffs filed a claim with the assignee in bankruptcy. The High Court of Justice in England made an order restraining plaintiffs from proceeding with their action and a like order was made by a Divisional Court judge in Ontario perpetually restraining plaintiffs from proceeding but reserving liberty to apply. This latter order was affirmed by the Divisional Court and the Court of Appeal, and plaintiffs sought an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. Held, that the judgment from which appeal was sought was not a final judgment within the meaning of the Supreme Court Act.—Held, per Patterson, J., that if it were a final judgment the order plaintiffs wished to get rid of was made in the exercise of judicial discretion as to which s. 27 of the Supreme Court Act does not allow an appeal. Maritime Bank of Canada v. Stewart, xx., 105.

178. Jurisdiction — Security for costs — R. S. C. c. 135, s. 46 — Final judgment — Admission of attorney.—Appeal from the refusal of the Supreme Court (N. S.) to admit appellant as an attorney of the court. There being no person interested in opposing the application or the appeal, no security for costs was given. Held, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the court had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal.—Per Ritchie, C.J. and Taschereau, J. Except in cases specially provided for, no appeal can be heard by this court unless the security for costs has been given as provided by s. 46 of the Supreme Court Act.—Per Strong and Taschereau, JJ. It was never intended that this court should interfere in matters respecting the admission of attorneys and barristers in the several provinces.—Per Taschereau and Patterson, JJ. The judgment sought to be appealed from is not a final judgment within the meaning of the Supreme Court Act. In re Cahan, xxi., 100.

179. Taxation of Costs — Application by ratepayer — R. S. O. (1887) c. 147, s. 42 — Jurisdiction — Discretion — Proceeding originating in Superior Court — Final judgment.—By R. S. O. (1887) c. 147, s. 42, any person not chargeable as the principal party who is liable to pay or has paid a solicitor's bill of costs may apply to a judge of the High Court, or of the County Court for an order of taxation. In an action against school trustees, a ratepayer of the district applied to a judge of the High Court for an order under this section to tax the bill of the solicitor of the plaintiff, who had recovered judgment. The application was refused, but on appeal to the Divisional Court this judgment was reversed (21 O. R. 289). There was no appeal as of right from the latter decision, but on leave to appeal being granted it was reversed and the original judgment restored (19 Ont. App. R. 56). Held, per Ritchie, C.J., and Strong and Gwynne, JJ., that assuming the court had jurisdiction to entertain the appeal, the subject matter being one of taxation of costs, this court should not interfere with the decision of the provincial courts which are the most competent tribunals to deal with such matters.—Per Ritchie, C.J. and Patterson, J., that a ratepayer is not entitled to an order for taxation under said section.—Held, per Taschereau, J., that the court had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal, as the judgment appealed from was not a final judgment within the meaning of the Supreme Court Act; the matter was one in the discretion of the courts below, and the proceedings did not originate in a Superior Court.—Per Patterson, J. The making or refusing to make the order applied for is a matter of discretion and the case therefore not appealable. McGugan v. McGugan, xxi., 267.

180. Report of referee—Judgment in affirmation — Trial judgment — Jurisdiction.—A judgment of the Court of Appeal affirming that of the Divisional Court which affirmed the report of the referee refusing a set-off to plaintiff's claim is not a final judgment from which an appeal lies to the Supreme Court of Canada. McDougall v. Cameron; Bickford v. Cameron, xxi., 379.

181. Jurisdiction — Final judgment — Reprise d'instance — Res judicata — Art. 439, C. C. P.—R. S. C. c. 135, ss. 2, 24 & 28.—In an action to set aside a deed of assignment the plaintiff died before the case was ready for judgment, and respondent petitioned to continue the suit as legatee under a will dated the 17th November, 1869. Appellant contested the reprise d'instance on the ground that this will had been revoked by a later will which was contested by respondent as null and void. Upon that issue the Court of Queen's Bench reversing the Superior Court declared the later will null and void and maintained the reprise d'instance. On motion to quash appeal on the ground that the judgment appealed from was interlocutory: Held, that the judgment was res judicata between the parties and final on the petition for continuance of the suit, and therefore appealable. Shaw v. St. Louis, (8 Can. S. C. R. 385) followed. Baptist v. Baptist, xxi., 425.

182. Practice — Judgment of court — Withdrawal of opinion — Master's report — Credibility of witnesses — Apportionment of damages — Irrelevant evidence — Severance of damages — Reasons for report — Equal division of judges in appeal — Final judgment.—The Court of Appeal for Ontario, composed of four judges, pronounced judgment, two being in favour of dismissing an appeal, the other two pronouncing no judgment. In the Supreme Court it was objected that in the judgment appealed from no decision had been arrived at. Held, that the appellate court could not go behind the formal judgment which stated that the appeal had been dismissed: further the proposition was the same as if the four judges had been equally divided in opinion in which case the appeal would have been properly dismissed.—In an action against several mill-owners for obstructing the Ottawa river by throwing sawdust and refuse into it from their mills a reference was made to the master to ascertain the amount of damages. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the master rightly treated the defendants as joint tort-feasors; that he was not called upon to apportion the damages according to the injury inflicted by each defendant, and that he was not obliged to apportion them according to the different grounds of injury claimed by the plaintiff.—Held, further, that the master was the final judge of the credibility of the witnesses and his report should not be sent back because some irrelevant evidence may have been given of a character not likely to have affected his judgment, especially as no appeal was taken from his ruling on the evidence.—On a reference to a master, the latter, provided he sufficiently follows the directions of the decree, is not obliged to give his reasons for, or enter into a detailed explanation of his report to the court. (Compare, 11 O. R. 491; 14 Ont. App. R. 419; 15 App. Cas. 188.) Booth v. Ratté, xxi., 637.

183. Exchequer Court reference—Judgment on report—Limitation of time—Final judgment.—On trial in 1887 of an action against the Crown for breach of contract, the case was referred to ascertain the damages. In 1891 the referees reported and judgment was entered for the amount found due. The Crown appealed, obtained an extension of the time for appeal limited by statute (3 Ex. C. R. 1.) and sought to impugn the judgment pronounced in 1887. Held, Gwynne and Patterson, JJ., dissenting, that the appeal must be restricted to the final judgment pronounced in 1891; that an appeal from the judgment of 1887 could only be brought within 30 days thereafter unless the time was extended as provided by the statute and the extension of time granted on its face only referred to an appeal from the judgment pronounced in 1891.—Held, per Gwynne and Patterson, JJ., that the judgment of 1891 was the only judgment in the suit in respect to the matters put in issue by the pleadings and on appeal therefrom all matters in issue were necessarily open. The Queen v. Clarke, xxi., 656.

184. Jurisdiction—Final judgment—Demurrer—Practice—Case defective—Formal judgment—Objection in factum—Costs.—In an action (Sup. Ct., P. E. I.), for assault and false imprisonment, defendants justified by ca. sa. issued against plaintiff under a judgment against him. By replication plaintiff alleged that the capias issued in blank and was filled up with the necessary particulars after the sealing and delivery, and also that it was sealed, issued and delivered without a præcipe. To these replications the defendants demurred, and to the latter replication pleaded a rejoinder that after the issue of the writ their attorney transmitted a præcipe to the prothonotary. To this rejoinder the plaintiff demurred. Judgment was for the plaintiff on all the demurrers and defendants appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada. The printed case contained the demurrer book, and reasons for judgment, and a certified extract from the minutes of the prothonotary as follows:—"Demurrers argued 30th October last, when the court took time to consider. The Chief Justice now gives judgment for the plaintiff on all the demurrers. Mr. Justice Peters, concurs; Mr. Justice Hensley, concurs."—Held, 1. The case was defective in not shewing that a judgment had been entered up on the demurrers. 2. Even if judgment had been entered up such judgment would not be a final judgment from which an appeal would lie within the meaning of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, 1875, or the Supreme Court Amendment Act of 1879.—Appeal quashed with costs of a motion to quash. The objection to the jurisdiction was taken by the respondent in his factum. Reid v. Ramsay, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 420; Cass. Prac. (2 ed.), 30, 64, 81.

185. Jurisdiction—Final judgment.—In 1877 an order was made by the Chief Justice of Nova Scotia, on the petition of a number of property owners whose lands would be affected directing the prothonotary of the county to draw and strike a jury, under the provisions of R. S. N. S. (3 ser.) c. 70, to appraise the lands and property taken for the purpose of the Eastern Extension Railway. In 1878 a rule nisi was taken to set the whole proceedings aside, but a year later it was discharged on motion of the party who had obtained it. A question having been raised as to the validity of the incorporation of the railway company under 39 Vict. c. 4 (N. S.), and legislation being about to be passed to remove such doubts, another rule was obtained in 1879, on the ground that the H. & C. B. R. & C. Co., had no legal existence. After the argument of this rule, and before judgment, 41 Vict. cc. 66 and 70 (N. S.) were passed, the Supreme Court (N. S.) held that the County of Pictou was estopped by these statutes last mentioned from disputing the appraisement of lands taken, and by its act in issuing debentures to parties to whom damages had been awarded for the lands appropriated to the railway, some of which had been indorsed to third parties. (1 Russ. & Geld, 448; sub nom. Re Pictou Railway Damages). Held, that the judgment was not one from which an appeal would lie, there being no finality about the order made by the Chief Justice in 1877, which was what this appeal sought to set aside. Hocutt v. Halifax & C. B. Ry. & Coal Co., Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 423.

186. Jurisdiction—Final judgment—Judgments on demurrers and on verdict rendered—Appeal per saltum after quashing appeal on demurrers.—On appeal brought from a judgment overruling demurrers to some of the counts of a declaration only, while rehearing was pending upon an order to enter final judgment on the whole case upon the verdict rendered; Held, that as the judgment on the demurrers was not a final judgment the appeal must be quashed for want of jurisdiction, but on the application of the appellant, made at the same time as the motion to quash, leave was given to appeal per saltum (after the expiration of the 30 days limited by the Act) on whole case upon terms, and the deposit already made in court was ordered to remain on deposit to avail as security for this appeal. Bank B. N. A. v. Walker, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 214, 425, 670.

187. Jurisdiction—Final judgment—R. S. (N. S.), 4th series, c. 94, ss. 56, 75—Refusing leave to defend—Discretionary order—Matter of procedure—Practice.—Action of replevin to recover 125 barrels of flour. Plaintiffs were indorsees of a bill of lading of the goods, which were held by the defendant as freight agent of the I. C. R. at Truro. The action was begun and the goods were replevied and the writ was served on 9th April, 1881. A default was marked on 25th April, 1881.

On 10th Sept., 1881, plaintiffs' attorney issued a writ of inquiry, under which damages were assessed under R. S. N. S. (4 ser.) c. 94, s. 56. An order nisi to remove the default and let in defendant to defend, was taken out on 11th Oct., 1881, and discharged with costs. The judgment being affirmed on appeal (4 Russ. & Geld. 168). R. S. N. S. (4 ser.) c. 94, s. 75, enacts that it shall be lawful for the court or a judge, at any time within one year after final judgment, to let in defendant to defend upon application supported by satisfactory affidavits accounting for his non-appearance, and disclosing a defence upon the merits, etc.—Held, that the judgment appealed from was not a final judgment within the meaning of s. 3 of the Supreme Court Amendment Act of 1879, and was not appealable. Held, also, that if the court could entertain the appeal, the matter was one of procedure and entirely within the discretion of the court below, and this court would not interfere. Appeal dismissed with costs. Gladwin v. Cummings, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 426; Cass. Prac. (2 ed.), 31.

188. Final judgment—Order on appeal—Quashing interim injunction.—On motion to quash an interim injunction, Mathieu, J., suspended its operation until final adjudication on the merits. Both parties appealed to the Queen's Bench, which quashed the injunction absolutely. An application to one of the judges of Queen's Bench for leave to appeal was refused on the ground that the judgment quashing the writ was not a final judgment, and, "notwithstanding the offer and sufficiency of the security." Appellants served notice of further application to a judge of the Supreme Court to be allowed to give proper security to the satisfaction of that court, or of a judge thereof, for the prosecution of an appeal to that court, notwithstanding the refusal in the court below, and the lapse of thirty days from the rendering of the judgment from which they desired to appeal, and further to obtain an extension of time for settling the case in appeal. Henry, J., in chambers enlarged the motion for hearing in court where it was argued at length, and it was Held, that the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench (21 C. L. J. 355), quashing the interim injunction, was not a final judgment from which an appeal would lie. Motion refused. Stanton v. Canada Atlantic Ry. Co., Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 430; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 31.

189. Jurisdiction—Contempt of court—Criminal proceeding—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 68—Final judgment.—Contempt of court is a criminal matter and an appeal to the Supreme Court from a judgment in proceedings therefor, cannot be brought unless it comes within s. 68 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, O'Shea v. O'Shea (15 P. D. 59), followed. In re O'Brien (16 C. S. C. R. 197), referred to.—The Supreme Court (N.B.) adjudged E. guilty of contempt but deferred sentence. Held, that this was not a final judgment from which an appeal would lie to the Supreme Court of Canada. Appeal quashed. Ellis v. The Queen, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 133; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.), 31, 104.

190. School corporation—Decision of superintendent of public instruction—Final judgment—Mandamus—R. S. Q. Arts. 2055, 2056—55 & 56 Vict., c. 24, ss. 18 and 19 (Que.) Practice.—Under the provisions of art. 2055 of the Revised Statutes of Quebec, as amended by 55 and 56 Vict. c. 24, ss. 18 and 19, certain ratepayers of a school district appealed to the Superintendent of Public Instruction for the Province of Quebec, who thereupon rendered a decision, and gave orders and directions respecting the erection of a school-house, which, however, the School Commissioners neglected to perform. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that in such cases, the decision of the Superintendent of Public Instruction was final; that no appeal therefrom would lie to the Superior Court, and that the proper remedy to enforce the execution of the orders and directions of the Superintendent was by mandamus. Commis-saires d'Ecole de St. Charles v. Cordeau, 9th December, 1895.

191. Jurisdiction—Criminal proceeding—Contempt of court—Final judgment, R. S. C. c. 135, s. 68.—Contempt of court is a criminal proceeding and unless it comes within s. 69 of the Supreme Court Act an appeal does not lie to this court from a judgment in proceedings therefor. O'Shea v. O'Shea (15 P. D. 59), followed; In re O'Brien (16 Can. S. C. R. 197), referred to. In proceedings for contempt of court by attachment until sentence is pronounced there is no "final judgment" from which an appeal could be brought. Ellis v. The Queen, xxii., 7.

192. Order for new trial—Jurisdiction—Final judgment.—An ~~order~~ for a new trial is not a final judgment, and is not appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada. Canadian Pac. Ry. Co. v. Cobban Mfg. Co., xxii., 132.

193. Sheriff's sale of immovable—Action to vacate—Appeal from judgment in.—An appeal will lie to the Supreme Court under s. 29 (b) of the Supreme Court Act from the judgment in an action to vacate the sheriff's sale of an immovable. Dufresne v. Dixon (16 Can. S. C. R. 596) followed. Lefeuntun v. Véronneau, xxii., 203.

194. Final judgment—Petition for leave to intervene—Judgment on—Interlocutory proceedings.—No appeal lies to the Supreme Court from the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench on a petition for leave to intervene in a cause, the proceedings being interlocutory only. Hamel v. Hamel, xxvi., 17.

195. Interlocutory order—Trial by jury—Final judgment.—A judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada, affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court, by which the defendant's application to have the issues tried by a jury under the provisions of arts. 348-350 C. C. P., was refused. The defendant took an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, whereupon the plaintiff moved to quash. Held, that the decision complained of was an interlocutory judgment only, and that no appeal could lie under the provisions of "The Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act," and amendments thereto. (The appeal was quashed with costs.) Demers v. Bank of Montreal, xxvii., 197.

196. Jurisdiction—Final judgment—Discretionary order—Default to plead—R. S. C. c. 135, ss. 24 (a), 27—R. S. O. c. 44, s. 46—Ontario Judicature Act, Rule 796.—After judgment has been entered by default in an action in the High Court of Justice it is in the discretion of a master in chambers to grant or refuse an application by the defendant to have the proceedings re-opened to allow him to defend, and an appeal to the Supreme Court from the decision of the court of last resort on such an application is prohibited by s. 27 of "The Supreme and Exchequer Courts Acts." Quære, Is the judgment on such application a "final judgment" within the meaning of s. 24 (a) of the Act? O'Donohue v. Bourne, xxvii., 654.

197. Court of Review—Right of appeal to Privy Council—Construction of statute—Final judgment—R. S. C. c. 135, ss. 24 (j), 28 & 29—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3 (D).—Certain ratepayers of the City of Montreal having objections to one of the commissioners named in proceedings taken for the expropriation of land required for the improvement of a public street, in which they were interested, presented a petition to the Superior Court demanding his recusal. The petition was dismissed; on an appeal to the Court of Review, the judgment dismissing the petition was affirmed, and further appeal was then taken to the Supreme Court of Canada. On motion to quash the appeal for want of jurisdiction, Held, that no appeal de plano would lie from the judgment of the Court of Review to Her Majesty's Privy Council, and consequently there was no appeal therefrom to the Supreme Court of Canada under the provisions of the Act, 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, amending the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Held, further, that the judgment of the Court of Review was not a final judgment within the meaning of s. 29 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Ethier v. Ewing, xxix., 446.

198. Jurisdiction—Final judgment—Plea of prescription—Judgment dismissing plea—Costs—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24—Art. 2267 C. C.—A judgment affirming dismissal of a plea of prescription when other pleas remain on the record is not a final judgment from which an appeal lies to the Supreme Court of Canada. Hamel v. Hamel (26 Can. S. C. R. 17) approved and followed.—An objection to the jurisdiction of the court should be taken at the earliest moment. If left until the case comes on for hearing and the appeal is quashed the respondent may be allowed costs of a motion only. Griffith v. Harwood, xxx., 315.

199. Vendor and Purchaser Act—Reference to master—Admission of evidence—Appeal from certificate—Final judgment—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24 (e).—Where a master, on a reference under the Vendor and Purchaser Act to settle the title under a written agreement for a lease, ruled that evidence might be given to shew what covenants the lease should contain, an appeal does not lie to the Supreme Court from the judgment affirming such ruling it not being a final judgment and the case not coming within the provisions of s. 24 (e) of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, relating to proceedings in Equity. Gwynne, J., dissented. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. v. City of Toronto, xxx., 337.

200. Jurisdiction—Interlocutory proceeding—Final judgment.—An order requiring opponents à fin de charge to furnish security that lands seized in execution, if sold by the sheriff subject to the charge claimed, should realize sufficient to satisfy the claim of the execution creditor, is merely an interlocutory judgment from which no appeal lies to the Supreme Court of Canada. Lacroix v. Moreau (16 L. C. R. 180), referred to. Desaulniers v. Payette, xxxiii., 340.

See No. 289, infra.

14. FINDINGS IN COURTS BELOW.

202. Questions of fact—Conflicting evidence—Findings of court below.—Held, where a disputed fact, involving nautical questions, is raised by an appeal from the judgment of the Maritime Court of Ontario, as in the case of a collision, the Supreme Court will not on appeal reverse the decree of the judge of the court below, merely upon a balance of testimony. The Picton, iv., 648.

203. Question of jurisdiction of court below—Directions given on appeal—Second decision of court below—Powers of Supreme Court on first appeal—Jurisdiction to hear second appeal—Findings of fact.—Where an appeal is limited to a question of the jurisdiction of the court appealed from, the Supreme Court of Canada cannot decide upon the merits of the case, and where, in such a case, further adjudication is ordered, a second judgment therein deciding upon the merits is appealable under the Supreme Court Act.—On appeal the findings of fact by the trial judge ought not to be reversed unless his conclusions appear, beyond a doubt, to be erroneous. Bellechasse Election Case, v., 91.

204. Findings of trial judge—Reversal on appeal.—Where there was evidence which, in the opinion of the Supreme Court of Canada, established the creation of a new tenancy at will within ten years, the court reversed the holding of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, which had reversed the findings of fact by the trial judge.—Per Gwynne, J. A court of appeal should not reverse the finding upon matters of fact of the judge who tried the cause and had the opportunity of observing the demeanor of the witnesses unless the evidence be of such a character as to convey to the mind of the judges sitting on the appellate tribunal the irresistible conviction that the findings are erroneous. Ryan v. Ryan, v., 387, 406.

205. Special vindictive damages—Slander—Quantum of damages—Effect of findings on an appeal.—If the amount of damages awarded at the trial is not such as to shock the sense of justice and shew error or partiality in the discretion exercised by the judge under the circumstances of the case, an appellate court ought not to interfere with such discretion in determining the amount of damages. Levi v. Reed, vi., 482.

206. Conflicting evidence—Findings of trial judge.—Where there is a direct conflict of testimony, the finding of the judge at the trial must be regarded as decisive, and should not be overturned in appeal by a court which has not had the advantage of seeing the witnesses and observing their demeanor while under examination. Grassett v. Carter, x., 105.

207. Findings by jury—Interference on appeal.—Where a jury has made findings of fact and the verdict has been affirmed by the judgment appealed from, the Supreme Court of Canada will not disturb the decision. Cas-sells v. Burns, xiv., 256.

208. Jurisdiction—Findings of fact—Petition of right—46 Vict. c. 27 (Que.)—Where a judgment appealed from is founded wholly upon questions of fact the Supreme Court of Canada will not reverse it unless convinced, beyond all reasonable doubt, that such judgment is clearly erroneous.—The provisions of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act relating to appeals from the Province of Quebec apply to cases instituted under the Quebec Petition of Right Act. McGreevy v. The Queen (14 Can. S. C. R. 735), followed. Arpin v. The Queen, xiv., 736.

209. Question of fact—Finding of courts below.—M. assigned for the benefit of creditors. His wife preferred a claim against the estate for money lent to M. and used in his business, which the assignee refused to acknowledge, contending that it was not a loan but a gift to M. It was not disputed that the wife had money of her own and that M. had received it. The trial judge found against the assignee, holding that M. did not receive the money as a gift. This judgment was affirmed on appeal. Held, affirming the Court of Appeal for Ontario, that as the whole case was one of fact, namely, whether the money was given to M. as a loan by, or gift from, his wife, who in the present state of the law of Ontario, is in the same position, considered as a creditor of her husband, as a stranger, and as this fact was found on the hearing in favour of the wife and confirmed by the Court of Appeal, the second appellate court would not interfere with such finding. Warner v. Murray, xvi., 720.

210. Findings by trial judge—Appreciation of evidence—Jury trials—Non-jury cases.—An appeal court exercises different functions in dealing with a case tried by a judge from those exercised in jury cases. In the former case the court has the same jurisdiction over the facts as the trial judge, and can deal with them as it chooses. In the latter the court cannot be substituted for the jury to whom the parties have agreed to assign the facts for decision. Per Strong, J. Phoenix Insurance Co. v. McGhee, xviii., 61.

211. Question of fact—Finding of trial judge—Interference on appeal—Retainer.—A solicitor brought action against the officers of a Liberal-Conservative Association for services alleged to have been rendered as their solicitor and counsel in a controverted election. Plaintiff swore that he was duly appointed solicitor to carry on the election petition by resolution passed at a meeting of the association, and that in consequence of such resolution he acted as such solicitor in the conduct of the petition. The defence was that no such appointment was made, or if it was that plaintiff agreed to render his services gratuitously, and the evidence given for defendants was that plaintiff offered his services free of charge, and it was decided to protest the election in consequence of such offer. The trial judge held that no retainer of plaintiff was proved and dismissed the action. His decision was reversed by the Queen's Bench Division, and their decision in its turn was reversed by the Court of Appeal for Ontario, and the judgment of the trial judge restored. Held, affirming the Court of Appeal, that the question being purely one of fact which the trial judge was the person most competent to determine from seeing and hearing the witnesses, and it not being clear beyond all reasonable doubt that his decision was erroneous, but, on the contrary, the weight of evidence being in its favour, his judgment should not be interfered with on appeal. Titus v. Colville, xviii., 709.

212. Findings of fact—Receipt—Error—Parol evidence—Prohibitive law—Nullity—Arts. 14, 1234, C. C.—S. brought action to compel V. to account for $2,500 alleged to have been paid on 6th Oct., 1885, to be applied to S.'s first promissory notes maturing and in acknowledgment of which V.'s bookkeeper gave the following receipt: "Montreal, October 6th, 1885.—Received from S. the sum of $2,500 to be applied to his first notes maturing. M. V. per F. L." and which V. failed and neglected to apply. V. pleaded that he never got the $2,500 and that the receipt was given in error and by mistake by his clerk. After documentary and parol evidence had been given the Superior Court (affirmed by the Queen's Bench [M. L. R. 7 Q. B. 137]), dismissed the action. Held, that the finding of the two courts on the question of fact as to whether the receipt had been given through error should not be interfered with.—That the prohibition of art. 1234 C. C. against the admission of parol evidence to contradict or vary a written instrument, is not d'ordre public, and that if such evidence is admitted without objection at the trial it cannot subsequently be set aside in a court of appeal.—That parol evidence in commercial matters is admissible against a written document to prove error. Etna Insurance Co. v. Brodie (5 Can. S. C. R. 1), followed. Schwarsenski v. Vineberg, xix., 243.

213. Questions of fact—Finding of trial judge—Concurrence of lower appellate court.—Findings upon matters of fact by the trial judge who saw and heard the witnesses, affirmed by a Court of Appeal should not be interfered with on appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. Strong, J., dissented. Bickford v. Hawkins, xix., 362.

214. Jurisdiction—Amount in controversy—Adding interest—Costs—Finding of fact—Assuming jurisdiction on dismissal on merits.—Appeal from judgment affirming an award for $1,974.75 damages on expropriation of lands, with interest from date of award and costs. On hearing the appeal, Strong and Taschereau, JJ., doubted the court's jurisdiction, but concurred in the decision of the court dismissing the appeal on the merits, assuming, without deciding, that there was jurisdiction to entertain it.—Per Taschereau, J. The court will not, on appeal, interfere with concurrent findings of fact in the courts below, fully supported by evidence. [NOTE.—(See Cass. Dig. 2 ed. p. 451). On application by appellant in the Court of Queen's Bench, Tessier, J., being of opinion that no appeal lay, refused to allow the security. The Registrar of the Supreme Court held that the controversy was as to the amount at the time of the judgment appealed from, i.e., the principal awarded with interest to that date making an amount in excess of $2,500; as to costs he considered them incidental to the award and not in controversy within the meaning of the Supreme Court Act. On appeal to Fournier, J., the judgment of the registrar was affirmed. 24th November, 1890.] Quebec, Montmorency, and Charlevoix Ry. Co. v. Mathieu, xix., 426.

215. Concurrent findings of fact—Interference on appeal.—At the trial parol evidence was given to establish an alleged trust affecting lands and its existence was found as a fact by the trial judge who made a decree ordering the property to be sold and the proceeds applied according to the contention of the plaintiff and the evidence. The Supreme Court (B.C.) affirmed this decree. Held, that the fact of the existence of the trust having been found by the trial judge, and such finding having been affirmed by the full court, it should not be disturbed on this further appeal. Bowker v. Laumeister, xx., 175.

216. Questions of fact—New trial—Duty of appellate court.—Action to recover from the bank a special deposit by plaintiff. Defence that the amount had been already paid to an agent of plaintiff who had indorsed plaintiff's name upon and given up the deposit receipt. It was contended that no such authority was given to the agent and that plaintiff's name had been forged on the receipt. The jury found the facts in favour of this contention, and plaintiff obtained a verdict which was set aside by the full court and a new trial ordered. Held, that a new trial having been ordered to try questions of fact, such order should not be interfered with by an appellate court. Scott v. Bank of New Brunswick, xxi., 30.

217. Finding of fact—Value of land taken—Award by Exchequer Court.—The Supreme Court will not interfere with the award of the Exchequer Court as to value of land expropriated for railway purposes where there is evidence to support the finding and it is not clearly erroneous. Town of Levis v. The Queen, xxi., 31.

218. Victimative damages for serious personal injuries—Abuse of authority—Injury to feelings, reputation, and health—Discretion of trial judge—Measure of damages.—In allowing the appeal with costs, Levi v. Reed (6 Can. S. C. R. 482), was approved and the Supreme Court Held, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that in view of very serious injuries sustained by the plaintiff and of the misconduct of the defendant in abusing his position of a justice of the peace, $3,000 awarded by the trial judge was not so clearly excessive as to justify a reversal of his judgment. Taschereau, J., while holding that the amount to which the Court of Queen's Bench had reduced the damages ($600) was not sufficient, considered that, taking into consideration the position of the plaintiff and the nature of the injuries, $3,000 was excessive. Fournier, J., considered that the abuse of the defendant of his position of justice of the peace was an important element to be taken into consideration in fixing the amount of damages. Per Gwynne, J. The sound rule to adopt is that in mere matters of fact, or in the estimation of damages not susceptible of precise calculation or not ascertainable by the application of any rule prescribing a measure of damages, the appeal court should sustain the judgment of the trial judge unless satisfied that his conclusions are clearly erroneous. Gingras v. Desilets, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 212.

219. Findings of courts below—Verdict affirmed by two courts.—Appeal from two judgments of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, affirming judgments recovered in actions on contracts on trials by a judge without a jury. The verdicts had been sustained by the Queen's Bench and Common Pleas, respectively. The appeal was dismissed with costs. Per Gwynne, J.—When a judge has tried a case without a jury and found a verdict, which verdict has been affirmed by two courts, this court, sitting in appeal, should not reverse the conclusion arrived at by the lower courts on the weight of evidence, unless convinced beyond all reasonable doubt that all the judges before whom the case came have clearly erred. [Note.—Compare Bellechasse Election Case, 5 Can. S. C. R. 91.]—Bickford v. Howard, 18 C. L. J. 422; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 286.

220. Questions of fact—Findings of trial judge—Negligence—Improper construction of street car track.—The plaintiff who was thrown out of a waggon sustaining injuries, brought action for negligence owing to improper construction and bad order of the company's track. Torrance, J., found that the track was in bad order, the switch three inches above the level of the road, contrary to law, and that this caused the accident without any fault on the part of the plaintiff, whose damages he assessed at $2,500. The Queen's Bench reversed this judgment, being of opinion that the rails, as well as the part of the roadway the company was bound to maintain, were lawful and sufficient; that the company was not at fault, and that the plaintiff had not exercised necessary caution and prudence and might, by reasonable caution and prudence, have avoided the accident. Held, that as the questions to be decided were purely matters of fact, the judgment of the court of first instance should not have been disturbed. Strong, J., dissented, on the ground that the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench on the facts was correct. Parker v. Montreal City Pass. Ry. Co., Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 731.

[The Privy Council refused leave to appeal, as the findings of fact should not have been disturbed; see 6 Can. Gaz. 174.]

221. Contract—Collateral agreement—Questions for jury—Verdict—New trial—Duty of appellate court.—Whether or not a memorandum of agreement set up by the defendant as containing the only contract between the parties was intended to settle the contract in whole or in part is a question for the jury. The onus of shewing that it contained all the terms of the contract is upon the party producing it. In such a case oral testimony is admissible on behalf of both parties. A verdict based upon the appreciation of the evidence in such a case ought not to be interfered with by an appellate court. Peters v. Hamilton, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 763.

222. Questions of fact—Concurrent findings in courts below.—Per Taschereau, J.—Concurrent findings on a question of fact in two courts below ought not to be reversed on appeal except under very unusual circumstances. Hays v. Gordon, (L. R. 4 P. C. 337); Gray v. Turnbull, (L. R. 2 H. L. 53); Bell v. City of Quebec, (5 App. Cas. 94); Smith v. Lawrence, (L. R. 5 P. C. 308), referred to. Black v. Walker, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 768.

223. Award on expropriation—Questions of fact—Findings of court appealed from.—On 3rd February, 1882, the Minister of Railways and Canals, requiring part of a lot for construction of the I. C. Ry. deposited, in accordance with the Government Railway Act, 1881, a plan of the land, and gave notice under s. 15 tendering compensation. The lot had been used as a cove, and a profitable lumber business had been conducted thereon by means of a wharf running into deep water, at which vessels of large size could load. The portion of the lot taken was 25 feet wide through the middle of it and across the wharf by 211 feet, in all 5,156 square feet: the portion of the wharf expropriated being 1,000 square feet. Respondents refused the sum tendered, and the question of compensation was submitted by the Minister, under the Act, to the official arbitrators who, after hearing evidence of the claimants and the Crown, awarded the amount tendered and refused as full compensation for the land expropriated and all damages, and imposed the costs of arbitration upon the claimants. An appeal to the Exchequer Court was heard by Fournier, J., one witness on either side being examined, the award of the arbitrators was set aside, the claimants allowed $11,073 ($8,500 damages and $2,573 value of land expropriated), costs of appeal (save of witnesses in the Exchequer Court) and before the arbitrators. On further appeal to the Supreme Court, respondents gave notice of intention upon the hearing to contend that the decision should be varied and respondent allowed a larger sum as compensation and damages. The questions were entirely of fact, and it was Held, that the judgment of the court below should be affirmed and the appeal dismissed with costs. The Queen v. Murphy, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 314.

224. Collusive judgment entered by default—Chamber order to set aside—Recitals in order—Findings of fact.—Where an order in chambers setting aside a judgment entered by default as fraudulently obtained and allowing executors in to defend, was affirmed by the C. P. division and by the judgment appealed from (11 Ont. App. R. 673): Held, that it is doubtful if an appeal would lie in such a case to the Supreme Court of Canada, and in any event the statement in the order as to what took place in chambers and as to the matter which was submitted to and argued, must be taken to be conclusive. Schroeder v. Rooney, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 403, 434; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 29.

225. Trial by jury—Withdrawal from jury—Reference to court—Consent of parties—Railway company—Negligence.—On the trial of an action against a railway company for injuries alleged to have been caused by negligence of the servants of the company in not giving proper notice of the approach of a train at a crossing, whereby plaintiff was struck by the engine and hurt, the case was withdrawn from the jury by consent of counsel for both parties and referred to the full court, with power to draw inferences of fact and on the law and facts either to assess damages to the plaintiff or enter a judgment of nonsuit. On appeal from the decision of the full court assessing damages to plaintiff: Held, Gwynne and Patterson, J.J., dissenting, that as by the practice in the Supreme Court of New Brunswick all matters of fact must be decided by the jury, and can only be entertained by the court by consent of parties, the full court in considering the case pursuant to the agreement at the trial acted as a quasi-arbitrator and its decision was not open to review on appeal as it would have been if the judgment had been given in the regular course of judicial procedure in the court.—Held, further, that if the merits of the case could be entered on appeal the judgment appealed from should be affirmed.—Held, per Gwynne and Patterson, J.J., that the case was properly before the court and as the evidence shewed that the servants of the company had complied with the statutory requirement as to giving notice of the approach of the train the company was not liable. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. v. Fleming, xxii., 33.

226. Collision at sea—Negligence—Defective steering gear—Question of fact—Interference with decision of local judge in admiralty.—In an action against the owners of the "Santanderino" for damages for collision with respondent's barge, the "Juno," through the breaking down of the steering apparatus, the local judge in Admiralty District of Nova Scotia, who was assisted on the trial by a nautical assessor, found that the steering gear was constructed on an approved patent, and was in good order when the "Santanderino" started on her voyage, but that the collision was due to want of prompt action by the master and officers when the wheel refused to work (3 Ex. C. R. 378). On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, it was Held, Sedgewick and King, J.J., dissenting, that only a question of fact was involved, and though it was doubtful if the evidence was sufficient to warrant the finding, the decision was not so clearly wrong as to justify an appellate court in reversing it. S.S. "Santanderino" v. Vanvert et al., xxiii., 145.

227. Expropriation—Award of arbitrators—Interference on appeal.—In a matter of expropriation, the decision of the majority of the arbitrators, men of more than ordinary business experience, upon a question merely of value, should not be interfered with on appeal. Lemoine v. City of Montreal; Allan v. City of Montreal, xxiii., 390.

228. Questions of fact—Unsatisfactory findings of jury—Interference with—Second appellate court.—Held, per Fournier, Taschereau, Gwynne, and Sedgewick, J.J., that, though the findings of the jury were not satisfactory upon the evidence, yet, where they had been upheld on a first appeal, a second appellate court could not interfere.—King, J., held that the findings of the jury had to be accepted by the appellate court. Grand Trunk Ry. Co. v. Weegar, xxiii., 422.

229. Evidence—Questions of fact.—Held, per Strong, C.J., that although the case might properly have been left to the jury, the judgment of nonsuit, having been affirmed by two courts, should not be interfered with. Headford v. McClary Mfg. Co., xxiv., 291.

230. Master and servant—Negligence of servant—Deviation from employment—Resumption—Contributory negligence—Infant—Evidence.—If in a case tried without a jury, evidence has been improperly admitted, a court of appeal may reject it and maintain the verdict if the remaining evidence warrants it. Merritt v. Hepenstal, xxv., 150.

231. Questions of fact—Reversal on.—If a sufficiently clear case is made out, the court will allow an appeal on mere questions of fact against the concurrent findings of two courts. Arpin v. The Queen (14 Can. S. C. R. 736); Schweersenski v. Vineberg (19 Can. S. C. R. 243) distinguished. North British and Mercantile Ins. Co. v. Tourville et al., xxv., 177.

232. Assessment of damages — Questions of fact.—The Supreme Court of Canada will not interfere with the amount of damages assessed by a judgment appealed from if there is evidence to support it. Montreal Gas Co. v. St. Laurent; City of St. Henri v. St. Laurent, xxvi., 176.

233. Questions of fact — Reversal in Court of Appeal.—The Supreme Court of Canada will take questions of fact into consideration on appeal, and if it clearly appears that there has been an error in the admission or appreciation of evidence by the courts below, their decisions may be reversed or varied. North British and Mercantile Ins. Co. v. Tourville (25 Can. S. C. R. 177) followed. Lefeunteum v. Beaudoin, xxviii., 89.

234. Evidence taken by commission — Reversal on questions of fact.—Where the witnesses have not been heard in the presence of the judge, but their depositions were taken before a commissioner, a court of appeal may deal with the evidence more fully than if the trial judge had heard it or there had been a finding of fact by a jury, and may reverse the finding of the trial court if such evidence warrants it. Malzard v. Hart, xxvii., 510.

235. Questions of fact — Second appellate court.—Where a judgment upon questions of fact rendered in a court of first instance has been reversed upon a first appeal, a second court of appeal should not interfere to restore the original judgment, unless it clearly appears that the reversal was erroneous. Demers v. Montreal Steam Laundry Co., xxvii., 537.

236. Finding of courts below — Questions of fact.—Where there does not appear to have been manifest error in the findings of the courts below they will not be disturbed on appeal. Paradis v. Municipality of Limoilou, xxx., 405.

237. Evidence — Concurrent findings on questions of fact — Reversal on appeal.—Although there may be concurrent findings on questions of fact in both courts below, the Supreme Court of Canada will, upon appeal, interfere with their decision where it clearly appears that a gross injustice has been occasioned to the appellant, and there is evidence sufficient to justify findings to the contrary. Taschereau, J., dissented, holding that as there had been concurrent findings in both courts below supported by the evidence, an appellate court ought not to interfere. City of Montreal v. Cadieux, xxix., 616.

238. Negligence — Trial by judge without a jury — Findings of fact — Evidence — Reversal by appellate court.—In an action for damages for personal injuries, the trial judge, who heard the case without a jury, and before whom the witnesses were examined, held that the evidence of the witnesses for the defence was best entitled to credit and dismissed the action. The judgment was reversed in the Court of Review and its decision affirmed on further appeal by the Court of Queen's Bench. On appeal to the Supreme Court, Held, that as the judgment at the trial was supported by evidence, it should not have been disturbed. Judgment appealed from reversed and judgment of the trial judge restored. Village of Granby v. Ménard, xxxi., 14.

239. Negligence — Proximate cause of accident — Injuries to workman — Employer's liability — Presumptions — Findings of jury sustained by courts below.—As there can be no responsibility on the part of an employer for injuries sustained by an employee in the course of his employment, unless there be positive testimony, or presumptions weighty, precise and consistent, that the employer is chargeable with negligence which was the immediate, necessary and direct cause of the accident which led to the injuries suffered, it is the duty of an appellate court to relieve the employer of liability, on a case where there is no evidence as to the immediate cause of an explosion of dangerous material which caused the injuries, notwithstanding that the findings of a jury in favour of the plaintiff, not assented to by the trial judges, have been sustained by two courts below. Taschereau, J., dissented, taking a different view of the evidence, and being of opinion that the findings of the jury, concurred in by both courts below, were based upon reasonable presumptions drawn from the evidence, and that, following The George Matthews Co. v. Bowchard (28 S. C. R. 580), and The Metropolitan Ry. Co. v. Wright (11 App. Cas. 152) those findings ought not to be reversed on appeal. The Asbestos and Asbestic Co. v. Durand (30 S. C. R. 285) discussed and approved. Dominion Cartridge Co. v. McArthur, xxxi., 392. (Leave to appeal to Privy Council granted, 2nd Aug. 1902.)

240. Nuisance — Operation of electric railway — Powerhouse machinery — Vibration, smoke and noise — Injury to adjoining property — Evidence — Assessment of damages — Reversal on questions of fact.—In an action of the owner of adjoining property for damages caused by the vibrations of machinery in an electric powerhouse, the evidence was contradictory and the courts below gave effect to the testimony of scientific witnesses in preference to that of persons acquainted with the locality. Held, Taschereau, J., dissenting that, notwithstanding the concurrent findings of the courts below, as the witnesses were equally credible the evidence of those who spoke from personal knowledge of the facts ought to have been preferred to that of persons giving opinions based merely upon scientific observations. Goreau v. Montreal Street Railway Co., xxxi., 463.

241. Exchequer appeal — Assessment of damages — Interference with findings of Exchequer Court judge.—The Exchequer Court judge heard witnesses and upon his appreciation of contradictory testimony awarded damages to the respondents. The Crown appealed on the ground that the damages were excessive. Held, Gwynne and Girouard, JJ., dissenting, that as it did not appear from the evidence that there was error in the judgment appealed from the Supreme Court would not interfere with the decision of the Exchequer Court judge. The Queen v. Armour, xxxi., 499.

242. Arbitration — Condition precedent — New grounds taken on appeal — Assessment of damages — Interference by appellate court.—An objection as to arbitration and award being a condition precedent to an action for damages which had been waived or abandoned in the Court of Queen's Bench cannot be invoked on an appeal to the Supreme Court.—On a cross-appeal the Supreme Court refused to interfere with the amount awarded for damages in the court below upon its appreciation of contradictory evidence. Hamelin v. Bannerman, xxxi., 534.

243. Facts found by courts below — Weight of evidence — Verdict.—The court refused to disturb the verdict on the ground that it was against the weight of evidence after it had been affirmed by the trial judge and the Court of Appeal. Toronto Railway Co. v. Balfour, xxxii., 239.

244. Admiralty law — Collision — Ship at anchor — Anchor light — Lookout — Weight of evidence — Credibility — Findings of trial judge — Negligence.—The S. S. "Lake Ontario" was proceeding in charge of a pilot to her dock in Halifax harbour, N. S., on a blustery night in January, 1900, came in collision with and sank appellant's coal barge, "A. L. Taylor," lying at anchor north of George's Island. The steamship had signalled by guns and whistles for a medical officer at the quarantine grounds before the collision, and her officers and crew testified that they were alert, and anxiously working the steamship through anchored vessels in the darkness and blustery weather and came suddenly upon the "Taylor," and that no lights were seen on her. The barge caretaker, who was not on deck at the time, swore that a proper anchor light was burning on the barge, his statement being corroborated by the captain of a schooner lying close by and by several boatmen and labourers on the wharves. The trial judge accepted the evidence of the defence as correct and found that the collision and loss were wholly attributable to negligence of the "Taylor" in failing to have an anchor light and to keep a sharp lookout, and dismissed the action. On appeal the Supreme Court affirmed the decision at the trial (7 Ex. C. R. 403). Dominion Coal Co. v. S. S. "Lake Ontario", xxxii., 507.

245. Concurrent findings of fact — Duty of appellate court — Evidence.—A judgment based upon concurrent findings of fact in the courts below ought not to be disturbed on appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada if the evidence be contradictory. D'Avignon v. Jones et al., xxxii., 650.

246. Evidence — Findings by jury — Verdict.—An appellate court should not disregard the verdict of a jury which is supported by evidence. McKelvey v. Le Roi Mining Co., xxxii., 664.

247. Concurrent findings of courts below.—The Supreme Court of Canada affirmed the concurrent findings of three courts below on a question of fact, as they were supported by the evidence. Bank of Montreal v. Demers, 7th November, 1899.

[NOTE.—This decision was given on hearing upon the merits of the appeal in which proceedings were stayed till after the judgment on an appeal to the Privy Council. See 29 Can. S. C. R. 435.]

248. Questions of fact — Concurrent findings of courts below — Duty of Appellate Court.—During the argument of counsel for respondent, he was stopped, the Chief Justice announcing that the majority of the court considered that there should be no interference with the judgment appealed from, he said, "I am clearly of opinion that we should dismiss the appeal as it is upon questions of fact already passed upon by two courts below and, if we should reverse, it would be in the teeth of decided cases in this court. As to sufficiency of the proofs of loss, that is answered in the printed judgments of Meredith, C.J., and Moss, J., and, as to the question of increase of risk, I cannot see that there was an increase. We are not prepared to interfere with the judgment appealed from." (Tasche-reau, Sedgewick, and King, JJ., concurred. Gwynne, J., said, "I cannot accede, at present, to the views of the majority of the court. I am not in a position to express an opinion as I have not yet had an opportunity of examining the evidence and opinions of the judges below; I would like to do so before coming to a conclusion as to whether the action was right or wrong.") The appeal was dismissed with costs. Quebec Fire Ins. Co. v. Bank of Toronto, 27th April, 1900.

249. Questions of fact — Findings of trial court — Reversal on appeal — Interference on further appeal.—On the merits in this case (see 31 Can. S. C. R. 175), the controversy rested upon the fact whether or not a ship had been acquired by some of the partners in a commercial firm for the purposes of the firm's business or merely as a private venture. The Court of Queen's Bench had reversed the trial court judgment, and held that it belonged to the firm. As it was not made clear that there was error in the judgment appealed from, the Supreme Court of Canada dismissed the appeal with costs. Bell v. Vipond, 29th Oct. 1901.

250. Findings of courts appealed from — Evidence — Questions of fact — Reversal on appeal.—There is no rule of law or of procedure which prevents the Supreme Court or an intermediate court of appeal from reversing the decision at the trial on the facts.—Held, per Girouard, J., following Village of Granby v. Menard (31 Can. S. C. R. 14) that the evidence being contradictory and the trial judge having found for the defendant, which finding the evidence warranted, his judgment should not have been reversed on appeal. Dempster v. Lewis, xxxiii., 292.

251. Concurrent findings of courts below — Reversal on questions of fact — Improper rulings — Reversal on a matter of procedure.—Where the findings of the trial courts were manifestly erroneous and the trial appeared to have been irregularly conducted, the Supreme Court of Canada reversed the concurrent findings of the courts below, and also reversed the concurrent rulings of those courts refusing leave to amend the statement of claim by alleging an account stated. Belcher v. McDonald, xxxiii., 321.—Leave to appeal to Privy Council granted August, 1903.

252. Assessment of damages — Estimating by guess — Concurrent findings — Reversal on appeal — New trial.—The evidence being insufficient to enable the trial judge to ascertain the damages claimed for breach of contract, he stated that he was obliged to guess at the sum awarded and his judgment was affirmed by the judgment appealed from. The Supreme Court of Canada was of opinion that no good result could be obtained by sending the case back for a new trial and, therefore, allowed the appeal and dismissed the action, thus reversing the concurrent findings of both courts below. Armour, J., however, was of opinion that the proper course was to order a new trial. Williams v. Stephenson, xxxiii., 323.

253. Questions of law — Findings of fact—Reversal on appeal.—On questions of law, the judgment appealed from was reversed, Davies, J., dubitante, but the findings, on confictory testimony, in respect of damages, by the trial judge were not disturbed on the appeal. Mas-sawippi Valley Ry. Co. v. Reed, xxxiii., 457.

15. HABEAS CORPUS.

273. Habeas corpus — Filing of case — Time — Practice.—The first proceeding in habeas corpus appeals is the filing of the case with the registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada, which must be done within 60 days of the pronouncing of the judgment appealed from. Re Smart, xvi., 396.

274. Criminal matters — Habeas corpus — Jurisdiction of Supreme Court of Canada.—A judge of the Supreme Court of Canada will not assume appellate jurisdiction by issuing a writ of habeas corpus in a matter which has been disposed of in a provincial Court of Appeal. In re Boucher (1879), Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 325; S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 54.

275. Jurisdiction — Habeas corpus — Prisoner discharged before appeal—Costs.—The prisoner was convicted before the stipendiary magistrate of Truro, N. S., of violating the license laws in force in the town, and fined $40 and costs as for a third offence. Execution issued in the form given in the R. S. N. S. (4 ser.) c. 75, under which F. was committed to jail. While there he was convicted of a fourth offence and fined $80 and costs, and was detained under an execution in the same form. The Supreme Court (N. S.) on motion to make absolute a rule nisi granted under R. S. N. S. (4 ser.) c. 99, discharged the rule. Before the institution of the appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, the time for which the appellant had been imprisoned had expired and he was at large. On motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, Held, that an appeal will not lie in any case of proceedings for or upon a writ of habeas corpus when at the time of bringing the appeal the appellant is at large.—The question of costs on dismissal was reserved and subsequently the court ordered that the respondent should be allowed his general costs of the appeal. Fraser v. Tupper, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 421; Cass. Prac. (2 ed.) 53, 54, 88.

276. Habeas corpus — Change in position of parties pending appeal.—Upon the calling for hearing of the appeal (which was from a judgment of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, refusing a writ of habeas corpus, for the possession of Quai Sing, a Chinese female under age), counsel for the respondent produced to the court an order of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, dated subsequently to the judgment appealed from, by which it appeared that the respondent, the matron of a rescue home, had been appointed by that court as guardian to the infant in question, whereupon the Chief Justice intimated that, under the circumstances, it was useless to proceed with the hearing of the appeal, it being impossible that any order could be made thereon respecting the possession of the infant being given to the appellant. The appeal was consequently dismissed with costs. Seid Sing Kaw v. Bowes, 17th May, 1898.

277. Habeas corpus — Extradition — Necessity to quash.—By s. 31 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act (R. S. C. c. 135) "no appeal shall be allowed in any case of proceedings for or upon a writ of habeas corpus arising out of any claim for extradition made under any treaty." On application to the court to fix a day for hearing a motion to quash such an appeal. Held, that the matter was coram non iudice and there was no necessity for a motion to quash. In re Lazier, xxix., 630.

17. INSOLVENCY.

281. Jurisdiction — Claim in insolvency under Act of 1875—40 Vict. c. 41, s. 28.—A final judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada (appeal side), upon a claim of a creditor filed with the assignee of an estate under the Insolvent Act of 1875, is not appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada, the right of appeal having been taken away by 40 Vict. c. 41 s. 28 (D.), Cushing v. Dupuy, (5 App. Cas. 409), followed. Seath v. Hagar, xviii., 715.

18. JURISDICTION.

See p. ~~xxx~~

282. Quashing appeal — Irregular security bond—Interested parties—Matter of practice in court below.—Where the appeal bond fails to inure to the benefit of parties interested in the result of the appeal, there can be no attention paid to the appeal.—A question simply of practice in the discretion of the court below will not be entertained on appeal. Scammell v. James, xvi., 593.

284. Practice—Assuming jurisdiction—Dismissal on merits.—The Supreme Court of Canada, without deciding the question of jurisdiction raised on motion to quash, assumed jurisdiction and quashed the appeal on the merits. Great Eastern Ry. Co. v. Lambe, xxi., 431.

285. Jurisdiction — Motion to quash in chambers—Summary application ordered to stand.—Under the provision of the Act, 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 41, a motion to dismiss or to quash an election appeal, on the ground of unnecessary delays or want of jurisdiction, was ordered to stand over until the appeal came on for hearing in court, as it was a matter of too great importance to be disposed of on summary application. Charlevoix Election Case, (1879) Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 695; Cass. S. C. Prac. (1 ed.) 45. [NOTE.—Since The Halton Election Case (19 Can. S. C. R. 557) q. v., such motions have been made in chambers. Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 133.]

286. Controverted election — Preliminary objection to hearing—Ruling of trial judges—Jurisdiction—R. S. C. c. 9, s. 50.—An order by election judges overruling objections made to proceeding with the trial of a controverted election is not a judgment or decision appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada. Vaudreuil Election Case, xxii., 1.

287. Order of court or judge — Vacating sheriff's sale.—An action in an action to vacate the sheriff's sale of an immovable is appealable to the Supreme Court under s. 29 (b), of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Dufresne v. Dixon (16 Can. S. C. R. 506), followed. Lefebvre v. Veronneau, xxii., 203.

287a. Interlocutory proceeding—Petition for leave to intervene.—No appeal lies to the Supreme Court from a judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench refusing leave to intervene. Hamel v. Hamel, xxvi., 17.

288. Appeal—Jurisdiction—Amount in controversy—Affidavits conflicting as to amount.—On motion to quash respondents filed affidavits that the amount in controversy was less than that necessary to give jurisdiction. Affidavits were also filed by appellants, shewing that the amount was sufficient to give jurisdiction under the statute. The motion was dismissed, but appellants were ordered to pay the costs, as jurisdiction did not appear until the filing of the affidavit in answer to the motion. Dreschel v. Auer Incandescent Light Mfg. Co., xxviii., 268.

289. Final judgment—Jurisdiction — Court of Review—Judgment in first instance varied—Art. 43 C. P. Q.—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, s.-s. 3—Construction of statute.—Where the Court of Review has varied a judgment, by increasing the damages, the judgment rendered in the court of first instance is not thereby confirmed so as to give an appeal direct to the Supreme Court of Canada under 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, s.-s. 3 (D.), amending the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act. Simpson v. Palliser, xxix., 6.

290. Objections to jurisdiction — Quashing appeals — Costs.—An objection to the jurisdiction of the court should be taken at the earliest moment. If left until the case comes on for hearing and the appeal is quashed, the respondent may be allowed costs of a motion only. Griffith v. Harwood, xxx., 315.

291. Controverted election — Lost record — Substituted copy — Judgment on preliminary objections — Discretion of court below — Jurisdiction.—The record in the case of a controverted election was produced in the Supreme Court of Canada on an appeal against the judgment on preliminary objections and, in re-transmission to the court below, the record was lost. Under the procedure in similar cases in the province where the petition was pending, a record was re-constructed in substitution of the lost record, and upon verification as to its correctness, the court below ordered the substituted record to be filed. Thereupon, the respondent in the court below raised preliminary objections traversing the correctness of a clause in the substituted petition which was dismissed by the judgment appealed from. Held, that, as the judgment appealed from was not one upon a question raised by preliminary objections, nor a judgment upon the merits of the trial, the Supreme Court of Canada had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal, nor to revise the discretion of the court below in ordering the substituted record to be filed. Two Mountains Election Case, xxxii., 55.

292. Jurisdiction — Annulment of procès-verbal—Matter in controversy.—The Supreme Court of Canada has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal in a suit to annul a procès-verbal establishing a public highway notwithstanding that the effect of the procès-verbal in question might be to involve an expenditure of over $2,000 for which the appellant's lands would be liable for assessment by the municipal corporation. Dubois v. The Village of St. Rose (21 Can. S. C. R. 65); The City of Sherbrooke v. McManamy (18 Can. S. C. R. 594); The County of Verchères v. The Village of Varennes (19 Can. S. C. R. 365) and The Bell Telephone Company v. The City of Quebec (20 Can. S. C. R. 230) followed.—Webster v. The City of Sherbrooke (24 Can. S. C. R. 52, 268) and McKay v. The Township of Hinchinbrooke (24 Can. S. C. R. 55) referred to.—Reburn v. The Parish of Ste. Anne (15 Can. S. C. R. 92) overruled. Toussignant v. County of Nicolet, xxxii., 353.

293. Jurisdiction — 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34—Criminal case.—The Act of the Dominion Parliament respecting appeals from the Court of Appeal for Ontario to the Supreme Court (60 & 61 Vict. c. 34) applies only to civil cases. Criminal appeals are still regulated by the provisions of the Criminal Code. Rice v. The King, xxxii., 480.

294. Jurisdiction—Yukon Territorial Court—Decisions of gold commissioner — Special appellate tribunal — Finality of judgment — Legislative jurisdiction of Governor-in-Council — 62 & 63 Vict. c. 11, s. 13—1 Edw. VII. order-in-council p. lxxii.—2 Edw. VII. c. 35—Mining lands.—The Supreme Court of Canada has jurisdiction to hear appeals from the judgments of the Territorial Court of the Yukon Territory, sitting as the Court of Appeal constituted by the ordinance of the Governor-in-Council of the 18th of March, in respect to the hearing and decision of disputes affecting mineral lands in the Yukon Territory. The Governor-in-Council has no jurisdiction to take away the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada provided by 62 & 63 Vict.

c. 11 of the statutes of Canada. Hartley v. Matson, xxxii., 575.

295. Objections to jurisdiction — Jurisdiction of court below.—An objection that a judge of the court below had no jurisdiction to render a judgment from which an appeal is asserted is not proper ground on which to question the jurisdiction of the appellate court to entertain the appeal. McKelvey v. Le Roi Mining Co., xxxii., 664.

296. Jurisdiction — Matter in controversy — Removal of executors—Acquiescence in trial court judgment—Right of appeal—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29.—The Supreme Court of Canada has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal in a case where the matter in controversy has become an issue relating merely to the removal of executors though, by the action, an account for over $2,000 had been demanded and refused by the judgment at the trial against which the plaintiff had not appealed. Noel v. Chevreffils (30 Can. S. C. R. 327) followed; Chaberge v. The Equitable Life Assurance Society (24 Can. S. C. R. 59) distinguished. Donohue v. Donohue, xxxiii., 134.

297. Appeal — Jurisdiction — Award — B. C. Arbitration Act — Judgment on motion —Enforcing award.—The full court in British Columbia affirmed an award in favour of respondent for compensation for the opening of a highway through his lands by the Township of Langley under a by-law passed in June, 1896. The Supreme Court quashed the appeal for want of jurisdiction on a motion to that effect based on grounds (1) that the judgment appealed from was not one on a motion to set aside the award nor by way of appeal from the award, within R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24, s.s. (f). (2) That no appeal could lie. (3) That the judgment merely permitted the enforcement of the award by allowing respondent's appeal from the order of a County Court judge refusing an application to enforce the award and referring the matter back to the arbitrators for further consideration and that no appeal could lie. And (4) that no appeal lies to the Supreme Court of Canada from a judgment on a motion under s. 13 of R. S. B. C. (1897) c. 9, to enforce an award or form on a judgment in appeal from such an order. Township of Langley v. Duffy, 30th May, 1899.

298. Appeal — Allowing security—Jurisdiction of Supreme Court.—Application for completion of security bond on appeal from a judgment condemning V. to pay O. $37,500 and dismissing the intervention of P. who claimed half the money. It appeared that there was $30,400 deposited in the Quebec Bank to the credit of V. and his application was that this sum should be paid into court and that he should be required to give security only for the balance, instead of being obliged to give security for the whole sum in order to stay execution. The court held that it had no jurisdiction to make the order and dismissed the application with costs. Veilleux & Price v. Ordway, 5th May, 1903.

298a. Territorial Court of Yukon Territory —Quorum to constitute court for hearing appeals.—Quere. Whether under the provisions of section six of the Yukon Territory Act, 62 & 63 Vict. c. 11, and of the North-West Territories Act, R. S. C. c. 50, s. 42, thereby made applicable to the Territorial Court of Yukon Territory, three judges of that court are necessary to constitute a quorum for the hearing of appeals from judgments rendered upon the trial of causes therein. Barrett v. Le Syndicat Lyonnais du Klondyke, 24th August, 1903, xxxiii., 667.

19. LEAVE TO APPEAL.

309. Approval of security—Leave to appeal—Ouster of jurisdiction.—Approval of security is a mode of granting leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, the court or judge so approving becomes functus officio and, except as regards stay of proceedings, orders thereafter made in a cause by the court or judge below will be disregarded by the Supreme Court. Lakin v. Nuttall, iii., 685.

310. Binding local decision — Question of law — Appeal direct — Supreme Court Act, (1879), s. 6.—Leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada without any intermediate appeal to the Court of Appeal for Ontario, was granted by Gwynne, J., under s. 6 of the Supreme Court Amendment Act of 1879, on the ground that the Court of Appeal for Ontario would be bound by the case of Cameron v. Kerr (3 Ont. App. R. 30), whereas the appellant sought to avoid the effect of that decision in this action. Moffatt v. Merchants' Bank of Canada, xi., 46.

311. Appeal direct from court of original jurisdiction—Supreme Court Act (1879), s. 6—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 26, s.-s. 3—Opinion of court below on merits—Church lands—Rector and wardens—Interest to appeal—Indemnity.—In a suit against D., as rector of St. James' Cathedral, Toronto, to have certain lands declared to be held by him not only for himself as such rector, but also for the benefit of the other rectories in the City of Toronto, the decision of Ferguson, J., in favour of plaintiff was upheld on appeal to the Chancery Division. Up to the time of the judgment rendered by the latter court, the proceedings had been carried on in the name of D. by arrangement between him and the church-wardens of St. James' Cathedral who contended that they had an interest separate from that of D. in the disposition of the lands, and the revenues therefrom, and who had indemnified D. against costs. But upon the church-wardens proposing to appeal, D. refused to allow his name to be further used in the proceedings. The Court of Appeal, upon an application being made by the church-wardens for leave to appeal, refused to grant such leave, holding that the church-wardens had no interest in the lands or revenues. The church-wardens thereupon appealed to Strong, J., in chambers, for leave to appeal per saltum to the Supreme Court of Canada under s. 6 of the Supreme Court Act (1879). The judge held, that the church-wardens had an interest at least which justified them in appealing; he would not, however, as a judge in chambers, overrule the decision of the Court of Appeal, but granted leave to renew the application to the full court.—On the motion coming before the full court, it was Held, that leave to appeal should be allowed, upon a proper indemnity being given by the church-wardens to D. against all possible costs; the court expressing no opinion on the merits of the case itself. Henry, J., dissented, on the ground that it was impossible to decide the right to appeal without entering into the merits, and on the merits the church-wardens had no interest in the lands or revenues. Dumoulin v. Langtry, xiii., 258.

312. Leave to appeal per saltum—Divisional Court judgment—Special circumstances—Decision of Court of Appeal on abstract question involved—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 26.—It is not a sufficient ground for allowing an appeal direct from the decision of the trial judge on further consideration or of a Divisional Court of the High Court of Justice of Ontario, that the Court of Appeal of that province had already, in a similar case before it, given a decision on the abstract question of law involved in the case in which the appeal was sought, though it might be sufficient if such decision had been given on the same state of facts and the same evidence. Kyle v. The Canada Co.; Hislop v. Town of McGillivray, xv., 188.

313. Appeal direct from trial court—Leave granted by registrar—Practice—Special circumstances.—Leave to appeal per saltum directly from a decision of the Chancellor of Ontario, was granted where it appeared that the Court of Appeal had already given a decision upon the merits by its order on an application for injunction in the case. Attorney-General v. Vaughan Road Co., xxi., 631; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 37.

314. Jurisdiction—Leave to appeal—Privy Council rule—Appeal in formâ pauperis.—The Supreme Court, or a judge thereof, has no power to allow an appeal in formâ pauperis, or to dispense with the giving of the security required by the statute.—Approving of the security is a mode of allowing leave to appeal.—Section 24, Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, does not give the court power to allow leave to appeal, because Her Majesty may be recommended to do so by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, nor is it in the power of the judges of the court to make rules or orders for the allowance of leave to appeal; nor does s. 79, Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, give the court or a judge any power to grant or to make rules for granting the prayer of a petition to be allowed to have or prosecute an appeal in formâ pauperis.—Fournier, J., in chambers; Richards, C. J., in chambers. Fraser v. Abbott, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 695; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 63, 68.

315. Security for costs of appeal allowed to be given by judge of Supreme Court under s. 31, Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, as amended by s. 14 Supreme Court Amendment Act, 1879—Vacation.—On 27th June, 1881, judgment was rendered overruling demurrers, and on verdict previously rendered allowing plaintiff to enter judgment for $5,000. On 4th July defendants' solicitor served notice of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada on plaintiff's solicitor and of intention to apply next day for allowance of security. On 5th July, the C. J. of B. C. refused leave to appeal, on the ground that the judgment on the demurrers was the judgment of the full court, but that on verdict was his own judgment from which no appeal would lie until re-heard before the full court, and that under the Administration of Justice Act, 1881, a full court could not be held until the lapse of about a year from that date. Defendants' solicitor then and several times afterwards tendered to the C. J. and to the registrar of that court, $6,500, $6,000 having been asked by plaintiff's solicitor as security under Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 32, s. 5, and $500 as security for the costs of appeal, but the C. J. refused to allow it to be paid into court.—On 11th July, 1881, the C. J. of B. C. ordered that upon paying to plaintiff $1,000 and his taxed costs, execution should be stayed and defendants have leave within 4 days after next sitting of full court to move such court for a re-hearing of the argument on the demurrers, and to move for a new trial, or to enter judgment for defendants.—On 23rd August, 1881, defendants applied to Strong, J., in chambers for leave to give security. The application was refused because made in vacation and not on notice.—On 13th September following, defendants renewed the application to a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada.—An order was made allowing defendants to pay into the Supreme Court of Canada $500 as security for the costs of appeal, notwithstanding the expiration of the time limited for appealing. Bank of B. N. A. v. Walker, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 670, 697.

316. Appeal per saltum—Supreme Court Amendment Act, 1879, s. 6—Costs.—On application for leave to appeal direct from the judgment of Begbie, C.J., without intermediate appeal, the affidavit set out that in British Columbia, the court of final resort consisted of five judges, two of whom had been previously engaged as counsel in the cause, and refused to adjudicate; that another judge was absent and it was uncertain, if he ever would resume judicial functions; that a new Administration of Justice Act, 1881, had recently come into operation, but no rules had been made thereunder and s. 28 of said Act required three judges to constitute a quorum of the full court to be held only once in each year.—Fournier, J., in chambers, referred the application to the full court. Held, that the circumstances disclosed did not warrant the court in granting the application. Motion refused with $20 costs. Sewell v. British Columbia Towing Co., Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 670; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 36.

317. Appeal per saltum—Expiration of time limit.—An appeal from the court of original jurisdiction may be allowed by the Supreme Court or a judge thereof, under the sixth section of the Supreme Court Act, 1879, although the judgment appealed from has been pronounced, entered, or signed more than thirty days before the date of the application. Bank of British North America v. Walker, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 670.

318. Direct appeal from court of original jurisdiction—Supreme Court Act (1879), s. 6.—Under special circumstances shewn leave to appeal per saltum was granted. Bank of British North America v. Walker, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 671; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 35.

319. Leave to appeal—Constitutional law—Security—Ontario Judicature Act (1881), s. 43.—Where the Court of Appeal for Ontario, under s. 43 Ontario Judicature Act, 1881, refused leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, the matter in controversy being under $1,000. Held, that the appellant should be permitted to pay $500 into the Supreme Court as security for the costs of the appeal. [The court expressed great doubts as to the constitutionality of the section mentioned.] Forristal v. McDonald, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 422.

320. Jurisdiction—42 Vict. c. 39, s. 8—Practice—Motion to rescind order of a provincial judge—Opposition to seizure—Amount in controversy.—In execution of a judgment for $723, defendants' land and building were seized. Opposition was filed on the ground that the will, under which they held, prohibited alienation of the property. The Superior Court dismissed plaintiff's contestation, and maintained the opposition, holding the prohibition to alienate legal and valid, and quashed the seizure. In the Queen's Bench an appeal was dismissed.—Application in chambers for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court was refused, on the ground that an appeal would not lie under 42 Vict. c. 39, s. 8 (D.). (9 Q. L. R. 262).—On motion in the Supreme Court, asking leave to appeal: Held, that the Supreme Court had no jurisdiction to grant the motion, even if there was a right to appeal in such a case.—Motion refused with costs fixed at $25. Bourget v. Blanchard, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 423; Cass. Prac. (2 ed.) 40.

[NOTE.—Compare Champoux v. Lapierre, No. 47, ante, and Martin v. Mills (12 Q. L. R. 98.)]

321. Appealing direct from trial court—Time limit.]—Per Ritchie, C.J., in chambers.—Semble, an application to the Supreme Court or a judge thereof, to be allowed to give security under Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 31, as amended by Supreme Courts Amendment Act, 1879 s. 14 should be within the time limited by the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 25, or further time allowed by a judge of the court below under Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 26. Walmesley v. Griffiths, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 670; Cass. Prac. (2 ed.) 69.

322. Application for leave—Security—Effect of allowance—Rescinding order—Evocation to Supreme Court of Canada—Discretion in court below—Expiration of time.]—Improving of security is a means of granting leave to appeal.—When a judge of the court below has made an order allowing the security, he is functus officio, and the appeal is then subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. No application can be made to the judge or the full court below to rescind the order. Any application must be thereafter made to the Supreme Court or a judge thereof. (Chambers.)—Appellant had applied to a judge of the Court of Appeal (Ont.), under Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 26 for further time to appeal; the judge refused the application. Appellant then applied to Ritchie, C.J., in chambers for leave to give security under Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 31, as amended by s. 14 in 1879.—The Chief Justice was of opinion that the parties having applied to a judge of the court below, who was familiar with and had considered all the facts, the decision of such judge ought not to be interfered with, even if a judge of the Supreme Court were not bound as to time by Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 25. He was inclined to hold, however, that an application to the Supreme Court, or a judge thereof, for leave to give security pursuant to Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 31, as amended, should be made within the time limited by s. 25, or such further time as a judge of the court below may have allowed under s. 26.—Applications dismissed with costs. Walmesley v. Griffiths, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 670, 697, 699; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 60, 63.

323. Allowance of security—Leave to appeal—Stay of proceedings in court below—Costs.]—The Supreme Court allowed an appeal from a judgment of the Court of Appeal directing a reference which had been partly proceeded with after the allowance of the security.—The solicitor for the appellant desired the registrar to insert a provision in the order in appeal of the Supreme Court specially "including the costs of and attending the reference." The registrar referred the point to the Chief Justice in chambers and His Lordship stated his opinion to be that the Supreme Court could not recognize any proceedings taken in the court below after the allowance of the security, which acted as a stay of all proceedings, except of execution in cases provided for by Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 32. If proceedings had been taken in the court below which should not have been taken, application should be made to that court with reference to such proceedings. The order of the Supreme Court should provide generally for the payment of all costs incurred by the appellant. Starrs v. Cosgrave Brewing and Malting Co., Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 697; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 63, 69.

324. Special leave—Per saltum.]—On motion for leave to appeal direct from a decision of the Divisional Court (Ontario), it appeared that the action was brought to replevy from appellant the books which he held as clerk of the corporation, he having been dismissed from the office. He refused to give up the books, on the ground that his dismissal was illegal. Judgment was given for the corporation at the trial, and affirmed by the Divisional Court, and an application for special leave to appeal was refused by the Court of Appeal for Ontario.—The motion was first made to the registrar of the Supreme Court, in chambers, for leave to appeal per saltum and was dismissed. An appeal from this order to a judge in chambers was dismissed, and a further appeal was taken to the full court.—The court held that appellant had failed to shew sufficient cause to justify the order asked for. Bartram v. Village of London West, xxiv., 705.

325. Special leave—60 & 61 Vict. (D) c. 34, s. 1 (e)—Benevolent society—Certificate of insurance.]—An action in which less than the sum or value of one thousand dollars is in controversy, and wherein the decision involves questions as to the construction of the conditions indorsed upon a benevolent society's certificate of insurance, and as to the application of the statute securing the benefit of life insurance to wives and children to such certificates, is not a matter of such public importance as would justify an order by the court granting special leave to appeal under the provisions of s.-s. (e) of the first section of the statute 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34. Fisher v. Fisher, xxviii., 494.

326. Appeals from Exchequer Court—Amount of controversy less than $500—Discretion of judge in chambers—Special leave.]—Where the amount involved is under $500, leave to appeal from the judgment of the Exchequer Court of Canada ought not to be granted unless it appears to the judge of the Supreme Court, to whom the application is made, that the judgment of the court below is clearly erroneous, or might be reversed on a point of law or because the conclusions are not warranted by the evidence. Per Gwynne, J. (in chambers), 6th May, 1899. Schultz v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. (note) 273.

327. Exchequer Court—Order after lodging of appeal to Supreme Court of Canada—Jurisdiction of court below.]—After an appeal from the final judgment of the Exchequer Court was lodged in the Supreme Court, the Crown obtained leave to appeal from an order of reference to ascertain the amount of the suppliant's damages. Held, that the judge of the Exchequer Court had authority to allow the appeal and it was properly before the Supreme Court. The Queen v. Woodburn, xxix., 112.

328. Jurisdiction—Special leave—R. S. C. c. 135, ss. 40, 42—Form of application and order.—In an order granting special leave to appeal under s. 42, Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, after the expiration of the time limited by s. 40, it is not necessary to set out the special circumstances under which such leave to appeal has been granted nor to state that such leave was granted under special circumstances. Bank of Montreal v. Demers, xxix., 435.

329. Divisional Court judgment — Appeal direct—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 26, s.-s. 3—Appeal from order in chambers.—Held, per Strong, C.J. and Gwynne, J., (Taschereau and Sedgewick, J.J. contra), that under s. 26, s.-s. 3, of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, leave to appeal direct from a judgment of a divisional court of the High Court of Justice for Ontario may be granted in cases where there is no right of appeal to the Court of Appeal. Parquharson v. Imperial Oil Co., xxx., 188.

330. Practice — Appeal per saltum—Divisional Court judgment — 62 Vict. (2) c. 11, s. 27 (Ont.)—Constitutional question—Indian lands—Legislative jurisdiction—Costs.—Per Girouard, J. (in chambers).—Under the provisions of s. 26, s.-s. 3 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, leave to appeal direct from the final judgment of a divisional court of the High Court of Justice for Ontario may be granted in cases where there is a right of appeal to the Court of Appeal for Ontario, and the fact that an important question of constitutional law is involved and that neither party would be satisfied with the judgment of the Court of Appeal, is sufficient ground for granting such leave. Ontario Mining Co. v. Seybold, xxxi., 125. (See [1903] A. C. 73.)

331. Appeal per saltum—Jurisdiction—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 26 (3).—Leave to appeal direct to the Supreme Court from a judgment of a divisional court of the High Court of Justice under s. 26, s.-s. 3 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, cannot be granted unless it is clear that there is a right of appeal from such judgment to the Court of Appeal for Ontario. Ottawa Electric Co. v. Brennan, xxxi., 311.

332. Ontario appeals — Special leave — 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, s. 1 (e).—Special leave to appeal from a judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario under 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, s. 1 (e) will not be granted where the questions involved are not of public importance and the judgment of the Court of Appeal appears to be well founded. Royal Templars of Temperance v. Hargrove, xxxi., 385.

333. Special leave to appeal — Matter in controversy — Special reasons against judgment in court below — Railways — Overhead bridge — Car of foreign company — “Used on railway” — 51 Vict. c. 29, s. 192 (D.).—In affirming a judgment for $500 damages, the Court of Appeal for Ontario, (1 Ont. L. R. 168) held that “when a car of a foreign railway company forms part of a train of a Canadian railway company, it is “used” by the latter company within the meaning of s. 192 of the Railway Act, 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.), so as to make the company liable in damages for the death of a brakeman caused by the car being so high as not to leave the prescribed headway between it and an overhead bridge.” On special application for leave to appeal from this judgment it was urged that the car had been taken over from an American line to which the Act limiting height of cars in the Dominion could not apply, that the company was by statute obliged to accept and haul the car, that in hauling the car the company could not, at most, be subject to any other than the penalty prescribed by statute, and that, in any case, deceased was insured against accidents in the company's association and his representatives could claim no more than $250 for which he was insured. The application was refused on the ground that a sufficient prima facie case for granting special leave for an appeal had not been made out. (Present: Taschereau, Gwynne, Sedgewick, King and Girouard, J.J.) Grand Trunk Ry. Co. v. Atchison, 5th March, 1901.

334. Special leave for appeal—Rule as to new trials.—On special application for leave to appeal from a judgment (1 Ont. L. R. 224) affirming the trial court judgment awarding less than $1,000 damages, it was urged that the courts below had erred in adhering to rules laid down years ago in respect to granting nonsuits, with which the later English decisions do not accord. The application was refused by the Supreme Court, without calling upon respondent's counsel. Grand Trunk Ry. Co. v. Vallee, 18th March, 1901.

335. Special leave — Application refused by court below.—The Supreme Court will not entertain an application for special leave to appeal under the above Act after a similar application has been made to the Court of Appeal and leave has been refused. Town of Aurora v. Village of Markham, xxxii., 457.

336. Special leave to appeal — Jurisdiction — R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24—“Judge of court appealed from” — Construction of statute.—A judge of the Supreme Court of British Columbia may grant special leave for an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada although he did not sit as a member constituting the full court which rendered the judgment appealed from. Oppenheimer v. Brackman & Ker Milling Co., xxxii., 699.

337. Appeal — Special leave — 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34 (e) — Error in judgment — Concurrent jurisdiction — Procedure.—Special leave to appeal from a judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, under sub-section (e) of 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, will not be granted on the ground merely that there is error in such judgment.—Such leave will not be granted when it is certain that a similar application to the Court of Appeal would be refused.—The Ontario courts have held that a person acquitted on a criminal charge can only obtain a copy of the record on the fiat of the Attorney-General. S. having been refused such fiat applied for a writ of mandamus which the Divisional Court granted and its judgment was affirmed by the Court of Appeal.—Held, that the mandamus having been granted the public interest did not require special leave to be given for an appeal from the judgment of the Court of Appeal though it might have had the writ been refused.—The question raised by the proposed appeal is, if not one of practice, a question of the control of provincial courts over their own records and officers with which the Supreme Court should not interfere. Attorney-General of Ontario v. Scully, xxxiii., 16.

337a. Appeal per saltum—Jurisdiction of Yukon Territorial judges—Extension of time for appealing—Sup. & Ex. Courts Act, s. 42.—A judge of the court appealed from has no jurisdiction to extend the time for appealing per saltum to the Supreme Court of Canada. After the expiration of sixty days from the signing, entry or pronouncing of judgment, leave to appeal per saltum to the Supreme Court of Canada cannot be granted. Barrett v. Le Syndicat Lyonnais Du Klondyke, 24th August, 1903; xxxiii., 667.

20. LEGISLATIVE JURISDICTION.

340. Appeal to Supreme Court of Canada—Constitutional law—42 Vict. c. 39, s. 6 (D.)—Per Taschereau, J.—The provision for an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada by s. 6 of c. 39 of the statutes of Canada, 42 Vict., is ultra vires of the Parliament of Canada. Grand Trunk Ry. Co. v. Credit Valley Ry. Co. et al. Doutre, Constitution of Canada, p. 337.

341. Legislative jurisdiction—Ont. Judicature Act, 1881, s. 43—Appeal to Supreme Court—Limitation imposed by provincial Act.—The 43rd section Ont. Jud. Act, 1881, providing that where the amount in controversy is under $1,000, no appeal shall lie from the decision of the Court of Appeal for Ontario to the Supreme Court of Canada, except by leave of a judge of the former court, is ultra vires of the Legislature of Ontario and not binding in the Supreme Court.—(Remarks on an order granting such leave on appellant undertaking to ask no costs of appeal.) Clarkson v. Ryan, xvii., 251.

342. Municipal assessment—Rating in City of St. John, N. B.—Provisions against appeals—52 Vict. c. 27 (N. B.)—The provisions of the assessment law of the City of St. John, N. B., taking away the right of appeal from a rating by the assessors made upon neglect to furnish a statement in the statutory form given in 52 Vict. c. 27 (N. B.) only applies to appeals against over-valuation under C. S. N. B. c. 100, s. 60, and not to an appeal against the right to make any assessment whatever.—Per Gwynne, J. The St. John City Assessment law does not apply to railways. Timmerman v. City of St. John, xxi., 691.

343. Jurisdiction—Constitutional law—Legislative powers—Appeals from the Court of Review—54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, s. 3 (D.)—B. N. A. Act, 1867, s. 101—Illegal consideration of contract—Lottery—Correlative agreements.—The power of the Parliament of Canada under s. 101 of the British North America Act, 1867, respecting a general Court of Appeal for Canada is not restricted to the establishment of a court for the administration of laws of Canada and, consequently, there was constitutional authority to enact the provisions of the third section of the Dominion statute, 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, authorizing appeals from the Superior Court, sitting in review, in the Province of Quebec.—On the merits, this appeal was allowed with costs, Girouard, J., dissenting, the decision in L'Association St. Jean-Baptiste de Montréal v. Brault (30 Can. S. C. R. 598), respecting lotteries and contracts for illegal consideration, being followed. L'Association St. Jean-Baptiste de Montréal v. Brault, xxxi., 172.

21 MANDAMUS.

344. Writ of mandamus—Return—Demurrer.—On an appeal from an order of the Supreme Court (N. S.) quashing, on demurrer, a return to a writ of mandamus, and ordering a peremptory writ to issue, the objection was taken that under the practice in Nova Scotia a demurrer would not lie to a return to a writ of mandamus.—Held, that this objection must be overruled and the appeal heard on its merits. Dartmouth v. The Queen, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 515.

(See ASSESSMENTS AND TAXES, No. 62.)

22. NEW GROUNDS TAKEN ON APPEAL.

345. Plans filed on appeal—Documents not produced at trial—Evidence.—Documents which have not been proved nor produced at the trial cannot be relied on or made part of the case in appeal. Montreal Loan & Mortgage Co. v. Fauteux, iii., 411; Lionais v. Molsons Bank, x., 526.

346. Pleadings—Point not urged in court below.—A plea of justification under statute which has not been pleaded in the courts below, cannot be added on appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. South-West Boom Co. v. McMillan, iii., 700.

347. Benefit society—Expulsion of member—Prior notice—Mandamus—Pleading.—L. was expelled from membership in an incorporated benefit society, for default to pay six months' contributions. The society's by-law 20, s. 5, provided that "When a member shall have neglected during six months to pay his contributions . . . the society may erase his name from the list of members, and he shall then no longer form part of the society; for that purpose, at every general and regular meeting, it is the duty of the collector-treasurers to make known the names of those who are indebted in six months' contributions . . . and then any one may move that such members be struck off from the list of members of the society." L. applied for a writ of mandamus, enjoining the society to reinstate him in his rights and privileges as a member on the grounds, that he had not been put en demeure in any way; that no notice had been given him of the amount of his indebtedness; that many other members were in arrear for similar periods, and distinction could not be made amongst those in arrears, and that no motion was made at any regular meeting.—The Court of Queen's Bench held that he should have had "prior notice" of the proceedings for expulsion. On appeal, Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that as L. did not plead the want of "prior notice," or make it a part of his case in the court below, he could not do so in appeal.—Per Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ. A member of that society, who admits that he is in arrear for six months' contributions, is not entitled to "prior notice" before he can be expelled for non-payment of dues. Union St. Joseph de Montréal v. Lapicrre, iv., 164.

348. Setting aside award—Practice in Nova Scotia—Specified objections—New ground taken on appeal.—In Nova Scotia, where the rule nisi to set aside an award specifies certain grounds of objection, and no new grounds are added by way of amendment in the court below, no other ground of objection to the award can be raised on appeal. Oakes v. City of Halifax, iv., 640.

349. Practice—Technical objection first taken on appeal—Form of bail bond.—A technical objection to the form of a bail bond cannot be taken for the first time on an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. Woodworth v. Dickie, xiv., 734.

350. Practice—Evidence—Document not proved at trial—Case on appeal.—A document not proved at the trial but relied on in the Court of Queen's Bench for the first time cannot be relied on or made part of the case in appeal. Montreal Loan & M. Co. v. Fauteux (3 Can. S. C. R. 433), and Lionais v. Molsons Bank (10 Can. S. C. R. 527), followed. Exchange Bank of Canada v. Gilman, xvii., 108.

351. Objection first taken on appeal—Practice—Parties.—An objection taken for the first time on appeal to the Supreme Court, that the legal representatives of the assured were not made parties to the cause comes too late. Venner v. Sun Life Ins. Co., xvii., 394.

352. Practice—Privy Council rule—Technical objection first taken on appeal.—Technical objection not taken in the court below, cannot be allowed to prevail in appeal, following the rule of the Privy Council.—Per Taschereau, J., Fuller v. Ames, 10th June, 1880. Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 140; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 144.

353. Pleadings—Objection first raised on appeal.—An objection to the sufficiency of the traverse to a declaration will not be entertained when taken for the first time on appeal, the issue having been tried on the assumption that the traverse was sufficient. Mylus v. Jackson, xxiii., 485.

354. Judge's notes—Additions after notice of appeal.—Per Taschereau, J. Where a court had pronounced judgment in a cause before it, and after proceedings in appeal had been instituted certain of the judges filed documents with the prothonotary purporting to be additions to their respective opinions in the case, such documents were improperly allowed to form part of the case on appeal and could not be considered by the appellate court. Mayhew v. Stone, xxvi., 58.

355. Technical grounds—Surprise.—An appellate court will not give effect to mere technical grounds of appeal, against the merits, and where there has been no surprise or disadvantage to the appellant. Gorman v. Dixon, xxvi., 87.

356. Objections first taken on appeal—Written instrument—Objection to validity.—

Where the issues have been joined in a suit and judgment rendered upon pleadings admitting and relying upon a written instrument, an objection to the validity of the instrument taken for the first time on an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada comes too late and cannot be entertained. The Queen v. Poirier, xxx., 36.

357. Assessments for local improvements—Widening streets—Trivial objection taken for first time on appeal.—Where an assessment roll covering a valuation of over a half a million dollars has been, after contestation, duly confirmed, a ratepayer cannot be permitted to raise the objection, upon an application to quash the roll, that his property was assessed for a comparatively trivial amount over its proper value, when he had failed to urge that objection before the Board of Revisors. City of Montreal v. Belonger, xxx., 574.

358. New points on appeal—Objection to jurisdiction—Want of jurisdiction in court below.—Questions of law appearing upon the record but not raised in the courts below may be relied upon for the first time on an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada where no evidence in rebuttal could have been brought to affect them had they been taken at the trial. Gray v. Richford (2 Can. S. C. R. 431); and Scott v. Phoenix Assurance Co. (Stu. K. B. 354), followed. McKelvey v. Le Roi Mining Co., xxxii., 664.

23. NEW TRIALS.

366. Verdict against weight of evidence—Order for new trial—Appeal entertained.—Where the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia ordered a new trial on the ground that no insurable interest was shewn in the plaintiff who had brought an action on a policy of insurance, the appeal was heard, notwithstanding that it was asserted from a judgment ordering a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence. Eureka Woolen Mills Co. v. Moss (11 Can. S. C. R. 91), distinguished. Howard v. Lancashire Insurance Co., xi., 92.

367. Practice—Amendment of case—Application after judgment.—When a new trial was ordered by the Supreme Court for misdirection in not submitting a question to the jury, the plaintiff applied to vary or reverse the judgment on affidavits shewing that the question had actually been submitted and answered. Held, that the application was too late, as the court had to determine the appeal on the case transmitted, and the plaintiff had allowed the appeal to be argued and judgment rendered without taking any steps to have the case amended. Providence Washington Ins. Co. v. Gerow, xiv., 731.

368. Question of law — Discretion—Order for new trial—Jurisdiction—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24 (d)—Costs.—Defendant, against whom a verdict had passed, moved for a new trial before the Divisional Court on grounds of misdirection, surprise and the discovery of further evidence, and the motion was granted for misdirection (15 O. R. 544). Plaintiff appealed and the Court of Appeal held that there was no misdirection, but that the order of the Divisional Court directing the case to be submitted to another jury should not be interfered with, the circumstances of the case being peculiar. Held, that as the judgment of the Court of Appeal did not proceed upon the ground that the trial judge had not ruled according to law no appeal would lie to the Supreme Court of Canada from its decision.—In the factum of respondents no objection was made to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, but it was urged that the appeal should not be entertained and that the court should not interfere with the discretion in favour of a new trial exercised by the two lower courts, the circumstances, it was contended, being stronger than those in the Eureka Woolen Mills Co. v. Moss (11 Can. S. C. R. 91).—As the appeal was quashed for want of jurisdiction the costs imposed were only costs of a motion to quash. O'Sullivan v. Lake, xvi., 636.

369. Jurisdiction—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 41—Judgment on motion for nonsuit or new trial—Notice of appeal—Extension of time—Application after time has expired.—The Supreme Court of Canada has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal "from a judgment on a motion for a new trial on the ground that the judge has not ruled according to law," unless the notice required by s. 41 of the Supreme Court Act has been given.—An order made by a judge of the court appealed from giving the defendants "leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada leaving it to plaintiffs to dispute the right of appeal in the Supreme Court," even if considered as an enlargement of the time for giving notice, will not give the court jurisdiction if no notice is given pursuant to such enlargement.—The time for giving notice under s. 41 can be extended as well after, as before the twenty days have elapsed.—Per Strong, J. In s. 42, providing that under special circumstances the court appealed from, or a judge thereof, may "allow an appeal," although the time limited therefor by previous sections has expired, the expression "allow an appeal" means only that the court or judge may settle the case and approve the security. Vaughan v. Richardson, xvii., 703.

370. Judgment on motion for new trial—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24 (d)—Jury cases.—Section 24 (d) of the Supreme Court Act, allowing an appeal "from the judgment on a motion for a new trial upon the ground that the judge has not ruled according to law," is applicable to jury cases only. Gwynne, J., dubitante. Halifax Street Railway Co. v. Joyce, xvii., 709.

[54-55 Vict. c. 25, s. 1, amended s. 24 by striking out of paragraph (d) the words "upon the ground that the judge has not ruled according to law."]

371. Jurisdiction—New trial—Excessive damages—Discretion—Costs.—Plaintiff declared on a special contract for the sale of a vessel to defendant, averring performance of all conditions necessary to entitle him to payment of the price, and assigning as a breach non-payment by defendant. The plaintiff further declared on the common counts.—Defendant pleaded non-assumpsit, non-delivery of the vessel, payment and set-off.—The cause was tried with a jury who found a verdict for plaintiff for $3,000. A rule nisi to set aside this verdict was made absolute by the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia on the ground that the damages were excessive, observing that it was unnecessary to decide whether the verdict was objectionable on other grounds.—On appeal prior to R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24 (d) as amended by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, Held, on motion to quash, Henry, J., dubitante, that the judgment ordering a new trial on the ground of excessive damages, proceeded upon matter of discretion only, and that such judgment was not appealable.—Appeal quashed with the general costs of appeal to hearing. By fiat of Taschereau, J., a counsel fee of $50 on motion was taxed. McGowan v. Mockler, 13th October, 1879; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 421; Cass. Prac. (2 ed.) 81, 82.

372. Quashing on ex parte hearing—Objection taken by court—Jurisdiction—Verdict against weight of evidence—Sections 20 & 22 Supreme Court Act—Costs.—Appeal from a judgment of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, making absolute a rule to set aside a verdict for the defendants, and for a new trial, on the several grounds of improper reception of evidence, misdirection, and because the verdict was against the weight of evidence. Held, that the court below having proceeded as well on the ground that the verdict was against the preponderance of the evidence, as on the law, the appeal came within s. 22 of the Supreme Court Act, and would not lie.—Appeal quashed for want of jurisdiction, but without costs, the appeal having been heard ex parte, the respondent not appearing. Domville v. Cameron, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 421; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 81.

373. Failure to take cross-appeal—Partial relief—Nonsuit—New trial—Appeal dismissed.—Where the court below discharged a rule for nonsuit but ordered a new trial on motion against a verdict for plaintiff, defendant appealed but plaintiff did not ask relief by cross-appeal. Held, that although the evidence entitled plaintiff to hold his verdict, yet, not having appealed from the order for a new trial, that rule should be affirmed and the appeal dismissed with costs. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. v. Lawson, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 729.

374. Jurisdiction—Criminal law—Criminal Code, 1892, ss. 742-750—New trial—Statute, construction of—55 & 56 Vict. c. 29, s. 742.—An appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada does not lie in cases where a new trial has been granted by the Court of Appeal under the provisions of the Criminal Code, 1892, ss. 742 to 750 inclusively.—The word "opinion," as used in s.-s. 2 of s. 742 of "The Criminal Code, 1892," must be construed as meaning a "decision" or "judgment" of the Court of Appeal in criminal cases. Viau v. The Queen, xxix., 90.

375. Appeal—Libel—Question of privilege—Proof of malice—Improper admission of evidence—Misdirection—Power to grant new trial on appeal—N. S. Judicature Act. O. 57, R. 5; O. 38, R. 10.—Where the defendant asked only for a new trial in the court appealed from the Supreme Court of Canada cannot order judgment to be entered for him on the appeal. *Green v. 24. NON PROS. JUDGMENT.

378. Appeal—Dismissal for want of appearance—Application to reinstate—Notice—Practice—Costs.—The appeal had been regularly inscribed on the roll for hearing at the May sittings of the Supreme Court of Canada, and on 18th May, 1898, the case being called in the order in which it appeared upon the roll, no person appeared on behalf of the appellant. Counsel appeared for the respondent and asked that the appeal should be dismissed for want of prosecution. The court referred to the fact that the case had been called in its proper place on the roll on the previous day and allowed to stand over because counsel were not present on the part of the appellant, and the appeal was dismissed with costs.—On 20th May, 1898, application by motion was made on behalf of the appellant to have the appeal reinstated and restored to its place on the roll for hearing on such terms as the court might deem appropriate, the ground stated for requesting such indulgence being that counsel for the appellant were under a misapprehension as to the time when the hearing was to take place. The motion was opposed by counsel for the respondent, who objected that proper notice of the motion had not been given as required by the rules of practice.—The court refused to hear the motion or to make an order staying the issue of the certificate of the judgment already rendered dismissing the appeal, but, under the circumstances, the motion was dismissed without costs. Hall Mines (Limited) v. Moore, 20th May, 1898.

25. NOTICE OF APPEAL.

381. Notice of appeal — Rules of Maritime Court—R. S. C. c. 137, ss. 18, 19—Judgment of surrogate—Date of pronouncing—Entry by registrar.—Rule 269 of the Maritime Court of Ontario requires notice of appeal from a decision of that court to the Supreme Court of Canada to be given within 15 days from the pronouncing of such decision. A judgment of the Maritime Court was handed by the surrogate to the registrar, but not in open court, and was not drawn up and entered by the registrar for some time after. Held, Taschereau, J., dubitante, that notice of appeal within 15 days from the entry of such judgment was sufficient under the said rules.—Quere, Is rule 269 intra vires of the Maritime Court? Robertson v. Wigle, xv., 214.

382. Notice of appeal—Extension of time—Application after time expired.—The Supreme Court of Canada has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal "from a judgment on a motion for a new trial on the ground that the judge has not ruled according to law," unless the notice required by s. 41 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, R. S. C. c. 135, has been given.—The time for giving notice under s. 41 can be extended as well after as before the 20 days have elapsed. Laughan v. Richardson, xvii., 703.

383. Notice—Extension of time—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 41.

26. PETITION OF RIGHT.

384. Jurisdiction — Petition of right — 46 Vict. c. 27 (Que.)—The provisions of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Acts relating to appeals from the Province of Quebec, apply to cases arising under the Petition of Right Act of that Province, 46 Vict. c. 27. McGreevy v. The Queen, xiv., 735.

27. PRECEDENT.

385. Court equally divided—Binding effect of judgment.—When the Supreme Court of Canada in a case in appeal is equally divided so that the decision appealed against stands unreversed, the result of the case in the Supreme Court affects the actual parties to the litigation only and the court, when a similar case is brought before it, is not bound by the result of the previous case. Stanstead Election Case (Rider v. Snow), xx., 12.

28. PRIVY COUNCIL.

386. Appeal in forma pauperis—Leave to appeal to Privy Council—Transmission of record—Payment of Supreme Court fees.—On 7th October, 1902: Present, Sir Henry Strong, C.J., and Taschereau, Sedgewick, Girouard,

Davies, and Mills, JJ. A motion was made for an order directing the registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada to transmit the record to the registrar of His Majesty's Privy Council, on an appeal by the respondent, without the payment of the fees in stamps as required by the statute and rules of practice of the court. After hearing counsel for the parties, the motion was allowed and the order made as applied for, the Chief Justice stating that, as this was an extraordinary case in which the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council had granted special leave to appeal in forma pauperis, the ordinary rules could not apply. Dominion Cartridge Co. v. McArthur, 7th October, 1902. Leave to appeal to Privy Council in forma pauperis granted Aug. 1902

29. PROCEDURE IN COURTS BELOW.

390. Quashing appeal — Irregular security bond—Interested parties—Matter of practice in court below.—Where the appeal bond fails to inure to the benefit of parties interested in the result of the appeal, there can be no attention paid to the appeal.—A question simply of practice in the discretion of the court below will not be entertained on appeal. Scammell v. James, xvi., 593.

391. Final judgment entered after notice of appeal from interlocutory judgment — Matter of procedure — Court of Appeal — Adding of pleas — Insufficient cause shown — Stay of proceedings—Art. 1120 C. C. P.; C. S. L. C. c. 77, s. 26.—Defendant applied by motion for permission to file new pleas, which was refused by the Superior Court on account of insufficiency of the affidavit in support thereof, and, therefore, defendant served notice of intention to appeal from this interlocutory judgment to the Court of Queen's Bench. Notwithstanding this notice, plaintiff moved for and obtained judgment in the Superior Court, and this judgment was affirmed by the Court of Queen's Bench.—On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, Held, per Ritchie, C.J., and Strong and Taschereau, JJ., that on a question of procedure an appellate court should not interfere.—Per Fournier and Henry, JJ., that the affidavit filed by the appellant in support of his amended plea was insufficient, not being sufficiently positive and precise.—Per Taschereau, J. Only a rule for leave to appeal would have the effect of staying proceedings, not a mere service of a motion for leave to appeal. Appeal dismissed with costs. Dawson v. Union Bank, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 428; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 31, 85.

392. Matters of procedure — Interference with, on appeal.—Decisions of provincial courts resting upon mere questions of procedure will not be interfered with on appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada except under special circumstances. Ferrier v. Trepannier, xxiv., 86.

393. Appeal in matters of procedure — Art. 188 C. C. P.—A judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada (appeal side) held that a venditioni exponas issued by the Superior Court at Montreal, to which court the record in contestation of an opposition had been removed from the Superior Court of the District of Iberville under art. 188 C. C. P., was regular.—On an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, Held, that on a question of practice such as this the court would not interfere. Mayor of Montreal v. Brown (2 App. Cas. 184) followed. Arvin v. Merchants Bank of Canada, xxiv., 142.

394. Questions of practice — Duty of Appellate Court.—The Supreme Court of Canada will take into consideration questions of practice when they involve substantial rights, or the decision appealed from may cause grave injustice.—Part of lands seized by the sheriff had been withdrawn before sale, but on proceedings for folle enchère it was ordered that the property described in the procès-verbal of seizure should be resold, no reference being made to the part withdrawn. On appeal the Court of Queen's Bench reversed the order on the ground that it directed a resale of property which had not been sold, and further, because an apparently regular sheriff's deed of the lands actually sold had been duly registered, and had not been annulled by the order for resale, or prior to the proceedings for folle enchère.—Held, that the Court of Queen's Bench should not have set aside the order, but should have reformed it by rectifying the error. Lambe v. Armstrong, xxvii., 309.

395. Question of local practice — Inscription for proof and hearing — Peremptory list — Notice — Surprise — Artifice — Requête civile—Arts. 234, 235, 505, C. C. P. (old text) —R. of P. (S. C.) LV.—Where a grave injustice has been inflicted upon a party to a suit, the Supreme Court of Canada will interfere for the purpose of granting appropriate relief although the question involved upon the appeal may be one of local practice only. Lambe v. Armstrong (27 Can. S. C. R. 390) followed. Eastern Townships Bank v. Swan, xxix., 193.

396. Acquiescement — Estoppel — Question of costs — Practice — Motion to quash.—In order to avoid expense the Supreme Court of Canada will, when possible, quash an appeal involving a question of costs only, though there may be jurisdiction to entertain it. Schlomann v. Dowker, xxx., 323.

397. Title to land — Troubles de droit — Eviction — Legal warranty — Issues on appeal — Parties.—A party called into a petitory action to take up the fait et cause of the defendant therein, as warrantor of the title, may take up the defence for the purpose of appealing from judgments maintaining both the principal action and the action in warranty although he may have refused to do so in the court of first instance, but, should the appellate court decide that the action in warranty was unfounded, it is ipso facto ousted of jurisdiction to entertain or decide upon the merits of the principal action. Monarque v. Banque Jacques-Cartier, xxxi., 474.

398. Question of procedure — Verdict — Weight of evidence.—The Supreme Court of Canada refused to interfere with a decision of the Court of Appeal for Ontario in a matter of procedure, namely, whether a verdict of a jury was a general or special verdict. Toronto Ry. Co. v. Balfour, xxxii., 239.

399. Irregular procedure — Issues in courts below — Practice on appeal.—The Supreme Court of Canada will not, on appeal, interfere with the action of the courts below in matters of mere procedure where no injustice appears to have been suffered in consequence, although there might be irregularities in the issues as joined which brought before the trial court a demande almost different for the matter actually in controversy. Finnie v. City of Montreal, xxxii., 335.

400. Drainage — Qualification of petitioner — "Last revised assessment roll"—R. S. O. (1897) c. 226 — Costs of non-appealing party.—The judgments appealed from (1 Ont. L. R. 156, 292) reversed the trial court judgment (32 O. R. 247) and held that the "last revised assessment roll" governing the status of petitioners in proceedings under the Drainage Act, was the roll in force at the time the petition was adopted by the municipal council and referred to the engineer for report, and not the roll in force at the time that the by-law was finally passed. The contractor had been made party in the Court of Appeal for Ontario and appeared at the hearing, but did not himself appeal. The judgment appealed from held that the effect of allowing the appeal did not give him any costs on the appeal. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgments appealed from. Challoner v. The Township of Lobo, xxxii., 505.

401. Appeal—Order on matter of procedure in court below.—The Supreme Court of Canada will not entertain an appeal from an order made upon a motion in a practice matter in the appellate court below. Dueber Watch Case Co. v. Taggart, 24th April, 1900.

402. Appeal — Question of procedure in court below.—The Supreme Court of Canada refused to interfere with the decision of the provincial court on matters of procedure, but, under the special circumstances of the case, the appeal was dismissed without costs. Gibson v. Nelson, 9th December, 1902.

403. Stamps on election petition—Technical objection to form — Prête-nom.—Preliminary objections — Abandonment of proceedings — Reinstatement — Costs —Matter of procedure.

30. QUORUM OF SUPREME COURT.

405. Jurisdiction — Quorum—Judge absent at hearing — Criminal conviction — 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 49 — Unanimous judgment.—In Michaelmas term, 1877, certain questions of law reserved, which arose on the trial of the appellants, were argued before the Court of Queen's Bench for Ontario, composed of Harrison, C.J., and Wilson, J., (the third judge necessary to constitute the full court being absent), and in February, 1878, the court, composed of the same judges, affirmed the conviction.—Held, that the conviction of the Court of Queen's Bench, although affirmed by but two judges, was unanimous, and therefore not appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada. Amer v. The Queen, ii., 592.

406. Equal division in court below—Judges withholding opinions — Final judgment — Formal minutes appealed from — Evidence — Master's report.—An appellate court should not look behind the formal judgment appealed from to ascertain whether judges there withheld opinions or left the court equally divided by dissenting.—On a reference to assess damages the master is the final judge of credibility of witnesses and his report should not be interfered with on appeal because irrelevant evidence, not likely to affect his judgment, may have been admitted, especially where there has been no appeal from his ruling as to the reception of such evidence. Booth v. Ratté, xxi., 637.

407. Disqualification of judge — Quorum in such case — Resignation of judge — Re-hearing of appeal.

See QUORUM, 1.

31. QUO WARRANTO.

408. Writ of quo warranto — Appeal from Queen's Bench — Jurisdiction.—An appeal from a decision of the Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada, (M. L. R. 2 Q. B. 482) was quashed on motion for want of jurisdiction, the proceedings being by quo warranto as to which there is no appeal by the statute. Walsh v. Heffernan, xiv., 738.

32. RIGHT OF APPEAL.

409. Quashing appeal — Irregular security bond — Interested parties — Matter of practice in court below.—Where the appeal bond fails to inure to the benefit of parties interested in the result of the appeal, there can be no attention paid to the appeal.—A question simply of practice in the discretion of the court below will not be entertained on appeal. Scammell v. James, xvi., 593.

410. Appeals from Exchequer Court — 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, s. 51—53 Vict. c. 35—Jurisdiction.—Quare. A question was raised as to whether an appeal to the Supreme Court would lie under s. 51 of c. 16, 50 & 51 Vict, as originally enacted. (But see 53 Vict. c. 35 which amended that section.) Carter, Macey & Co. v. The Queen. Audette Ex. Ct. Prac. p. 115.

411. Right of appeal — Acquiescence — Abandonment of appeal.—The constitutionality of 36 Vict. c. 81 (Que.) being raised by defendant the Attorney-General of Quebec intervened. The judgment of the Superior Court maintained the action and intervention. Defendant abandoned an appeal from the judgment on the intervention. On appeal from the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench on the principal action, defendant claimed he should have the judgment of the Superior Court on the intervention reviewed.—Held, that the appeal to the Court of Queen's Bench from the judgment of the Superior Court on the intervention having been abandoned the judgment on the intervention of the Attorney-General could not be the subject of an appeal to this court. Ball v. McCaffrey, xx., 319.

412. Acquiescence in judgment — Attorney at litem — Right of appeal — Estoppel.—By a judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench defendant was ordered to deliver up a number of its shares upon payment of a certain sum. Before the time for appealing expired the attorney ad litem for defendant delivered the shares to plaintiff's attorney and stated he would not appeal if the society were paid the amount directed to be paid. An appeal was subsequently taken before plaintiff's attorney complied with the terms of the offer. On motion to quash the appeal on the ground of acquiescence in the judgment, Held, that the appeal would lie.—Per Taschereau, J. An attorney ad litem has no authority to bind his client not to appeal by an agreement with the opposing attorney that no appeal would be taken. Société Canadienne-Française de Construction de Montréal v. Daveluy, xx., 449.

413. Appeal — Collocation and distribution — Arts. 761, 20 & 144 C. C. P.—Action to annul deed — Parties in interest — Incidental proceedings.—The appeal from judgments of distribution under art. 761 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not restricted to the parties to the suit, but extends to every person having an interest in the distribution of the moneys levied under the execution.—The provision of art. 144 of the Code of Civil Procedure that every fact of which the existence or truth is not expressly denied or declared to be unknown by the pleadings filed shall be held to be admitted, applies to incidental proceedings upon an appeal in the Court of Queen's Bench. Guerin v. Gosselin, xxvii., 514.

414. Acquiescence in judgment — Reception of costs by appellant — Loss of right to appeal.—The judgment appealed from gave certain costs to appellant which were taxed and paid to him out of moneys in court to the credit of the cause. A motion to quash was made on the ground that by accepting these costs the appellant had acquiesced in the judgment appealed from by taking a benefit thereunder. Held, that the reception of the costs in question was in no way inconsistent with the appeal against the construction the judgment had placed upon the will in dispute. In re Ferguson, Turner v. Bennett, Turner v. Carson, xxviii., 38.

415. Right in Ontario cases — 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34 — Application to pending cases.—The Act 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, which restricts the right of appeal to the Supreme Court in cases from Ontario as therein specified, does not apply to a case in which the action was pending when the Act came into force although the judgment directly appealed from may not have been pronounced until afterwards. Hyde v. Lindsay, xxix., 99.

416. Controverted election — Trial of petition — Extension of time — Appeal — Jurisdiction.—On 25th May, 1901, an order was made by Mr. Justice Belanger for the trial of the petition against the appellant's return s. c. D.—5 as a member of the House of Commons for Beauharnois thirty days after judgment should be given by the Supreme Court on an appeal then pending from the decision on preliminary objections to the petition. Such judgment was given on 29th October and on 19th November, on application of the petitioner for instructions, another order was made by the said judge which decided that juridical days only should be counted in computing the said thirty days, stating that such was the meaning of the order of 25th May, and that 6th December would be the date of trial. On the petition coming on for trial on 6th December appellant moved for peremption on the ground that the six months' limit for hearing had expired. The motion was refused and on the merits the election was declared void. On appeal to the Supreme Court, Held, Davies, J., dissenting, that an appeal would not lie from the order of 19th November; that the judge had power to make such order, and its effect was to extend the time for trial to 6th December, and the order for peremption was, therefore, rightly refused. Beauharnois Election Case, xxxii., 111.

417. Appeal — Controverted election—Judgment dismissing petition.—An appeal does not lie to the Supreme Court of Canada from a judgment dismissing an election petition for want of prosecution within the six months prescribed by s. 32 of The Dominion Controverted Elections Act (R. S. C. c. 9). Riche-lieu Election Case, xxxii., 118.

418. Jurisdiction — Amount in controversy — Interest before action — 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, s. 1 (c).—A judgment for $1,000 damages with interest from a date before action brought is appealable under 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, s. 1 (c). Canadian Railway Accident Ins. Co. v. McNevin, xxxii., 194.

419. Ontario appeals — Application for leave to appeal refused by provincial court — 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34 (D).—Quashing by-law—Appeal de plano — Special leave.—The appeals to the Supreme Court from judgments of the Court of Appeal for Ontario are exclusively governed by the provisions of 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34 (D.) and no appeal lies as of right unless given by that Act. Town of Aurora v. Village of Markham, xxxii., 457.

420. Appeal from Court of Review—Judgment of trial court varied — Construction of statute.

See No. 289, ante.

421. Jurisdiction — Matter in controversy—Right of appeal — Personal condemnation — Action possessoire.

See No. 96, ante.

33. STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.

422. Privy Council — Cross-appeal — Stay of proceedings — Practice — Costs.—Where the respondent has taken an appeal, from the same judgment as is complained of in the appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, to the Judicial Committee of Her Majesty's Privy Council, the hearing of the appeal to the Supreme Court will be stayed until the Privy Council appeal has been decided, upon the respondent undertaking to proceed with diligence in the appeal so taken by him.—In the case in question the costs were ordered to be costs in the cause. Eddy v. Eddy, 4th October, 1898.

423. Inscription pending appeal to Privy Council — Stay of proceedings — Costs.—Where an appeal had been inscribed for hearing in the Supreme Court of Canada after notice of an appeal in the same matter by the respondent to the Privy Council, upon motion on behalf of the respondent the proceedings in the Supreme Court were stayed with costs against the appellant pending the decision of the Privy Council upon the respondent's appeal. (Eddy v. Eddy [No. 422, ante] followed.) Bank of Montreal v. Demers, xxix., 435.

424. Election appeal — Peremptory order for hearing — Stay of proceedings refused.

See ELECTION LAW, 67.

34. TIME FOR APPEALING.

425. Time for appealing — Delay in settling minutes — Vacation — Formal entry of judgment — Special rule for Quebec cases.—Where any substantial matter remains to be determined on the settlement of the minutes, the time for appealing to the Supreme Court of Canada will run from the entry of the judgment, otherwise it will run from the date on which the judgment is pronounced.—In the Province of Quebec the time runs in every case from the pronouncing of the judgment. O'Sullivan v. Harty, xiii., 431.

426. Time for appealing — Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 25 — Pronouncing of judgment.—Where the Court of Appeal for Ontario reversed the judgment of the Vice-Chancellor in favour of the plaintiff, and dismissed the action.—Held, that in such case no substantial question could remain to be settled before the entry of the judgment, and the time for appealing to the Supreme Court of Canada would therefore run from the pronouncing of the judgment. O'Sullivan v. Harty (13 S. C. R. 431), distinguished. Walmsley v. Griffith, xiii., 434; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 63.

427. Time for appealing — Entry of judgment — Varying minutes — Settlement of substantial questions.—After the minutes were settled, they were varied upon motion by the respondents, before the full court in British Columbia, by striking out certain declarations respecting the rights of parties on both sides and also with respect to costs. Held, that there being substantial questions to be decided before the judgment could be entered, the time for appealing to the Supreme Court of Canada would run from the date of the entry of judgment. O'Sullivan v. Harty (13 Can. S. C. R. 431), followed. Martley v. Carson, xiii., 439.

428. Habeas corpus — Time for appealing — Commencement of proceedings in appeal.—On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada in matters of habeas corpus the first step is the filing of the case in appeal with the registrar.—Judgment of the Court of Appeal (12 Ont. P. R. 635) in a habeas corpus proceeding was pronounced 13th November, 1888; notice of appeal was immediately given but the case in appeal was not filed in the Supreme Court until 18th February, 1889.—Held, that the appeal was not brought within 60 days from the date on which the judgment sought to be appealed from was pronounced and there was no jurisdiction to hear it. In re Smart, xvi., 396.

429. Practice — Reference — Report of referee — Time for moving against — Notice of appeal — Cons. rules 848, 849 — Extension of time — Confirmation of report by lapse of time.—In an action by V. against a municipality for damages from injury to property by the negligent construction of a drain, a reference was ordered to an official referee "for inquiry and report pursuant to s. 101 of the Judicature Act and rule 552 of the High Court of Justice." The referee reported that the drain was improperly constructed, and that V. was entitled to $600 damages. The municipality appealed to the Divisional Court from the report, and the court held that the appeal was too late, no notice having been given within the time required by cons. rule 848, and refused to extend the time for appealing. A motion for judgment on the report was also made by V. to the court on which it was claimed on behalf of the municipality that the whole case should be gone into upon the evidence, which the court refused to do. Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, that the appeal not having been brought within one month from the date of the report, as required by cons. rule 848, it was too late; that the report had to be filed by the party appealing before the appeal could be brought, but the time could not be enlarged by his delay in filing it; and that the refusal to extend the time was an exercise of judicial discretion with which the Supreme Court would not interfere. Township of Colchester South v. Valad, xxiv., 622.

430. Time limit — Commencement of — Pronouncing or entry of judgment — Security — Extension of time — Order of judge — Vacation — R. S. C. c. 135, ss. 40, 42, 46.—On the trial of an action the plaintiffs obtained a verdict which the Divisional Court set aside, the Court of Appeal allowed an appeal, and restored the judgment at the trial, reducing the amount of damages by a certain specified sum.—Held, that nothing substantial remained to be settled by the minutes on entering the formal judgment of the Court of Appeal, and the time for appealing therefrom to the Supreme Court ran from the pronouncing and not from the entry of such judgment. O'Sullivan v. Harty (13 Can. S. C. R. 431); Walmsley v. Griffith (13 Can. S. C. R. 434); Martley v. Carson (13 Can. S. C. R. 439) followed.—By s. 42 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act (R. S. C. c. 135), a court proposed to be appealed from, or a judge thereof may allow an appeal after the time prescribed therefor by s. 40 has expired, but an order by the court below or a judge thereof, extending the time, will not authorize the Supreme Court or a judge thereof to accept security after the 60 days have elapsed.—The 60 days for appealing to the Supreme Court prescribed by s. 40 of the Act, is not suspended during the vacation of that court established by its rules. News Printing Co. v. Macrae, xxvi., 695.

431. Time Limit — Commencement of — Pronouncing or entry of judgment — Security — Extension of time — R. S. C. c. 135, ss. 40, 42, 46.]—On the trial of an action to set aside a chattel mortgage, the plaintiff obtained a declaration that the mortgage was void, and an order setting it aside without costs. The decision was reversed on appeal, and the action dismissed with costs, both in the Court of Appeal and in the court below, by a judgment pronounced on the 7th November, 1895. The minutes had not been settled until some days afterwards, and at the time of the settlement the draft minutes were altered by the Registrar of the Court of Appeal by refusing costs to one of the respondents, and also by changing a direction therein as to the payment over of funds on deposit abiding the decision of the suit. On an application made more than 60 days from the pronouncing of the judgment, for the approval of security under s. 46 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Acts; Held, that nothing substantial remained to be settled by the minutes so as to take the case out of the general rule that the time for appealing runs from the pronouncing of the judgment, and that the application was too late. Martin v. Sampson, xxvi., 707.

432. Arts. 1020, 1209, 1220 C. P. Q.—Expiration of time limit — Forfeiture of right—Condition precedent — Ouster of jurisdiction—Objection taken by court — Waiver.—The provisions of arts. 1020 & 1209 C. P. Q., limiting the time for inscription and prosecution of appeals to the Court of Queen's Bench, are not conditions precedent to the jurisdiction of the court to hear the appeal and they may therefore be waived by the respondent. Cimon v. The Queen (23 Can. S. C. R. 62) referred to.—[Compare Park Iron Gate Co. v. Coates (L. R. 5 C. P. 634)]. Lord v. The Queen, xxxi., 165.

433. Appeal by the Crown—Special grounds—Extension of time.—Where an application was made by the Crown for an extension of time for leave to appeal after the time prescribed by 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, s. 51, as amended by 53 Vict. c. 35, and special grounds were not disclosed in the material read on the application as reasons for such extension, the application was refused. MacLean v. The Queen, 4 Ex. C. R. 257.

Arbitration Act—Judgment on motion—Enforcing award.*—The full court in British Columbia affirmed an award in favour of the respondent for compensation for the opening of a highway through his lands by the Township of Langley under a by-law passed in June, 1896. The Supreme Court quashed the appeal for want of jurisdiction on a motion to that effect based on grounds (1) that the judgment appealed from was not one on a motion to set aside the award nor by way of appeal from the award, within R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24, s.-s. (f). (2) That no appeal could lie. (3) That the judgment merely permitted the enforcement of the award by allowing respondent's appeal from the order of a County Court judge refusing an application to enforce the award and referring the matter back to the arbitrators for further consideration and that no appeal could lie. (4) That no appeal lies to the Supreme Court of Canada from a judgment on a motion under s. 13 of R. S. B. C. 2. ARBITRATORS, APPOINTMENT AND QUALIFICATION.

5. Railways—Prohibition—Empropriation—Death of arbitrator pending award—51 Vict. c. 29, ss. 156, 157—Lapse of time for making award—Statute, construction of—Art. 12 C. C.]—In relation to expropriation for railway purposes, ss. 156 and 157 of "The Railway Act," (51 Vict. c. 29, (D.)), provide:—"156. A majority of the arbitrators at the first meeting after their appointment or the sole arbitrator, shall fix a day on or before which the award shall be made; and, if the same is not made on or before such day, or some other day to which the time for making it has been prolonged, either by consent of the parties or by resolution of the arbitrators, then the sum offered by the company as aforesaid, shall be the compensation to be paid by the company." "157. If the sole arbitrator appointed by the judge, or any arbitrator appointed by the two arbitrators dies before the award has been made, or is disqualified, or refuses or fails to act within a reasonable time, then, in the case of the sole arbitrator, the judge, upon the application of either party, and upon being satisfied by affidavit or otherwise of such death, disqualification, refusal or failure, may appoint another arbitrator in the place of such sole arbitrator; and in the case of any arbitrator appointed by one of the parties, the company and party respectively may each appoint an arbitrator in the place of its or his arbitrator so deceased, or not acting; and in the case of the third arbitrator appointed by the two arbitrators, the provisions of section one hundred and fifty-one shall apply; but no recommencement or repetition of the previous proceedings shall be required in any case." (Section 151 provides for the appointment of a third arbitrator either by the two arbitrators or by a judge.)—Held, that the provisions of s. 157 apply to a case where the arbitrator appointed by the proprietor died before the award had been made, and four days prior to the date fixed for making the same; that in such a case the proprietor was entitled to a reasonable time for appointment of an arbitrator to fill the vacancy, and to have the arbitration proceedings continued although the time so fixed had expired without any award having been made, or the time for making it prolonged. *Shannon v. 9. Disqualification of arbitrator—Occasional employment—Notary—44 Vict. c. 43 (Q.)—An award was made by a majority of arbitrators on the 1st Sept., 1883, establishing at the amount of $4,474 the indemnity to be paid to respondents for land of which they were dispossessed by appellants under 45 Vict. c. 23 (Q.). Action was taken for that sum and costs of arbitration and law costs, amounting altogether to $4,658.20, and a judgment recovered with interest and costs, which was affirmed by the Queen's Bench. The principal defence was that C., being agent of respondents, was disqualified to act as their arbitrator. Held, that the evidence shewed that C. was not in the continuous employ of respondents, but acted for them from time to time only, in his professional capacity as a notary public, and not in any other capacity, he was not disqualified. North Shore Ry. Co. v. Ursuline Ladies of Quebec, Cass. Dig (2 ed.), 36.

3. ASSESSMENT OF DAMAGES.

10. Award of official arbitrators—Past and future damages—Appeal—42 Vict. c. 8 (D.)—Review of award.—On a reference being made to the official arbitrators of certain claims made by H. against the government for damages to land arising out of the enlargement of the Lachine Canal, the arbitrators awarded $9,216 in full and final settlement of all claims. On appeal to the Exchequer Court by H., Taschereau, J., increased the amount to $15,990, including $5,600 for damages to the land from 1877 to 1884 by leakage from the canal since its enlargement, and reserved to H. the right to claim future damages from that date. Held, reversing the judgment of the Exchequer Court affirming the award of the arbitrators, that it must be taken that the arbitrators dealt with every item of H.'s claim submitted to them and included in their award all past, present and future damages, and that the evidence did not justify any increase of the amount awarded.—Gwynne, J., was of opinion that under 42 Vict. c. 8, s. 38, the Supreme Court had power (although the Crown did not appeal to the Exchequer Court) to review the award of the arbitrators, and that in this case $1,000 would be an ample compensation for any injury that the claimant's land can be said to have sustained, which upon the evidence can be attributed to the work of the enlargement of the canal. The Queen v. Hubert, xiv., 737.

11. Expropriation—I. C. Ry. Co.—Award of official arbitrators—Compensation for land—Speculative values—Appellate Court.—On appeal from a judgment of the Exchequer Court increasing the award of the official arbitrators for expropriation of land for the Intercolonial Railway. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (1 Ex. C. R. 191), and restoring the award, that to warrant an interference with an award of value necessarily largely speculative an appellate court must be satisfied beyond all reasonable doubt that some wrong principle has been acted on or something overlooked which ought to have been considered by the arbitrators, and upon the evidence in this case the court refused to interfere with the amount of compensation awarded. The Queen v. Paradis; The Queen v. Beaulieu, 1 Ex. C. R. 191.

12. Sub-contract—Part performance—Rescission—Quantum meruit—Reconsideration of award.—P. was a contractor with the government of Canada for building a post office and K. was sub-contractor to do the mason and brick work for a lump sum, the sub-contract consisting simply of an offer to give the work for the sum named and an acceptance by K. P., being dissatisfied with the work done by K., took the contract out of his hands before it was completed and finished it himself. K. brought action for the value of work done by him and on reference by the court to arbitration an award was made in K.'s favour. The Court of Appeal set aside the award and remitted the case to the arbitrator for further consideration, holding that though the contract did not authorize P. to take over the work and finish it at K.'s expense, and the latter was, therefore, entitled to recover on the quantum meruit, yet the cost of completing the work was considerably in excess of the contract price.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that as it appeared from the evidence that the arbitrator fully understood the matter and got all the information that could be obtained on the subject, and as no impropriety or mistake was shewn to have been committed by him, no benefit could result from sending the award back for reconsideration, and the decree of the Court of Appeal was not justified. Kennedy v. Pigott, xviii., 699.

13. Expropriation—R. S. Q. art. 5164, ss. 12, 16, 17, 18, 24—Award—Arbitrators' jurisdiction—Lands injuriously affected—43. & 44 Vict. c. 43 (P.Q.)—Appeal—Amount in controversy.]—On an expropriation respondent, naming his arbitrator, declared he only appointed him to watch over the arbitrator of the company, but the company recognized him officially and subsequently an award of $1,974.25 damages and costs for land expropriated was made under art. 5164, R. S. Q. The demand for expropriation as formulated in the notice to arbitrate was for the width of the track, but the award granted damages for 3 feet outside of the fences on each side as being valueless. In an action by the company to set aside the award—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (following 15 Q. L. R. 300), that the appointment of respondent's arbitrator was valid under the statute and bound both parties, and that in awarding damages for land injuriously affected on each side of the track the arbitrators had not exceeded their jurisdiction. — Strong and Taschereau, JJ., doubted if the matter in controversy was sufficient to give the court jurisdiction to hear the appeal, the award being under $2,000, but, assuming, without deciding that there was jurisdiction, they concurred in the judgment on the merits. Quebec, Montmorency & Charlevoix R. Co. v. Mathieu, xix., 426.

14. Expropriation under Railway Act—R. S. C. c. 109, s. 8, ss. 20-21—Discretion of arbitrators—Award—Inadequate compensation.]—An award in expropriation proceedings under the Railway Act, R. S. C. c. 109, where the arbitrators acted in good faith and fairness in considering the value of the property before the railway passed through it, and its value after the railway had been constructed, and the sum awarded was not so grossly and scandalously inadequate as to shock one's sense of justice, should not be interfered with. Judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 6 Q. B. 385) affirmed. Benning v. Atlantic & N. W. Ry. Co., xx., 177.

principle in the estimation of the indemnity thereby awarded. Grand Trunk Ry. Co. v. Coupal, xxviii., 531.

On the conclusion of the referee's operations one of the parties refused to accept or act upon his decision, and action was brought by the other party to have the line so established declared to be the true boundary, and to revendicate the strip of land lying upon his side of it.—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, that the agreement thus entered into was a contract binding upon the parties to be executed between them according to the terms therein expressed, and was not subject to the formalities prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure relating to arbitrations. McGoey v. Leamy, xxvii., 545.

20. Reference by Crown—Costs disallowed—Waiver of strict rights.]—A claim against the Crown, for the value of work alleged to have been done in the construction of a bridge contracted for, such value not having been included in the final certificate of the engineer, having been referred to arbitration under 31 Vict. c. 12.—Held, that the certificate of the engineer was under the contract a condition precedent to recovery, but if the Crown had intended to rely on its strict rights it should not have referred the claim to arbitration and it should, therefore, not be allowed the costs in any of the courts. The Queen v. Starrs, xvii., 118.

21. Policy of fire insurance—Condition precedent to action—Award.]—A condition in a policy of fire insurance provided that no action should be maintainable against the company for any claim thereunder until after an award obtained in the manner provided, fixing the amount of the claim. Held, that the making of such award was a condition precedent to any right of action to recover for a loss under the policy. *Guerin v. 6. COSTS.

28. Expropriation of land—Railway—Matters considered by arbitrators—Estimation of indemnity—Costs.—A railway company, having taken lands for the purposes of their railway, made an offer which was not accepted and the matter was referred to arbitration under the Cons. Railway Act, 1879. On the day that the arbitrators met the company executed an agreement for a crossing over the land, in addition to the money payment, and it appeared that the arbitrators took the matter of the crossing into consideration in making their award. The amount of the award was less than the sum offered by the company, and both parties claimed to be entitled to the costs of the arbitration, the company because the award was less than their offer, and the owner because the value of the crossing was included in the sum awarded which would make it greater than the offer. Held, affirming the Court of Appeal for Ontario, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that under the circumstances neither party was entitled to costs—Appeal dismissed with costs. (See 5 O. R. 674). Ontario & Quebec R. Co. v. Philbrick, xii., 288.

29. Reference by Crown to arbitrators—Waiver of strict rights—Disallowance of Costs.—Where the Crown intended to rely only on strict rights, it ought not to have referred a matter to arbitration and, therefore, no costs were allowed. The Queen v. Starrs, xvii., 118.

A claim for compensation for the care and maintenance of prisoners' stands, as far as the meaning to be given to the word "city" is concerned, upon the same basis as a claim for the use of the court house and gaol. 42. Expropriation—43 & 44 Vict. c. 43, s. 9 (Que.)—Award—Description of land—Procedure—Facts et articles—Order pro confessis—Art. 225, C. C. P.]—On 12th March, 1885, B. instituted an action against the company, based on an award, under 43 & 44 Vict. c. 43, s. 9, for land appropriated for the North Shore Railway. The company not having pleaded foreclosure was granted, and process for interrogatories on faits et articles was issued, returnable on 26th April; the company made default; on 18th June the faits et articles were declared taken pro confessis; on 16th May, B. consented that defendant be allowed to plead; on 7th July a plea was filed, alleging that the arbitration had been irregular and was against the weight of evidence. On 2nd September, B. inscribed for hearing on merits, on which day the company moved for leave to answer faits et articles and the motion was refused. The notice of expropriation and the award both described the land expropriated as No. 1, on the plan of the railway, but in another part of the notice it was described as part of cadastral lot 2345, and in the award as forming part of lots 2344-2345. On 5th December judgment was rendered in favour of B. for the amount of the award, but the Court of Queen's Bench reversed the judgment, holding the award bad for uncertainty and that the case should be sent back to the Superior Court to allow defendants to answer the faits et articles.—Held, (1) reversing the judgment appealed from, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that there was no uncertainty in the award as the words of the award and notice were sufficient of themselves to describe the property intended to be expropriated and which was valued by arbitrators. (2) That the motion for leave to answer faits et articles had been properly refused by the Superior Court. Beaudet v. North Shore Ry. Co., xv., 44.

[The Privy Council refused leave to appeal.]

43. Form of award—Specific finding on each of the matters in difference.]—Plaintiffs brought ejectment to recover possession of certain lands in the parish of P. After cause was at issue, under a rule, all matters in difference were referred to arbitration, and the arbitrators were to have power to make an award concerning the glebe and church lands at P., and to make a separate award concerning the school lands at P. The powers of the arbitrators were to extend to all accounts and differences between the parish and the late rector, and the defendant as his executrix, and also between the defendant individually and the parish. The arbitrators made two awards;—First, as to the school lands, that defendant was indebted to plaintiffs, as such executrix, on the school moneys, in the sum of $1,400; that defendant should pay that sum to plaintiffs; and that judgment should be entered for plaintiffs for that amount;—Secondly, as to the glebe and church lands, that plaintiffs were entitled to recover the lands claimed, and that judgment in ejectment be entered for plaintiffs with costs; and, after reciting that all accounts respecting the receipt and disbursement of all moneys received from interest, rent and sale of these lands by the late rector, or his agents, or by defendant as his executrix, were also referred to them; as well as all accounts and differences between the parish and the defendant individually, they further awarded that defendant should "pay to the plaintiffs the sum of $1 in full of the same," saving and excepting the matters in controversy respecting the school lands, on which they had made a separate award; and that judgment should be entered for the plaintiffs for the said sum of $1. They also awarded that the defendant should pay all costs of the reference and award. On appeal from the judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia setting aside the awards; Held, that the awards sufficiently specified the claims submitted, and the various capacities in which such claims arose. That the first award, being against the defendant in her representative capacity, could not be considered against her personally, and negatived any claim of that kind, and also was an adjudication against the defendant that she had assets; and that the finding in the second award, that the defendant should pay $1, could be considered a finding as against her in her individual capacity for that sum, and, as to the claims of the plaintiffs against her for moneys received by her husband, or by her as his executrix, as a finding against the plaintiffs on their claim. That the part of the second award, directing payment of the costs of the reference and award was bad, but might be abandoned. St. George's Parish v. King, ii., 143.

44. Submission—Special directions as to inquiry—Mediators—Award—Finality—Art. 1346, C. C. P.—M. claiming money from the Government of Quebec under a contract for construction of a railway, agreed to submit to 3 mediators (amiables compositeurs) all controversies and difficulties between the Government and himself. The submission stated that these mediators should inquire into the intent of the obligation of the contract between the government and M.; the alterations and modifications made in the plans, particulars and specifications mentioned in the contract; what influenced the alterations and modifications may have had on the obligations of M. and on those of the government; the delays caused by reasons irrelevant to the action of the contractor; the pecuniary value, whether for more or for less, of the alterations or any increase in the works; and finally, all things connected with the matter and the execution of the contract, and with regard to the charges and obligations of both the government and the contractor, according to the terms of the contract. It also provided that the award was to be executed as a final and conclusive judgment of the highest court of justice. The award, after reciting the matters in controversy, found that the government was indebted to M. in $147,473, and annexed thereto an affidavit stating they had inquired into all matters and difficulties submitted to them as appeared in the deed of submission. This being much less than the claim, M. filed a petition of right, asking that the award be set aside on the ground that it did not cover the matters so referred and decided matters not mentioned in the submission. The Superior Court set aside the award. The Queen's Bench reversed that judgment and dismissed the petition. Held, affirming the Court of Queen's Bench, Strong and Taschereau, JJ., dissenting, that the object of the submission was to ascertain what amount the contractor was to receive from the government, and the specification of the several matters referred to in the submission was merely to secure that, in determining the amount, the mediators should fully consider all these matters, and all matters having been so considered the award was valid.—Per Fournier, J. Mediators are not subject to art. 1346, C. C. P. and their award upon matters under reference can only be set aside by reason of fraud or collusion. McGreevy v. The Queen, xix., 180.

12. MISTAKE.

46. Policy of insurance—Misdescription of risk—Reference of claim to arbitration—Waiver.—Where an insurance has been treated as existing by the reference of a claim for loss to arbitration under a clause in the policy, the insurer is estopped from setting up the defence of no contract on the ground of mistake made on the part of the insured in describing the risk. City of London Ins. Co. v. Smith, xv., 69.

47. Award final by submission—Setting aside—Wrong principle—Mistake.—An award will not be set aside on the ground that a memo., furnished by the arbitrator to the losing party after its publication, shewed that the accounts between the parties were adjusted upon a wrong principle, the defect, if any, not being a mistake on the face of the award or in some paper forming part of, and incorporated with, the award, and there being no admission by the arbitrator himself that he had made a mistake. McRae v. Lemay, xviii., 280.

13. SETTING ASIDE AWARD.

48. Award remitted back—The P. E. Island Land Purchase Act of 1875, s. 45.—The Prince Edward Island legislature had authority to enact the "Land Purchase Act of 1875," and an award thereunder of the commissioners could not be quashed and set aside, or declared invalid and void, on an application made to the Supreme Court of the province; but it could have been remitted back to the commissioners in the manner prescribed by s. 45 of the Act. The application for the rule in the court below not having been made within the proper time, nor according to the provisions of that section, the decision of that court is against the express words of the statute, and cannot be allowed to stand. Kelly v. Sullivan, i., 1.

49. Procedure—Enlarging time for making award—New ground on appeal.—In an action on contract, the differences were, by rule of court, and consent of parties, submitted to arbitration. The award was to be made on or before 1st May, 1877, or such further or ulterior day as the arbitrators might indorse from time to time on the order. The time for making the award was extended by the arbitrators till 1st September, 1877. On 31st August, 1877, the attorneys for plaintiff and defendants, by consent indorsed on the rule, extended the time till the 8th September. On 7th September the arbitrators made their award in favour of plaintiff for $5,001.42 in full settlement of all matters in difference. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (13 N. S. Rep. 98), that where the parties, through their attorneys, consent to extend the time for making an award under a rule of reference, such consent does not operate as a new submission, but is an enlargement of the time under the rule and a continuation to the extended period of the authority of the arbitrators, and therefore an award made within the extended period is an award made under the rule of reference, and is valid and binding on the parties. 2. That the fact of one of the parties being a municipal corporation made no difference. 3. That in Nova Scotia, where the rule nisi to set aside an award specifies certain grounds of objection, and no new grounds are added by way of amendment in the court below, no other ground of objection to the award can be raised on appeal. Oakes v. City of Halifax, iv., 640.

50. Misconduct of arbitrators—Bill to rectify award—Prayer for general relief—Jurisdiction—Practice—Scandalous factum—Discipline—Costs.—The bill was to rectify an award under an arbitration, because the arbitrators had considered matters not included in the submission, and divided the sums received by the defendant from the plaintiffs, on the ground that defendant's brother and partner was a party to such receipt, although the partnership affairs of the defendant and his brother were excluded from the submission. The bill prayed that the award might be amended, and the defendant decreed, to pay the amount due the plaintiffs on the award being rectified, and that, in other respects, the award should stand and be binding on the parties. There was also a prayer for general relief. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (23 N. B. Rep. 392), that to grant the decree prayed for would be to make a new award, which the court had no jurisdiction to do, but (reversing the court below), that under the prayer for general relief the plaintiff was entitled to have the award set aside.

The plaintiff's factum containing reflections on the conduct of the judges of the court below, was ordered to be taken off the files as scandalous and impertinent, and the appeal was allowed without costs. Vernon v. Oliver, xi., 156.

51. Reconsideration—Setting aside award—Time for application—9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 15, s. 2—R. S. O. (1887) c. 53, s. 37—Reference back to arbitrators—Concealment—New evidence.—In Ontario, the law regulating the time for applying to set aside an award made under rule of court or to remit it to the arbitrators for re-consideration and re-determination, is R. S. O. (1887) c. 53, s. 37, and it is not necessary that the application should be made before the last day of the term next after the making of the award, as provided by 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 15 s. 2. Gwynne, J., dissenting.—An award may be remitted to arbitrators for re-consideration and re-determination under the Ontario statute though the result of the re-consideration may be to have the award virtually set aside by a different, or even contrary, decision of the arbitrators.—The court is justified in remitting an award to the arbitrators if fraud or fraudulent concealment on the part of the persons in whose favour it is made is established, or if new evidence is discovered which, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, could not have been discovered before the award was made. Green v. Citizens Ins. Co., xviii., 338.

52. Amiables compositeurs—Art. 1346 C. C. P.—Fraud.—Per Fournier, J.—Mediators are not subject to art. 1346 C. C. P., and their award on the matters under reference can only be set aside for fraud or collusion. McGreevy v. The Queen, xix., 180.

53. Setting aside award—Expiration of time fixed by 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 15.—The appellant B. became plaintiff by order of revivor in a suit originally by P. against L. for dissolution, account and winding-up of partnership. A decree was made by consent for reference to three arbitrators, there being also a deed of submission, in the same terms as the decree, subsequently executed by the parties. An award was made on the 13th August, and L.'s solicitor, on 2nd September, 1878, served notice of appeal. Appellant's solicitor, on 8th October, 1878, served notice consenting to an order setting aside the award. No action being taken thereon, appellant, on 2nd December, 1878, served notice of motion for an order to set aside the award; and, after argument, an order was made on 26th March, 1879, setting aside the award with costs. (26 Gr. 375). L. appealed to the Court of Appeal for Ontario, which reversed the order and dismissed the motion to set aside the award, on the ground that it was made too late. (5 Ont. App. R. 1). Held, that the motion was not made within the time allowed by the statute, 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 15, and as no good reason was given for the delay the judgment of the Court of Appeal should be affirmed. Appeal dismissed with costs. Bickford v. Lloyd, 21st June, 1880; Cass. Dig. (2nd ed.) 35.

54. Railways—Expropriation of land—Defective awards—Signatures of arbitrators—Equity of redemption—Notice of meeting—Amending answer—Objections taken in appellate court—Costs—New trial.—Bills to enforce awards and recover moneys thereunder for lands taken by the company—(see 41 U. C. Q. B. 195; 28 U. C. C. P. 309; 5 Ont. App. R. 13, and 9 Ont. App. R. 310). In the Supreme Court, counsel for the appellants for the first time contended that, in the Norvell case, the award was bad because the arbitrators had dealt only with the equity of redemption of the land-owner, and in the other cases, that the awards were bad on their face, being signed by only two of the three arbitrators without shewing a notice to the third arbitrator.—Held, in the Norvell case, that the company should be allowed to amend the answer in the Court of Chancery to shew that the award was in respect only of the equity of redemption and not the fee simple, and that upon such amendment being made the award should be declared null and void; and, in the other cases, that the company should be at liberty to amend the answers to shew that the awards were made by two of the arbitrators in the absence of, and without notice of the meeting of said two arbitrators to the third arbitrator, with liberty to the plaintiffs to file, with the registrar of the Supreme Court, signification of their desire for new trials, when such new trials should be granted without costs; in default of such signification in any case the award was declared null and void.

Appeals allowed without costs, objections having been taken for the first time on appeal. Canada Southern Ry. Co. v. Norvell; Canada Southern Ry. Co. v. Cunningham; Canada Southern Ry. Co. v. Duff; Canada Southern Ry. Co. v. Gutfield. Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 34; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.), 83.

55. Expropriation—35 Vict. c. 32, s. 7 (Que.)—Interference with award of arbitrators.—In a matter of expropriation the decision of a majority of arbitrators, men of more than ordinary business experience, upon a question merely of value should not be interfered with on appeal. Lemoine v. City of Montreal; Allan v. City of Montreal, xxiii., 390.

56. Award—Appeal—Questions of fact—Second Award—Arbitrator functus officio.—S. and P. were engaged in business together, under a written agreement, in the packing and selling of fruit, and a dispute having arisen as to the state of accounts between them, a third person was chosen to enable them to effect a settlement. S. claimed that the person so chosen was only to go over the accounts and make a statement, while P. contended that the whole matter was left to him as an arbitrator. This person, having gone over the accounts, made out a statement shewing $235 to be due to S., and some time afterwards he presented a second statement shewing the amount due to be $286. S. was given a cheque for the latter amount, which, he asserted, was taken only on account, and he afterwards brought an action for the winding-up of the partnership affairs. Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, that whether or not there was a submission to arbitration was a question of fact as to which the Supreme Court of Canada would not, on appeal, interfere with the finding of the trial judge that all matters were submitted, affirmed as it was, by a Divisional Court and the Court of Appeal. Held, further, that there was a valid award for $235; that having made his award for that amount, the arbitrator was functus officio, and that the second award was a nullity; and that the Divisional Court was wrong in holding that, as P. relied only upon the second award, the judgment should be against him on the case as claimed by S. Snetsinger v. Peterson, 23rd May, 1894.

1. Appeal from assessment—Judgment confirming—Payment under protest—Res judicata.—J., having been assessed in 1896 on personal property as a resident of St. John, N. B., appealed without success to the appeals committee of the common council and then applied to the Supreme Court of New Brunswick for a writ of certiorari to quash the assessment, which was refused. An execution having been threatened he then paid the taxes under protest. In 1897 he was again assessed under the same circumstances, and took the same course with the exception of appealing to the Supreme Court of Canada from the judgment refusing a certiorari, and that court held the assessment void and ordered the writ to issue for quashing. J. then brought an action for repayment of the amount paid for the assessment in 1896. Held, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, that the judgment refusing a certiorari to quash the assessment in 1896 was res judicata against J., and he could not recover the amount so paid. *Jones v. 6. Foreign corporation—Branch bank—Gross income—31 Vict. c. 3, s. 4 (N.B.)—L., manager of a foreign banking corporation, having a branch in St. John, derived during the year 1875 an income of $46,000, but, sustained losses in the bank's business beyond that amount. The bank, having made no gain, disputed the assessment under 22 Vict. c. 37; 31 Vict. c. 36; and 34 Vict. c. 18, on an income of $46,000. Held, Henry, J., dissenting, that under the Acts relating to rates and taxes in the City of St. John, foreign banking corporations doing business in St. John are liable to be taxed on the gross income received by them during the fiscal year; and that L. had been properly assessed. Larocess v. Sullivan, iii., 117.

[On appeal to the Privy Council the judgment was reversed: 6 App. Cas. 373.]

7. Taxation within City of Halifax—37 Vict. c. 30, s. 1—27 Vict. c. 81 (N.S.)—Ships not registered in Halifax.—K. resided and did business in the City of Halifax, and owned ships always sailing abroad not registered at Halifax, and which had never visited the Port of Halifax. Under 37 Vict. c. 30, s. 1, and 27 Vict. c. 81, ss. 340, 347, 361 (N.S.), the assessors in rating the property of K. included the value of these vessels. Held, that the shipping in question did not come within the meaning of the words "whether such ships or vessels be at home or abroad at the time of assessment," in said s. 347, and therefore were not liable to be assessed for city rates. City of Halifax v. Kenny, iii., 497.

8. St. John City Assessment Act, 1882, 45 Vict. c. 59 (N.B.)—Chartered bank—Assessment on capital—Par value—Real and personal property—Payment—Protest—Waiver—Quashing roll.]—Section 25, St. John City Assessment Act of 1882, provides that all rates and taxes levied and imposed upon the city shall be raised by an equal rate upon the value of the real estate in the city, upon the personal estate of the inhabitants, and of persons deemed and declared to be inhabitants and residents of the city, and upon the capital stock, income, or other thing, of joint stock companies, corporations, or persons associated in business, and after providing for the levying of a poll tax, "that the whole residue to be raised shall be levied upon the whole ratable property, real and personal, and ratable income, and joint stock, according to the true and real value and amount of the same as nearly as can be ascertained, provided that joint stock shall not be rated above the par value thereof." Section 28 provides that, "all joint stock companies and corporations shall be assessed, under this Act, in like manner as individuals; and for the purposes of such assessment, the president, or any agent, or manager, of such joint stock companies shall be deemed and taken to be the owner of the real and personal estate, capital stock and assets of such company or corporation, and shall be dealt with, and may be proceeded against accordingly." The president of the Bank of New Brunswick, was assessed, under the Act, on real and personal property of the bank, valued at $1,100,000. The capital stock at the time of assessment was $1,000,000, and he offered to pay taxes on that amount which was refused. It was not disputed that the bank was possessed of real and personal property of the value assessed. The Supreme Court (N.B.) refused certiorari to quash the assessment (23 N. B. Rep. 591.) Held, Fournier, J., dissenting, that the real and personal property of the bank are part of its capital stock, and that the assessment could not exceed the par value of such stock, namely, $1,000,000.—The chamberlain may summarily issue execution for taxes not paid within a certain time after notice, and to avoid execution the bank paid the taxes under protest. Held, that such payment did not preclude them from afterwards taking proceedings to have the assessment quashed. Ex parte Lewin, xi., 484.

9. Municipal tax — Railway — Statutory statement—Departure from form—52 Vict. c. 27, s. 125 (N.B.)—Appeal—Arbitrary rating.]—By 52 Vict. c. 27, s. 125 (N.B.), the agent or manager of any joint stock company or corporation established out of the limits of the province who had an office in the City of St. John, N.B., therefore, may be assessed upon the gross and total income received for his principals with specified deductions therefrom and to enable the assessors to rate the company, etc., the agent or manager is required on 1st May each year to furnish to the assessors a statement under oath in a form prescribed shewing the gross income for the year preceding and details of the deductions; and in event of neglect to furnish such statement the assessors may fix the rate according to their best judgment, and there shall be no appeal from such rate. The general superintendent of the Atlantic division of the Canadian Pacific Railway has an office for the company in the city, and was furnished by the assessors with a printed form to fill up as required by the Act, i. e.:—Gross and total income received for his company during the preceding year, as to which he stated that no such income had been received and he erased the clause, "this amount has not been reduced or off set by any loss," etc., the other items were not filled in. This was handed to the assessors as the statement required, and they treated it as neglect to furnish any statement and rated the superintendent on a large amount as income received. A rule for a certiorari to quash the assessment was refused. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, Fournier and Taschereau, JJ., dissenting, that it was sufficiently shewn that the company had no income from its business in St. John liable to assessment; that the superintendent was justified in departing from the prescribed form in order to shew the true state of the company's business; and that the assessors had no authority to disregard the statement furnished and arbitrarily assess the superintendent in any sum they chose without making inquiry into the business of the company as the statute authorizes. Held, that the provision that there shall be no appeal from an assessment where no statement is furnished only applies to an appeal against over-valuation under C. S. N. B. c. 100, s. 60, and not to an appeal against the right to make any assessment. Held, per Gwynne, J., that s. 125 of the Act, 52 Vict. c. 27 (N.B.), does not apply to railway companies. Timmerman v. City of St. John, xxi., 691.

10. Insurance company — Net profits—Deposit with government—Statement to assessors—Variance from form—52 Vict. c. 27, s. 126 (N.B.)]—By St. John City Assessment Law, 1889, 52 Vict. c. 27, s. 126, the agent or manager of any life insurance company doing business out of the province is liable to be assessed upon the net profits made by him as such agent or manager from premiums received on all insurances effected by him; and to assist in assessment of such company, the agent or manager is required to furnish at a certain time in each year a statement under oath, in a prescribed form, setting forth the gross income and particulars of the losses and deductions claimed therefrom, and shewing the ratable net profits for the preceding year.—By the form, deductions to be made from the gross income consist of reinsurance, rebate, etc., actually paid and accounts paid on matured claims on policies issued by such agent or manager. In the form presented by the agent, there was no amount entered for deductions of the latter class, but instead thereof, an item was inserted, of "75 per cent. of premiums deposited with government for protection of policy holders," which was an addition to the form. The statement shewed that the deductions exceeded the gross income, leaving no net profits to be taxed. The assessors disregarded the result shewn, and assessed the agent on net profits for the year. A rule nisi for a certiorari to quash the assessment was obtained, in support of which it was shewn by affidavit that the amount required to be deposited with the Dominion Government was about 75 per cent. of the premiums received, and that the amount of such deposits from time to time returned to the company was applied for the benefit of policy-holders and formed no part of the income or profits of the company. The Supreme Court (N.B.) discharged the rule and refused to quash the assessment on the grounds that the government deposit was part of the income of the company held in reserve for certain purposes and formed no part of the expenditure, and that the agent had no right to strike out certain requirements of the form prescribed and substitute different statements of his own. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, Fournier and Taschereau, J.J., dissenting, that the agent was justified in departing from the form to shew the real state of the business of the company, and the deposit was properly classed with the deductions, and the assessors had no right to disregard the statement and arbitrarily assess the company as they did.—Appeal allowed with costs. Peters v. City of St. John, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 56.

11. Assessment and taxes—Tax on railway—Nova Scotia Railway Act—Exemption—Mining company—Construction of railway by—R. S. N. S. (5 Ser.) c. 53.—By R. S. N. S. (5 ser.) c. 53, s. 9, s.-s. 30, the roadbed, etc., of all railway companies in the province is exempt from local taxation. By s. 1 the first part of the Act, from s. 5 to 33 inclusively, applies to every railway constructed and in operation, or thereafter to be constructed under the authority of any Act of the legislature, and by s. 4, part two applies to all railways constructed or to be constructed under the authority of any special Act, and to all companies incorporated for their construction and working. By s. 5, s.-s. 15, the expression "the company" in the Act means the company or party authorized by the special Act to construct the railway. Held, reversing the decision of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that part one of this Act applies to all railways constructed under provincial statutes and is not exclusive of those mentioned in part two; that a company incorporated by an Act of the legislature as a mining company, with power "to construct and make such railroads and branch tracks as might be necessary for the transportation of coals from the mines to the place of shipment, and all other business necessary and usually performed on railroads," and with other powers connected with the working of mines "and operation of railways," and empowered by another Act (49 Vict. c. 45 [N.S.]) to hold and work the railway "for general traffic, and the conveyance of passengers and freight for hire, as well as for all purposes and operations connected with said mines in accordance with and subject to the provisions of part two of c. 53, R. S. N. S. (5 ser.), entitled 'Of Railways,'" is a railway company within the meaning of the Act; and that the reference in 49 Vict. c. 145, s. 1, to part two does not prevent said railway from coming under the operation of the first part of the Act. International Coal Co. v. County of Cape Breton, xxii., 305.

12. Street railway—Contract—Municipal corporation—Taxes.—By a by-law of the City of Montreal a tax of $2.50 was imposed upon each working horse in the city. By s. 16 of the appellant's charter it is stipulated that each car employed by the company shall be licensed and numbered, etc., for which the company shall pay "over and above all other taxes, the sum of $20 for each two-horse car, and $10 for each one-horse car." Held, affirming the judgment of the court below, that the company was liable for the tax of $2.50 on each and every one of its horses. Montreal Street Ry. Co. v. City of Montreal, xxiii., 259.

13. Exemptions—Real property—Chattels—Furniture—Gas pipes—Highway—Title to portion—Legislative grant of soil—11 Vict. c. 14

(Can.)—55 Vict. c. 48 (O.)—"Ontario Assessment Act, 1892."—Gas pipes which are the property of a private corporation laid under the highways of a city, are real estate within the meaning of the "Ontario Assessment Act, 1892," and liable to assessment as such, as they do not fall within the exemptions mentioned in s. 6 of that Act. The enactments effected by the first and thirteenth clauses of the company's Act of incorporation (11 Vict. c. 14), operated as a legislative grant to the company of so much of the land of the streets, squares, and public places of the city as might be found necessary to be taken and held for the purposes of the company, and for the convenient use of the gas works, and when the openings where pipes may be laid are made at the places designated by the city surveyor, as provided in said charter, and they are placed there, the soil they occupy is land taken and held by the company under the provisions of the said Act of incorporation.—The proper method of assessment of the pipes so laid and fixed in the soil of the streets, squares, and public places in a city ought to be separately in the respective wards, of the city in which they may be actually laid, as in the case of real estate. Consumers Gas Co. of Toronto v. City of Toronto, xxvii., 453.

14. Municipal corporation—Railways—Taxation—By-laws—Construction of statute—Voluntary payment—Action en répétition—29 Vict. c. 57, s. 21 (Can.)—30 Vict. c. 57 (Can.)—The statute, 29 Vict. c. 57 (Can.), consolidating and amending the Acts and Ordinances incorporating the City of Quebec, by s.-s. 4 of s. 21, authorizes the making of by-laws to impose taxes on persons exercising certain callings, "and generally on all trades, manufactures, occupations, business, arts, professions, or means of profit, livelihood or gain, whether hereinbefore enumerated or not, which now or may hereafter be carried on, exercised or in operation in the city; and all persons by whom the same are or may be carried on, exercised or put in operation therein, either on their own account or as agents for others; and on the premises wherein or whereon the same are or may be carried on, exercised or put in operation." Held, that the general words of the statute quoted are sufficiently comprehensive to authorize the imposition of a business tax upon railway companies; and, further, that the power thus conferred might be validly exercised in the same general terms as those expressed in the statute. Held, per Strong, C.J., that where taxes have been paid to a municipal corporation voluntarily and with knowledge of the state of the law and the circumstances under which the tax was imposed, no action can lie to recover the money so paid from the municipality. 3. COLLECTION AND DISTRESS.

17. Notice of assessment—Alteration without notice by Court of Revision.—The plaintiffs, in 1874, being liable to assessment, were served by the assessors of a municipality with a notice in the form prescribed by 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 48 (Ont.), as then in force, stating the amount of personality, other than income at $2,500, but on the roll, as finally revised by the Court of Revision, the amount was put down at $25,000, thereby changing, without further notice, the total value of real and personal property and taxable income from $20-900 to $43,400. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (25 U. C. C. P. 169; 26 U. C. C. P. 323) that the want of proper notice under the statute invalidated the roll and that the rate calculated on the amount of the assessment so increased could not be collected. Nicholls v. Cumming, i., 395.

18. Levy under execution—Void assessment—Arrest—Liability of municipal corporation—Damages.—A collector of taxes who issued a warrant founded upon a void assessment and caused an arrest to be made, was guilty of trespass, and being at the time a servant of the municipal corporation, under their control specially appointed to collect and levy the amount so assessed, the maximum of respondent superior applied, and a verdict in favour of the person aggrieved against both the collector and the corporation was ordered to stand. Judgment of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick (20 N. B. Rep. 479), reversed. Ritchie, C.J., and Taschereau, J., dissenting. McSorley v. City of St. John, vi., 531.

19. Injunction — Prohibition — Municipal corporation—Assessment roll—Arts. 716, 746a, Municipal Code (Que.)—Art. 1031 C. C. P.—Costs.—The county of H. made a triennial assessment roll in 1875, and in 1876, without declaring that it was an amendment of the roll of 1875, the corporation made an increased assessment. The appellants, assessed upon both rolls took proceedings by requête libellée to have the new roll declared invalid, null and void, and for a writ of prohibition against the sale of their lands for delinquent taxes. The Superior Court directed the issue of the writ restraining the defendants as prayed, but upon the merits, held the roll of 1876 valid as an amendment of the roll of 1875. The Court of Queen's Bench reversed this judgment on the merits, and held the roll of 1876 to be substantially a new roll, and therefore null and void. On appeal to the Supreme Court, upon equal division of opinion the judgment appealed from stood affirmed, but without costs, and it was—Held, per Henry, Taschereau, and Gwynne, JJ., affirming the Court of Queen's Bench, that the roll of 1876, not being a triennial assessment roll, or an amendment of such a roll, was illegal and null, and that respondents were entitled to an injunction to restrain the corporation from selling their lands, and that the writ which issued, whether or not it was correctly styled "writ of prohibition," was properly issued and should be maintained. — Per Ritchie, C.J., and Strong and Fournier, JJ., that a writ of prohibition issued under art. 1031 C. C. P., as was the writ issued in this case, will only lie to an inferior tribunal, and was, in the present case, an entirely inappropriate remedy. Coté v. Morgan, vii., 1.

B., provides that, "real estate, where the assessors cannot obtain the names of any of the owners, shall be rated in the name of the occupier or person having ostensible control, but under such descriptions as to persons and property . . . as shall be sufficient to indicate the property assessed, and the character in which the person is assessed." G. died leaving a widow who administered to his estate and resided on the land. The property was assessed for several years in the name of the estate of G., and in 1878 it was assessed in the name of "Widow G." Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the last assessment was illegal, as not comprising such description of persons and property as would be sufficient to indicate the property assessed, and the character in which the person was assessed.—Where a warrant for the collection of a single sum for rates of several years, included the amount of an assessment which did not appear to be against either the owner or the occupier of the property; Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the inclusion of such assessment would vitiate the warrant. Flanagan v. Elliott, xii., 435.

27. Ontario Assessment Act, R. S. O. (1887) c. 193, ss. 15, 65—Illegal assessment—Court of Revision—Business carried on in two municipalities.—[Section 65 of the Ontario Assessment Act (R. S. O. [1887] c. 193) does not enable the Court of Revision to make valid an assessment which the statute does not authorize.—Section 15 of the Act provides that "where any business is carried on by a person in a municipality in which he does not reside, or in two or more municipalities. the personal property belonging to such person shall be assessed in the municipality in which such personal property is situated."—W., residing and doing business in Brantford, had certain merchandise in London, stored in a public warehouse, used by other persons as well as W. He kept no clerk or agent in charge of such merchandise, but when sales were made a delivery order was given upon which the warehouse keeper acted. Once a week a commercial traveller for W., residing in London, attended there to take orders for goods, including the kind so stored, but the sales of stock in the warehouse were not confined to transactions entered into at Loudon. Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, that W. did not carry on business in London within the meaning of the said section, and his merchandise in the warehouse was not liable to be assessed at London. City of London v. Watt, xxii., 300.

28. Municipal assessment — Domicile — Change of domicile—Intention—59 Vict. c. 61 (N.B.)—By the St. John City Assessment Act (59 Vict. c. 61) s. 2 "for the purposes of assessment, any person having his home or domicile, or carrying on business, or having any office or place of business, or any occupation, employment, or profession, within the City of St. John, shall be deemed . . . an inhabitant and resident of the said city." J. carried on business in St. John as a brewer up to 1893, when he sold the brewery to three of his sons and conveyed his house and furniture to his adult children in trust for them all. He then went to New York where he carried on the business of buying and selling stocks and securities having offices for such business and living at a hotel paying for a room in the latter only when occupied. During the next four years he spent about four months in each at St. John visiting his children and taking recreation. He had no business interests there but attended meetings of the directors of the Bank of New Brunswick during his yearly visits. He was never personally taxed in New York and took no part in municipal matters there. Being assessed in 1897 on personal property in St. John he appealed against the assessment unsuccessfully and then applied for a writ of certiorari with a view to having it quashed. Held, reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, that as there had been a long continued actual residence by J. in New York, and as on his appeal against the assessment he had avowed his bonâ fide intention of making it his home permanently or at least for an indefinite time, and his determination not to return to St. John to reside, he had acquired a new home or domicile, and that in St. John had been abandoned within the meaning of the Act. Jones v. City of St. John, xxx., 122.

29. Inhabitant of the City of St. John—Tax on land — Wife's separate property—Income tax—Arrest—Damages.—E., a resident of St. John up to June, 1877, went with his family to Nova Scotia. In 1878, he returned to New Brunswick with his family, and leaving them in Portland, went to Boston in search of employment, where he remained until 1880, employed in business, and paid taxes there. Whilst E. was absent, his wife's father gave her a lot of leasehold property in St. John. In the fall of 1878 she removed the family into the city and resided on her property until E. returned and lived with his wife. For the taxes for 1879, assessed against him in respect of his wife's property, and an income tax against himself, both included in one assessment, he was arrested and imprisoned for two days, when he paid under protest, and was released. In an action for false imprisonment, he obtained a verdict for $150.—The full court set it aside, and granted a new trial, a majority being of opinion that E. was constructively an inhabitant of St. John, and as such liable to be assessed, and that there ought to be a new trial, as it did not very distinctly appear that objections were taken at the trial, or upon what the motion for a nonsuit was to depend. Held, that E. was not liable to assessment, and that the verdict should stand. Appeal allowed with costs. Edwards v. Mayor of St. John, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 48.

5. DRAINAGE.

30. Drainage — Adjoining municipalities—Finding outlet — Petition.—In a drainage scheme for a single township, the work may be carried into a lower adjoining municipality for the purpose of finding an outlet without any petition from the owners of land in such adjoining township to be affected thereby, and such owners may be assessed for benefit. Stephen v. McGillivray (18 Ont. App. R. 516), and Nissouri v. Dorchester (14 O. R. 294), distinguished. Township of Ellice v. Hiles; Township of Ellice v. Crooks, xxiii., 429.

31. Municipal by-law — Special assessments—Drainage — Powers of council as to additional necessary works — Ultra vires resolutions—Executed contract.—Where a municipal by-law authorized the construction of a drain, benefiting lands in an adjoining municipality which was to pass under a railway, where it was apparent that a culvert to carry off the water brought down by the drain and prevent the flooding of adjacent lands would be an absolute necessity, the construction of such culvert was a matter within the provisions of s. 573 of the Municipal Act (R. S. O. [1887] c. 184), and a new by-law authorizing it was not necessary. Taschereau, J., dissenting. The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. v. The Township of Chatham, xxv., 608.

32. Intermunicipal drainage—Initiation and contribution—By-law—Ontario Drainage Act of 1873—Ontario Consolidated Municipal Act, 1892.—The provisions of the Ontario Municipal Act (55 Vict. c. 42, s. 590), that if a drain constructed in one municipality is used as an outlet, or will provide an outlet for the water of lands of another, the lands in the latter so benefited may be assessed for their proportion of the cost, applies only to drains properly so called, and does not include original watercourses which have been deepened or enlarged.—If a municipality constructing such a drain has passed a by-law purporting to assess lands in an adjoining municipality for contribution to the cost, a person whose lands might appear to be affected thereby, or by any by-law of the adjoining municipality proposing to levy contributions toward the cost of such works, would be entitled to have such other municipality restrained from passing a contributory by-law or taking any steps towards that end, by an action brought before the passing of such contributory by-law. Broughton v. Grey and Elma, xxvii., 495.

6. EXEMPTIONS.

37. *Indian lands — Surrender — Crown grant — Sale of lands for taxes—Lists attached to warrant — 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 128 (O.), R. S. O. (1877) c. 108, s. 156.]—In 1857, a lot, forming part of a tract surrendered to the Crown by the Indians, was sold, and in 1869, the Dominion Government issued a patent therefor to the plaintiff. In 1870, the lot, less two acres, was sold to one D. K., for taxes assessed and accrued due for 1864 to 1869, who sold to defendant, and defendant purchased the two acres at a sale for taxes in 1873. The warrants for sale of the lands were signed by the warden with the seal of the county, and authorized the treasurer "to levy upon the various parcels of land hereinafter mentioned for the arrears of taxes due thereon and set opposite to each parcel of land," and attached to these warrants were the lists of lands to be sold, including the lands in question. The lists and the warrant were pasted together by the whole length of the top, but the lists were not authenticated by the signature of the warden nor the seal of the county. By the Assessment Act, 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 128 (O.), the warden is required to return one of the lists of the lands to be sold for taxes, transmitted to him, etc., to the treasurer, with a warrant thereto annexed under the hand of the warden and seal of the county.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, (4 Ont. App. R. 159), Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting, that upon the surrender the lands became ordinary unpatented Crown lands, and upon being granted became liable to assessment; that the list and warrant may be regarded as one entire instrument and, as the substantial requirements of the statute had been complied with, any irregularities had been cured by R. S. O. (1877) c. 180, s. 156. Church v. Fenton, v., 239.*

38. School tax — Exemptions — Objects of incorporation — Educational institution — Farm — Revenue—32 Vict. c. 16, s. 13 (Q.)—C. S. L. C. c. 15, s. 77 — 41 Vict. c. 26 (Q.)]—Action for $808.50, school taxes on property occupied by respondents as a farm, in one municipality, the products of which, except a portion sold to cover working and cultivating, were consumed at the mother house in another municipality. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that as the property was not occupied by the respondents for the objects for which they were incorporated, but was held for reserve purposes, it did not come within the exemptions from taxation for school rates by 32 Vict. c. 16, s. 13, (Que.). Held, also, that said s. 13 does not, as regards exemptions, extend s. 77 of c. 15 C. S. L. C., which has not been repealed, but which has been amended by the addition of 41 Vict. c. 6, s. 26 (Que.). *Commissaires d'Ecoles de St. Gabriel v. 39. *Educational institution — C. S. L. C. c. 15—41 Vict. c. 6, s. 26 (Que.)—Art. 712 Mun. Code (Que.)—Exemption.]—Action for $408, taxes on property occupied and used as a private boarding and day school for girls, by defendant, who employed teachers, and had, on an average, for their education, as pupils, 85 girls per annum. The institution never received any grant from the plaintiff.—Held, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the institution was an educational establishment within the meaning of 41 Vict. c. 6, s. 26, (Que.), and exempt from municipal taxation. Wylie v. City of Montreal, xii., 384.*

40. *Lands leased to the Crown—Occupation for Crown purposes — Municipal taxation — Prerogative — Exemptions — 10-11 Vict. c. 17—23 Vict. c. 61, s. 53—C. S. L. C. c. 4, s. 2—37 Vict. c. 51, s. 237 (Que.)—Mun. Code L. C. Art. 712—36 Vict. c. 21, s. 18, (Que.)]—The Dominion Government leased property in Montreal for the use of Her Majesty, with the condition that the government should pay all taxes and assessments which might be levied and become due on the premises during the term of the lease. The corporation sued the owners of the property for municipal taxes accrued during the time the property was so leased to and occupied by the government. On intervention filed by the Attorney-General of Canada praying that the action be dismissed; Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, Strong, J., dissenting, that the property in question was exempt from taxation under C. S. L. C. c. 4, s. 2. Corporation of Quebec v. Leacycraft, (7 Q. L. R. 56) distinguished. Attorney-General of Canada v. City of Montreal, xiii., 352.*

41. *Exemptions—Railway bridge and railway track—40 Vict. c. 29, ss. 326, 327—Injunction — Extension of town limits — Navigable river—Powers of legislature—43 & 44 Vict. c. 62 (Q.)]—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (Fournier and Taschereau, JJ., dissenting) that the portion of the railway bridge built over the Richelieu river, and the railway track belonging to the company within the limits of the Town of St. Johns, are exempt from taxation under 40 Vict. c. 29, ss. 326, 327 (Que.), although no return had been made to the council by the company of the actual value of their real estate in the municipality. 2. That a warrant to levy the rates upon such property for the years 1880-83, is illegal and void, and that a writ of injunction is a proper remedy to enjoin the corporation to desist from all proceedings to enforce the same.*

As to whether the clause in the Act of incorporation of the town extending the limits to the middle of the Richelieu, a navigable river, is intra vires of the Legislature of Quebec, the holding of the court below that it was intra vires was affirmed. Central Vermont Ry. Co. v. Town of St. Johns, xiv., 288.

[This judgment was affirmed by the Privy Council, 14 App. Cas. 590.]

42. Municipal taxes—Special assessments—Exemption—41 Vict. c. 6, s. 26 (Que.)—Educational institution—Tax.]—By 41 Vict. c. 6, s. 26 (Que.) all educational houses or establishments which do not receive any subvention from the corporation or municipality in which they are situated are exempt from municipal and school assessments "whatever may be the Act in virtue of which such assessments are imposed, and notwithstanding all dispositions to the contrary." Held, reversing the judgment appealed from and restoring the judgment of the Superior Court (M. L. R. 2 S. C. 265). Ritchie, C.J., dissenting, that the exemption from municipal taxes enjoyed by educational establishments under 41 Vict. c. 6, s. 26, extends to taxes imposed for special purposes, e.g., the construction of a drain in front of their property.—Per Strong, J. Every contribution to a public purpose imposed by superior authority is a "tax." Ecclésiastiques de St. Sulpice v. City of Montreal, xvi., 399, 407.

[The Privy Council refused leave to appeal.]

43. Manitoba added territory—Lands of the C. P. Ry. Co.—Exemptions from taxation—Grant from Crown—Sale—Occupation.]—By the charter of the C. P. Ry. Co., the lands of the company in the North-West Territories, until they are either sold or occupied, are exempt from Dominion, provincial or municipal taxation for 20 years after the grant thereof from the Crown. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, (7 Man. L. R. 1), that lands which the company have agreed to sell and as to which the conditions of sale have not been fulfilled are not lands "sold" under this charter. And further, that the exemption attaches to lands allotted to the company before the patent is granted by the Crown.—Lands which were in the N. W. Territories when allotted to the company did not lose their exemption on becoming, afterwards, a part of the Province of Manitoba. *Municipality of Cornwallis v. Canadian Pacific Ry. 8. LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

49. Frontage tax—Local improvements—Répétition de l'indu—Error of law—35 Vict. c. 51 s. 192—Onus probandi—Voluntary payment—Notice—Actio conductio indebiti—Quashing roll.]—Under 37 Vict. c. 51, s. 192, the council of the City of Montreal, by resolution, adopted a report recommending the construction of permanent sidewalks, with estimates indicating the quality and approximate cost of the work. The city, in 1877, caused the sidewalks to be made, and assessed the cost according to frontage upon the proprietors on each side of the streets, and a statement to be deposited with the treasurer for collection. B., an owner of real estate on these streets, did not object to the construction of the new sidewalk. On the 3rd December, 1877, a few days after receiving a notice to pay within fifteen days certain sums, in default whereof execution would issue, she paid, without protest, $946.25; on the 29th October, 1878, she paid a further sum of $438.90, and on the 14th November, 1878, without notice, paid $700 on account of 1877 assessment. She afterwards sued the city, to recover the said sums as paid in error, believing the said assessment valid. Held, affirming the judgment of the court below, Henry and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting, that B. had failed, both in her allegations and proof, to make out a case for the recovery of the assessment paid, either as a voluntary payment in ignorance of its illegality or as a constrained payment of an illegal tax, and that mere irregularities in the mode of proceeding to the assessment, although they might, in a proper proceeding, have entitled the ratepayers to have had the assessment quashed, did not now entitle her to recover the amount back as a payment of a void assessment illegally extorted. 2. That the city council, in laying pavements in parts of the city only, the cost of which was to be paid by assessment according to the frontage of the respective properties, and not in proportion to the cost of the part laid opposite each property, were acting within the scope of the power conferred upon them by 37 Vict. c. 51, s. 192. 3. That the objection founded on the invalidity of the assessment for want of notice, not having been alleged nor relied on at the trial of the case, was irrelevant on this appeal. Bain v. City of Montreal, viii., 252.

50. Street railway company—Repair of roadway—Local improvements—Termination of franchise.]—A street railway company in Toronto was to be assessed in respect of repairs to the roadway traversed by the railway, as for local improvements, which, by the Municipal Act, constitute a lien upon the property assessed, but not a personal liability upon owners or occupiers after they have ceased to be such.—Held, that after the termination of its franchise the company was not liable for these rates. City of Toronto v. Toronto St. Ry. Co., xxiii., 198.

51. Special tax—Ex post facto legislation—Warranty.]—Assessment rolls were made by the City of Montreal under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 60 and 29 & 30 Vict. c. 56, apportioning the cost of certain local improvements on lands benefited thereby. One of the rolls was set aside and the other was lost. The corporation obtained power from the legislature by two special Acts to make new rolls, but in the meantime the property in question had been sold and conveyed. New rolls were made assessing the lands for the same improvements, and the purchaser paid the taxes, and brought suit en garantie to recover the amount from the vendor.—Held, affirming the judgment of the courts below, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that as two taxes could not both exist for the same purpose at the same time, and the rolls made after the sale were, therefore, the only rolls in force, no taxes for the local improvements had been legally imposed till after the vendor had ceased to be owner of the lands, and that she was not obliged by her warranty and declaration that taxes had been paid to reimburse the purchaser for the payment of the special taxes apportioned against the lands subsequent to the sale. Banque Ville Marie v. Morrison, xxv., 289.

52. Municipal corporation—Assessment—Montreal harbour improvements—Widening streets—Construction of statute—57 Vict. c. 57 (Que.)—52 Vict. c. 79, s. 139 (Que.)—A by-law passed in 1889 under the Quebec statute, 52 Vict. c. 79, s. 139, provided for a special loan in aid of the Montreal harbour improvements, and appropriated $163,750 thereof for the construction of a tunnel with approaches as shewn on a plan annexed from Craig street, in a line with Beaudry street to the tunnel, passing by the side of W.'s land, and subsequently a resolution was passed to open, alongside the open-cut approach, a high level roadway to give communication from Craig street to Notre-Dame street, on the surface of the ground. These works constituted, in fact, an extension of Beaudry street, from the line of Craig street, 77 feet in width, of which 42 feet constituted an open-cut approach to the tunnel and the remainder, the high-level roadway, as shewn on the plans, this prolongation being 42 feet wider than Beaudry street. The resolution provided that a portion of the expense should be paid by the parties interested and benefited as for local improvements made by the "widening" of Beaudry street. Upon proceedings to quash the assessment, the Superior Court held that it was authorized and legalized as an "existing roll," by the Act, 57 Vict. c. 57, s. 1. (Que.), and this judgment was affirmed by the Court of Review. Held, reversing the decision of both courts below, that notwithstanding the reference therein to "existing rolls," the application of the latter Act should be restricted to the cost of the "widening" only of the streets therein named in cases where there were, at the time of its enactment, existing rolls prepared by the commissioners fixing the limits for that purpose, and these words could not have the effect of extending the nature and character of such works so as to include works manifestly forming part of the harbour improvement scheme and chargeable against the special loan. *White v. owners of property bordering on the street, the apportionment of the tax should be made upon a consideration of the enhancement in value accruing to such properties respectively and the rate levied in proportion to the special benefit each parcel has derived from the local improvement.—Where an assessment roll covering over half a million dollars has been duly confirmed without objection on the part of a ratepayer that his property has been too highly assessed by a comparatively trivial amount, he cannot be permitted afterwards to urge that objection before the courts upon an application to have the assessment roll set aside. Judgment appealed from (Q. R. 9 Q. B. 142) reversed; judgment of the Superior Court, (Q. R. 15 S. C. 43) restored; Gwynne, J., dissenting. City of Montreal v. Bélanger, xxx., 574.

9. SALE OF LANDS.

59. Halifax Assessment Act, 1833—Lien—Priority—Mortgage made before statute—Construction of Act—Healing clauses—Evidence—Curing irregularities—Notice—Land tax sales.—The Halifax City Assessment Act, 1833, made taxes assessed on real estate a first lien thereon except as against the Crown.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, (21 N. S. Rep. 155, 279, sub nom. Cogswell v. Holland), that such lien attached on a lot assessed under the Act in preference to a mortgage made before the Act was passed.—The Act provided that in case of non-payment of taxes assessed upon any lands thereunder the city collector should submit to the mayor a statement in duplicate of lands liable to be sold for such non-payment, to which the mayor should affix his signature and the seal of the corporation; one of such statements should then be filed with the city clerk and the other returned to the collector with a warrant annexed, and in any suit or other proceeding relating to the assessment on any real estate therein mentioned, any statements or lists so signed and sealed should be received as conclusive evidence of the legality of the assessments, etc. In a suit to foreclose a mortgage on land which had been sold for taxes under the Act the legality of the assessment and sale was attacked.—Held, per Strong, Taschereau, and Gwynne, JJ., that to make this provision operative to cure a defect in the assessment caused by failure to give a notice required by a previous section it was necessary for defendants to shew, affirmatively, that the statements had been signed and sealed in duplicate and filed as required by the Act, and the production and proof of one of such statements was not sufficient.—Per Ritchie, C.J., and Patterson, J., that it was sufficient to produce the statement returned to the collector signed and sealed as required, with the warrant annexed, and in the absence of evidence to the contrary it must be assumed that all proceedings were regular and that the provisions of the statute requiring duplicate statements had been complied with.—The Act also provided that the deed to a purchaser of lands sold for taxes should be conclusive evidence that all the provisions with reference to the sale had been complied with.—Held, per Strong, Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ., that this provision could only operate to make the deed available to cure defects in the proceedings connected with the sale and would not cover the failure to give notice of assessment required before the taxes could be imposed.—Per Ritchie, C.J., and Patterson, J., that the deed could not be invoked in the present case to cure any defects in the proceedings, as it was not delivered to the purchaser until after the suit commenced; therefore a failure to give notice that the land was liable to be sold for taxes, which notice was required by the Act, rendered the sale void. O'Brien v. Cogswell, xvii., 420.

60. Levy of rates—By-law—Tax sale—Irregular proceedings—Validating acts—Nullity—Crown lands—Exemptions—45 Vict. c. 16, s. 7 (Man.)—51 Vict. c. 27, s. 53 (Man.)—Lands in Manitoba assessed for 1880-81, were sold in 1882 for unpaid taxes. The statute authorizing the assessment required the municipal council, after the final revision of the assessment roll in each year, to pass a by-law for levying a rate on all real and personal property mentioned in said roll, but no such by-law was passed in either 1880 or 1881. The lands so assessed and sold were formerly Dominion lands which were sold and paid for in 1879, but the patent did not issue until April, 1881. The patentee sold the lands, and after the tax sale a mortgage thereon was given to R. who sought to have the tax sale set aside as invalid. 45 Vict. c. 16, s. 7 (Man.) provides that every deed made pursuant to a sale for taxes shall be valid, notwithstanding any informality in or preceding the sale, unless questioned within one year from its execution, and 51 Vict. c. 27, s. 58 (Man.) provides that "all assessments heretofore made and rates struck by the municipalities are hereby confirmed and declared valid and binding upon all persons and corporations affected thereby."—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from. (6 Man. L. R. 565), Patterson, J., dissenting, that the assessments for the years 1880-81 were illegal for want of a by-law, and the sale for taxes thereunder was void. If the lands could be taxed the defect in the assessments was not cured by 45 Vict. c. 16, s. 7, or by 51 Vict. c. 27, s. 58, which would cure irregularities, but could not make good a deed that was a nullity, as was the deed here.—Held, per Gwynne, J., Patterson, J., contra, that the patents for the lands not having issued until April, 1881, the taxes accrued while the lands were vested in the Crown, and exempt from taxation.—Held, per Strong, J., following McKay v. Chrysler, (3 Can. S. C. R. 436), and O'Brien v. Cogswell, (17 Can. S. C. R. 420), that the operation of 45 Vict. c. 16, s. 7 (Man.), is restricted to curing defects in sale proceedings as distinguished from proceedings in assessing and levying the taxes, which led to the sale, Whelan v. Ryan, xx., 65.

62. County of Halifax—School rates—Liability of Town of Dartmouth—Assessing present ratepayers for previous year—Mandamus—Jurisdiction.—The Town of Dartmouth is not liable to contribute to the assessment for the support of schools in the municipality of the County of Halifax. Ritchie, C.J., dissenting.—If so liable, a writ of mandamus could not issue to enforce the payment of such contribution as the amount of the same would be uncertain and difficult to be ascertained.—The ratepayers of 1886 could not be assessed for school rates leviable in previous years.—Per Ritchie, C.J., dissenting, that only the City of Halifax is exempt from such contribution, and the Town of Dartmouth is liable. *Dartmouth v. 1. FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES AND PREFERENCES.

1. Power to sell on credit—Fraudulent preference—R. S. O. (1877), c. 118, s. 2.—An assignment for benefit of creditors provided that the assignee should, as soon as convenient, collect all outstanding credits, sell the real and personal property assigned, by auction or private contract, as a whole or in portions, for cash or on credit, and generally on such terms and in such manner as he should deem best or suitable, having regard to the object of these presents. No fraudulent intention of defeating or delaying creditors was shewn.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (8 Ont. App. R. 402), that the authority to sell upon credit did not, per se, invalidate the deed, and it could not on that account be impeached as a fraudulent preference within the Act, R. S. O. (1877) c. 118, s. 2. Slater v. Badenach, x., 296.

2. Setting aside deed — Right of action — Assignee—Voluntary assignment—Arts. 13, 19 C. C. P.—Pleading.—In the absence of a statutory title to sue as representing creditors, such as is conferred by bankruptcy and insolvency statutes, an assignee in trust for creditors can only enforce the same rights as the person making the assignment to him could have enforced; therefore the defendant could not by a plea in his own name ask to have a conveyance, made by the debtor to the plaintiff, prior to the assignment under which defendant claimed, rescinded or set aside as fraudulent against creditors.—The nullity of a deed should not be pronounced without putting all the parties to it en cause en déclaration de jugement commun.—Semble, The plaintiff, being a second purchaser in good faith and for value, acquired a valid title to the property in question which he could set up even against an action brought directly by the creditors. Burland v. Moffatt, xi., 76. NOTE. Overruled in Porteous v. Reynar, (13 App. Cases 120).

3. For benefit of creditors—Fraudulent preference — Statute of Elizabeth — Resulting trusts—Unreasonable conditions.—An assignment for benefit of creditors provided for distribution of assets by the assignee as follows: 1. To pay certain named creditors in full; 2. If sufficient assets remained after such payment, to pay certain other named creditors in full, or, if the assets should not be sufficient, to distribute the same pro rata among such second preferred creditors; 3. To divide the remaining assets among all creditors not preferred in equal proportions according to their respective claims, and, 4. To pay the balance remaining after distribution to the assignor. The deed required all creditors executing it to release the assignor from any and every claim of the executing creditor against him, and provided that the assignee should not be liable to account for more money and effects than he should actually receive, nor be responsible for any loss or damage to the trust, except such as should happen through his own wilful neglect. In an action to set aside the deed; Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, (20 N. S. Rep. 194), Gwynne and Patterson, J.J., dissenting, that the deed was one to which it was unreasonable to except unpreferred creditors to become parties, and therefore, and because it contained a resulting trust in favour of the debtor, it was void under the statute, 13 Eliz. c. 5. Whitman v. Union Bank of Halifax, xvi., 410.

4. For benefit of creditors—Preferences—R. S. N. S. c. 92, ss. 4, 5, 10—Chattel mortgage—Statute of Elizabeth — Fraud.—Though an assignment contains preferences in favour of certain creditors, yet if it includes, subject to such preferences, a trust in favour of all the assignor's creditors it is "an assignment for the general benefit of creditors" under s. 10 of the Nova Scotia Bills of Sale Act (R. S. N. S. c. 92), and does not require an affidavit of bona fides. Durkee v. Flint (19 N. S. Rep. 487), approved and followed; Archibald v. Hubley (18 Can. S. C. R. 116), distinguished.—A provision in an assignment for the security and indemnity of makers and indorsers of paper not due, for accommodation of the debtor, does not make it a chattel mortgage under s. 5 of the Act, the property not being redeemable and the assignor retaining no interest in it.—An assignment is void under the Statute of Elizabeth as tending to hinder or delay creditors if it gives a first preference to a firm of which the assignee is a member, and provides for allowance of interest on a claim of the said firm until paid, and the assignee is permitted to continue in the same possession and control of the business as he previously had, though no one of these provisions taken by itself would have such effect.—A provision that "the assignee shall only be liable for such moneys as shall come into his hands as such assignee, unless there be gross negligence or fraud on his part," will also avoid the assignment under the Statute of Elizabeth.—Authority to the assignee not only to prefer parties to accommodation paper, but also to pay all "costs, charges and expenses to arise in consequence" of such paper is a badge of fraud. Kirk v. Chisholm, xxvi., 111.

5. Debtor and creditor—Payment by debtor — Appropriation — Preference — R. S. O. (1887), c. 124.—A trader carrying on business in two establishments, mortgaged both stocks to R. as security for indorsements on a composition with his creditors, and for advances in cash and goods to a fixed amount. The composition notes were made and indorsed by B., who made advances to an amount considerably over that stated in the mortgage. A few months after the mortgagor was in default for the advances, and a portion of overdue notes, and there were some notes not matured and B. consented to the sale of one of the mortgaged stocks, taking the purchaser's notes in payment, applying the amount generally in payment of his overdue debt, part of which was unsecured. A few days after B. seized the other stock of goods covered by his mortgage, and about the same time the sheriff seized them under the execution, and shortly after the mortgagor assigned for benefit of creditors. An interpleader issue between B. and the execution creditor resulted in favour of B., who received, out of the proceeds of the sale of the goods, under an order of the court, the balance remaining due on his mortgage. Horsfall v. Boisseau (21 Ont. App. R. 663). The assignee of the mortgagor then brought an action against C. to recover the amount representing the unsecured part of his debt which was paid by the purchase of the first stock, which payment was alleged to be a preference to B. over the other creditors.—Held, affirming judgment appealed from (23 Ont. App. R. 230), that there was no preference to B. within R. S. O. [1887] c. 124, s. 2; that his position was the same as if his whole debt secured and unsecured had been overdue, and there had been one sale of both stocks of goods realizing an amount equal to such debt, in which case he could have appropriated a portion of the proceeds to payment of his secured debt, and would have had the benefit of the law of set-off as to the unsecured debt under s. 23 of the Act; and that the only remedy of the mortgagor or his assignee was by redemption before the sale, which would have deprived B. of the benefit of such set-off. Stephens v. Boisseau, xxvi., 437.

6. Assignment for benefit of creditors—Preferred creditors—Moneys paid under voidable assignment—Liability of assignee—Statute of Elizabeth—Hindering and delaying creditors.—In an action to have a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors set aside by creditors of the assignor, on the ground that it is void under the Statute of Elizabeth, neither moneys paid to preferred creditors nor trust property disposed of in good faith by the assignor, or persons claiming under him can be recovered, nor can persons holding under the deed be held personally liable for moneys or property so received by them. Cox v. Worral (26 N. S. Rep. 366), questioned. Taylor v. Cummings, xxvii., 589.

7. Assignment for benefit of creditors—Fraudulent preference—Bribery—Promissory note—[Illegal consideration—Nullity—Costs.]—A secret arrangement whereby the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure respecting equal distribution of the assets of insolvents are defeated and advantage given to a particular unsecured creditor is a fraud upon the general body of creditors notwithstanding that the agreement for the additional payment may be made by a third person who has no direct interest in the insolvent's business.—A promissory note given to secure the amount of the preferences payable under such an arrangement is wholly void.—An agreement for a payment to an inspector of an insolvent estate to influence his consent to an arrangement which is not for the general benefit of the creditors is a bribe which is, in itself, sufficient reason to adjudge the transaction, to induce which it was given, corrupt, fraudulent and void. Brigham v. Banque Jacques-Cartier, xxx., 429.

8. Pressure by creditors—Criminal process—Stifling criminal charge—Extortion.

2. MORTGAGES AND SECURITIES.

13. Right of action—Conveyance subject to mortgage—Obligation to indemnify—Assignment—Principal and surety—Implied contract.—The obligation of a purchaser of mortgaged lands to indemnify his grantor against the personal covenant for payment may be assigned even before the institution of an action for the recovery of the mortgage debt, and, if assigned to a person entitled to recover the debt, it gives the assignee a direct right of action against the person liable to pay the same. Maloney v. Campbell, xxviii., 228.

14. Banking—Collateral security—R. S. C. c. 120, Schedule "C"—53 Vict. c. 31, ss. 74, 75—Renewals.—An assignment made in the form "C" to the "Bank Act" as security for a bill or note given in renewal of a past due bill or note is not valid as a security under the seventy-fourth section of the "Bank Act." The judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario (24 Ont. App. R. 152), affirmed. Bank of Hamilton v. Halstead, xxviii., 235.

3. EFFECT OF ASSIGNMENTS GENERALLY.

20. Assignment for benefit of creditors—Creditor attacking trust deed—Right to participate in benefits.—A creditor is not barred from participating in the benefits of an assignment in trust for the general benefit of creditors, by an unsuccessful attempt to have such deed set aside as defective. Gardner v. Klæpfer, xv., 390.

21. Assignment for benefit of creditors—Description of property—Change of possession—R. S. O. c. 119, ss. 5, 23—Interpleader—Ont. Judicature Act, ss. 28, 35—Appeal—Company—Powers.—The decision of a judge of the High Court of Justice (which by s. 28, Jud. Act, is the decision of the court) on an interpleader issue to try the title to property taken under execution on a final judgment in the suit in which it is issued, is not an interlocutory order within the meaning of that expression in s. 35, Jud. Act, or if it is, it is such an order as was appealable before the passing of that Act, and in either case it is appealable now to the Court of Appeal for Ontario.—An assignment by the directors of a joint stock company of all the property of the company to trustees for the benefit of creditors is not ultra vires of such directors, and does not require special statutory authority or the formal assent of the whole body of shareholders.—Quære, Is such an assignment within the provisions of the Chattel Mortgage Act of Ontario, R. S. O. c. 119?—Where such an assignment was made, and the property formally handed over by the directors to the trustees, who took possession and subsequently advertised and sold the property under the deed of assignment: Held, that if the assignment did come within the terms of the Act its provisions were fully complied with, the deed being duly registered and there being an actual and continued change of possession as required by s. 5.—In such deed of assignment the property was described as "all the real estate, lands, tenements and hereditaments of the said debtors (company) whatsoever and whosoever, of or to which they are now seized or entitled, or of or to which they have any estate, right or interest of any kind or description, with the appurtenances, the particulars of which are more particularly set out in the schedule hereto, and all and singular the personal estate and effects, stock in trade, goods, chattels, . . . and all other the personal estate and effects whatsoever and wheresoever, whether upon the premises where the debtors' business is carried on or elsewhere, and which the said debtors are possessed of or entitled to in any way whatever." The schedule annexed specifically designated the real estate and included the foundry, erections and buildings thereon erected, and all articles such as engines, etc., in or upon said premises.—Held, that this was a sufficient description of the property intended to be conveyed to satisfy R. S. O. c. 119, s. 23; McCall v. Wolff (13 C. S. C. R. 130), approved and distinguished. The judgment appealed from (13 Ont. App. R. 7), was affirmed. Hovey v. Whiting, xiv., 515. NOTE.—48 Vict. c. 26, s. 12, was passed since this decision.

22. Transfer of mortgage—Assignment of rights under policy—Signification of transfer—Art. 1571 C. C.—Right of action.—In the Province of Quebec, an assignment of rights under a policy of insurance is ineffectual unless signification thereof has been made in compliance with the provisions of article 1571 of the Civil Code.—A mortgagee of insured premises to whom payment is to be made in case of loss "as his interest may appear" cannot recover on the policy when his mortgage has been assigned and he has ceased to have any interest therein at the time of the loss. Guerin v. Manchester Assurance Company, xxix., 139.

23. Assignment of chose in action—Suit by assignee—Notice to debtor—R. S. N. S. (4 ser.) c. 94, ss. 355, 357.—R. S. N. S. (4 ser.) c. 94, s. 355, authorizes the assignee of a chose in action in certain cases to sue thereon in the Supreme Court as his assignor might have done, and s. 357 provides that before such action is brought a notice in writing, signed by the assignee, his agent or attorney, stating the right of the assignee and specifying his demand thereunder, shall be served on the party to be sued. Pursuant to this section the assignee of a debt served the following notice:—"Pictou, Nov. 21st, 1878. Alex. Grant, Esq.: Admr. Estate of Alexander McDonald, deceased.—Dear Sir,—You are hereby notified in accordance with c. 94 of the Revised Statutes, s. 357, that the debt due by the above estate to Finlay Thompson has been assigned by him to Alexander D. Cameron, who hereby claims payment of twelve hundred dollars, the amount of the said debt so assigned to him. S. H. Holmes, Att'y. of Alex. D. Cameron.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (23 N. S. Rep. 50), that the notice was a sufficient compliance with the statute. Grant v. Cameron, xviii., 716.

24. Lien for costs—Costs of execution creditor—Construction of statute—48 Vict. c. 26, s. 9—49 Vict. c. 25, s. 2—R. S. O. (1887) c. 124, s. 9.—Under 48 Vict. c. 26, s. 9 (Ont.), as amended by 49 Vict. c. 25, s. 2, an assignment for the general benefit of creditors has precedence of executions not completely executed by payment subject to the lien of any execution creditor for his costs where there is but one execution in the sheriff's hands, or of the creditor who has first placed his execution in the sheriff's hands when there are more than one.—Held, Gwynne and Patterson, JJ., dissenting, that the lien created by this statute is not confined to the costs of issuing the execution, but covers all the costs of the action.—Judgment appealed from (16 Ont. App. R. 311) affirmed. Clarkson v. Ryan, xvii., 251.

25. Partnership—Judicial abandonment—Dissolution—Composition—Subrogation—Confusion of rights—Compensation—Arts. 772 and 778 C. C. P.—A partner in a commercial firm which made a judicial abandonment, was indebted to the firm at the time of the abandonment in a large amount overdrawn upon his personal account. Subsequently he made and carried out a composition with the creditors of the firm and, with the approval of the court, the curator transferred to him, by an assignment in authentic form, "all the assets and estate generally of the said late firm," . . . "as they existed at the time the said curator was appointed." At the same time the creditors discharged both him and his partners from all liability in respect of the partnership. Held, affirming the decision of the court below, that the effect of the judicial abandonment was to transfer to the curator not only the partnership estate, but also the separate estates of each partner as well as the partners' individual rights as between themselves.—Held, reversing the decision of the court below, Strong, C.J., and Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the assignment of the estate by the curator and the discharge by the creditors, taken together, had the effect of releasing all the partners from the firm debts, but vested all the rights which had been transferred by the abandonment in the transferee personally and could not revive the individual rights of the partners as between themselves, and that in consequence any debt owing by the transferee to the partnership at the time of the abandonment became extinguished by confusion. McLean v. Stewart, xxv., 225.

It need not state by whom the copies were certified.—Counsel for the person served will not be allowed to cross-examine the bailiff as to the contents of the copies served without producing them or laying a foundation for secondary evidence. BAILMENT.

1. Consignment of goods against supplies advanced—Sale of fish in storage—Right to hold for unpaid purchase money—Part delivery—Warehouseman's lien—Trover.]—Appellant was supplying S., who was connected with the fishing business, and who in return sent him all his fish, to be sold and proceeds placed to credit of account. In October, 1877, S. forwarded in the usual manner 77 bbls. herring and 236 bbls. mackerel, and in November personally sold all the fish, including the mackerel, to R., when some were delivered, leaving 236 bbls. in appellant's store, and in part payment received a note for $4,000 at four months, which he transferred to appellant on general account. R. became insolvent, and respondent, as assignee, brought an action of trover to recover the 236 bbls. of mackerel. After issue joined, the appellant proved against the estate of R. on the note and received a dividend. The Chief Justice at the trial gave judgment for plaintiff and found that the plaintiff had knowledge that the fish were included by the insolvent in his statement of assets and made no objection to the assignee or creditors.—Held, Strong, J., dissenting, that as the appellants had failed to prove any right of property in themselves, the respondent had as against them a right to immediate possession; that S. had not stored the fish by way of security for a debt due by him, and as the appellants had knowledge that the fish were included by the insolvent in his statement of assets, to which statement they made no objection, but proved against the estate for the whole amount of the note, and received a dividend thereon, they could not now claim the fish or set up a claim for lien thereon. *Troop v. 1. CHEQUES AND ORDERS.

1. Cheque payable at future date—Powers of manager—Acceptance—Discount in course of business.—In 1881 G., having business transactions with the Exchange Bank, agreed with C., president and manager of the bank, that in lieu of further advances, the bank would accept his cheque made payable at a future date.

On 19th October, 1881, G. drew a cheque on the Exchange Bank, and after having it accepted as follows: "Good on 19th February, 1882, T. Craig, president," got the cheque discounted by the People's Bank, and deposited the proceeds to his credit in the Exchange Bank. This cheque was renewed on 23rd May, presented at the Exchange Bank and paid. Thereupon another cheque for the same amount was accepted in the same way and discounted by the People's Bank on 7th September, 1883. At the time of the suspension of payment by the Exchange Bank, the People's Bank had in its possession four cheques signed by G. and accepted by T. Craig, President of the Exchange Bank, which were subsequently presented for payment and duly protested. The total of these cheques was $66,020.64, and one of them, dated 7th September, 1883, for $31,000, was a renewal of the cheque the proceeds of which had been paid to the credit of G. in the Exchange Bank.—On action for $66,020.64 on the four cheques, the Exchange Bank pleaded, inter alia that C. had not acted within the scope of his duties and within the limits of his powers, and that the bank had never authorized or ratified his acceptance of G.'s cheques.—Held, per Ritchie, C.J., and Fournier and Henry, JJ., affirming the judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 3 Q. B. 232). (Strong, Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ., contra), that under the circumstances the Exchange Bank was liable for the acceptance by their president and manager of G.'s cheques discounted by the People's Bank in good faith and in due course of business. *Exchange Bank of Canada v. 4. Insolvent bank—Liquidation — Deposit after suspension.—A person who makes a deposit with a bank after its suspension, the deposit consisting of cheques of third parties drawn on and accepted by the bank in question, is not entitled to be paid by privilege the amount of such deposit. Ontario Bank v. Chaplin; in re Exchange Bank of Canada, xx., 152.

5. Deposit for special purpose — Promissory note — Misapplication of funds — New trial—Evidence — Verdict.—S. Bros. effected a composition under the Insolvent Act of 1875, for thirty-three and one-third per cent. By deed of composition and discharge the insolvents covenanted to pay the composition in four payments, and to give each creditor notes for the several payments falling due 4th November, 1876, 4th May, 1877, 4th November, 1877, and 4th May, 1878.—The first notes were to be secured by the indorsement of H. and D. and all the notes were to be further secured by the assignee, holding in trust as security real estate, which formed part of the assets.—The notes were given, and the first series paid, except two held by the Ontario

Bank.—The gross composition was $11,931.89; each instalment being $2,982.97. The two unpaid notes for $260.84, and $1,036.30 were charged at maturity to the account of S. B. in the bank, and a renewal taken from them with the same indorsers for two months, the original notes being cancelled.—The note was three times again renewed, always with the same indorsers, for 20, 10 and 30 days, the last due 1st May, 1877, for $1310.97. In 1876, S. B. being unable to meet the composition payments, applied to the trust and loan company for a loan of $9,000—and subsequently for an additional $5,000—on the security of their real estate, which the company agreed to advance. The firm of S. C. & G., solicitors (of which plaintiff was the senior partner) was employed by the company to see that title was made satisfactory, and complete the loan. A mortgage for $9,090 was executed and registered in December, 1876, and a mortgage of $5,000 was given in March, 1877. The title was found vested in the assignee as security for the composition notes, and it became necessary to pay the whole composition and to obtain from the assignee a re-conveyance to S. B. to protect the title of the company, as mortgagees, before the loan could be carried out. Plaintiff was instructed to purchase or pay all the notes unpaid, and for that purpose, on 3rd May, 1877, the company, inclosed two cheques to plaintiff for $8,599.90 and $4,780.70, with direction to pay the notes falling due the following day. On 4th May plaintiff deposited in the bank the following cheque:

“OTTAWA, May 4th, 1877.

“THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE.

“Pay Manager Ontario Bank or order $4,500 to purchase composition notes of S. B. for T. and L. Co. of Canada.

STEWART, CHRYSLER & GORMULLY.”

which was indorsed by the manager: “Credit S. B. composition account. (Sd.) J. H. W., Mgr.”—The second instalment of composition notes due on that day, with the note for $1,310.97, was paid and charged against this deposit. The bank manager who held the one note then three days overdue, and at whose office all the notes falling due that day were payable, had been assured by S. B. in the previous October or November that the overdue note should be the first thing paid out of the loan they had then in contemplation, and he was therefore prepared to find that that note was being provided for. H., bookkeeper for S. B., had been their agent in procuring that note to be held in expectation of payment from the loan and did not know that the loan was to pay the latter notes only, and he had that very day a statement shewing notes to the amount of $4,100 to be paid, including the $1,310.97 note. But while the manager and H. were thus depending on having this particular note paid, the plaintiff was ignorant of its existence.—As soon as plaintiff became aware that the note had been charged to this account he protested against the right of the defendant to do so. He afterwards paid in other moneys to meet the third and fourth instalments, and at last he signed the formal confirmation of his account, required by some banks when the customer's cheques are returned to him. This was an oversight and was corrected by a tender of the note in question, and a demand of the money.—This action was instituted to recover the $1,310.97, and at the trial the only question left to the jury was:—“Was this $1,310 a composition note or was it not? Was it a composition note of S. B.?” And the jury was directed that if it was not such, the bank was not justified in charging it against the deposit of $4,500, and the plaintiff entitled to recover. The jury found for plaintiff for $1,503.50; the judge reserving leave to move to enter nonsuit. Defendants obtained a rule nisi to shew cause why the verdict should not be set aside and a new trial had or a nonsuit pursuant to leave reserved, or why a new trial should not be had, on the ground that the verdict was contrary to law and evidence, and against the weight of evidence. Judgment made absolute the rule and ordered that the verdict be set aside and a new trial had without costs, on the ground that the note was a composition note and that the only question left to the jury, being whether this note was or was not a composition note, and the jury, having found a verdict for the plaintiff, must have been of the opinion that it was not, and consequently the finding of the jury was contrary to the evidence.—The Court of Appeal for Ontario allowed an appeal with costs, and directed that the rule should be discharged with costs, on the ground that the question as to whether the note in question was a composition note or not was immaterial, and that there was no evidence proper to leave to the jury on behalf of defendants, and the defence set up was not maintainable in law upon the undisputed facts in evidence.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (Ritchie, C.J., doubting, and Gwynne, J., dissenting), that the deposit was for the specific purpose of meeting the notes due that day, and the manager was not authorized to apply the money to take up the note in question, and there was no ratification by plaintiff of his act. The whole case being before the court on undoubted evidence it was unnecessary to refer it to another jury.—Per Gwynne, J. The case having been tried only upon a question wholly irrelevant as to whether the note in question was a composition note or not, and nothing else having been submitted to the jury, the verdict was the result of a defective proceeding and there was a total miscarriage which could only be rectified by a new trial.—The Supreme Court of Canada has been given by special statute jurisdiction in its discretion to order a new trial if the ends of justice may seem to require it, although such new trial may be deemed necessary upon the ground that the verdict is against the weight of evidence—that is to say, upon a ground for which it would have been competent for the court of first instance in the mere exercise of its discretion to have ordered a new trial. But that the court should prevent a trial, which the court of first instance had thought fit to order, purely in the exercise of its discretionary power, is an assertion of jurisdiction which is wholly beyond the powers vested in the Supreme Court of Canada. Appeal dismissed with costs. Ontario Bank v. Stewart, Cass: Dig. (2 ed.) 571.

3. DISCOUNTING BILLS, ETC.

7. Agent's excess of authority — Dealings contrary to instructions — Liability to bank—

Discounting for his own accommodation — Parties on accommodation paper.—K., agent of a bank and also a member of a business firm, procured accommodation drafts from a customer of the bank which he discounted as such agent, and without indorsing the drafts, used the proceeds, in violation of his instructions from the head office, in the business of his firm. The firm, having become insolvent, executed an assignment in trust of all their property by which the trustee was to pay "all debts by the assignors or either of them due and owing or accruing or becoming due and owing" to the said bank as first preferred creditor and to the makers of the accommodation paper, among others, as second preferred creditors. The estate not proving sufficient to pay the bank in full a dispute arose as to the accommodation drafts, the bank claiming the right to disavow the action of the agent in discounting them and appropriating the proceeds in breach of his duty as creating a debt due to it from his firm, the makers claiming that they were really debts due to the bank from the insolvents. In a suit to enforce the carrying out of the trusts created by the assignment—Held, affirming the Supreme Court (N.S.), Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the drafts were "debts due and owing" from the insolvents to the bank and within the first preference created by the deed.—Per Ritchie, C.J. K. procured the accommodation paper for the sole purpose of borrowing the money of the bank for his firm and when the firm received that money they became debtors to the bank for the amount. — Per Strong and Patterson, J.J. The agent being bound to account to the bank for the funds placed at his disposal, he became a debtor to the bank, on his authority being revoked, for the amount of these drafts as money for which he failed to account. Whether or not the bank had a right to elect to treat the act of the agent as a tort was not important as in any case there was a debt due. — Per Gwynne, J. The evidence does not establish that these drafts were anything else than paper discounted in the ordinary course of banking business, as to which the bank had its recourse against all persons whose names appeared on the face of the paper and were not obliged to look to any other for payment. Merchants Bank of Halifax v. Whidden, xix, 53.

The same day it went through the clearing house and was paid by the Bank of H. to the Imperial Bank. The error was discovered next day by the Bank of H., and repayment demanded from the Imperial Bank and refused. The Bank of H. brought action to recover from the Imperial Bank $495, overpaid on the cheque. Defendant contended that the note as presented to be marked good was so drawn as to make the subsequent alteration an easy matter, and the plaintiff's act in marking it in that form was negligence which prevented recovery.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (27 Ont. App. R. 590), which affirmed that at the trial (31 O. R. 100), that there was nothing in the circumstances to take the case out of the rule that money paid by mistake can be recovered back, and the Bank of H. was therefore entitled to judgment. *Imperial Bank of Canada v. 14. Transfer of hypothec—The Banking Act—34 Vict. c. 5, s. 40—Advances on real estate—Nullity.—B. transferred a hypothec on real estate to the bank, as collateral security for a note which was discounted and the proceeds placed at B.'s credit on the day of the transfer. In an action against the assignee of the insolvent estate of the mortgagee to set aside a prior hypothec, Held, affirming judgment appealed from (1 Dor. Q. B. 357), that the transfer to the bank was not given to secure a past debt, but to cover a contemporaneous loan, and was, therefore, null and void, as being a contravention of the Banking Act, 34 Vict. c. 5, s. 40. Bank of Toronto v. Perkins, viii., 603.

15. The Banking Act—R. S. C. 120, s. 53 et seq.—Warehouse receipts—Parol agreement—Surplus—Arts. 1031, 1981, C. C.—Privileged Lien.—The bank took warehouse receipts from H. as collateral for commercial paper discounted in the ordinary course of business, and having a surplus from the sale of goods represented by the receipts, after paying debts for which they were immediately pledged, claimed under parol agreement to hold that surplus in payment of other debts due by H. H. having become insolvent, a creditor brought action claiming that the surplus must be distributed ratably among the general body of creditors. H. was not made party to the suit. Held, affirming the court of Queen's Bench, that the parol agreement was not contrary to the provisions of the Banking Act, and that, after the goods were lawfully sold, the money that remained, after applying the proceeds of each sale to its proper note, could properly be applied by the bank under the terms of the parol agreement. C.—Loss of thing pledged—Restitution.*—The Exchange Bank in advancing money to F. on the security of Merchants Bank shares caused them to be assigned to their managing director and an entry made in their books that he held the shares on behalf of the bank as security for the loan. The bank subsequently credited F. with the dividends accruing thereon. Later on the managing director pledged these shares to another bank for his own personal debt and absconded. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 7 Q. B. 11), that upon repayment by F. of the loan, the Exchange Bank was bound to return the shares or pay their value.—The prohibition to advance upon security of shares of another bank contained in the amendment to the general Banking Act applies to the bank and not to the borrower.—Per Patterson, J. Assuming that the subsequent amendment of the general Bank Act forbade the taking of such security by any bank, the amendment did not alter the charter of the Exchange Bank, under which it had power to take the shares in question in its corporate name as collateral security.—To take such security may have become an offence against the banking law, punishable from the beginning as a misdemeanour and subject to a pecuniary penalty, but it was not ultra vires.—The declaration of art. 14 C. C. that prohibitive laws import nullity has no application to such a case. Exchange Bank v. Fletcher, xix., 278.

17. Advances—Security in name of third person—Prête-nom—Lien on shares—Claim in insolvency—Mal-administration—Interest—Commencement of proof in writing—Payments to release hypothecs—Evidence—Accounts.—In 1875 the plaintiff, Lamoureux, became insolvent and made an assignment of his estate to one Auger, an official assignee. The claims filed against the estate amounted in all to the sum of $93,105.78 of unprivileged debts, and $895.92 of privileged debts. Among other claims was one by the Bank of St. Johns, defendant, sworn to by L'Ecuier, their cashier, on 5th February, 1876, for $41,431.41, and it was stated that the bank held no security except certain shares owned by the plaintiff of the stock of said bank, valued at $18,000. The claim was based entirely upon promissory notes, eighteen of which, amounting to $11,788.71, had not then matured, the remainder being overdue. A large number of these notes, amounting to $24,500., were indorsed by the cashier, who held a hypothec on property of plaintiff to the extent of $30,000 to secure him against his said indorsements.—Plaintiff compounded for twenty-five cents in the dollar, and the defendant, the Bank of St. Johns, was placed on his dividend sheet for the amount of the alleged unsecured debt, viz., $23,431, the composition on which would be $5,857.86. Plaintiff, not having the amount required to pay the composition to his creditors, in all $24,173.63, entered into negotiations with defendant Molleur to procure it. The extent and nature of the negotiations form the subject of the present contention. They resulted in the execution of a deed dated 16th May, 1876, between plaintiff, his assignee, and Molleur, whereby it was recited that plaintiff had received from Molleur $25,251.55 to pay the composition and to secure repayment of this sum, with a bonus of $4,000, one of the considerations of the advance. At plaintiff's request the assignee thereby assigned and transferred to Molleur all the property belonging to the plaintiff. Molleur was also to be paid the costs and expenses connected with the administration of the property, and continued to deal with the property of plaintiff until 1879, when plaintiff brought this action, alleging the above facts, and further that at the time of the execution of the deed of 16th May, 1876, Molleur was acting as prête-nom or locum tenens of the other defendant, the Bank of St. Johns; that the bank and not Molleur had advanced the $25,251.55 mentioned in the deed; that although it had been agreed between plaintiff and Molleur that only the $25,251.55, with a bonus of $4,000, should be paid to the bank, and upon such payment being made Molleur should re-transfer to plaintiff the property remaining in his possession, Molleur had wrongfully paid to the bank the claim against his estate in full, and had also so improperly managed the estate as to cause plaintiff considerable loss. Plaintiff asked that Molleur should render an account of his administration, that the bank might be declared to be equally responsible with Molleur, who should be held to be merely the locum tenens of the bank, that defendants jointly should be obliged to repay to him the balance of moneys which they had received, after paying the amounts which were authorized by the deed of 16th May, 1876, and that Molleur should also be obliged to re-assign to plaintiff the balance of the plaintiff's property then unsold.—In the course of the proceedings Molleur by his pleas denied that the properties belonging to plaintiff were assigned to him to pay only the sums mentioned by plaintiff; denied that he was locum tenens of the bank; and alleged that at the time of the execution of said deed it was agreed between plaintiff and him, that besides the said sums he should pay the bank the full balance remaining due to said bank on the claim filed against plaintiff beyond the amount of the composition, such balance, amounting to $35,573.56, having necessarily to be paid to discharge the hypothecs held by the indorsers of plaintiff's notes. Thus the total amount which, by Molleur's contention, would have to be paid out of the proceeds of plaintiff's property would be $64,825.11, with expenses of management, and he also claimed that plaintiff agreed to pay interest on the various sums at 9 per cent. per annum. He stated that up to that time he had paid to the bank, and on hypothecary claims on the property and for expenses of management, $62,977.85; he admitted having received from the revenues and sale of portions of the property $49,633.09, and having sold another portion for $1,000 not yet received. He went into particulars with respect of his dealings with certain portions of the property and filed certain statements of account. The result would have been that a considerable balance would still have appeared owing to the bank if the contention of Molleur was correct. Plaintiff objected to the statements of account as not having been sworn to, as required by law, and reiterated his contentions with respect to the agreement between him and Molleur. — On 20th May, 1882, the Superior Court, District of Irberville, by interlocutory judgment, Held, that the defendant Molleur was the locum tenens of the bank, and ordered him to render a proper sworn account. This Molleur did, not only of his dealings with the property up to the time of the institution of the action, but also up to the date of rendering said accounts (15th August, 1882), and claimed that a balance was still due him of $3,814.18.—On 29th January, 1883, Chagnon, J., delivered judgment re-affirming his previous finding, that Molleur was the prête-nom or locum tenens of the bank; held, also, that Molleur was justified in paying to the bank the amount of the notes for which they held the indorsement of L'Ecuyer, there being no evidence that the hypothec held by L'Ecuyer was not a bona fide security of which the bank had a right to the benefit; that the bank was justified in retaining the shares of the plaintiff to be applied on the balance of its claim; that the bank was entitled also to $25,251.55, with the bonus of $4,000, and to interest on all the amounts it was thus declared entitled to at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, with the exception of the bonus, upon which the judge considered no interest should be paid; that, as regards the amount alleged to have been improperly paid the assignee, plaintiff must be left to his recourse against the assignee, or his estate, he being then dead; that, as regards any questions of mal-administration, the recourse of plaintiff, if any, should be reserved to him; and the court directed the accounts to be submitted to an auditor to ascertain the balance on the principles laid down in the judgment, and also directed that, if a balance should be payable by defendants, the defendant Molleur should re-assign to plaintiff the balance of property remaining unsold.—The auditor found a balance in favour of plaintiff of $3,200.60.—On appeals by both parties, the Court of Queen's Bench reversed the findings of Chagnon, J., that Molleur was locum tenens of the bank, and with respect to the rate of interest. In other respects it practically affirmed the judgment of the Superior Court, and sent the case back to that court to have the account rectified in accordance with suggestions in their judgment. Held, that the judgment of Chagnon, J., should be affirmed, with the exception hereafter mentioned. The evidence was ample to lead to the conclusion, beyond any reasonable doubt, that the defendant Molleur was acting as the prête-nom or locum tenens of the bank. The only difficulty with regard to this point was created by the fact that there was no writing to connect the bank with the deed of 16th May, 1876, no commencement de preuve par écrit. But this difficulty was not insuperable.—1st. Because, if held as a bar to considering the bank as the real party liable, the bank would be enabled to commit a fraud upon the plaintiff and to receive and retain monies to which it was not entitled. And secondly, because the bank, by its actions and conduct throughout, had shewn ample ratification of the acts of Molleur, and an acceptance of the deed of 16th May, 1876, and of everything done under it. Whether as the principal party concerned, acting through its locum tenens, or by reason of its having received moneys by collusion with Molleur to which it was not entitled, the bank should be held equally responsible with Molleur.—With reference to the L'Ecuyer notes, the bank did not, these notes being overdue, treat the hypothec taken by L'Ecuyer as any security to it when filing its claim, nor did it appear that plaintiff ever contended at the meeting of his creditors, or in any of the insolvency proceedings, that this hypothec given to L'Ecuyer was in reality held for the bank. Nor was there any evidence to the effect that plaintiff subsequent to the insolvency proceedings, and up to the time of the institution of this action, ever contended that this hypothec was held by the bank, or held otherwise than as a bona fide security by L'Ecuyer himself, and as a security, therefore, which Molleur was bound to pay off to release the properties. On the other hand, there was considerable evidence that plaintiff acknowledged his liability on this hypothec, and wished Molleur to pay off the indebtedness for which it was given. The judge of the Superior Court was justified in holding that Molleur had properly paid the amount of the promissory notes indorsed by L'Ecuyer in order to obtain the discharge of his hypothec.—Further, the bank in filing its claim, was justified in alleging that it held as security only the shares of plaintiff, and that it was further justified in applying the proceeds of these shares to any balance remaining due on the notes of plaintiff after payment of the L'Ecuyer notes.—The Court of Queen's Bench should not have raised the rate of interest to eight per cent., no rate having been mentioned in the deed of 16th May, 1876.—There was one point, however, in the judgment of the Superior Court from which the court dissented. At the time the deed of 16th May, 1876, was executed, there were certain claims being contested before the assignee. The amount of these claims should not have been paid to the assignee before the result of the contestations was declared, or, if paid, the defendants should have taken proceedings in the interest of plaintiff to recover back this amount from the assignee. This amount plaintiff was entitled to, in addition to the sum found by the auditor on the basis of the judgment of the Superior Court.—In all other respects the judgment of the Superior Court was affirmed and the appeal of plaintiff allowed with costs; the cross-appeals were dismissed with costs, plaintiff to receive his costs on the appeal and cross-appeals in the Court of Queen's Bench. La-moureux v. Molleur, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 71.

[The Privy Council refused leave to appeal.]

App. R. 152), affirmed. Bank of Hamilton v. Halstead, xxviii., 235.

21. Bank making advances—Security—Bank Act s. 74—Chattel mortgage.]—H. held a chattel mortgage on a sawmill belonging to G., with the machinery and lumber therein, and all lumber that might at any time thereafter be brought on the premises. The mortgage not being registered gave H. no priority over subsequent incumbrancers. Two months later G. gave H. a second mortgage on said property to secure a note for $794. Shortly after this a contractor applied to G. for a large quantity of lumber for building purposes,

G. being unable to purchase the logs asked the bank for an advance. The bank, knowing G. to be financially embarrassed, refused the advances to him but agreed to make them if some reliable person would purchase the logs, which was done by G.'s bookkeeper, and in consideration of an advance of $3,500, G. assigned the contractor's order to the bookkeeper and agreed to cut the logs at a price fixed and deliver them to the bookkeeper at the mill site. The latter then assigned to the bank all moneys to accrue in respect to the contract, which assignment was agreed to by the contractor, and a day or two after also assigned to the bank three booms of logs by numbers in addition to one assigned previously. This purported to be done under s. 74 of "The Bank Act." Two or three days later G. made an assignment for benefit of his creditors, previous to which, however, the logs had arrived at the mill and were mixed with other logs of G. The greater part had been converted into lumber when H. seized them under his chattel mortgage. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (7 B. C. Rep. 465), that no property in the logs assigned to the bank had passed to G., and that H. having no higher right than his mortgagor, could not claim them under his mortgage.—Shortly before G.'s assignment for benefit of creditors his bookkeeper transferred to the bank a chattel mortgage given him by G. to secure payment of $800. The judgment appealed from ordered the assignee in bankruptcy to pay the bank the balance due on said mortgage. Held, reversing said judgment, that the assignee had been guilty of no acts of conversion and was not liable to repay this money. The mortgage was not given to secure advances and did not give the bank a first lien on the property. The bank was in the same position as if it had received the mortgage directly from G. when he was notoriously insolvent. Houston v. Merchants Bank of Halifax, xxxi., 361.

9. TRANSFER OF SHARES.

35. Shareholders—Transfers of stock—The Banking Act, 34 Vict. c. 5, ss. 19, 58—Resolutions not binding on absent shareholders—Equitable plea.—In an action against the appellant as shareholder, to recover a call of 10 per cent. on twenty-five shares held by him in a bank, he defended on equitable grounds, that before call or notice thereof he made, in good faith for valid consideration, a transfer of all the shares to a person authorized and qualified to receive the same, and he and the transferee of the shares did all things necessary for the valid and final transferring of the shares; but the plaintiffs, without legal excuse and without reason, refused to record such transfer, or to register the same in the books of the bank, or to recognize the said transfer. And he prayed that the bank be compelled to complete and make the transfer valid and effectual, and enjoined from further prosecution of the suit. —The plaintiffs filed no replication to this plea, but at the trial before James, J., without a jury, attempted to justify the refusal upon the ground that at a special general meeting of the shareholders of the bank, it was resolved "that the bank should not be allowed to go into liquidation, but that steps should be taken to obtain a loan of such sum as may be necessary to enable the bank to resume specie payments, and that the shareholders agree to hold their shares without assigning them until the principal and interest due on such loan shall be fully paid, and to execute, when required, a bond to that effect."—The defendant was not present when this resolution passed, and it appeared that the bank effected a loan of $80,000 from the Bank of N. S. upon the security of one B., who, to secure himself, took bonds for lesser amounts from other shareholders, including the defendant, whose bond was released by B. when the defendant sold his shares in 1877 to persons then in good standing, and powers of attorney, executed by defendant and the purchasers respectively, were sent to the manager of the bank, in whose favour they were drawn, to enable him to complete the transfer. The directors of the bank refused to permit the transfer, but the defendant was not notified of their refusal, nor did they make any claim against him for any indebtedness on his part to the bank; and it appeared also from the evidence that subsequently to the resolution, and prior to the sale of defendant's shares, a large number of other shares had been transferred in the books of the bank. In October, 1879, the bank became insolvent, and the Bank of N. S. obtained leave to intervene and carry on the action.—A verdict was found by the judge in favour of the appellant; but the Supreme Court (N. S.), James, J., dissenting, made absolute a rule nisi to set it aside.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (4 N. S. Rep. 146), that the resolution could not bind shareholders not present at the meeting, even if it had been acted upon, and under the facts disclosed in evidence the defendant could not be deprived of his legal right under the Banking Act to transfer his shares, and to have the transfer recorded in the books of the bank; and the plea was therefore a good equitable defence to the action.—Per Strong and Gwynne, JJ. It is doubtful whether the strict rules applied in England to equitable defences pleaded under the C. L. P. Act, could be adopted with reference to such pleas in Nova Scotia, where both legal and equitable remedies are administered by the same court and in the same form of procedure. Smith v. Bank of Nova Scotia, viii., 558.

10. WINDING-UP.

36. Insolvency—Winding-up—Contributories—Set-off—45 Vict. c. 23, ss. 75, 76—Construction of statute—Retrospective legislation.—In an action by the bank on a promissory note, defendant pleaded set-off of a draft made by the bank and indorsed to him. Replication, that the defendant was a contributory on the stock book of the bank, and knew that the bank was insolvent when the draft was purchased. Demurrer, that replication did not aver that the debt for which the action was brought was due from the defendant in his capacity as shareholder or contributory.—Held, reversing the Supreme Court of P. E. I., that the replication was bad in law.—Appellant gave his note for $6,000 which was indorsed to the Bank of P. E. I. The Union Bank held a draft, made by the Bank of P. E. I. for nearly the same amount, which appellant purchased for about $200 less than its face value on 5th May, 1882. Being sued on the note he set off the amount of the draft and paid the difference. He admitted purchase for the purpose of off-set to the claim on his note, which he had made non-negotiable and also that, if he could succeed in his set-off, and another party could succeed in a similar transaction, the Union Bank would get in full their claim against the Bank of P. E. I., which had become insolvent. The trial judge charged that if the draft was indorsed to defendant to enable him to use it as a set-off, he could not do so, because he was a contributory within the meaning of s. 76 of the Winding-up Act, which came into force 17th May, 1882, and was retrospective as regards indorsements before it was passed, but within 30 days before the commencement of winding-up proceedings. The jury, under the direction of the judge, found a general verdict for the plaintiff for the amount of the note and interest, which the Supreme Court refused to disturb.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that the appellant having purchased the draft for value and in good faith prior to the commencement of winding-up proceedings, the Winding-up Act was not applicable, and, therefore, the appellant was entitled to the benefit of his set-off.—That the Winding-up Act was not retrospective as to this indorsement.—Held, also, that ss. 75 and 76 in respect to claims acquired by contributories within 30 days of winding-up proceedings for use as a set-off, only apply to actions against a contributory when the debt claimed is due from the person sued in his capacity as contributory. Ings v. Bank of P. E. I., xi., 265.

37. Liquidation of insolvent bank—45 Vict. c. 23 — 47 Vict. c. 39—Winding-up.]—An insolvent bank can only be wound up with the preliminary proceedings provided by 45 Vict. c. 23, ss. 99 to 120, as amended by 47 Vict. c. 39, s. 2, whether or not it may be in process of liquidation at the time. Mott v. Bank of Nova Scotia, xiv., 650.

Troop*, xvi., 456.

39. Insolvent bank — Priority of note-holders — Deposit by insurance company — Prerogative of Crown — R. S. C. c. 120, s. 79.]—The Crown prerogatives can only be taken away by express statutory enactment. Therefore, Her Majesty's right to payment in full of a claim against the assets of an insolvent bank in priority to all other creditors is not interfered with by the provisions of the Bank Act (R. S. C. c. 120, s. 79), giving note-holders a first lien on such assets, the Crown not being named in such enactment. Gwynne and Patterson, JJ., contra. Maritime Bank v. The Queen, xvii., 657.

40. Insolvent bank — Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, s. 79 — Lien on assets — Priority of note-holders — 53 Vict. c. 31, s. 53.]—Under s. 79 of the Bank Act, (R. S. C. c. 120), note-holders have the first lien on the assets of an insolvent bank in priority to the Crown, Strong and Taschereau, JJ., dissenting. Judgment appealed from (27 N. B. Rep. 379) varied. Liquidators Maritime Bank v. Receiver-General of New Brunswick, xx., 695.

41. Insolvency — Winding-up — Increased capital — Contributories — Shareholders — Double liability — 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.)]—The Bank of P. E. I. was incorporated by 18 Vict. c. 10, capital stock fixed at £30,000 P. E. I. Cy., (£97,333.33) in shares of £10, ($32.44), power to increase this capital by the issue of additional shares, of same value, was given by ss. 39, 40, 41 & 42, which prescribed the manner of effecting this increase, and the sale of the new stock by auction, s. 43 provided that "the said additional shares shall be subject to all the rules, regulations and provisions to which the original stock is subject, or may hereafter be subject, by any law of this island." Section 19 of the Act was repealed, and re-enacted by s. 3 of 19 Vict. c. 11, as follows:—"The holders of the stock of the said bank shall be chargeable in their private and individual capacity, and shall be holden for the payment and redemption of all bills which may have been issued by the said corporation, and also for the payment of all debts at any time due from the said corporation, in proportion to the stock they respectively hold, provided, however, that in no case shall any one stockholder be liable to pay a sum exceeding twice the amount of stock actually then held by him, over and above, and in addition to the amount of stock actually by him paid into the bank, provided nevertheless that nothing in this Act, or in the said hereinbefore recited Act contained, shall be construed to exempt the joint stock of the said corporation from being also liable for, and chargeable with, the debts and engagements of the same."—No increase to capital was made. In 1872, the bank having a balance of net profits on hand of $27,286.41, pursuant to resolution at the general annual meeting of shareholders, on application to the legislature, 35 & 36 Vict. c. 23 was passed, enacting:—1. "It shall and may be lawful for the board of directors of the Bank of P. E. I. at any time, and from time to time, to enlarge the capital stock of the said bank by applying to each individual share of the capital a portion of the rest or surplus profits, lying at the time at the credit of the said bank." 2. "Such mode of enlarging the capital stock of the said bank shall not prevent the enlargement of the same by the mode pointed out in the 39th, 40th, 41st, 42nd and 43rd sections of the Act of incorporation." In 1872, the sum of $10,666.67 was taken out of the profits and added to the capital stock, raising the value of shares by $3.55 or to a total par value of $36. In 1875, $12,000 profits was carried to credit of capital stock, making the capital $120,000, and the par value of shares $40.

On 19th June, 1882, an order was made for winding up the bank, which had become insolvent within the meaning of the Act, 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.). Liquidators were appointed. Subsequently an order nisi was granted by Peters, J., calling upon all shareholders to shew cause why they should not pay calls to the amount of $80 per share, which he made absolute after hearing counsel for contributories. This order was confirmed by the full court, two judges thinking themselves disqualified from hearing the appeal other than in a merely formal manner.—On appeal, Held, reversing this decision, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the shareholders were not liable to pay more than $64.89 per share, or twice the amount of their original stock. The Act of 1872, which authorized the alleged increase, had no provision creating any double liability, as was imposed on original stock, and new stock created under 18 Vict. c. 10, and the fair inference from the omission of any express enactment with reference to the increased stock was that the legislature did not intend to clothe it with double liability. Morris v. Liquidators Bank of P. E. I.; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 68.

42. Winding-up Act — Moneys paid out of court — Order made by inadvertence — Jurisdiction to compel repayment — R. S. C. c. 129, ss. 40, 41, 94—Locus standi of Receiver-General — 55 & 56 Vict. c. 28, s. 2. — Construction of statute.—The liquidators of an insolvent bank passed their final accounts and paid a balance remaining in their hands, into court. It appeared that by orders issued either through error or by inadvertence the balance so deposited had been paid out to a person who was not entitled to receive the money, and the Receiver-General for Canada, as trustee of the residue, intervened, and applied for an order to have the money repaid in order to be disposed of under the provisions of the Winding-up Act.—Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, that the Receiver-General was entitled so to intervene, although the three years from the date of the deposit mentioned in the Winding-up Act had not expired.—Held, also, that even if he was not so entitled to intervene, the provincial courts had jurisdiction to compel repayment into court of the moneys improperly paid out. *Hogaboom v. 1. Bar—Prohibition—Advocate—Bar of Province of Quebec—Discipline—Jurisdiction—Irregular procedure—Domestic tribunal—Powers — Arts. 3504 et seq. R. S. Q.—58 Vict. c. 36 (Que.)—In pursuance of statutory powers, the Bar of Montreal suspended a practising advocate after holding an inquiry into charges against him which, however, had been withdrawn by the private prosecutor before the council had considered the matter. It did not appear that witnesses had been examined upon oath during the inquiry and no notes in writing of the evidence of witnesses adduced had been taken, the effect of such absence of written notes being that the appellant had been deprived of an opportunity of effectively prosecuting an appeal to the General Council of the Bar of the Province of Quebec. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (Q. R. S. Q. B. 26), that the local Council of the Bar of Montreal had jurisdiction to proceed with the inquiry in the interest of the profession notwithstanding the withdrawal of the charge by the private prosecutor; that a complaint in any form sufficient to disclose charges against an advocate of improperly carrying on trade and commerce and unduly retaining the money of a client, contrary to the by-laws of the local section of the bar, is a matter over which the Council of the Bar had complete jurisdiction; and further, that the omission to preserve a complete record of the proceedings upon the inquiry held by the council, or to take written notes of the evidence of witnesses adduced, constituted mere irregularities in procedure which were insufficient to justify a writ of prohibition. *Honan v. S.), hold a fund for distribution among Church of England clergymen of the province, and one of the rules governing its distribution is that no clergyman receiving an income of $1,000 and upwards from certain named sources shall be entitled to participate. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (21 N. S. Rep. 309), that a rector was not debarred from participating in this fund because the salary paid to his curate, if added to his own salary, would exceed $1,000, his individual income being less than that amount. Diocesan Synod N. S. v. Ritchie, xviii., 705.

2. Rules—Construction—Suspension of payment—53 Vict. c. 39 (Ont.)—In 1889 the Police Force of Hamilton established a benefit fund, to provide for a gratuity to any member resigning or being incapacitated from length of service or injury, and to the family of any member dying in the service. Each member of the force contributed a percentage of his pay for the purposes of the fund, and one of the rules provided as follows: "No money to be drawn from the fund for any purpose whatever until it reach the sum of eight thousand ($8,000) dollars." Held, that in case of a member of the force dying before the fund reached the said sum, the gratuity to his family was merely suspended, and was payable as soon as that amount was realized. Miller v. Hamilton Police Benefit Fund, xxviii., 475.

3. Appeal—Special leave—60 & 61 Vict. (D.) c. 34, s. 1 (e)—Benevolent society—Certificate of insurance.—An action in which less than the sum or value of one thousand dol-

L. Co." An action on this note against the individual members of the company was defended on the ground that it was the personal note of R.: that the words "manager," etc., were merely descriptive of R.'s occupation, and that the defendants were not liable. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (1 N. W. T. Rep., part 3, p. 41), that as the evidence shewed that when the note was given, both R. and the creditor intended it to be the note of the company, and as

R., as manager, was competent to make a note on which the members of the company would be liable, and as the form of the note was sufficient for that purpose, plaintiffs were entitled to recover. Fairchild v. Ferguson, xxi., 484.

I. as it appeared by the evidence that he had indorsed without consideration for the accommodation of the holders, and upon an agreement with them that he should not be held in any manner liable upon the note. Held, in a subsequent action on the judgment to recover from J. I. as a member of the firm who had made the note, that the verdict in the former suit was conclusive in his favour, the said agreement meaning that he was not to be liable either as maker or indorser. *Isbester v. 11. Promissory note—Illegal consideration—Election law—38 Vict. c. 7, s. 266 (Que.)—R. S. Q. art. 425—Nullity.—S. (appellant's husband) brought an action against St. L. on a promissory note for $4,000, a renewal of a note for the same amount made by S., endorsed by him and handed to St. L., alleging that the original note had been made and discounted for the accommodation of St. L. The evidence shewed that the proceeds were paid over to D., as agent for S., to be used as a portion of a provincial election fund controlled by S. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 5 Q. B. 332), that the plaintiff could not recover, even assuming a promise to pay on the part of St. L., the transaction being illegal under 38 Vict. c. 7, s. 266 (now R. S. Q. art. 425), which makes void any contract, promise or undertaking, in any way relating to an election under the said Act. Dansereau v. St. Louis, xviii., 587.

12. Promissory note—Release from obligation—Failure of consideration—Discharge of maker.—C. purchased Y.'s interest in lands upon which there was a mortgage, and gave his notes to Y. for the balance of the price. Subsequently C. failed and Y. being liable on the mortgage, C. agreed to obtain Y.'s discharge from the mortgagees on payment of $1,000, and Y. signed a document agreeing that all parties should be in the same position as if the deed of sale had never been passed. The mortgagees subsequently gave a discharge to Y. in conformity with the above agreement. In an action by Y. against C. on his notes; Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (33 L. C. Jur. 106), that there was no consideration given for the notes and that C. was discharged from all liability. Yon v. Cassidy, xviii., 713.

13. Promissory note—Duress—Verdict of jury.—In an action against the maker of a promissory note, the local manager of the plaintiff bank, the defence was that he had been coerced by the head manager, under threats of dismissal and criminal prosecution, into signing the note to cover up deficits in customers' accounts in which he had no personal interest. His evidence at the trial to the same effect was denied by the head manager. Held, that the jury having believed the defendant's account and given him a verdict which the evidence justified, such verdict ought to stand. *Western Bank of Canada v. 7. FRAUDULENT INSTRUMENTS.

19. Forgery—Ratification—Estoppel—Fraud—Breach of trust.—Y., who had been in partnership with defendants, under the name of the H. C. Co., retired from the firm and became general manager of the company, but with no power to sign drafts, drew a bill for his private purposes in the name of defendants on a firm in Montreal, which was discounted by the bank. Before the bill matured, Y. wrote defendants informing them of having used their name, but that they would not have to pay the draft. The bill purported to be indorsed by the company per J. M. Y. (one of defendants), and the other defendant having seen it in the bank examined it carefully, and remarked that "J. M. Y.'s signature was not usually so shaky." J. M. Y. afterwards called at the bank, and examined the bill very carefully, and in answer to a request from the manager for a cheque he said that it was too late that day but he would send a cheque the day following. No cheque was sent, and a few days before the bill matured the manager and solicitor of the bank called to see J. M. Y., and asked why he had not sent the cheque. He admitted that he had promised to do so and at the time he thought he would. Y. afterwards left the country, and in an action against defendants on the bill they pleaded that the signature of J. M. Y. was forged. The jury found that it was forged and judgment was given for defendants. Held, affirming the decision appealed from (15 Ont. App. R. 573), which reversed that of the Divisional Court (13 O. R. 520), that though fraud or breach of trust may be ratified forgery cannot, and the bank could not recover on the forged bill against the defendants. *La Banque Jacques-Cartier v. 10. INDORSEMENTS.

23. Secretion—Remedy by indorser—Capias—Art. 1953 C. C.—Art. 798 C. C. P.]—An indorser on a note discounted by a bank may under art. 1953 C. C. avail himself of the remedy by capias. Mackinnon v. Keroack, xv., 111.

24. Action—Suretyship—Qualified indorsement.—D. indorsed two promissory notes, pour aval, at the same time marking them with the words "not negotiable and given as security." The notes were intended as security to the firm of A. & R. for advances to a third person on the publication of certain guide-books which were to be left in the hands of the firm as further security, the proceeds of sales to be applied towards reimbursement of the advances. It was also agreed that payment of the notes was not to be required while the books remained in the possession of the firm. The notes were protested for non-payment, and A. having died, R. as surviving partner of the firm and vested with all rights in the notes, sued the maker and indorser jointly and severally for the full amount. At the time of the action, some of the books were still in the possession of R. and it appeared that he had not rendered the indorser any statement of the financial situation between the principal debtor and the firm. Held, that the action was not based upon the real contract between the parties and that the plaintiff was not, under the circumstances, entitled to recover in an action upon the notes. Held, further, per Sedgewick, J., that neither the payee of a promissory note nor the drawer of a bill of exchange can maintain an action against an indorser, where the action is founded upon the instrument itself. Robertson v. Davis, xxvii., 571.

25. Promissory note—Indorser—Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, s. 56—Chattel mortgage—Consideration.—Under s. 56 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, a person who indorses a promissory note not indorsed by the payee may be liable as an indorsee to the latter.—The provisions of the Ontario Chattel Mortgage Act requiring the consideration of a mortgage to be expressed therein is satisfied when the mortgage recites that the indorsement of a note is the consideration and then sets out the note. Only the facts need be stated, not their legal effect. Robinson v. Mann, xxxi., 484.

26. Banking—Bills and notes—Conditional indorsement—Principal and agent—Knowledge by agent—Constructive notice—Deceit.—A promissory note indorsed on the express understanding that it should only be available upon the happening of a certain condition is not binding upon the indorser where the condition has not been fulfilled. Pym v. Campbell (6 B. & B. 370), followed.—The principal is affected by notice to the agent unless it appears that the agent was actually implicated in a fraud upon the principal, and it is not sufficient for the holder to shew that the agent had an interest in deceiving his principal. Kettlewell v. Watson (21 Ch. D. 685), and Richards v. The Bank of Nova Scotia (26 Can. S. C. R. 381) referred to. Commercial Bank of Windsor v. Morrison, xxxii., 98.

12. LETTER OF CREDIT.

30. "Letter of credit"—Negotiable instrument—"Bills of Exchange Act, 1890"—"The Bank Act," R. S. C. c. 120.—A bank cannot deal in such securities as a "letter of credit" signed by the Provincial Secretary of Quebec, without the authority of an order in council, which is dependent on the vote of the legislature, and therefore not a negotiable instrument within the Bills of Exchange Act of 1890, or the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, ss. 45 and 60. Jacques-Cartier Bank v. The Queen, xxv., 84.

13. LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.

31. Security by deed—Novation—Arts. 1169 and 1171 C. C.—Prescription.

See PRESCRIPTION, 6.

14. NEGOTIABLE NOTES.

32. Promissory note—Non-negotiable—Indorsement—Liability of maker—Estoppel.—H., a director of a company, signed, with other directors, a joint and several promissory note in favour of the company, and took security on a steamer of the company. The note was, in form, non-negotiable, but that fact was not observed by the officials of the bank, who discounted it and paid over the proceeds of the company. H. knew the note was discounted, and before it fell due he had in writing acknowledged his liability on it. Held, affirming the Court of Appeal, and the Divisional Court (9 O. R. 655), Strong, J., dissenting, that although, in fact, the note was not negotiable, the bank in equity was entitled to recover, it being shewn that the note was intended by the makers to have been made negotiable, and was issued by them as such, but, by mistake or inadvertence, it was not expressed to be payable to the order of the payees. Harvey v. Bank of Hamilton, xvi., 714.

15. NOTICE.

33. Holder of note—Death of indorser—Notice of dishonour—37 Vict. c. 47, s. 1 (D.)

—The plaintiffs discounted a note indorsed by S. to a bank, and S. died before maturity. When the note fell due and was protested for non-payment, the bank, being unaware of the death of S., addressed notice of protest to S. at Toronto, where the note was dated. The plaintiffs, who knew of S.'s death before maturity, subsequently took up the note from the bank, and, relying upon the notice of dishonour given by the bank, sued S.'s executor. Held, reversing the Court of Appeal for Ontario, that the holders of the note sued upon when it matured, not knowing of S.'s death, and having sent him a notice in pursuance of the statute (37 Vict. c. 47), had given good and sufficient notice to bind S. and the defendant as his executor, and that the notice so given enured to the benefit of the plaintiffs as holders of the note. Cosgrave v. Boyle, vi., 165.

34. Dishonour—Notice—Mailing in post office—37 Vict. c. 47, s. 1 (D.)—The bank sued on notes indorsed by McN., which were dated at S., and payable at the agency of the bank there. McN. resided at S. and his place of business was there. Notices of dishonour were given to McN. by posting such notices, addressed to him at S., at 1 o'clock p.m. on the day after that on which the notes matured, postage prepaid. There is no local delivery by carriers from the post office in S. No evidence was given by McN. that he did not receive the notices, nor was evidence given that he had received them. The jury found for the defendant, contrary to the charge of the judge. A rule nisi to set aside this verdict, and for a new trial was discharged on the ground that the posting of the notices was not sufficient notice of dishonour, as both plaintiff and defendant resided in the same town, and the notices should have been delivered to the defendant personally, or left at his residence or place of business. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that since the passing of 37 Vict. c. 47, s. 1 (D.), the notices given in the manner above set forth were sufficient. Merchants' Bank of Halifax v. McNutt, xi., 126.

35. Accommodation—Note made by partner without authority—Renewal—Notice.—In an action on a promissory note the defence was that the note of which it was a renewal was given for accommodation of the payee by defendant's partner who had no authority to make it, and that the plaintiffs when they took the renewal knew of its defective character. Held, that as it did not appear that such knowledge attached when the original note came into plaintiff's possession it was entitled to recover. Union Bank of Lower Canada v. Bulmer, 23 C. L. J. 390; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 88.

36. Accommodation—Bad faith of holder—Conspiracy.—P. indorsed a note for the accommodation of the maker, who did not pay it at maturity, but having been sued with P. he procured the latter's indorsement to another note agreeing to settle the suit with the proceeds if it was discounted. He applied to a bill broker for the discount, who took it to M., a solicitor, between whom and the broker there was an agreement by which they purchased the notes for mutual profit. M. agreed to discount the note. M.'s firm had a judgment against the maker of the note and an agreement was made with the broker by which the latter was to delay paying over the money so that proceedings could be taken for garnishment. This was carried out; the broker received the proceeds of the discounted note while pretending to pay it over was served with the garnishee process and forbidden to pay more than the balance after deduction of the amount of the judgment and costs; and he offered this amount to the maker of the note which was refused. P., the indorser, then brought an action to restrain M. and the broker from dealing with the discounted note, and for its delivery to himself.—Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, that the broker was aware that the note was indorsed by P. for the purpose of settling the suit on the former note; that the broker and M. were partners in the transaction of discounting the note and the broker's knowledge was M.'s knowledge; that the property in the note never passed to the broker and M. could only take it subject to the conditions under which the broker held it; that the broker not being the holder of the note there was no debt due from him to the maker and the garnishee order had no effect as against P.; and that the note was held by M. in bad faith and P. was entitled to recover it back. Miller v. Plummer, xxii., 253.

37. Promissory note made in fraud of partners — Notice to indorsee — Inquiry.

See PARTNERSHIP, 36.

16. PAYEE.

38. Action by holder — Identity of payee—Evidence of intention.—A promissory note made payable to J. S. & Son was sued on by J. S. & Co.—Held, it being clear by the evidence that the plaintiffs were the persons designated as payees, that they could recover.—Judgment appealed from, (20 N. S. Rep. 509), affirmed. Wallace v. Souther, xvi., 717.

17. PAYMENT.

39. Promissory notes — Acceptance held by bank as indorsee — Payment to cashier—Presumption.—Where an acceptance had been indorsed to a bank, and the cashier of the bank had put it in suit, in his own name, and the acceptor subsequently paid the amount thereof to the cashier; it was held by the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, that it was a fair inference that payment to the cashier was payment to the bank of which he was cashier (28 N. S. Rep. 210).—On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada the judgment was affirmed. Cow v. Seeley, 6th May, 1896.

18. PATENT RIGHTS.

40. Consideration—Transfer of patent right —Bills of Exchange Act, 53 Vict. c. 33, s. 30, s.-s. 4 (D.).—C. & F. were partners in the manufacture of certain articles under a patent owned by F. A creditor of F. for a debt due prior to the partnership induced C. to purchase a half interest in the patent for $700, and join with F. in a promissory note for $1,000 in favour of said creditor who also, as an inducement to F. to sell the half interest, gave the latter $200 for his personal use. In an action against C. on this note:—Held, reversing the decision of the Court of Appeal, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the note was given by C. in purchase of the interest in the patent and not having the words "given for a patent right" printed across its face it was void under the Bills of Exchange Act, 53 Vict. c. 33, s. 30, s.-s. 4 (D.). Craig v. Samuel, xxiv., 278.

19. STAMP DUTIES.

41. Unstamped bill — 42 Vict. c. 16, s. 13—"Knowledge" — Double stamping — Question for judge — Pleading.—The draft sued on when made and when received by plaintiffs had no stamps; they knew then that bills required to be stamped, but never gave it a thought, and their first knowledge that the bill was not stamped was when they gave it to their attorney for collection, and they immediately put on double stamps. The bill was received in evidence, leave being reserved to the defendant to move for a nonsuit, the judge stating his opinion that though plaintiffs knew the bill was not stamped when they received it, and that stamps were necessary, they accidentally and not intentionally omitted to affix them till their attention was called to the omission. Held, affirming the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, (22 N. B. Rep. 199), that the question as to whether or not the holder of a bill or draft has affixed double stamps upon an unpaid bill or draft so soon as the state of the bill was brought to his knowledge within the terms of 42 Vict. c. 17, s. 13, is a question for the judge at the trial and not for the jury. (Gwynne, J., dissenting); that the "knowledge" referred to in the Act is actual knowledge and not imputed or presumed knowledge, and that the evidence in this case shewed that plaintiffs acquired this knowledge for the first time on the day they affixed stamps for the amount of the double duty; that the want of proper stamping in due time is not a defence which need be pleaded. (Gwynne, J., dissenting.) Chapman v. Tufts, viii., 543.

42. Bill of exchange — Not stamped by drawer — Stamps affixed by drawee before discount—Double duty affixed at trial—Knowledge of law — 42 Vict. c. 17—Pleading—C. S. (N. B.) c. 37, s. 83, s.-s. 4, 5—Evidence—Special plea — Non fecit — Issue.—R. remitted by mail to V. a draft in payment of an account which, when received by V., was unstamped. V. affixed stamps required by the amount of the draft, and initialed them as of the date the draft was drawn, which was at least two days prior to the date on which they were actually affixed. In an action on the draft R. pleaded "that he did not make the draft," according to provisions of C. S. (N. B.), c. 37, s. 83, s.-s. 4. On the trial the draft was offered in evidence and objected to as not sufficiently stamped, the plaintiff having previously testified as to the affixing of the stamps, and that he knew the law relating to stamps at the time. The draft was admitted, leave reserved to defendant to move for a nonsuit, and at a later stage of the trial, it was again offered with the double duty affixed, counsel agreeing that a nonsuit should be entered, with leave reserved to plaintiffs to move for verdict, court to have power to draw inferences of fact.—On motion pursuant to such leave reserved, the Supreme Court (23

N. B. Rep. 343) set aside the non-suit and ordered a verdict to be entered for the plaintiffs on the ground that the defect in the draft of want of stamp should have been specially pleaded. Held, 1. Reversing the judgment appealed from, Strong and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting, that double duty should have been placed on the note as soon as it came into the hands of the drawee unstamped, and that it was too late at the trial to affix such double duty, the plaintiff having sworn that he knew the law relating to stamps, which precluded the possibility of holding that it was a mere error or mistake.—2. That under the plea that defendant did not make the draft, he was entitled to take advantage of the defect for want of stamps.—Per Strong, J. That the note was sufficiently stamped and plaintiffs were entitled to recover.—Per Gwynne, J. That if the note was not sufficiently stamped the defence should have been specially pleaded. Roberts v. Vaughan, xi, 273.

43. Insufficient stamps — Actual notice — Knowledge of holder — Double stamping.—If a note is insufficiently stamped, the double duty may be affixed as soon as the defect comes to the actual knowledge of the holder. The statute does not intend that implied knowledge should govern it.—(Judgment appealed from 20 N. S. Rep. 509), affirmed. Wallace v. Souther, xvi., 717.

20. SURETYSHIP.

44. Note indorsed as security — Discharge of surety — Giving time to principal.—The appellant claimed that he was only surety for his co-defendant, and was discharged by time being given to the principal to pay the note. Held, that the fact of time being so given being negated by the evidence, it was immaterial whether appellant was principal or surety.—Judgment appealed from (20 N. S. Rep. 509), affirmed. Wallace v. Souther, xvi., 717.

45. Promissory note — Maker or indorser — Evidence.—W. agreed to become security for a debt, and wrote his name across the back of a promissory note in favour of the creditors signed by the debtor. The note was not indorsed by the payees, and no notice of dishonour was given to W. when it matured and was not paid. Action was brought against W. as maker jointly with the debtor, and non-suit was entered with leave reserved to plaintiffs to move for a judgment if there was any evidence to go to the jury as to W.'s liability.—Held, affirming the Supreme Court (N. B.) that there was no evidence to go to the jury that W. intended to be liable as a maker of the note, and plaintiffs were rightly nonsuited. Ayr American Plough Co. v. Wallace, xxi., 256.

50. Transfer—Overdue note — Equities attaching — Agreement between vendor and payee — Holder for value without notice — Evidence.—An agreement between the maker and payee of a promissory note that it shall only be used for a particular purpose, constitutes an equity which, if the note is used in violation of that agreement, attaches to it in the hands of a bonâ fide holder for value who takes it after dishonour.—Strong, C.J., and Taschereau, J., dissenting. *MacArthur v. BILL OF LADING.

1. Rights of assignee — Instructions to hold until payment of bill of exchange — Evidence — Consignee obtaining goods without bill of lading and without paying for goods—Liability of auctioneers to assignees of bill of lading for selling the goods on consignee's account — Trover — Interest.—The plaintiffs doing business in Charleston, S. C., were assignees of a bill of lading for 100 casks of spirits of turpentine and 501 barrels of rosin, for which they had discounted the shipper's draft on R., of St. John, N. B., the consignee. They forwarded the draft to their agents with instructions to deliver the bill of lading to R. when the draft was paid. The draft was dated 2nd August, 1875, and payable twenty days after date. R. accepted the draft, but did not pay it, and the bill of lading was retained by plaintiffs' agents. The invoice was sent from Charleston to R., to whom the captain of the vessel delivered the goods without production of the bill of lading. Subsequently R. delivered 90 barrels of the turpentine to the defendants, who were auctioneers for sale on account of R., upon which they advanced R. $1,000. The defendants advertised the sale, sold the turpentine at public auction and paid balance of net proceeds to R. on 24th September, 1875. The turpentine had been taken out of the vessel and landed and warehoused several days before delivery to defendants, and they did not know that R. had not possession of the bill of lading until 21st October, 1875, when plaintiffs demanded the turpentine of them. Held, affirming the Supreme Court (N. B.) (3 Pugs. & Bur. 268), that the plaintiffs were entitled in an action of trover to recover from defendants the value of the turpentine, and interest from the date demand was made, and that the instructions from plaintiffs to their agents to deliver the bill of lading upon payment of the draft, was admissible evidence in an action by plaintiffs against the defendants. Stewart v. People's National Bank of Charleston; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 81.

2. Contract — Correspondence—Carriage of goods — Transportation company — Carriage over connecting lines.—Where a shipper accepts what purports to be a bill of lading, under circumstances which would lead him to infer that it forms a record of the contract of shipment, he cannot usually, in the absence of fraud or mistake, escape from its binding operation merely upon the ground that he did not read it, but that conclusion does not follow where the document is given out of the usual course of business, and seeks to vary terms of a prior mutual assent. Taschereau, J., dissented on the facts. N. W. Transportation Co. v. McKenzie, xxv., 38.

3. Transshipment of grain in transit—Custom of trade — Original bills of lading continued—Bulk of cargo delivered and freight exacted from transferee—Transfer by indorsement—The Bank Act, 53 Vict. c. 31—Estoppel.—Grain was shipped from Chicago to Montreal, the bills of lading being made only from Chicago to Kingston, where it was, according to the usual custom of trade, transhipped into barges belonging to the defendants, and thence conveyed by them to Montreal, without the issue of new bills of lading. It appeared, however, to have been the custom that such bills of lading were in cases of the kind, treated as continuing. The bills had been transferred by indorsement, and delivery to the plaintiff, upon whose order the defendant had delivered the greater part of the cargo, after exacting payment of full freight upon the shipment. The defendant had also recognized the custom of the grain trade as to the bills of lading continuing.—In an action to recover an undelivered balance of the grain so shipped; Held, affirming the decision of the Superior Court, sitting in Review, at Montreal, that under the circumstances, the defendant was estopped from questioning the validity of the transfer of the bills of lading under the provisions of "The Bank Act," or objecting that they had become extinct upon delivery of the cargoes at Kingston. The St. Lawrence and Chicago Forwarding Co. v. The Molsons Bank (28 L. C. Jur. 127), referred to. Kingston Forwarding Co. v. Union Bank of Canada, 9th December, 1895.

4. Railway company—Carriage of goods—Connecting lines—Special contracts—Loss by fire in warehouse—Negligence—Pleading.—In an action by S., a merchant at Merlin, Ont., against the Lake Erie and Detroit River Ry. Co., the statement of claim alleged that S. had purchased goods from parties in Toronto and elsewhere to be delivered, some to the G. T. R. Co., and the rest to the C. P. R. and other companies, by the said several companies to be, and the same were, transferred to the Lake Erie, etc., Co., for carriage to Merlin, and that on receipt by the Lake Erie Co. of the goods it became their duty to carry them safely to Merlin, and deliver them to S. There was also an allegation of a contract by the Lake Erie Co. for storage of the goods and delivery to S., when requested, and of lack of proper care whereby the goods were lost. The goods were destroyed by fire while stored in a building owned by the Lake Erie Co., at Merlin. Held, reversing the decision of the Court of Appeal, that as to the goods delivered to the G. T. R. Co. to be transferred to the Lake Erie Co. as alleged, if the cause of action stated was one arising ex delicto, it must fail, as the evidence shewed that the goods were received from the G. T. R. Co. for carriage under the terms of a special contract contained in the bill of lading and shipping note given by the G. T. R. Co. to the consignors, and if it was a cause of action founded on contract, it must also fail as the contract under which the goods were received by the G. T. R. Co. provided among other things, that the company would not be liable for the loss of goods by fire; that goods stored should be at sole risk of the owners; and that the provisions should apply to and for the benefit of every carrier.—Held, further, that as to the goods delivered to the companies, other than the G. T. R. Co., to be delivered to the Lake Erie Co., the latter company was liable under the contract for storage; that the goods were in its possession as warehousemen, and the bills of lading contained no clause, as did those of the G. T. R. Co., giving subsequent carriers the benefit of their provisions; and that the two courts below had held that the loss was caused by the negligence of servants of the Lake Erie Co., and such finding should not be interfered with.—Held, also, that as to goods carried on a bill of lading issued by the Lake Erie Co., there was an express provision therein that owners should incur all risk of loss of goods in charge of the company, as warehousemen; and that such condition was a reasonable one, as the company only undertakes to warehouse goods of necessity and for convenience of shippers. Lake Erie and Detroit River Ry. Co. v. Sales, xxvi., 663.

5. Shipping—Ship's agent—Mandate—Custom of port—Delivery—Carriers.—A trade custom, in order to be binding upon the public generally, must be shewn to be known to all persons whose interests required them to have knowledge of its existence, and, in any case, the terms of a bill of lading, inconsistent with and repugnant to the custom of a port, must prevail against such custom. Judgment appealed from reversed, the Chief Justice dissenting. Parsons v. Hart, xxx., 473.

BILL OF SALE.

1. R. S. N. S. (5 ser.) c. 92—Registration—Defective jurat—Evidence—Assignment for benefit of creditors—Chattel mortgage.—An assignment of personal property in trust to sell same and apply the proceeds to the payment of debts due certain named creditors of the assignor is a bill of sale within s. 4 of the Nova Scotia Bills of Sale Act, not being an assignment for the general benefit of creditors and so excepted from the operation of the Act by s. 10.—The omission of the date and words "before me" from the jurat of an affidavit accompanying a bill of sale under s. 4 of the said Act makes such affidavit void and the defect cannot be supplied by parol evidence in proceedings by a creditor of the assignor against the mortgaged goods. Gwynne, J., dissenting.—Per Gwynne, J. Section 4 of the Act only applies to bills of sale by way of chattel mortgage and not to an assignment absolute in its terms and upon trust to sell the property assigned. Archibald v. Hubley, xviii., 116.

2. Affidavit of bona fides—Adherence to statutory form—Proof of execution—Attesting witness.—Where an affidavit of bona fides to a bill of sale stated that the sale was not made for the purpose of holding or enabling the bargainee to hold the goods mentioned therein against the creditors of the bargainor, while the form given in the statute uses the words "against any creditors of the bargainor," such violation did not avoid the bill of sale as against execution creditors, the two expressions being substantially the same. Gwynne, J., dissenting.—The statute requires the affidavit to be made by a witness to the execution of the bill of sale but as attestation is not essential to the validity of the instrument its execution can be proved by any competent witness.—Judgment appealed from (1 N. W. Terr. Rep. No. 2, p. 36), affirmed. Emerson v. Bannerman, xix., 1.

3. Chattel mortgage—Description—Bills of Sale Act—R. S. O. (1887) c. 125—Appeal—Order to amend pleadings—Interference with—Debtor and creditor—Purchaser by creditor—Consideration—Existing debt.—In a chattel mortgage the goods conveyed were described as follows: "All of which said goods and chattels are now the property of the said mortgagor, and are situate in and upon the premises of the London Machine Tool Co. (describing the premises), on the north side of King street, in the City of London; and in a schedule referred to in the mortgage was this additional description: "And all machines . . . in course of construction or which shall hereafter be in course of construction or completed while any of the moneys hereby secured are unpaid, being in or upon the premises now occupied by the mortgagor . . . or which are now or shall be on any other premises in the said City of London." Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, that the description in the schedule could not extend to goods wholly manufactured on premises other than those described in the mortgage, and if it could the description was not sufficient within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Act (R. S. O. [1887] c. 125), to cover machines so manufactured.—The Supreme Court will not interfere on appeal with an order made by a provincial court granting leave to amend the pleadings, such orders being a matter of procedure within the discretion of the court below.—A purchaser of goods from the maker of a chattel mortgage in consideration of the discharge of a pre-existing debt is a purchaser for valuable consideration within s. 5 of the Bills of Sale Act. Williams v. Leonard & Sons, xxvi., 406.

4. Affidavit of bona fides—Statutory form—Description of grantor—R. S. N. S. (5 ser.) c. 92, ss. 4 and 11.—The Act relating to bills of sale, R. S. N. S. (5 ser.) c. 92, requires by s. 4, that every such instrument shall be accompanied by an affidavit by the grantor, and s. 11 provides that the affidavit shall be, as nearly as may be, in the form given in a form prescribed, beginning: "I, A. B., of . . . in the county of . . . (occupation) make oath and say," etc. An affidavit omitted to state the occupation of the grantor. Held, per Strong, Gwynne, and Patterson, JJ., reversing the Supreme Court (N. S.), that as the affidavit referred in terms to the instrument itself, in which the occupation of the deponent was stated, the statute was complied with.—Per Taschereau, J. The onus was upon the persons attacking the bill of sale to prove, by direct evidence, that the grantor had no occupation, which they had failed to do. Smith v. McLean, xxi., 355.

BOND.

1. Action on bail bond—Alteration of after execution—Proof of—Form of bond—Objection first taken on appeal.—In an action on a bail bond the defence was that it had been altered after execution, and that it was not in the form required by the statute. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (19 N. S. Rep. 96), that the defendant having refused to call the attesting witness to the bond, who was their counsel in the case, the defence as to the alteration, alleged to be in the attestation clause, could not succeed.—Held, also, that the objection as to the form of the bond being merely technical and unmeritorious, could not be taken for the first time before this court. *Woodworth v. BOUNDARY.

1. Surveyed line—Standing by without objection—Trespass—Conventional boundary—Licensed use—Estoppel in pais—Mistake—Valuable consideration—Specific performance—Description of land—Reference to plan—Courses and distances—Computed area—Construction of deed—Evidence of boundaries—Parol testimony—Statute of Frauds.—G. was owner of lot 9, and C. the owner of lot 8 adjoining it on the south. Both lots had formerly belonged to one person, and there was no exact indication of the true boundary line between them. T. employed a surveyor to ascertain the boundary, who asked C. where he claimed his northern boundary was. C. pointed out the line of a fence produced to a post as his boundary line. The surveyor then staked the average line of the fence produced till it met the post, C. not objecting. T., with his architect and builder, went on the ground, and, in the presence of C., the builder again marked out the boundary by a line connecting the stakes, C. not objecting, and a house was built according to the line on the extreme verge of T.'s land. C. first raised objection to this boundary when the walls were up and considerable money had been expended in building. Held, that C. was estopped from disputing that the line run by the surveyor was the true line.—When lands are described by reference to a plan, the plan is considered as incorporated with the deed, and the boundaries of the lands conveyed as defined by the plan are to be taken as part of the description.—In construing a deed of land not subject to special statutory regulations, extrinsic evidence of monuments and actual boundary marks is inadmissible to control the deed, but if reference is made by the deed to such monuments and boundaries, they control, though they may call for courses, distances, or computed contents, which do not agree with those in the deed.—An agreement to establish a conventional boundary line between contiguous lands is not within the Statute of Frauds and such mutual agreements constitute valuable consideration to support a decree in the nature of one for specific performance, although such a decree might be withheld in such a case on the ground of mistake in regard to the direction of the line or in properly laying it out upon the ground.—In the absence of measurements on a level street to shew that the true boundary as laid out formerly on the ground when in a rough state coincided with the limits as measured from a defined point in existence when the plan was made, that point cannot be accepted as the true point of commencement of the description of the actual boundary.—A second plan of subdivision of land cannot be invoked as evidence of the limits of lands conveyed by description according to a first plan.—Where there is a direct conflict of testimony the finding of the judge at the trial must be regarded as decisive and should not be overturned in appeal by a court which has not had the advantage of seeing the witnesses and observing their demeanour while under examination. Grassett v. Carter, x., 105.

2. Agreement—Whether executed or executory—Plan, signed by proprietors—Statute of Frauds—Purchaser for value without notice—Discretionary jurisdiction of Court of Equity.—Plaintiff alleged that in March, 1844, the Crown granted in fee to S. the east part and the south-west part of lot F., he went into and remained in possession thereof until his death; one K. was then in possession of part of lot G., immediately adjacent on the south to the land granted to Stewart; disputes having arisen respecting the boundary, it was agreed to have it surveyed and defined on the ground by a provincial land surveyor, whose survey was to be the settled and permanent boundary, and who accordingly in Sept., 1854, made a survey, and prepared a map shewing the boundary line; thereupon, about 20th Oct., 1854, the boundary line having been so defined, it was mutually agreed to by them, and memorandum written upon the map signed by them: "We, the undersigned, interested in this survey, agree to it as shewn by this plan, as witness our hands." Thereupon the parties shifted their occupation so as to accord with the line surveyed and so agreed to. K. afterwards applied for the patent of lot G., which was issued to P. as trustee for him. The survey commenced from the west side of G. at a point then mutually agreed upon between S. and K. and the other persons interested, as the north-west angle of the lot; S. and K. then removed to and thence continued in possession of their respective lands as aforesaid, as so separated and defined; S. died in 1856; plaintiff, to whom he devised lot F., did not attain his majority until 1870; in 1862, defendant obtained possession of a strip of the land in possession of plaintiff and S. under the agreement, being about 70 feet in width, to the north of the boundary, which had been agreed upon, and refused to restore possession, or to recognize the agreement; plaintiff was unable to recover possession at law, inasmuch as the legal title of plaintiff under the patent would be determined by the mode of survey which prevailed according to the general law; the defendant had notice of the agreement and settlement of the boundary; that the true boundary line was difficult to ascertain in 1854, and that the agreement was a compromise and settlement of disputed and doubtful rights. The prayer was that the agreement might be specifically enforced, and the boundary established accordingly, and that defendant might execute a deed to confirm the strip of land to plaintiff, and be ordered to deliver up possession.—The defendant denied that S. ever had actual possession of the disputed strip, which he alleged was in a state of nature at the time of his purchase from K.; he alleged that he had had the line run by Sparks, P.L.S., and erected an expensive fence along the line and a dwelling house, the whole or greater part of which was on the land claimed by plaintiff; that he had made other valuable improvements; that K. was an illiterate man, and if his name was procured to the agreement it was through fraud. He also set up the registry laws, the Statute of Frauds, laches, that he was a bonâ fide purchaser for value without notice, and that the agreement was not one which the court in its discretion would enforce against him.—Spragge, C., made a decree in accordance with the plaintiff's contentions; (reported on a point which arose with reference to the proof of S.'s will: 24 Grant, 433); the Court of Appeal reversed this decree, from a view that plaintiff was appealing to the discretionary jurisdiction of the court, and that the ordinary principles upon which it was administered were applicable; that the court had seen no case in which a mere verbal agreement, unattested by acts, had been sufficient under the Statute of Frauds, although it had been held in a number of cases in the courts of the United States that where two adjoining proprietors employ a surveyor to define their boundary line, and possession is taken and held in accordance therewith, the objection of the want of a writing shall not be allowed to prevail. That the plaintiff had failed to shew anything done on the faith of the agreement, or a change of position in reliance upon the boundary line settled. That the proof of the agreement was not of that clear and unambiguous kind the court requires when asked to exercise its discretionary jurisdiction. That there was no sufficient evidence to countervail the defendant's oath denying that he had actual notice of the alleged agreement, and that it was a case in which specific performance would inflict a grievous hardship upon the defendant without any benefit to the plaintiff which he had a right to expect, and without the plaintiff having any equity which the court was bound to respect.—Held, that plaintiff had failed to establish the agreement alleged in his bill, of which he sought specific performance, and upon which he rested his application for the interference in his favour of the equitable jurisdiction which he invoked. That if plaintiff contended that the evidence established that S. and K. agreed upon and adopted as the boundary line between them the line surveyed, and that for this purpose and to give effect to this agreement they signed the map, and that in pursuance of such agreement and in adoption of this line as the boundary line between them they moved their fences to conform to the agreement and occupied up to such fences until after S.'s death when defendant entered upon the possession then held by the devisee, then, the case assuming the completion of the agreement and presenting a purely legal claim, and the bill having been filed before the Administration of Justice Act, the Court of Chancery would have no jurisdiction. Appeal dismissed with costs. Stewart v. Lees, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 93.

3. Action en bornage—R. S. Q. arts. 4153, 4154, 4155—Straight line.—Where there is a dispute as to the boundary line between two lots granted by patents from the Crown, and it has been found impossible to identify the original line, but two certain points have been recorded in the Crown lands department, the proper course is to run a straight line between the two certain points. R. S. Q. art. 4155. Bell's Asbestos Co. v. Johnson's Co., xxiii, 225.

4. Encroachment—Mistake of title—Good faith—Common error—Res judicata—Arts. 412, 413, 429 et seq., 1047, 1241 C. C.—Indemnity—Demolition of works.—Where, as the result of a mutual error respecting the division line, a proprietor had in good faith, and with the knowledge and consent of the owner of the adjoining lot, erected valuable buildings upon his own property, and it afterwards appeared that his walls encroached slightly upon his neighbour's land, he cannot be compelled to demolish the walls which extend beyond the true boundary or be evicted from the strip of land they occupy, but should be allowed to retain it upon payment of a reasonable indemnity.—In an action for re-vedication under such circumstances the judgment previously rendered in an action en bornage between the same parties cannot be set up as res judicata against the defendant's claim to be allowed to retain the ground encroached upon by paying reasonable indemnity, as the objects and causes of the two actions were different.—An owner of land need not have the division lines between his property and contiguous lots of land established by regular bornage before commencing to build thereon when there is an existing line of separation which has been recognized as the boundary. Delorme v. Cusson, xxviii, 66.

5. Concession line—Survey—Evidence.—In an action en bornage between E. the owner of lots 7, 8 and 9, in the tenth concession of the Township of Eardley, Que., and S., the owner of like numbered lots, in the ninth concession, the question to be decided was the location of the line between the two concessions, E. claiming that it should be one straight line, to be traced from the southeasterly angle of lot 14, in the tenth concession easterly on a course S. 87° 30' E. to the town line between Eardley and Hull, while S. claimed that as to the lots in question it was about a quarter of a mile north of where the straight line would place it. A survey of part of the line was made in 1828 and the remainder in 1850, and in 1892 the whole line was surveyed again, and the result was held by the court below to establish it in accordance with the claim of E. In 1867 there was a private survey which established the line further north as claimed by S., who contended that it, and not the survey in 1892, was a retracing of the original line. Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, Strong, C.J., dissenting, that the original surveys were made in accordance with the instructions to the surveyors and established the straight line as the true concession line; that the survey in 1892 was the only one which retraced the original line in an efficient and legal manner; and that the evidence failed to support the contention that it was retraced in 1867, such contention depending on assumptions as to the manner in which the original surveys were made which the courts would not be justified in acting upon. Spratt v. E. B. Eddy Co., xxix., 411.

6. Title to land — Trespass — Overhanging roof — Right of view — Evidence — Boundary line — Servitude.] — In 1844 the defendants constructed a toll-house close to or on the boundary of their land with windows overlooking an adjoining vacant lot, and a roof projecting over it by about three feet. This was done with the knowledge and consent of persons who were then proprietors, and was not objected to by them or any subsequent owner till after the purchase of the lot by the plaintiff in 1895, when he complained that the overhanging roof interfered with the gable of a house he was building upon it. He cut the roof to permit of the construction of the gable and defendants paid the costs of the necessary alteration. In 1900 the plaintiff instituted the present action against defendants to have the remaining projection of the roof demolished and the windows closed up. There was no evidence that there had ever been a division line established between the properties and the actual width of the land purchased and taken possession of by the plaintiff in 1895 was left in uncertainty. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, Strong, C.J., dissenting, that the plaintiff had not satisfied the onus that was upon him of proving title to the strip of land in dispute and consequently that his action could not be maintained. Parent v. Quebec North Shore Turnpike Road Trustees, xxxi., 556.

7. Railways — Construction of deed — Location of permanent way — Laying out boundaries — Fencing — Riparian rights — Notice of prior title — Registry laws — Possession — Acquisitive prescription.] — In the conveyance of lands for the permanent way the deed described lands sold to the railway company as bounded by an un-navigable stream, as "selected and laid out" for the railway. Stakes were planted to shew the side lines, but the railway fences were placed inside the stakes above the water's edge and the vendor was allowed to remain in possession of the strip of land between the fence and the middle of the bed of the stream. The deed was duly registered, and subsequently, the vendor sold the rest of his property including water rights, mills, and dams constructed in the stream to defendant's auteur, described as "including that part of the river which is not included in the right of way, etc." Held, 1. that the description in the deed included, ex jure nature, the river ad medium filum aquæ, and that the company's title thereto could not be defeated by the subsequent conveyance, notwithstanding that they had not taken physical possession of all the lands described in the prior conveyance to them; 2. that the failure of the vendor to deliver the full quantity of land sold by him to the company, and their abstention from troubling him and his grantees in possession of the same could not be construed as conduct placing a construction upon the deed different from its clear and unambiguous terms or as limiting the area of the property conveyed so as to exclude the strip outside the fences, or the bed of the stream ad medium filum; and 3. that such possession by the vendor and his assigns was not possession which could ripen into a title by acquisitive prescription of the property in question. Massawippi Valley Ry. Co. v. Reed, xxxiii., 457.

BREACH OF PRIVILEGE.

Trespass — Assault — Legislative assembly — Powers — Punishment for contempt — Removal of member from his seat — Action against speaker and members — Damages.] — W., a member of the Legislative Assembly of Nova Scotia, on the 16th April, 1874, charged the provincial secretary, without being called to order for doing so, with having falsified a record. The charge was subsequently investigated by a committee of the House, who reported that it was unfounded. Two days after the House resolved, that, in preferring the charge without sufficient evidence to sustain it, W. was guilty of a breach of privilege. On the 30th April, W. was ordered to make an apology dictated by the house, and, having refused to do so, was declared, by another resolution, guilty of a contempt of the House, and requested forthwith to withdraw until such apology should be made. W. declined to withdraw, and thereupon another resolution was passed ordering the removal of W. from the House by the sergeant-at-arms, who, with his assistant, enforced such order and removed W. W. brought an action of trespass for assault against the speaker and certain members of the House, and obtained a verdict of $500 damages. Held, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, that the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Nova Scotia has, in the absence of express grant, no power to remove one of its members for contempt, unless he is actually obstructing the business of the House; and W. having been removed from his seat, not because he was obstructing the business of the House, but because he would not repeat the apology required, the defendants were liable. *Kielley v. BROKER.

1. Sale of land—Refusal to carry out verbal agreement—Defective title—Instructions to agent—Contract in writing—Commission on sale.—About 1st Jan., 1882, appellants, real estate agents in Winnipeg, received verbal instructions from respondents to sell land. On 13th Jan., the appellants sold the land at the price named, receiving from the purchasers \$5,000 as deposit on account of purchase money. On the day the appellants sold the land, C., one of respondents, was informed of the sale, and demanded and received from appellants the \$5,000. On 14th Jan., appellants received instructions from the respondents to sell another 10 acres, which on 15th Jan., appellants, as agents sold at the price authorized, but the formal agreement was closed by B. with C., to whom \$1,500 on account of the purchase was paid. Prior to the expiration of 20 days, within which the balance was to be paid, the purchasers discovered that the patent for a portion of the land had not been issued and, on account of want of title in respondents, purchasers refused to complete their purchase and from the absence of a writing signed by them they could not be compelled to do so. Appellants brought action for \$1,365, commission upon the entire purchase money. Respondents pleaded that appellants promised to sell the lands, and complete such sale by preparing the necessary agreement in writing to make a binding contract with purchasers. The jury, following the charge of the Chief Justice, found for plaintiffs for the full claim, $2\frac{1}{2}\%$ upon the entire purchase money of both parcels. This verdict was reduced to \$125, commission at $2\frac{1}{2}\%$ on the \$5,000 actually paid or, alternatively, a new trial was ordered without costs. Held, (Strong, J., dissenting) that there had been a mis-trial, and that therefore the order for a new trial should be affirmed.—Per Henry, J. It was the duty of the appellants to take from the purchasers a binding agreement under the statute; and having neglected to do so, they were not entitled to any compensation.—Per Strong, J., dissenting. The appellants did all they were bound to do, and earned their commission by finding the purchasers, and did nothing and omitted nothing which amounted to misfeasance or nonfeasance disentitling them to the commission which they had earned. McKenzie v. Champion, xii., 649.

2. Principal and agent—Speculating in stocks—Instructions to broker—Money paid for margins—Action.—S., a speculator in stocks, instructed F., a stock broker, to purchase shares, expecting a profit out of a rise in the value of the stock. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (15 Ont. App. R. 541), that the relation between S. and F. was that of principal and agent, and F. was bound to purchase the stock and hold it as the property of S. He could not rely on his ability to procure a like number of shares when required, as his interest would be to depreciate their value so as to obtain them cheaply, which would conflict with his duty to S.—F. being about to retire from business as a stock-broker, handed over his stock transactions, including that with S. to C., to which S. consented. C. acknowledged to S. having received from F. the amount paid for margins on the stock which F. was instructed to buy, neither F. nor C. having purchased the stock and set it apart as the property of S. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that

C. was liable in an action for money had and received, to refund to S. the amount so paid for margins. Cow v. Sutherland, 18th Nov., 1887, 24 C. L. J. 55; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 9.

3. Principal and agent—Stock exchange custom—Sale of shares—Marginal transfer—Undisclosed principal—Acceptance—“Settlement”—Obligation of purchaser—Construction of contract—“The Bank Act,” R. S. C. c. 120, ss. 70-77—Liability of shareholders.—The defendant, a broker doing business on the Toronto Stock Exchange, bought from C., another broker, certain bank shares that had been sold and transferred to C. by the plaintiff. At the time of the sale C. was not aware that the defendant was acting for an undisclosed principal and the name of a principal was not disclosed within the time limited for “settlement” of transactions by the custom of the exchange. The transferee’s name was left blank in the transfer book in the bank, but it was noted in the margin that the shares were subject to the order of the defendant who, three days after settlement was due according to the custom of the exchange, made a further marginal memorandum that the shares were subject to the order of H. The affairs of the bank were placed in liquidation within a month after these transactions and, the plaintiff’s name being put upon the list of contributories, he was obliged to pay double liability upon the shares so transferred under the provisions of “The Bank Act,” for which he afterwards recovered judgment against C. and then, taking an assignment of C.’s right of indemnity against the defendant, instituted the present action. Held, that as the defendant had not disclosed the name of any principal within the time limited for settlement by the custom of the Exchange and the shares had been placed at his order and disposition by the seller, he became legal owner thereof without the necessity of any formal acceptance upon the transfer books, and that he was obliged to indemnify the seller against all consequences in respect of the ownership of the shares, and the double liability imposed under the provisions of “The Bank Act.” *Boulton v. BUILDING SOCIETY.

1. Objects and purposes—Powers—Loan transaction—By-law—C. S. L. C. c. 69—Purchase of land—Ultra vires.—A building society incorporated under C. S. L. C. c. 69, by by-law, declared that its principal object was to purchase building lots, and build on such lots cottages costing about $1,000 each for every one of its members. The society on 7th Oct., 1874, purchased the lots described and contracted for the cottages at $1,250

each, the amount that each of the shareholders had agreed to pay. A year elapsed during which the cottages were built and drawn by lot for distribution among the members. On 11th Oct., 1875, the vendors of the lots and contractors for the building of the cottages, being shareholders in the Dominion Building Society, borrowed money from the latter society, and transferred to the same, as collateral security, the moneys due them by the appellants in virtue of the deeds of purchase and building contract. The appellant company accepted the transfer and paid some moneys on account, and finally a deed of settlement, (acte de reglement de compte), was executed between the two companies, upon which was based the suit against the appellants, brought by H., as assignee of the Dominion Building Society. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (3 Dor. Q. B. 175), Strong and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting, that the transaction in question was within the objects and purposes for which the society was incorporated, and was therefore not ultra vires. Compagnie de Villas du Cap Gibraltar v. Hughes, xi., 537.

2. *Pledge—Redemption—Transfer of shares—Indebtedness of transferee—Right of society to hold shares—C. S. L. C. c. 69—Arts. 1970, 1981, C. C.]—A by-law of a building society required that a shareholder should satisfy all his obligations to the society before he should be at liberty to transfer his shares. P., a director, in contravention of the by-law, induced the secretary to countersign a transfer of his shares to a bank as collateral security for money borrowed, and it was not till P.’s assignment for benefit of creditors that the other directors knew of the transfer. At the time of his assignment P. was indebted to the society in $3,744, for which, under the by-law, his shares were charged as between him and the society. The society immediately paid the bank and took an assignment of the shares and of P.’s debt. The shares being worth more than the amount due to the bank, the curator to the insolvent estate of P. claimed the shares as part of the estate, and with action tendered the amount due by P. to the bank. The society claimed the shares were pledged to them for the whole amount of P.’s indebtedness to them under the by-laws. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, (M. L. R. 7 Q. B. 417), Fourrier and Taschereau, JJ., dissenting, that the shares had always remained charged under the by-laws with P.’s debt to the society, and that his creditors had only the same rights in respect of these shares as P. himself had when he assigned, viz., to get the shares upon payment of P.’s debt to the society. Société Canadienne Française de Construction de Montreal v. Daveluy, xx., 449.*

3. Participating borrowers—Shareholders—C. S. L. C. c. 69—42 & 43 Vict. c. 32 (Q.)—Liquidation—Expiration of classes—Assessments on loans—Notice of—Interest and bonus—Usury laws—C. S. C. c. 58—Art. 1785 C. C.—Administrators and trustees—Sales to—Prête-nom—Art. 1484 C. C.]—S. applied to a building society for a loan of $3,500, which was subsequently advanced to him upon signing a deed of obligation and hypothec submitting to the conditions and rules applicable to the society’s method of carrying on its loaning business and declaring that he had become a subscriber for shares in the company’s stock for an amount corresponding to the amount of the loan, namely 70 shares of the nominal value of $50 each in a class to expire after 72 monthly payments, or in six years from the date of its commencement (July, 1878), this term corresponding with the term fixed for the repayment of the loan. He thereby also agreed to make monthly payments of one per cent. each upon the stock, and that the loan should be repaid at the expiration of the class, when, upon the liquidation of the business of that class, members would be entitled to the allotment of their shares subscribed as paid up, partly by monthly instalments, and partly by accumulated profits to be derived from whatever moneys had been paid in and invested for the benefit of that class, at which time whatever he might be so entitled to receive in shares of stock should be credited towards the reimbursement of the loan. He further obliged himself to pay, as interest and bonus, the additional sum of one per cent. upon the loan by similar monthly instalments during the time it remained unpaid. S. paid all the instalments by semi-annual payments of $420 each until 1st May, 1884, making a total of seventy monthly instalments of $70 each, leaving two more instalments of each kind still to become due before the date originally fixed for the termination of his class. The society went into liquidation under the provisions of 42 & 43 Vict. c. 32 (Que.), in January, 1884, prior to A.'s last payment and about six months before the date fixed for the expiration of his loan. In October, 1884, the liquidators of the society, in the exercise of the powers vested in the directors under the deed and the society's regulations, passed a resolution declaring a deficit in the business of the class to which A. belonged, and, in order to provide the necessary funds to meet the proportion of deficit attributed as his share, they thereby exacted from him a further series of twenty-eight monthly payments in addition to the seventy-two instalments contemplated at the time of the execution of the deed. Subsequently (in 1892), the plaintiff, as transferee of the society, brought action for the two original instalments remaining unpaid, and also for the amount of the twenty-eight additional monthly payments upon the loan and the subscription of shares. Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, that the subscription for shares and the obligation undertaken in the deed constituted, upon the part of the borrower, merely one transaction involving a loan and an agreement to repay the amount advanced with interest and bonuses thereon amounting together to a rate equivalent to interest at twelve per centum per annum, on the amount of his loan; that the contract made by the building society stipulating that they were to receive such rate of interest and bonus, equivalent to rate of twelve per centum per annum on the amount so loaned by the society, was not a violation of any laws respecting usury in force in the Province of Quebec; that the fact of the building society going into liquidation had the effect of causing all classes of loans then current to expire at the date when the society was placed in liquidation, notwithstanding that the various terms for which such classes may have been established had not been fully completed; that under the provisions of the statute, 42 & 43 Vict. c. 32, liquidators have the same powers in regard to the determination of the affairs of expired classes, and to declare deficits therein, and to call for further payments to meet the same, as the directors of the society had while it continued in operation;

that the notice required by the twenty-first section of the Act, 42 & 43 Vict. c. 32, does not apply to cases where liquidators have determined a loss upon the expiration of a class, and required the full amount exigible upon loans to be paid by borrowers; that, notwithstanding that the liquidation proceedings deprived the directors of the exercise of their powers as to the determination of the condition of the affairs of a class, and the exactation of further payments when exigible in such cases on the expiration of a class, the resolution of the liquidators determining a deficit in the borrower's class and requiring full payment of all sums exigible under his deed of obligation was sufficient to constitute a valid right of action against the borrower for the amount of the balance of principal money loaned together with the interest and bonus instalments remaining due thereon according to the terms and conditions of his deed of obligation. Held, further, affirming the decisions of both courts below that, in an action where no special demand to that effect has been made, the court cannot declare the nullity of a deed of transfer alleged to have been made in contravention of the provisions of article 1484 of the Civil Code. *Guertin v. The mill was in operation in June, 1886, and the box factory on the 2nd November, 1886. They were kept in operation, and at least six hundred men were employed in both establishments during that time. On a contestation, by subsequent hypothecary claimants, of an opposition afin de conserver, filed by the corporation for the amount of their conditional mortgage on the proceeds of sale of the property. Held, reversing the judgments of the courts below, that even if the words "four consecutive years" meant four consecutive seasons, there was ample evidence that the whole establishment was not in operation as required until November, 1886, when the mortgage was granted, the mill only being completed and in operation during that season, and therefore there had been a breach of the conditions. CANADA TEMPERANCE ACT.

1. Scrutiny of votes.—Powers of County Court judge—Corrupt acts.]—Held, that a judge of the County Court, in holding a scrutiny of votes under the provisions of the Canada Temperance Act, can only determine which side has a majority of the votes polled, by inspection of the ballots, and has no power to inquire into corrupt acts, such as bribery, etc., which might avoid the election (Henry, J., dubitante). (See 22 C. L. J. 46.) Chapman v. Rand, xi., 312.

2. Referred case — Demand that vote be taken—Divided county—Deposit of notice in office of registrar of one riding only.]—Section 6 of the Canada Temperance Act, 1878, provides that the notice to be sent to the Secretary of State asking that the votes of the electors be taken must be deposited in the office of the sheriff or registrar of deeds of or in the county for public examination, and evidence of such deposit sent to the Secretary or State, with notice prescribed in s. 5. In this case the notice was deposited with the registrar of the north riding of the county only. On petition praying that under these circumstances no proclamation under s. 7 should be issued, the Governor-General-in-Council referred the following case to the Supreme Court: "There are two registrars of deeds for the County of Perth, Ont.—One for the north riding, with an office at Stratford, and one for the south riding, with an office at St. Mary's. With a notice and petition for bringing the second part of the Canada Temperance Act, 1878, into force in the said county, there was laid before the Secretary of State evidence that such notice and petition was deposited, for the purpose and time required, in the office of the registrar of deeds for the north riding of the said county. — Is that a compliance, in that respect, with the requirements of the sixth section of the said Act?" Ritchie, C.J., in giving judgment, said, that in such an important matter, involving the rights of a certain class of persons, it was important that every provision of the law should be strictly complied with. This, he held, had not been done. The petition might have been deposited either in the sheriff's office or in both the registry offices. He held that the filing in the one registry office was insufficient.—Strong, J., said there could be only one construction of the Act, and no argument could be advanced to sustain the validity of the filing. He was only surprised that it had been found necessary to resort to this court to obtain a decision upon such a question.—The other judges concurred. In re Canada Temperance Act, 1878 (County of Perth), 20 C. L. J. 375; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 105.

3. Referred case — Petitioners withdrawing names.]—The case was referred by the Governor-General-in-Council as follows: "A number of electors of the County of Kent, Ontario, having signed a notice and petition under the Canada Temperance Act, 1878, for bringing into force in the said county the second part of the Act, and the notice and petition having been laid before the Secretary of State with evidence of compliance by the petitioners with the formalities prescribed by the Act, but before being submitted to the Governor-General-in-Council or the issuing of a proclamation under the Act, some of the signatories laid before the Secretary of State, a petition asking to withdraw their names from the petition. Have they a right to so withdraw their names?" Opinion—The signatories to the petition, signed under the provisions of the Act for bringing into force the second part of said Act, have not, under the circumstances set forth, the right to withdraw their acknowledged and deliberate signatures, or to have the same withdrawn from the petition. In re Canada Temperance Act, 1878 (County of Kent), Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 106.

4. Prosecution of offences — C. T. Act, s. 107—Appropriation of penalties — Interpretation Act — Statutes relating to P. E. I.]—An appeal against a decision under the Act was allowed, and it was Held, that 31 Vict. c. 1, s. 7, s.s. 22 (Interpretation Act), did not apply to penalties imposed under the Canada Temperance Act; that the second part of that sub-section refers only to appropriation of penalties imposed under the provisions of the first part, relating to the mode of recovering penalties where no such mode is given in the Act contravened, and as s. 107 of the Canada Temperance Act provides for the prosecution of offences in the manner directed by the Act relating to the duties of justices of the peace out of sessions, and for such purposes incorporates the necessary parts of the latter Act in itself, thus providing a mode for the recovery of penalties under the Canada Temperance Act, the sub-section 22 aforesaid has no application; that the penalties imposed by the Canada Temperance Act should therefore go to the Crown as in cases under the Act relating to the duties of justices of the peace out of sessions which makes no specific appropriation of penalties imposed under it. (Ritchie, C.J., dubitante). Held, also, that the Interpretation Act (31 Vict. c. 1), applies to statutes of the Dominion relating to Prince Edward Island whether such statutes were passed before or after the admission of the province into the Dominion. Fitzgerald v. McKimlay, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 107.

5. Application of fines under — Incorporated town separated from county for municipal purposes.]—By order in council made in September, 1886, it is provided that "all fines, penalties or forfeitures recovered or enforced under the Canada Temperance Act, 1878, and amendments thereto, within any city or county, or any incorporated town separated for municipal purposes from the county . . . shall be paid to the treasurer of the city, incorporated town or county," etc. Held, reversing the decision of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, King, J., dissenting, that to come within the terms of this order an incorporated town need not be separated, from the county for all purposes; it includes any town having municipal self-government even though it contributes to the expense of keeping up certain institutions in the county. Town of St. Stephen v. County of Charlotte, xxiv., 329.

6. Search warrant — Magistrate's jurisdiction — Justification of ministerial officers — Goods in custodia legis — Replevin — Estoppel — Res judicata.]—A search warrant issued under "The Canada Temperance Act" is good if it follows the prescribed form, and if it has been issued by competent authority, and is valid on its face, it will afford justification to the officer executing it in either criminal or civil proceedings, notwithstanding that it may be bad in fact, and may have been quashed or set aside. Taschereau, J., dissenting.—The statutory form does not require the premises to be searched to be described by metes and bounds or otherwise.—A judgment on certiorari quashing the warrant will not estop the defendant from justifying under it in proceedings to replevy the goods seized where he was not a party to the proceedings to set the warrant aside and such judgment was a judgment inter partes only. Taschereau, J., dissenting. *Sleeth v. CAPIAS.

1. Affidavit — Art. 798 C. C. P.—Reasonable and probable cause—Malicious arrest — Damages.]—S., resident in Toronto, on the eve of departure for a trip to Europe, passed through Montreal, and while there refused to settle an overdue debt with McK., who had sued him for it in Ontario, where proceedings were still pending. McK. thereupon caused him to be arrested under capias, and S. paid the debt. S. claimed damages from McK. for malicious arrest and McK. relied on a plea of justification, acting upon reasonable and probable cause. In the affidavit for capias the reasons given for belief that S. was about to leave Canada were: "That the deponent's partner was informed last night in Toronto by a broker that S. was leaving immediately the Dominion of Canada, to cross over the sea for Europe or parts unknown, and he was himself informed this day by J. R., of S.'s departure for Europe and other places." The evidence shewed that S. was in business at Toronto, and was leaving for the Paris exhibition, that he was in the habit of crossing every year, and that his banker, and all his business friends knew that he was only leaving for a trip; and there was no evidence that the deponent had been informed that appellant was leaving with intent to defraud, but it appeared that before execution of the capias S., on being asked to settle, refused to pay McK. and told him "he might get his money as best he could." Held, reversing the Court of Queen's Bench, that the affidavit was defective, as it did not state any sufficient reasonable and probable cause for believing that the debtor was leaving with intent to defraud his creditors; that, in the present case, the evidence shewed no reasonable and probable cause to justify the arrest under capias, and consequently the plaintiff was entitled to recover substantial damages. Shaw v. McKenzie, vi., 181.

1. BILLS OF LADING AND SHIPPING RECEIPTS.

1. Contract—Correspondence — Carriage of goods — Transportation company — Carriage over connecting lines — Bill of lading.]—A shipping agent cannot bind his principal by receipt of a bill of lading after the vessel containing the goods shipped has sailed, and the bill of lading so received is not a record of the terms on which the goods are shipped.—Where a shipper accepts what purports to be a bill of lading, under circumstances which would lead him to infer that it forms a record of the contract of shipment, he cannot usually, in the absence of fraud or mistake, escape from its binding operation merely upon the ground that he did not read it, but that conclusion does not follow where the document is given out of the usual course of business, and seeks to vary terms of a prior mutual assent. Taschereau, J., dissented on the facts. N. W. Transportation Co. v. McKenzie, xxv., 38.

2. Contract—Shipping receipt — Carriers—Limitation of liability—Negligence—Connecting lines — Wrongful conversion — Sale for non-payment of freight—Principal and agent — Varying terms of contract.]—Conditions in a shipping receipt relieving the carrier from liability for losses or damages arising out of "the safe keeping and carriage of the goods" even though caused by the negligence, carelessness or want of skill of the carrier's officers, servants or workmen, without the actual fault or privity of the carriers, and restricting claims to the cash value of the goods at the port of shipment, do not apply to cases where the goods have been wrongfully sold or converted by the carrier.—A shipping receipt with terms as above was for carriage by the defendants' and other connecting lines of transportation and made the freight payable on delivery of the goods at the point of destination. The defendants had previously made a special contract with the plaintiff but delivered the receipt to his agent at the point of shipment with a variation of the special terms made with him in respect to all shipments to him as consignee during the shipping season of 1899, the variation being shewn by a clause stamped across the receipt of which the plaintiff had no knowledge. One of the shipments was sold at an intermediate point on the line of transportation on account of non-payment of freight by one of the companies in control of a connecting line to which the goods had been delivered by the defendants. Held, that the plaintiff's agent at the shipping point had not authority as such to consent to a variation of the special contract, nor could the carrier do so by inserting the clause in the receipt without the concurrence of the plaintiff; that the sale, so made at the intermediate point, amounted to a wrongful conversion of the goods by the defendants, and that they were not exempted from liability in respect thereof at their full value under the terms of the shipping receipt.—As the evidence shewed definitely what damages had been sustained, there being no good reason for remitting the case back for a new trial, the Supreme Court of Canada, in reversing the judgment appealed from, ordered that the damages should be reduced to those proved in respect of the goods sold and converted. Armour, J., however, was of opinion that the judgment of Craig, J., at the trial should be restored. Wilson v. Canadian Development Co., xxxiii., 432.

6. Forwarding over connecting lines—Contract by one for several—Bills of lading—Terms of contract—Custody of goods—Delivery—Negligence.—The appellant, contracted with H. to carry butter from London, Ont., to England, and the bills of lading were signed by B., describing himself as agent severally, but not jointly, for the G. W. Ry. Co., the M. D. T. Co. and the G. W. S. S. Co. named as carriers therein. The G. W. Ry. Co. were to carry the goods from London to Suspension Bridge, the M. D. T. Co. from Suspension Bridge to New York, and it was then to be delivered to the S. S. Co. for carriage to England. It was provided by the bill of lading that if damage was caused to the goods during transit the sole liability was to be on the company having the custody thereof at the time of such damage occurring. The butter was carried to New York, where it was taken from the car and placed in lighters owned by the M. D. T. company to be conveyed to the steamer “Dorset” belonging to the S. S. Co. On arriving at the pier where the steamer lay, the lighter could not get near enough to unload, and the stevedore in charge of the steamer had it towed across the river with instructions for it to remain until sent for. The “Dorset” sailed without the butter, which was sent by another steamer of the S. S. Co. some five days later. The butter was damaged by heat while in the lighter.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (12 Ont. App. R. 201), that the M. D. T. Co., having made a through contract for the carriage of the goods, were liable to H. for the damage, and even under the bill of lading were not relieved from liability, as the butter was never delivered to, and received by, the S. S. Co., but was in the custody of the M. D. T. Co. when the damage occurred. Merchants’ Despatch Transportation Co. v. Hatley, xiv., 572.

3. CONDITIONS AGAINST LIABILITY.

10. Negligence—Bill of lading—Exception from liability—Stowage.—A bill of lading acknowledged receipt on board steamer, in good order and condition, of goods shipped (fresh meat) and contracted to deliver the same in like good order and condition, . . . loss or damage resulting from sweating . . . decay, stowage, . . . or from any of the following perils, whether arising from the negligence, default, or error in judgment of the pilot, master, mariners or other persons in the service of the ship, or for whose acts the ship-owner is liable (or otherwise howsoever) always excepted, namely (setting them out).—Held, affirming the Supreme Court, P.E.I., Ritchie, C.J., and Fournier, J. dissenting, that the clause “whether arising from the negligence, default or error in judgment of the master,” etc., covered as well the preceding exceptions as those which followed, and was not limited in its application by the words “from any of the following perils,” and the defendants were, therefore, not liable for damage to the goods shipped resulting from improper stowage, which was one of the excepted perils. Trainor v. Black Diamond S. S. Co., xvi., 156.

11. Special contract—Exemption from liability—"At owner's risk"—"Against all casualties."—The Commercial Travellers Assn. of Ontario, by written agreement, obtained for its members for the season of 1885 special privileges in travelling by the company's boats, one of the terms being that members should receive tickets at a reduced rate "With allowance of 300 lbs. of baggage free, but the baggage must be at the owner's risk against all casualties." This agreement was continued during 1886 by verbal agreement between the manager of the company and the secretary and traffic manager of the association. A commercial traveller obtained a ticket for passage on one of the company's boats under this agreement, paying the reduced fare, and took on board three trunks containing the usual outfit of a traveller for a jewellery house valued at about $15,000. The trunks were checked in the usual way and no intimation was given to any of the officials on the boat as to their contents. On the passage the contents of the trunks were damaged by negligence of officers of the company and an action was brought.—Held, affirming the decision appealed from (15 Ont. App. R. 647), that the agreement between the association and the company was in force in 1886; that the term "baggage" in the agreement meant not merely personal baggage, such as every passenger is allowed to carry without extra charge, but commercial baggage, and would include the outfit in this case; and that in the expression "must be at owner's risk against all casualties," the words "against all casualties" do not limit, control or destroy, but rather strengthen, the protection which the former words "at owner's risk" afforded the defendants. Dixon v. Richelieu Navigation Co., xviii., 704.

12. Bailees—Common carriers—Express company—Receipt for money parcel—Conditions precedent—Formal notice of claim—Pleading—Money had and received—Special pleas.—Where an express company gave a receipt for money to be forwarded with the condition indorsed that the company should not be liable for any claim in respect of the package, unless within sixty days of loss or damage a claim should be made by written statement, with a copy of the contract annexed.—Held, that the consignor was obliged to comply strictly with these terms as a condition precedent to recovery against the express company for failure to deliver the parcel to the consignee. Richardson v. The Canada West Farmers' Ins. Co. (16 U. C. C. P. 430), distinguished.—In an action to recover the value of the parcel, on the common count for money had and received, the plea of "never indebted" puts in issue all material facts necessary to establish the plaintiff's right of action. Northern Express Co. v. Martin, xxvi., 135.

13. Shipping—Bill of lading—Limitation of time to sue—Damage from unseaworthiness—Construction of contract.—On a shipment of goods by steamer the bill of lading provided that all claims for damage to or loss of the same must be presented within one month from its date after which the same should be completely barred.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (8 B. C. Rep. 228), Mills, J., dissenting, that this limitation applied to a claim for damage caused by unseaworthiness of the steamer. Union Steamship Co. v. Drysdale, xxiii., 379.

14. Shipping receipt—Limitation of carrier's liability—Negligence—Connecting lines—Wrongful conversion—Sale for non-payment of freight—Principal and agent—Varying terms of contract.

See No 2, ante.

4. NEGLIGENCE.

15. Railway—Authority of agent—Bill of lading—Condition verbally stated—Perishable goods—Duty of providing fit and proper transportation—Negligence—Printed conditions—"At owner's risk"—Estoppel.—Action against a railway company for negligence and breach of verbal contract between the shippers and company's agent to carry oil in covered cars with despatch. The oil was forwarded in open cars and delayed in different places, and in consequence a large quantity was lost. The bill of lading said nothing about covered cars, and stated that the goods were subject to conditions indorsed thereon, one being that the company would not be liable for leakage or delays, and that the oil was carried at the owner's risk.—Held, per Ritchie, C.J., and Fournier and Henry, JJ., that the loss did not result from risks imposed on the owners, but from the wrongful act of the carriers in placing the oil on open cars, which was inconsistent with the contract, and in contravention as well of their duty to provide fit and proper transport of the goods shipped.—Per Strong, Fournier, Henry and Gwynne, JJ. Evidence of the verbal contract to carry in covered cars was properly admitted; that the agent had authority to make such a contract in the ordinary course of his duties and it did not militate against but was incorporated with the writing so as to make the whole contract one for carriage in covered cars, and that non-compliance with the condition as to carriage in covered cars prevented the company setting up the condition that "oil was carried at the owner's risk" to avoid liability. Judgment appealed from (28 U. C. C. P. 587), affirmed. Grand Trunk Railway Co. v. Fitzgerald, v., 204.

C.—Liability for fault of servants—Arts. 2353 (8), 2390, 2409, 2413, 2424, 2427 C. C.*—The chartering of a ship with its company for a particular voyage by a transportation company does not relieve the owners and masters from liability upon contracts of affreightment during such voyage where the exclusive control and navigation of the ship are left with the master, mariners, and other servants of the owners, and the contract had been made with them only.—The shipper's knowledge of the manner in which his goods are being stowed under a contract of affreightment does not alone excuse ship-owners from liability for damages caused through improper or insufficient stowage.—A condition in a bill of lading, providing that the ship-owners shall not be liable for negligence on the part of the master or mariners, or their other servants or agents, is not contrary to public policy nor prohibited by law in the Province of Quebec.—When a bill of lading provided that glass was carried only on condition that the ship and railway companies were not to be liable for any breakage that might occur, whether from negligence, rough handling or any other cause whatever, and that the owners were to be "exempt from the perils of the seas, and not answerable for damages and losses by collisions, stranding and all other accidents of navigation, even though the damage or loss from these may be attributable to some wrongful act, fault, neglect, or error in judgment of the pilot, master, mariners or other servants of the ship-owners; nor for breakage or any other damage arising from the nature of the goods shipped," such provisions applied only to loss or damage resulting from acts done during the carriage of the goods, and did not cover damages caused by neglect or improper stowage prior to the commencement of the voyage. Glengoil S. S. Co. v. Pilkington; Glengoil S. S. Co. v. Ferguson, xxviii., 146.

17. Railways—Carriage of goods—Special instructions—Acceptance by consignee—Warehousemen—Negligence—Amendment.—F. Bros., dealers in scrap iron at Toronto, for some time prior to and after 1897 had sold iron to a Rolling Mills Co. at Sunnyside in Toronto West. The G. T. R. had no station at Sunnyside the nearest being at Swansea, a mile further west, but the Rolling Mills Co. had a siding capable of holding three or four cars. In 1897 F. Bros. instructed the G. T. R. Co. to deliver all cars addressed to their order at Swansea or Sunnyside to the Rolling Mills Co., and in Oct., 1899, they had a contract to sell certain quantities of different kinds of iron to the company and shipped to them at various times up to Jan. 2nd, 1900, five cars, one addressed to the company and others to themselves at Sunnyside. On Jan. 10th the company notified F. Bros. that previous shipments had contained iron not suitable for their business and not of the kind contracted for and refused to accept more until a new arrangement was made, and about the middle of January they refused to accept part of the five cars and the remainder before the end of January. On Feb. 4th the cars were placed on a siding to be out of the way and were there frozen in. On Feb. 9th F. Bros. were notified that the cars were there subject to their orders and two days later F., one of the firm, went to Swansea and met the company's manager. They could not get at the cars where they were and F. arranged with the station agent to have them placed on the company's siding and that he would have what the company would accept taken to the mills by teams. The cars could not be moved until the end of April when the price of the iron had fallen and F. Bros. would not accept them, but after considerable correspondence and negotiation they took them away in the following October and brought an action against the G. T. R. Co. founded on the failure to deliver the cars. It appeared that in previous shipments the cars were usually forwarded to the rolling mills on receipt of an order therefor from the company but sometimes they were sent without instructions, and on Feb. 3rd the station agent had written to F. Bros. that the cars were at Swansea and would be sent down to the rolling mills.—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal, that the Rolling Mills Co. were consignees of all the cars and that they had the right to reject them at Swansea if not according to contract. Having exercised such right the railway company were not liable as carriers, the transitus having come to an end at Swansea by refusal of the company to receive them.—The Court of Appeal, while relieving the railway company from liability as carriers, held them liable as warehousemen and ordered a reference to ascertain the damages on that head.—Held, reversing such decision, Mills, J., dissenting, that the action was not brought against the railway company as warehousemen, and as they could only be liable as such for gross negligence and the question of negligence had never been raised nor tried the action must be dismissed in toto, with reservation of the right of F. Bros. to bring a further action should they see fit. The Grand Trunk Ry. Co. of Canada v. Frankel, xxxiii., 115.

23. Lien for freight—Storage—Ships and shipping—Charter party—Delivery—Concurrent acts—Tender—Trove for cargo.—A cargo of coal was consigned to B. and the master of the vessel refused to deliver it unless the freight was prepaid, which B. refused but offered to pay it ton by ton as delivered. By direction of the owner's agent the coal was taken out of the vessel and stored, whereupon B. tendered the amount of the freight and demanded it, but the agent still refused to deliver unless the cost of storage was paid. In trover against the master, Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (27 N. B. Rep. 231), Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the refusal of the agent after tender of the full freight was a conversion of the cargo for which trover would lie.—Held, per Patterson, J., that trover would lie, but not against the master, who was only the servant of the agent, and acting under his directions.—Held, also, that an action ex delicto for breach of duty in not delivering the coal according to the bill of lading would not lie. *Winchester v. CHAMPERTY.

1. Champertous agreement—Administration proceedings—Proving claim—Promissory notes—Subsequent proof by original holder—Statute of limitations—Practice.—H. & Co. holders of promissory notes in their favour by A. M. C. deceased, made the following agreement with O.: "Toronto, Feb. 28th, 1884. "I have this day bought from Messrs. W. P. Howland & Co. three promissory notes made in their favour by A. M. Cannon, one for $1,000, due one year after date; one for $3,218, due two years after date; and one for $3,218, due three years after date, all three bearing date Sept. 5th, 1877, in consideration for which I agree to pay the said W. P. Howland & Co. one-half of the net amount I receive on account of the said notes, and I agree to use my best endeavours to collect the same, and if, at the expiration of two years, I have been unable to collect any portion of the said notes, I hereby agree to return them to the said W. P. Howland & Co., free from any costs or charges incurred by me. But, if, at any time previous to the expiration of the two years above mentioned, I have succeeded in collecting any portion of the said notes, then their portion above mentioned will be due and payable to the said W. P. Howland & Co. "WM. H. OATES." During the currency of that agreement O. obtained on 19th September, 1884, an order for the administration of the estate of A. M. C. of whose personal estate M. E. C. (appellant), was administratrix. The usual advertisement for creditors was published, and one T. proved a claim under the reference as a creditor of the deceased, and his claim had been duly allowed by the Master prior to October, 1886. M. E. C. applied to have the claim of O. upon the promissory notes disallowed, on the ground that the title by which he claimed was champertous and void. Proudfoot, J., (23rd October, 1886), adjudged that O.'s title to the notes, under the agreement was champertous and void, and that he could not prove in the administration by virtue of his title thereto, but he held that the administration order of 19th September, 1884, was for the benefit of all the creditors of the estate, one of whom had proved a claim and therefor, and refused to set it aside. (13 Ont. R. 70.) Neither party appealed from this order. Thereupon O. re-delivered the notes to H. & Co., who up to this time had been in no way party or privy to the proceedings for administration. The six years' allowance by the Statute of Limitations had expired before the notes were re-delivered, but not before the date of the administration order. The reference had not been concluded, nor any report made by the Master. H. & Co. applied for liberty to come in and prove their claim on the notes, and the Master allowed them to do so. From this ruling the appellant appealed. — While the appeal was pending, the respondents came before the Master to prove their claim, pursuant to leave granted, and the Master allowed their claim upon the promissory notes. From this allowance the appellant appealed, and the last mentioned appeal came on for argument at the same time as the appeal from the Master's exercise of discretion in granting leave to the respondents to prove their claim. Both appeals were dismissed by Proudfoot, J., who held that the order for administration prevented the bar of the Statute of Limitations; and that H. & Co. might assert their title to the notes and prove on them, notwithstanding the former agreement with O., which he had already held to be champertous. — The Supreme Court of Canada dismissed an appeal from the judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario affirming this decision. Present: Strong, Fournier, Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ. — Per Gwynne, J. I am unable to perceive upon what right the maker of an unquestionably valid note or his personal representative can in any proceeding taken by the payee to recover upon the note, institute an enquiry as to what the payee may have done with the note in the interval elapsing between the making of the note and the proceeding taken to recover payment of it. H. & Co., payees of the note, cannot as it appears to me be affected by the adjudication in the proceeding instituted by O., to which they were not a party, and while the administrator's order remains in force they are entitled to prove the debt represented by the notes and to the benefit of that order in preventing the Statute of Limitations to run. If a champertous dealing in respect of the notes between H. & Co. and O., could affect their right to prove they must have a right to insist that the dealing was not affected with the vice of champerty, notwithstanding the adjudication on the tender of proof by O. And if it were necessary to decide that point, I should be of opinion that in the transaction with O., there was no champerty. A promissory note in the hands of the payee is as much a piece of property as an acre of land, or a horse, a quantity of merchandise, or any other chattel, and the agreement made between H. & Co. and O. in respect of the notes upon the occasion of their being transferred to him under the special agreement in evidence, was no more champertous than would a like agreement have been in case the property transferred had been an acre of land, a horse, a quantity of merchandise or any other chattel. Moreover the maker of the note, or his personal representative, who did not dispute their liability upon the notes, had no right, as it appears to me, to institute an enquiry as to what were the terms as between the payees and their transferee upon which the notes were transferred to the holder. *Cannon v. 2. FORM.

3. Debtor and creditor—Description of goods—C. S. M. c. 49, s. 5.—In a chattel mortgage the goods were described as "all and singular the goods, chattels, furniture, and household stuff hereinafter particularly mentioned and described, in the schedule hereunto annexed marked A., all of which goods and chattels are now situate" (description of the premises) without stating that such goods were all the goods on such premises. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from,

Strong and Henry, JJ., dissenting, that the description of the goods was not a full and sufficient description within the meaning of C. S. M. c. 49, s. 5, and the mortgage was void against execution creditors. McCall v. Wolf, xiii., 130.

4. Description of goods mortgaged—N. W. Ter. Ord. No. 5 of 1881.]—Section 6 of the ordinance provides: "All the instruments mentioned in this ordinance, whether for the mortgage or sale of goods and chattels, shall contain such sufficient and full description thereof that the same may be readily and easily known and distinguished." The description in a chattel mortgage was: "All and singular, the goods, chattels, stock-in-trade, fixtures, and store building of the mortgagors, used in or pertaining to their business as general merchants, said stock-in-trade consisting of a full stock of general merchandise now being in the store of said mortgagors on the north half of section 6, township 19, range 28 west of the 4th principal meridian." Held, affirming the decision appealed from (1 N. W. T. Rep. No. 1, p. 88), that the description was sufficient. McCall v. Wolf (13 Can. S. C. R. 130) distinguished; Hovey v. Whiting (14 Can. S. C. R. 515) followed. Thomson v. Quirk, xviii., 695.

5. Affidavit of bona fides—Compliance with statutory form—R. S. N. S. (5 ser.) c. 92, s. 4.]—By R. S. N. S. (5 ser.), c. 92, s. 4, every chattel mortgage must be accompanied by an affidavit of bona fides, "as nearly as may be" in the form given in a schedule to the Act. The form of the jurat to such affidavit in the schedule is: "Sworn to at in the county of , this day of A.D. Before me a commissioner, etc. Held, reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that where the jurat to an affidavit was "sworn to at Middleton this 6th day of July, A.D. 1891," etc., without naming the county, the mortgage was void, notwithstanding the affidavit was headed "in the County of Annapolis." Archibald v. Hubley (18 Can. S. C. R. 116) followed; Smith v. McLean (21 Can. S. C. R. 355) distinguished. Morse v. Phinney, xxii., 563.

6. Affidavit of bona fides—Compliance with statutory forms—Change of possession—Levy under execution—Abandonment.]—The Bills of Sale Act, Nova Scotia, R. S. N. S. (5 ser.), c. 92, by s. 4 requires a mortgage given to secure an existing indebtedness to be accompanied by an affidavit in the form prescribed in a schedule to the Act, and by s. 5, if the mortgage is to secure a debt not matured the affidavit must follow another form. By s. 11 either affidavit must be, "as nearly as may be," in the forms prescribed. A mortgage was given to secure both a present and future indebtedness, and was accompanied by a single affidavit combining the main features of both forms. Held, affirming the decision appealed from (27 N. S. Rep. 90), Gwynne, J., dissenting, that this affidavit was not "as nearly as may be," in the form prescribed; that there would have been no difficulty in complying strictly with the requirements of the Act; and though the legal effect might have been the same the mortgage was void for want of such compliance. Reid v. Creighton, xxiv., 69.

7. Description—Bills of Sale Act—R. S. O. (1887) c. 125.]—In a chattel mortgage the goods conveyed were described as follows: "All of which said goods and chattels are now the property of the said mortgagor, and are situate in and upon the premises of the London Machine Tool Co. (describing the premises), on the north side of King street, in the City of London." and in a schedule referred to in the mortgage was this additional description: "And all machines . . . in course of construction, or which shall hereafter be in course of construction or completed while any of the moneys hereby secured are unpaid, being in or upon the premises now occupied by the mortgagor . . . or which are now or shall be on any other premises in the said City of London." Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, that the description in the schedule could not extend to goods wholly manufactured on premises other than those described in the mortgage, and, if it could, the description was not sufficient within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Act (R. S. O. [1887] c. 125), to cover machines so manufactured. Williams v. E. Leonard & Sons, xxvi., 406.

8. Promissory note—Indorser—Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, s. 56—Chattel mortgage—Consideration.]—Under s. 56 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, a person who indorses a promissory note not indorsed by the payee may be liable as an indorser to the latter.—The provisions of the Ontario Chattel Mortgage Act requiring the consideration of a mortgage to be expressed therein is satisfied when the mortgage recites that the indorsement of a note is the consideration and then sets out the note. Only the facts need be stated, not their legal effect. Robinson v. Mann, xxxi., 484.

9. R. S. N. S. (5 ser.) c. 92—Registry—Defective jurat—Assignment.

See BILL OF SALE, 116.

3. POSSESSION OF GOODS.

10. Possession of goods—Right of mortgagor to sell—Ordinary course of trade—Seizure in execution—Justification.]—In a chattel mortgage containing no redemise clause there may be an implied contract that the mortgagor shall remain in possession until default, of equal efficacy with an express clause to that effect; and such an implied contract necessarily arises from the nature of the instrument, unless it be very expressly excluded by its terms. Porter v. Flintoff (6 U. C. C. P. 335) distinguished.—In a chattel mortgage of the stock-in-trade and business effects of a trader there was a proviso to the effect that if the mortgagor should attempt to sell or dispose of the said goods the mortgagee might take possession of the same as in case of default of payment. Held, that this proviso only prohibited the sale of the goods other than in the ordinary course of business. (Ritchie, C.J., contra).—The mortgagee of the chattels seized the mortgaged goods under an execution in a suit for the debt secured by the mortgage. The execution was set aside as being against good faith. In an action for the wrongful seizure and conversion of the goods. Held, that the mortgagee could not justify the seizure under the mortgage.—Judgment appealed from (4 Man. L. R. 139) reversed. Dedrick v. Ashdown, xv., 227.

11. Change of possession—Assignment in trust to mortgagee.—N. executed a chattel mortgage of his effects, and shortly afterwards made an assignment to one of the mortgagees, in trust for the benefit of his creditors. The assignee took possession under the assignment. Held, affirming the decision appealed from (27 N. S. Rep. 90), that there was no delivery to the mortgagees under the mortgage which transferred to them the possession of the goods. Reid v. Creighton, xxiv, 69.

4. PREFERENCES.

12. Preference—Hindering and delaying creditors—Statute of Elizabeth.—In an assignment for benefit of creditors one preferred creditor was to receive nearly $300 more than was due him from the assignor, on an understanding that he would pay certain debts due from the assignor to other persons, amounting in the aggregate to the sum by which his debt was exceeded. The persons so to be paid were not parties to nor named in the deed of assignment. Held, reversing the decision of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that as the creditors to be paid by the preferred creditor could not enforce payment from him or from the assignor who had parted with all his property, they would be hindered and delayed in the recovery of their debts, and the deed was, therefore, void under the Statute of Elizabeth. (Cf. 29 N. S. Rep. 162; 28 Can. S. C. R. 337). McDonald v. Cummings, xxiv, 321.

13. Assignment for benefit of creditors—Preferences—R. S. N. S. c. 92, ss. 4, 5, 10—Chattel mortgage—Statute of Elizabeth.—Though an assignment contains preferences in favour of certain creditors, yet if it includes, subject to such preferences, a trust in favour of all the assignor's creditors it is "an assignment for the general benefit of creditors" under s. 10 of the Nova Scotia Bills of Sale Act (R. S. N. S. c. 92), and does not require an affidavit of bona fides. Durkee v. Flint (19 N. S. Rep. 487), approved and followed; Archibald v. Hubley (18 Can. S. C. R. 116), distinguished.—A provision in an assignment for the security and indemnity of makers and indorsers of paper not due, for accommodation of the debtor, does not make it a chattel mortgage under s. 5 of the Act, the property not being redeemable and the assignor retaining no interest in it. Kirk v. Chisholm, xxvi, 111.

5. PROPERTY AFFECTED.

15. After acquired property—Agreement not to register—Assignment for benefit of creditors—Legal title of trustee—Equitable title of mortgagee—Priority.—In May, 1880, D., being indebted to M., gave a chattel mortgage on all his stock in trade, chattels and effects then being in his store on G. st., in Halifax; and agreed to convey to M. all stock which during the continuance of the indebtedness he might purchase for the purpose of substituting in place of stock then owned by him in connection with his said business. These goods were never so conveyed. By the terms of the mortgage the debt was to be paid in 3 years, in 12 equal instalments at specified times, and if any instalment should be unpaid for 15 days after becoming due, the whole to become immediately payable, and M. could take possession of and sell the mortgaged goods. It was further agreed that to save the business credit of D. the mortgage was not to be filed and was to be kept secret; and it was not filed until 12th Dec., 1881. On the 13th Dec., 1881, D. assigned to F. in trust for the benefit of creditors, by trust deed executed by D., F., and one of D.'s creditors, and subsequently by a number of other creditors. At the time F. had no notice of the mortgage to M., and took possession of the goods in the store on G. st., and refused to deliver them to M. on demand, on 14th Dec., default having been made in payments under the mortgage, and suit was brought for recovery of the goods and an account. Previous to the suit F. delivered a small portion of the goods in the store to M., which, as he alleged, were all that remained of the stock on the premises in May, 1880.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (5 Russ. & Geld. 151), Strong, J., dissenting, that the legal title to the property vested in F. must prevail, the plaintiff's title being merely equitable and the equities between the parties being equal. McAllister v. Forsyth, xii, 1.

16. After acquired property—Partus sequitur ventrem—Novus actus interveniens—Trove against sheriff.—Plaintiffs were the grantees and H. the grantor in a bill of sale, by way of mortgage, which conveyed four horses, with proviso that until default H. might remain in possession, but power to plaintiffs, on default, to take possession and dispose of the property as they should see fit. After default in payment of principal and interest, a mare, described in the mortgage, dropped a foal, which was seized by defendant (sheriff) under an execution against H.—On appeal from the Supreme Court of New Brunswick (4 Pugs. & Bur. 246), Held, that it being established by the evidence that the foal was dropped after default made and therefore while plaintiffs were owners and entitled to possession of the mare, such foal was their property—partus sequitur ventrem. Temple v. Nicholson, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 114.

17. Hire receipt—Including subsequently acquired goods—Fraud against creditors—Prior agreement—Additional chattels in mortgage.—B. sold to P. machinery, tools and fixtures, in a factory owned by B. to be paid for by monthly payments, extending over 48 months. P. agreed to keep them insured in favour of B. and to give B. a hire receipt or chattel mortgage, as security for payment, was put in possession of the property, and received letters from B. recommending him to merchants in Montreal, where he purchased goods from L. on credit.—Two months later L. sued P. for the price of goods so purchased, and, after being served with the writ, P. gave B. a chattel mortgage on the goods originally purchased and other goods which it was alleged would have been included in the purchase from B. had it not been claimed that they were not in the factory at the time, but were afterwards found to be there. P. had not given a hire receipt or chattel mortgage at the time of the original purchase from B.

—L. signed judgment against P. issued execution, and caused the mortgaged goods to be seized. On an interpleader issue to try the title in said goods, B. recovered judgment for the goods originally sold to P. but not for those added in the mortgage. The Divisional Court set aside this judgment, holding that the mortgage was void for inclusion of goods not mentioned in the original agreement and his decision was affirmed by the Court of Appeal for Ontario. On appeal—Held, that the judgment of the Court of Appeal should be affirmed. Brown v. Lamontague, 26 C. L. J. 306; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.), 120.

18. Collateral security on logs and timber—Mortgagor's administration—Agency—Slide and boom dues—Agreement between Crown and mortgagor of lumber—Lien—C. S. C. c. 28—31 Vict. c. 12.—Petition of right by appellants, praying that a seizure of a quantity of logs, made for arrears of slide dues, owned by S. for the logs seized and other logs, be removed, and that $5,267, which had been paid by the appellants to the Crown, under duress, be refunded.—S., being indebted to appellants, had given as collateral security for his debt, two chattel mortgages on logs and timber. These mortgages were executed, on 18th Dec., 1876, and 11th May, 1877. On 15th May, 1877, S. became insolvent, and in 1878, his equity of redemption was released to appellants by his assignee. In June, 1877, S., who had been allowed to remain in possession of the property and to attend to the manufacture and disposal of the lumber in virtue of special provisions in the mortgages, and who also owed slide dues for several years, in order to repay this general debt for dues, agreed to pay the government $2 per 1,000 feet B. M., on all lumber to be shipped by him through the canals. The dues fixed by the government regulations were 4 cents per log, equal to about 26 cents per 1,000 feet B. M. Appellants claimed that this arrangement was unknown to, and had never been ratified by them.—In 1878, when appellants began to ship the lumber on barges, the collector of slide dues refused to allow the barges to pass through the canals until the appellants paid the $2 agreed upon between S. and the government.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (1 Ex. C. R. 1) that S. had no authority, express or implied, from the bank, to pledge the property covered by the mortgages for the payment of arrears of Crown dues, or to impose on such property any lien, charge or burthen other than the law had attached to it for the slidge and boomage of that specific property.—That there was no evidence that the bank had any knowledge of any general lien or charge on that property, or of any arrears other than on the lumber mentioned in the mortgages, or of any claim by the Crown other than for the slidge and boomage on the logs in dispute.—That if the bank did know there were arrears for slide or boom dues on logs previously brought down and manufactured into lumber, such knowledge would not create a charge or attach a lien for such dues on other lumber than that for the slidge and boomage of which they became due.—That if S. did propose by any arrangement with the Crown to give the Crown a charge or lien for arrears due for other lumber, there was no evidence of any adoption, ratification or confirmation of any such arrangement by the bank.—That there was nothing in the law or regulations giving the Crown any general lien for arrears, or for any general balance which the owner of logs may owe the government, or any lien except on the specific lumber for the amount due for its passage or boomage, viz., 4c. per log, equal to 26c. per 1,000 ft. B. M.—That the transaction was in no sense that of principal and agent, but of debtor and creditor, in which the debtor by mortgage by way of collateral security transferred property to his creditor and agreed to retain possession and so deal with it that its value should be realized in such a manner as to secure to the creditor the proceeds in payment of his debt, the surplus, if any, being for the benefit of the mortgagor. Having transferred the property by way of mortgage, S. was in no position to give by agreement or otherwise a charge to take precedence of such mortgage.—Per Fournier, J., without giving any decided opinion as to the validity of the regulations by virtue of 31 Vict. c. 12, s. 17, such regulations might be looked at to ascertain the amount of dues which could be claimed under them, because the appellants could not at the same time admit and deny the validity of such regulations. Admitting they were invalid, the logs in question having passed through the government slides, there would still be due to the government the value of the services rendered, and by tendering $1,500 the suppliants admitted that something was justly due to the government, if not legally due in virtue of the regulations. Appeal allowed with costs, Strong and Taschereau, JJ., dissenting. Merchants Bank of Canada v. The Queen, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 636.

19. Security for advances—Bank Act, s. 74—Chattel mortgage—Conversion.—H. held a chattel mortgage on a sawmill belonging to G., with the machinery and lumber therein, and all lumber that might at any time thereafter be brought on the premises. The mortgage not being registered gave H. no priority over subsequent incumbrancers. Two months later G. gave H. a second mortgage on said property to secure a note for $794. Shortly after this a contractor applied to G. for a large quantity of lumber for building purposes. G. being unable to purchase the logs asked the bank for an advance. The bank, knowing G. to be financially embarrassed, refused the advances to him but agreed to make them if some reliable person would purchase the logs, which was done by G.'s bookkeeper, and in consideration of an advance of $3,500 G. assigned the contractor's order to the bookkeeper and agreed to cut the logs at a price fixed and deliver them to the bookkeeper at the mill site. The latter then assigned to the bank all monies to accrue in respect to the contract, which assignment was agreed to by the contractor, and a day or two after also assigned to the bank three booms of logs by numbers in addition to one assigned previously. * This purported to be done under s. 74 of the Bank Act. Two or three days later G. made an assignment for benefit of his creditors, previous to which, however, the logs had arrived at the mill and were mixed with other logs of G. The greater part had been converted into lumber when H. seized them under his chattel mortgage.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (7 B. C. Rep. 465), that no property in the logs assigned to the bank had passed to G., and H. having no higher right than his mortgagor, could not claim them under his mortgage.—Shortly before G.'s assignment for benefit of his creditors his bookkeeper transferred to the bank a chattel mortgage given him by G. to secure payment of $800. The judgment appealed from ordered the assignee in bankruptcy to pay the bank the balance due on said mortgage.—Held, reversing said judgment, that the assignee had been guilty of no acts of conversion and was not liable to repay this money. The mortgage was not given to secure advances and did not give the bank a first lien on the property. The bank was in the same position as if it had received the mortgage directly from G. when he was notoriously insolvent. Houston v. The Merchants Bank of Halifax, xxxi., 361.

6. REGISTRATION.

20. Chattel mortgage—Registration—Renewal—Computation of time—N. W. Terr. ord. No. 5 of 1881.—The North-West Territories ordinance relating to chattel mortgages (1881, No. 5) provides by s. 9 "every mortgage filed in pursuance of this ordinance shall cease to be valid as against the creditors of the persons making the same after the expiration of one year from the filing thereof, unless a statement, etc., is again filed within 30 days next preceding the expiration of the said term of one year." A chattel mortgage was filed 12th Aug., 1886, and registered at 4.10 p.m. of that day. A renewal was registered at 11.49 a.m. 12th Aug., 1887.—Held, affirming the decision appealed from, that the renewal was filed within one year from the date of the filing of the original mortgage as provided by the ordinance.—Per Patterson, J. In computing the time mentioned in this section, the day of the original filing should be excluded, and the mortgagee would have had the whole of 12th Aug., 1887, for filing renewal. Thomson v. Quirk, xviii., 695.

21. Construction of statute—55 Vict. c. 26, ss. 2 and 4 (O.)—Chattel mortgage—Agreement not to register—Void mortgage—Possession by creditor.—By the Act relating to chattel mortgages (R. S. O. [1887] c. 125), a mortgage not registered within five days after execution is "void as against creditors," and by 55 Vict. c. 26, s. 2 (O.), that expression is extended to simple contract creditors of the mortgagor or bargainor suing on behalf of themselves and other creditors, and to any assignee for the general benefit of creditors within the meaning of the Act respecting assignments and preferences (R. S. O. [1887] c. 124).—By s. 4 of 55 Vict. c. 26, a mortgage so void shall not, by subsequent possession by the mortgagee of the things mortgaged, be made valid "as against persons who became creditors . . . before such taking of possession."—Held, reversing the decision of the Court of Appeal, that under this legislation a mortgage so void is void against all creditors, those becoming such after the mortgagee has taken possession as well as before, and not merely as against those having executions in the sheriff's hands at the time possession is taken, simple contract creditors who have commenced proceedings to set aside, and an assignee appointed before the mortgage was given; that the words "suing on behalf of themselves and other creditors," in the amending Act, only indicate the nature of proceedings necessary to set the mortgage aside, and that the same will enure to the benefit of the general body of creditors; and that such mortgage will not be made valid by subsequent taking of possession.—Held, per Strong, C.J., that where a mortgage is given in pursuance of an agreement that there shall be neither registration nor immediate possession such mortgage is, on grounds of public policy, void ab initio. Clarkson v. McMaster & Co., xxv., 96.

7. OTHER CASES.

22. Chattel mortgage—Mortgagee in possession—Negligence—Wilful default—Sale under powers—"Slaughter sale"—Practice—Assignment for the benefit of creditors—Revocation of.—A mortgagee in possession who sells the mortgaged goods in a reckless and improvident manner is liable to account not only for what he actually receives, but for what he might have obtained for the goods had he acted with a proper regard for the interests of the mortgagor.—An assignment for the benefit of creditors is revocable until the creditors either execute or otherwise assent to it.—Under the provisions of R. S. O. c. 122, in order to enable the assignee of a chose in action to sue in his own name, the assignment must be in writing, but a written instrument is not required to restore the assignor to his original right of action.—Where creditors refused to accept the benefit of an assignment under R. S. O. c. 124, and the assignor was notified of such refusal, and that the assignment had not been registered, an action for damages was properly brought in the name of the assignor against a mortgagee of his stock in trade who sold the goods in an improper manner. *Rennie v. CHOSE IN ACTION.

1. Assignment—Action by assignee—Statutory notice—R. S. N. S. (4 ser.) c. 94, ss. 355, 357.—R. S. N. S. (4 ser.) c. 94, s. 355, authorizes the assignee of a chose in action in certain cases to sue thereon in the Supreme Court as his assignor might have done, and s. 357 provides that before such action is brought a notice in writing, signed by the assignee, his agent or attorney, stating the right of the assignee and specifying his demand thereunder, shall be served on the party to be sued. Pursuant to this section the assignee of a debt served the following notice: "Pictou, November 21st, 1878, Alex. Grant, Esq.: Admin. Estate of Alexander McDonald, deceased. Dear Sir,—You are hereby notified in accordance with c. 94 of the revised statutes, s. 357, that the debt due by the above estate of Finlay Thompson has been assigned by him to Alexander D. Cameron, who hereby claims payment of twelve hundred dollars, the amount of the said debt so assigned to him. S. H. Holmes, attorney for Alex. D. Cameron."—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (23 N. S. Rep. 50), that the notice was a sufficient compliance with the statute. Grant v. Cameron, xviii., 716.

Stipend — Commutation fund — Member of synod — Trust — Vested rights — By-law—Church society.—The sum received for commutation under the Clergy Reserve Act was paid to the Church Society of the Diocese of Huron, upon trust to pay to the commuting clergy their stipends for life, and when such payment should cease then "for the support and maintenance of the clergy of the Diocese of Huron in such manner as should from time to time be declared by any by-law or by-laws of the synod to be from time to time passed for that purpose." In 1860, a by-law was passed providing that out of the surplus of the commutation fund, clergymen of eight years and upwards active service should receive each $200, with a provision for increase in certain events. In 1873, the plaintiff became entitled under this by-law, and in 1876 the synod (the successors of the Church Society) repealed all previous by-laws respecting the fund, and made a different appropriation of it.—Held, affirming the Court of Appeal for Ontario (9 App. R. 411), (Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting), that under the terms of the trust there was no contract between the plaintiff and defendants; the trustees had power, from time to time, to pass by-laws regulating the fund in question and making a different appropriation of it for the support and maintenance of the clergy of the diocese, and the plaintiff must be assumed to have accepted his stipend with that knowledge and on that condition. Wright v. Synod of the Diocese of Huron, xi., 95.

CODICIL.

1. Will—Revocation—Revival—Intention to revive—Reference to date—Removal of executor—Statute of Mortmain—Will executed under mistake—Ontario Wills Act, R. S. O. (1887) c. 199—9 Geo. II. c. 36 (Imp.)—A will which has been revoked cannot, since the passing of the Ontario Wills Act (R. S. O. [1887] c. 109), be revived by a codicil unless the intention to revive it appears on the face of the codicil either by express words referring to the will as revoked and importing such intention, or by a disposition of the testator's property inconsistent with any other intention, or by other expressions conveying to the mind of the court, with reasonable certainty, the existence of the intention in question.—A reference in the codicil to a date of the revoked will, and the removal of the executor named therein, and substitution of another in his place will not revive it.—Held, per King, J., dissenting, that a codicil referring to the revoked will by date and removing an executor named therein is sufficient indication of an intention to revive such will, more especially when the several instruments are executed under circumstances shewing such intention. Macdonald v. Purcell; Cleary v. Purcell, xxiii., 101.

2. Will—Devise to two sons—Devise over of one share—Condition—Context—Codicil.—A testator devised property "equally" to his two sons J. S. and T. G., with a provision that "in the event of the death of my said son T. G., unmarried, or without leaving issue," his interest should go to J. S. By a codicil a third son was given an equal interest with his brothers in the property, on a condition, which was not complied with, and the devise to him became of no effect.—Held, reversing the decision of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, that the codicil did not affect the construction to be put on the devise in the will; that J. S. and T. G. took as tenants in common in equal moieties the estate of J. S. being absolute, and that of T. G. subject to an executory devise over in case of death at any time, and not merely during the lifetime of the testator. Cowan v. Allen (26 Can. S. C. R. 292) followed.—Held, also, that the word "equal" indicated the respective shares which the two devisees were to take in the area of the property devised, and not the character of the estates given in those shares. Fraser v. Fraser, xxvi., 316.

(i) In the ascertainment of the amount of the principal of the said common school fund, the arbitrators are to take into consideration not only the sum now held by the Government of the Dominion of Canada, but also the amount for which Ontario is liable, and also the value of the school lands which have not yet been sold." The Province of Quebec claimed that Ontario was liable (1) for the purchase money of lands sold which may have been remitted by the Province of Ontario to the purchasers; (2) for purchase moneys which might, if due diligence had been used, have been collected from the purchasers by Ontario, but which, owing to the neglect and default of the provincial officers, have not been collected but have been lost; (3) for lands which might have been sold but have not been sold; and (4) for all uncollected balance of purchase money. Held, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the Dominion arbitrators have jurisdiction, under the submission, to hear and adjudicate upon the claims so made by the Province of Quebec. *The Province of Quebec v. 1. Limited liability—Towage contract—Sawmill company—Collision—Merchant shipping.—Where there is nothing in the charter of a company incorporated for the purposes of a sawmill manufacturing business which would prevent it purchasing and owning a steam tug for use incidental to such business, the company can validly enter into contracts for towage to be done by the tug and hire it for such purposes. Sewell v. B. C. Towing Co. and Moodyville Sawmill Co., ix., 527.

2. Foreign corporation—Telegraph company—Business in Canada—Contract for—Exclusive right—Restraint of trade—Railway telegraph—Public policy—Comity of nations.—In 1869, E. & N. A. Ry. Co. owning a railway from St. John, N.B., to U. S. boundary, agreed with the W. U. Tel. Co. giving it the exclusive right for 99 years to construct and operate a line of telegraph over its road. In 1876 a mortgage on the road was foreclosed and the road itself sold under decree in equity to the St. J. and M. Ry. Co., which, in 1883, leased it to the N. B. Ry. Co. for 999 years. The telegraph line was constructed by the W. U. Tel. Co. under the agreement, and has been continued ever since without any new agreement being made with the St. J. and M. Ry. Co. or the N. B. Ry. Co. The W. U. Tel. Co. is incorporated by the State of New York for constructing and operating telegraph lines in the state. Its charter neither allows nor prohibits it engaging in business outside the state. In 1888 the C. P. Ry. Co. completed a road from Montreal to St. John, a portion of it having running powers over the N. B. Ry., on which the W. U. Tel. Co. had constructed its telegraph line. The N. B. Ry. Co. having given permission to the C. P. Ry. Co. to construct another telegraph line over the same road, the W. U. Tel. Co. obtained an injunction. On appeal the Supreme Court of Canada—Held, 1. That the agreement of 1869 was binding on the present owners of the road. 2. That the contract made with the W. U. Tel. Co. was consistent with the purposes of its incorporation, not prohibited by its charter nor by the local laws of New Brunswick, and its right to enter into such a contract and carry on the business provided for thereby is a right recognized by the comity of nations. 3. The exclusive right granted to the W. U. Tel. Co. does not avoid the contract as being against public policy, nor as being a contract in restraint of trade.—Per Gwynne, J., dissenting. The comity of nations does not require the courts of the country to enforce, in favour of a foreign corporation, a contract depriving a railway company in Canada of the right to permit a domestic corporation, created for the purpose of erecting telegraph lines in the Dominion, to erect such a line upon its land, and depriving it of the right to construct a telegraph line upon its own land. Can. Pac. Ry. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., xvii., 151.

3. Joint stock company—Ultra vires contract—Consent judgment—Action to set aside.—A company incorporated for definite purposes has no power to pursue objects other than those expressed in its charter, or such as are reasonably incidental thereto, nor to exercise their powers in the attainment of authorized objects in a manner not authorized by the charter. The assent of every shareholder makes no difference.—If a company enters into a transaction which is ultra vires and litigation ensues, in the course of which a judgment is entered by consent, such judgment is as binding upon the parties as one obtained after a contest, and will not be set aside because the transaction was beyond the power of the company. Charlebois v. Delap, xxvi., 221.

4. Banking—Bills of exchange and promissory notes—Discount by president—Credit to company's account—Payments out to company's creditors—Liability of company upon note given without authority—Bona fides.—Where the president of an incorporated company made a promissory note in the company's name, without authority, and discounted it with the company's bankers, the proceeds being credited to the company's account, and paid out by cheques in the company's name to its creditors, whose claims should have been paid by the president out of funds which he had previously misappropriated, the bankers, who had taken the notes in good faith, are entitled to charge the amount thereof at maturity against the company's account.—Judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario (23 Ont. App. R. 66) affirmed. Brigdwatwater Cheese Factory Co. v. Murphy, xxvi., 443.

5. Incorporated company—Action against—Forfeiture of charter—Estoppel—Compliance with statute—Res judicata.—In an action against a river improvement company for repayment of tolls alleged to have been unlawfully collected, it was alleged that the dams, slides, etc., for which tolls were claimed, were not placed on the properties mentioned in the letters patent of the company; that the company did not comply with the statutory requirement that the works should be completed within two years from the date of incorporation whereby the corporate powers were forfeited; that false returns were made to the Commissioner of Crown Lands upon which the schedule of tolls was fixed; that the company by its works and improvements obstructed navigable waters contrary to the provisions of the Timber Slide Companies Act, and could not exact toll in respect of such works. By a consent judgment in a former action between the same parties it had been agreed that a valuator should be appointed by the Commissioner of Crown Lands, whose report was to be accepted in place of that provided for by the Timber Slide Companies Act, and to be acted upon by the commissioner in fixing the schedule of tolls. Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, that the above grounds of impeachment were covered by the consent judgment and were res judicata. Held, further, that the plaintiffs having treated the company as a corporation, using the works and paying the tolls fixed by the commissioner, and having in the present action sued the company as a corporation, were precluded from impugning its legal existence by claiming that its corporate powers were forfeited.—By R. S. O. [1887] c. 160, s. 54, it was provided that if a company such as this did not complete its works within two years from the date of incorporation it should forfeit all its corporate and other powers “unless further time is granted by the county or counties, district or districts, in or adjoining which the work is situate, or by the Commissioner of Public Works.” Semble, the non-completion of the work within two years would not, ipso facto, forfeit the charter, but only afford grounds for proceedings by the Attorney-General to have a forfeiture declared.—Another ground of objection to the imposition of tolls was that the commissioner, in acting on the report of the valuator appointed under the consent judgment, erroneously based the schedule of tolls upon the report as to expenditure instead of as to actual value, and the statement of claim asked that the schedule be set aside and a scale of tolls fixed. Held, that under the statute the schedule could only be allowed or varied by the commissioner and the court could not interfere, especially as no application for relief had been made to the commissioner. Hardy Lumber Co. v. Pickerel River Improvement Co., xxix., 211.

10. Criminal law—Manslaughter—Indictment against body corporate—Criminal Code, s. 213—Fine.]—Under s. 213 of the Criminal Code a corporation may be indicted for omitting, without lawful excuse, to perform the duty of avoiding danger to human life from anything in its charge or under its control.—The fact that the consequence of the omission to perform such duty might have justified an indictment for manslaughter in the case of an individual is not a ground for quashing the indictment.—As s. 213 provides no punishment for the offence the common law punishment of a fine may be imposed on a corporation indicted under it. — Judgment appealed from (7 B. C. Rep. 247) affirmed. Union Colliery Co. v. The Queen, xxxi., 81.

3. DECEIT AND FRAUD.

11. Promoters of company—Bona fide statement—Misrepresentation—Concealment—Action ex delicto for deceit—Waiver—Prospectus—Misstatements—Rescission of contract.]—A suit brought against a joint stock company and four shareholders who had been the promoters, alleged that the defendants, other than the company, had been carrying on a lumber business as partners and had become embarrassed; that they then concocted the scheme of forming a joint stock company; that the sole object of the proposed joint stock company was to relieve the members of the firm from personal liability for debts incurred in the business and induce the public to advance money to carry it on; that application was made for a charter, and, at the same time, a prospectus issued which was set out in full in the bill; that such prospectus contained the following paragraphs among others, which the plaintiffs alleged to be false: 1. The timber limits of the company, inclusive of the recent purchase, consist of 222½ square miles, or 142,400 acres, and are estimated to yield 200 million feet of lumber. 2. The interest of the proprietors of the old company in its assets, estimated at about $140,000 over liabilities, has been transferred to the new company at $105,000, all taken in paid up stock, and the whole of the proceeds of the preferential stock will be used for the purposes of the new company. 3. Preference stock not to exceed $75,000 will be issued by the company to guarantee 8 per cent. yearly thereon to the year 1880, and over that amount the net profits will be divided amongst all the shareholders pro rata. 4. Should the holders of preference stock so desire the company binds itself to take that stock back during the year 1880 at par, with 8 per cent. per annum, on receiving six months' notice in writing. 5. Even with present low prices the company, owing to their superior facilities, will be able to pay a handsome dividend on the ordinary, as well as on the preference stock, and when the lumber market improves, as it must soon do, the profits will be correspondingly increased.—The bill further alleged that the plaintiffs subscribed for stock in the company on the faith of the statements in the prospectus; that the assets of the old company were not transferred to the new in the condition that they were in at the time of issuing the prospectus; that the embarrassed condition of the old company was not made known to the persons taking stock in the new company, nor that a mortgage on the assets of the old company had been given, after the prospectus issued, but before the stock certificates were granted; that the assets of the old company were not worth $140,000, or any sum, over liabilities, but were worthless; and prayed for a rescission for the contract for taking stock, for repayment of the amount of such stock, and for damages against the directors and promoters for misrepresentation.—There was evidence that the promoters had reason to believe the prospects for the new company to be good, and that they had honestly valued their assets.

—Three grounds of relief were put forward:—
1. Rescission of the contract to subscribe for preference stock. 2. Specific performance of the contract to take back the preference stock during the year 1880 at par. 3. Damages against the directors and promoters for misrepresentation.—The company having become insolvent, the plaintiffs put their case principally on the third ground.—Held, affirming the judgment, appealed from (11 Ont. App. R. 336), that the plaintiffs could claim no relief against the company by way of rescission of the contract, because it appeared that they had acted as shareholders and affirmed their contract as owners of shares after becoming aware of the grounds of misrepresentation.—That, as to the defendants, other than the company, the evidence failed to establish such a case of fraudulent misrepresentation as to entitle plaintiffs to succeed as for deceit.—That as to the alleged concealment of the mortgage it was given after the prospectus issued and could not have been mentioned in the prospectus, and moreover that the shareholders were in no way damnified thereby, as the new company would have been equally liable for the debt if the mortgage had not been given; and as to the concealment of the embarrassed condition of the old company, the evidence shewed that the old firm did not believe themselves to be insolvent; and in neither case were they liable in an action of this kind. *Petrie v. 4. DIRECTORS, ETC.

13. By-law — Sale by director to company — Ratification by shareholders — Vote of owner.—A director personally owned a vessel which he wished to sell to the company; he possessed a majority of the shares of the company, some of which he assigned to persons to qualify as directors, positions they accordingly filled. Upon a proposed sale the board of directors, including the owner of the vessel, passed a by-law approving the purchase of the vessel by the company, and subsequently at a general meeting of shareholders, a resolution confirming the by-law was passed by a small majority obtained by the votes controlled by the interested director.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (11 Ont. App. R. 205), that the by-law was illegal and the resolution invalid. Beatty v. Northwestern Transportation Co., xii., 598.

[Reversed by the Privy Council, 12 App. Cas. 589.]

14. Powers of directors — Assignment for benefit of creditors — Assent of shareholders.—The directors of a joint stock company have power to assign all the company's property for the benefit of creditors without special statutory authority or formal assent by the shareholders. Judgment appealed from (13 Ont. App. R. 7) affirmed. Hovey v. Whiting, xiv., 515.

McKeen*, xxiv., 348.

16. Directors — By-law — Ultra vires — Discount shares — Calls for unpaid balances — Contributories — Trustees — Powers — Contract — Fraud — Breach of trust — Statute, construction of — C. S. M. c. 9, Div. 7—R. S. M. c. 25, ss. 30, 33.—The directors of a joint stock company incorporated in Manitoba have no powers under the provisions of "The Manitoba Joint Stock Companies Incorporation Act" to make allotments of the capital stock of the company at a rate per share below the face value, and any by-law or resolution of the directors assuming to make such allotment without the sanction of a general meeting of the shareholders of the company is invalid.—A by-law or resolution of a joint stock company which operates unequally towards the interests of any class of the shareholders is invalid and ultra vires of the company's powers.—Where shares in the capital stock of a joint stock company have been illegally issued below par, the holder of the shares is not thereby relieved from liability for calls for the unpaid balances of their par value. Judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench for Manitoba (11 Man. L. R. 629) reversed, Taschereau, J., dissenting. North-west Electric Co. v. Walsh, xxix., 33.

17. Debtor and creditor — Preference — Collusion — Pressure — R. S. B. C. cc. 86, 87—The Bank Act, s. 80 — Company law — Mortgage by directors — Ratification — B. C. Companies Acts 1890, 1892, 1894.—The action was to set aside a mortgage by an incorporated company to the bank, an assignment of book debts and judgment by the bank against the company on grounds: (1) That the mortgage was voluntary, fraudulent and void under the Statute of Elizabeth; (2) void as a fraudulent reference; (3) not executed in accordance with the Companies Act; (4) that the assignment was void for same reasons and contrary to the Bank Act; and (5) the judgment voluntary, fraudulent and void under the Statute of Elizabeth. It was contended that moneys received by the bank were exigible under plaintiffs' executions and an order asked accordingly. The judgment appealed from (8 B. C. Rep. 314) affirmed the trial judgment and held that there was good consideration for the mortgage, that it was given under pressure and should not be set aside although comprising the whole of the debtor's property and given under insolvent circumstances to the knowledge of the mortgagee and deprived the other creditors of their remedy; also, that the mortgage given by the company's directors without proper authority had been legally ratified by subsequent resolution of the shareholders. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment appealed from, Gwynne, J., taking no part in the decision, and, subsequently, the Privy Council refused leave for an appeal (8 B. C. Rep. 337). Adams & Burns v. The Bank of Montreal, xxxii., 719.

18. Foreign corporation — Winding-up order — Conflict of laws — 28 & 29 Vict. c. 63 (Imp.)—45 Vict. c. 23 (D.)—Insolvent trading corporations — Obiter dictum.—Under a proper construction of the Act, 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.) it was not the intention of the Parliament of Canada to make it applicable to foreign corporations doing business in the Dominion.—(This decision was by Sir William Ritchie, C.J., specially expressed as not involving consideration of the question of jurisdiction in respect to insolvent trading corporations, and Strong, J., stated that it did not impugn the authority of the Parliament of Canada to make provisions in respect to insolvent foreign corporations, not in conflict with imperial legislation.) *Merchants Bank of Halifax v. 6. FORFEITURE OF CHARTER.

21. Condition precedent — Subscription of shares — Act of incorporation—Forfeiture—44 Vict. c. 61 (D.)—Information—R. S. C. c. 21, s. 4—Scire facias—Form of proceedings — Arts. 997 et seq. C. C. P.—The company by its Act of incorporation was authorized to carry on business provided $100,000 of its capital stock was subscribed, and 30% paid thereon, within six months after the passing of the Act. On information that only $60,500 had been bond fide subscribed prior to commencing operations, the balance having been subscribed for by G. in trust, who subsequently surrendered a portion of it to the company, and that the 30% had not been truly and in fact paid thereon, the Attorney-General sought by proceedings in the Superior Court to have the company's charter set aside and declared forfeited.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, Gwynne, J., dissenting, 1. That this being a Dominion statutory charter proceedings to set it aside were properly taken by the Attorney-General of Canada. 2. That such proceedings taken by the Attorney-General of Canada under arts. 997 et seq. C. C. P., in the form authorized by those articles, are sufficient and valid though erroneously designated in the pleadings as a scire facias. 3. That the bond fide subscription of $100,000 within six months from the passing of the Act of incorporation, and the payment of 30% thereon were conditions precedent to the legal organization of the company with power to carry on business, and as these conditions had not been bond fide and in fact complied with within such six months the Attorney-General was entitled to have the charter declared forfeited. Dominion s. c. D.—9

22. Forfeiture of charter — Estoppel — Compliance with statute — Action — Res judicata.—In an action against a river improvement company for re-payment of tolls alleged to have been unlawfully collected, it was stated that the dams, slides, etc., for which tolls were claimed were not placed on the properties mentioned in the letters patent for the company; that the company did not comply with the statutory requirements that the works should be completed within two years from the date of incorporation whereby the corporate powers were forfeited; that false returns were made to the Commissioner of Crown Lands upon which the schedule of tolls was fixed; that the company by its works and improvements obstructed navigable waters contrary to the provisions of the Timber Slide Company's Act, and could not exact tolls in respect of such works. By a consent judgment in a former action between the same parties it had been agreed that a valuator should be appointed by the Commissioner of Crown Lands whose report was to be accepted in place of that provided for by the Timber Slide Company's Act, and to be acted upon by the commissioner in fixing the schedule of tolls.—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, that the above grounds of impeachment were covered by the consent judgment and were res judicata.—Held, further, that plaintiffs having treated the company as a corporation, using the works and paying the tolls fixed by the commissioner, and having in the present action sued the company as a corporation, were precluded from impugning its legal existence by claiming that its corporate powers were forfeited.—By R. S. O. (1887) c. 160, s. 54, it was provided that if a company such as this did not complete its works within two years from the date of incorporation it should forfeit all its corporate and other powers, unless further time were granted by the county or counties, district or districts, in or adjoining which the work is situate, or by the Commissioner of Public Works.—Semble, the non-completion of the works within two years would not ipso facto forfeit the charter, but only afford grounds for proceedings by the Attorney-General to have a forfeiture declared.—Another ground of objection to the imposition of tolls was that the commissioner, in acting on the report of the valuator appointed under the consent judgment erroneously based the schedule of tolls upon the report as to expenditure instead of as to actual value, and the statement of claim asked that the schedule be set aside and a new scale of tolls fixed.—Held, that under the statute the schedule could only be altered or varied by the commissioner and the court could not interfere, especially as no application for relief had been made to the commissioner. Hardy Lumber Co. v. Pickering River Improvement Co., xxix., 211.

7. INCORPORATION AND PROMOTION.

23. Loan to promoter — Personal liability — Guarantee.—A promoter of a joint stock company borrowed money for the purposes of the company giving his own note as security. The lender was informed at the time of the manner in which the loan was to be, and was, applied.—Held, that as the company did not exist at the time of the loan it could not be the principal debtor nor the borrower a mere guarantor. The latter was, therefore, primarily liable for re-payment of the loan. Judgment appealed from, sub nom. Bugbee v. Clergue (27 Ont. App. R. 96) affirmed. Clergue v. Humphrey, xxxi., 66.

24. Principal and agent — Promoters of company — Agent to solicit subscriptions — False representations — Ratification — Benefit.—Promoters of a company employed an agent to solicit subscriptions for stock and W. was induced to subscribe on false representations by the agent of the number of shares already taken up. In an action by W. to recover the amount of his subscription from the promoters: Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal (2 Ont. L. R. 261) that the latter, having benefited by the sum paid by W. were liable to repay it though they did not authorize it and had no knowledge of the false representations of their agent. Held, per Strong, C.J., that neither express authority to make the representations nor subsequent ratification or participation in benefit were necessary to make the promoters liable; the rule respondent superior applies as in other cases of agency. *Milburn v. 8. SEAL.

28. Special charter—37 Vict. c. 85 (Ont.) —Binding contract—Policy of life insurance —Absence of corporate seal—Fraud—Pleadings—Equitable relief.—The statute incorporating the company enacted that "no contract shall be valid unless made under the seal of the company, and signed by the president or vice-president, or one of the directors, and countersigned by the manager, except the interim receipt." In an action for a death claim, to the plea that the policy sued on was not sealed, and, therefore, not binding on the company, the plaintiff replied, on equitable grounds, that the defendant accepted the application for insurance, and that the policy issued was acted upon by all as a valid policy, but the seal was inadvertently omitted, and claimed that defendant should be estopped from setting up the absence of the seal, or ordered to affix it.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (5 Ont. App. R. 218), Ritchie, C.J., and Taschereau, J., dissenting, that setting up "the want of a seal" as a defence was, under the circumstances of the case, a fraud which a court of equity should interfere to prevent in virtue of its functions and duty of repressing all fraud whenever and in whatever shape it appears; and therefore the plaintiff was entitled to relief as prayed in her equitable replication. London Life Insurance Co. v. Wright, v., 466.

29. Corporate seal—Executed contract.—A corporation is liable on an executed contract for the performance of work, within the purposes for which it was created, which it has adopted and of which it has received the benefit, though the contract was not executed under its corporate seal, and this applies to municipal as well as other corporations. 9. SHARES AND SHAREHOLDERS.

32. Allotment of shares below par—Subsequent transfer—Transferee holding in good faith and without notice—27 & 28 Vict. c. 23 (Can.)—Shareholders' liability towards creditors.—Certain shares in a company incorporated by letters patent under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 23, were allotted, by resolution at a special general meeting of the shareholders, to themselves, in proportion to the number of shares held by them at that time, at 40 per cent. below their nominal value, and scrip issued for them as fully paid up. G., under this arrangement, was allotted nine shares, which were subsequently assigned to the appellant for value as fully paid up. Appellant inquired of the secretary of the company, who also informed him that they were fully paid up shares, and he accepted them in good faith as such, and about a year afterwards became a director in the company. The shares appeared as fully paid up on the certificates of transfer, whilst on each counterfoil in the share-book the amount mentioned was "shares, two, at $300—$600."—Held, (Richards, C.J., and Ritchie, J., dissenting), reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario (37 U. C. Q. B. 422; 1 Ont. App. R. 1), that a person purchasing shares in good faith, without notice, from an original shareholder under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 23, as shares fully paid up, is not liable to an execution creditor of the company whose execution has been returned nulla bona, for the amount unpaid upon the shares. McCracken v. McIntyre, i., 479.

33. Joint and several liability — Paid up shares — Registration of payment — Shareholder — Action by creditor of company—C. S. C. c. 63, ss. 25, 33, 34, 35.—In an action against stockholders of a joint stock company incorporated under C. S. C. c. 63, to recover an unpaid judgment against the company.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (27 U. C. C. P. 65), that under C. S. C. c. 63, as soon as a shareholder has paid up his full shares and has registered a certificate to that effect, his liability to pay any debts of the company then existing or thereafter contracted ceases, excepting always debts to employees, as specially mentioned in s. 36, although the registration was not effected until after the 30 days mentioned in s. 35. (Ritchie, C.J., and Fournier, J., dissenting.) McKenzie v. Kittridge, iv., 368.

34. Special charter — Railway Act—Subscription of stock—Allotment—Notice—Liability as shareholder—Conditional agreement. — A judgment creditor of the T. G. & B. Ry. Co., sued M. as a shareholder therein, for unpaid stock. M. had signed the stock-book, which was headed by an agreement by subscribers to become shareholders for the amount set opposite their respective names, and upon allotment by the company "of my or our said respective shares," to pay ten per cent. of the shares and all future calls. The company passed a resolution instructing the secretary to issue allotment certificates to each shareholder for the amount of his shares. The secretary prepared them, including one for the respondent, and handed them to the company's broker to deliver to the shareholders. The brokers published a notice, signed by the secretary, in a daily paper, notifying subscribers that the first call of ten per cent. was required to be paid immediately by them. M. never called for or received his certificate of allotment, never paid the ten per cent., and denied notice of the allotment. The judge found that M. had subscribed for and had been allotted fifty shares, but was unable to say whether or not he received actual notice of allotment. Held, affirming the Court of Appeal (5 Ont. App. R. 126), (Ritchie, C.J., and Gwynne, J., dissenting), that the document signed was only an application for shares and did not create any liability as a shareholder; that it was necessary for the plaintiff to have shewn notice within a reasonable time of the allotment of shares, and, no such notice having been proved, the defendant could not be held liable upon his subscription. Nasmith v. Manning, v., 417.

35. Stock subscription—Error—Deceit by agent—Filling up blanks—Oral testimony—Action for calls — Contract—Repudiation—Receipt of dividend—Estoppel. — In an action to recover calls upon fifty shares alleged to have been subscribed for by C., it was shewn that upon solicitation of an authorized agent of the company C., intending to subscribe for five paid up shares, paid $500 and signed his name to the subscription book; the columns for amount and number of shares, at the time left blank, were afterwards, in his presence, filled in for fifty shares by the agent, without C.'s consent. Having discovered his position, C. endeavoured, on numerous occasions, ineffectually, to induce the company to relieve him from the larger liability. At the end of the year, the company declared a dividend of 10 per cent. on the paid up capital and C. received a cheque for $50, for which he gave a receipt. It did not appear that any allotment of shares to C. was ever made. A judgment recovered for the calls was affirmed by the Court of Queen's Bench. — Held, Ritchie, C.J., dubitante, reversing the judgment appealed from, that the evidence shewed that C. never contracted to take fifty shares; that the receipt given for the dividend of 10 per cent. on the amount he actually paid was not a ratification or admission of liability for the larger amount, and he was not estopped from shewing that he was never, in fact, a subscriber for more than five shares in the capital stock of the company. Coté v. Stadacona Ins. Co., vi., 193.

36. Increase of capital—Powers of directors — Unauthorized issue of stock — Scire facias—Shareholder—27 & 28 Vict. c. 23—Estoppel—Mortgage of shares. — A company incorporated under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 23, with power to increase the capital stock "after the whole capital stock of the company shall have been allotted and paid in, but not sooner," assumed to pass a by-law increasing the capital stock from $130,000 to $250,000 before the original capital stock had been paid in. Execution creditors of the company, whose writ had been returned unsatisfied, instituted proceedings by sci. fa. against A. as holder of shares not fully paid up. It appeared that the shares held by A. were shares of increased capital and not of that originally authorized. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (7 Ont. App. R. 1), Gwynne, J., dissenting, that as the original nominal capital was never paid in, the directors had no power to increase the stock of the company, and that an action could not be maintained against A. as the shares held by him consisted wholly of new unauthorized stock. — Where a statutory liability is attempted to be imposed on a party which can only attach to an actual legal shareholder in a company, he is not estopped by the mere fact of having received transfers of certificates of stock from questioning the legality of the issue of such stock. — Per Gwynne, J., dissenting. The objection not having been taken by the defendant, or tried, the court, under R. S. O. c. 38, s. 22, should put the questions of fact upon which the validity any sufficiency of the objections suggested by the court rested, into course for trial in due form of law. — Per Strong and Henry, JJ. (Gwynne, J., contra). That although A., as mortgagee of the shares and not an absolute owner, had taken a transfer absolute in form and caused it to be entered in the books of the company as an absolute transfer, he was not estopped from proving that the transfer of the shares was by way of mortgage. Page v. Austin, x., 132.

37. Misrepresentation by promoters—Action by individual shareholders—Delay—Parties—Estoppel. — Individual shareholders cannot take action against promoters for damages caused by alleged misrepresentations by the latter as to the prospects of the company when formed, the injury, if any, being an injury to the company, not to the respective shareholders. (Strong, J., dissenting). If the shareholders could bring such action a delay of four years, during which they suffered the business of the company to go on with full knowledge of the alleged misrepresentations, would disentitle them to relief. (Strong, J., dissenting.) Beatty v. Neelon, xiii., 1.

38. Stock list subscriptions before incorporation—31 Vict. c. 25 (Que.)—Action for calls—Non-allotment. — P. signed an agreement to take shares in a company to be incorporated under 31 Vict. c. 25 (Que.), but his name did not appear in the notice applying for letters patent, nor as one of the original incorporators. The directors never allotted shares to P. and he never subsequently acknowledged any liability to the company. In an action by the company for $10,000 alleged to be due by him on 100 shares in the capital stock of the company,—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (12 Q. L. R. 200), that P. was not liable for calls on stock. Magog Textile & Print Co. v. Price; Magog Textile & Print Co. v. Dobell, xiv., 664.

39. By-law to increase capital — Sanction by shareholders—31 Vict. c. 25 (Que.), ss. 11, 17, 19, 20—[Calls on new stock.]—Section 11 of 31 Vict. c. 25 (Que.), provides “no by-law for increasing or decreasing the capital of the company shall have any force or effect whatever until it shall have been sanctioned by a vote of not less than two-thirds in amount of the shareholders at a general meeting of the company, duly called for considering the same, and afterwards confirmed by supplementary letters patent.” On 9th March, 1875, directors of the St. John Stone Chinaware Co. passed a by-law increasing the capital stock by the issue of 250 additional shares of $200 each, payable by monthly instalments of ten per cent. each.—At the general meeting, on 8th June, 1875, for the election of directors and other business, this by-law was confirmed. There was no evidence as to whether it was sanctioned by two-thirds in amount of the shareholders. There was no day appointed for payment of calls, and the books contained no other entry relating to calls for the increased stock than the minutes of the meeting of the directors on 9th March. and of the general meeting on 8th June, 1875. In an action by the assignee of the company against an original stockholder and director, for calls of 20 shares of new stock,—Held, affirming the Court of Queen’s Bench for Lower Canada, that there was no evidence of calls for the payment of the shares in question having been duly made, and therefore defendant was not liable. — Per Fournier and Henry, JJ. There was no evidence that the by-law had been sanctioned by a vote of not less than two-thirds in amount of the shareholders at a general meeting of the company duly called for considering the same, and on that ground also the appeal should be dismissed. Knight v. Whitfield, 22 C. L. J. 15; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 186.

40. Stock subscription—Payment — Appropriation of payment by company — Portion treated as paid up — Estoppel.]—N., a director and shareholder of a railway company, agreed to lend the company $100,000, taking among other securities for the loan 168 shares held by B., which were to be paid up. B. owned 188 shares, on which he had paid an amount equal to 40 per cent. of their value, but being unable to pay the balance the directors of the company agreed to treat the sum paid as payment in full for 75 of the 188 shares, and B. consented to transfer that number to N. as fully paid up. N. agreed to this and B. signed a transfer which was entered on the books of the company. There was no formal resolution by the board of directors authorizing the appropriation of the money paid by B. A judgment creditor of the railway company whose writ of execution had been returned nulla bona brought an action against N. for payment of his debt, claiming that only 40 per cent. had been paid on the 75 shares, and that the remaining 60 per cent, was still due the company thereon. A judgment in favour of N. was affirmed by the Divisional Court, but reversed by the Court of Appeal, on the ground that the appropriation by the directors of the money paid by B. was invalid for want of a formal resolution authorizing it.—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the company having got the benefit of the loan by N. were estopped from disputing the application of the money paid by B. in such a way as to constitute N. the holder of the 75 shares, upon the security of which the loan was made, and creditors not having been prejudiced, are bound in the same way; and the transaction being binding between B. and the company, and not objectionable as regards creditors, N. could accept the 75 shares in lieu of the 168 he was entitled to. Neelon v. Town of Thorold, xxii., 390.

41. Winding-up Act—Contributory—Shares paid for by transfer of property—Adequacy of consideration—Promoter selling property to company — Trust — Fiduciary relation.]—Shares in a joint stock company may be paid for in money or money’s worth, and if paid for by a transfer of property they must be treated as fully paid up.—In proceedings under the Winding-up Act the Master has no authority to inquire into the adequacy of the consideration with a view to placing the holder on the list of contributories.—There is a distinction between a trust for a company of property acquired by promoters and afterward sold to the company, and the fiduciary relationship engendered by the promoters, between themselves and the company, which exists as soon as the latter is formed. A promoter who purchases property with the intention of selling it to a company to be formed does not necessarily hold such property in trust for the prospective company, but he stands in a fiduciary relation to the latter, and if he sells to them must not violate any of the duties devolving upon him in respect to such relationship. If he sells, for instance, through the medium of a board of directors, who are not independent of him, the contract may be rescinded provided the property remains in such a position that the parties may be restored to their original status. There may be cases in which the property may be regarded as being bound by a trust either ab initio or in consequence of ex post facto events; if a promoter purchases property from a vendor who is to be paid by the company when formed, and by a secret arrangement with the vendor a part of the price, when the agreement is carried out, comes into the hands of the promoter, that is a secret profit which he cannot retain; and if any part of such secret profit consists of paid up shares of the company issued as part of the purchase price of the property such shares may, in winding-up proceedings, be treated, if held by the promoter, as unpaid shares for which the promoter may be made a contributory. In re Hess Mfg. Co.; Edgar v. Sloan, xxiii., 644.

42. Directors—By-law — Ultra vires—Discount shares—Calls for unpaid balances—Contributories — Trustees’ powers — Contract — Fraud — Breach of trust — Construction of statute—C. S. M. c. 9—R. S. M. c. 25, ss. 30, 33.]—The directors of a joint stock company incorporated in Manitoba have no powers under the provisions of “The Manitoba Joint Stock Companies Incorporation Act” to make allotments of the capital stock of the company at a rate per share below the face value, and any by-law or resolution of the directors assuming to make such allotment without the sanction of a general meeting of the shareholders of the company is invalid.—A by-law or resolution of the directors of a joint stock company, which operates unequally towards the interests of any class of the shareholders is invalid and ultra vires of the company's powers.—Where shares in the capital stock of a joint stock company have been illegally issued below par, the holder of the shares is not thereby relieved from liability for calls for the unpaid balances of their par value.—Judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench for Manitoba (11 Man. L. R. 629) reversed, Taschereau, J., dissenting. North-west Electric Co. v. Walsh, xxix., 33.

The Privy Council refused leave to appeal from this decision.

43. Joint stock company—Irregular organization—Subscription for shares—Withdrawal—Surrender—Forfeiture—Duty of directors—Powers—Cancellation of stock—Ultra vires—“The Companies Act”—“The Winding-up Act”—Contributories—Pleading—Construction of statute.]—After the issue of an order for the winding-up of a joint stock company incorporated under “The Companies Act” (R. S. C. c. 110), a shareholder cannot avoid his liability as a contributory by setting up defects or illegalities in the organization of the company as, under the provisions of the Act, such grounds may be taken only upon direct proceedings at the instance of the Attorney-General.—The powers given directors of a joint stock company, under “The Companies Act” (R. S. C. c. 110), as to forfeiture of shares for non-payment of calls, are intended to be exercised only when the circumstances of the shareholder render it expedient in the interests of the company, and they cannot be employed for the benefit of the shareholder. Common v. McArthur, xxix., 239.—Judgment appealed from (A.K. 843, 125) reversed.

44. Judgment creditor—Action against shareholder—Transfer of shares—Evidence.—Judgment creditors of an incorporated company, being unable to realize anything on their judgment, brought action against H. as a shareholder in which they failed from inability to prove that he was owner of any shares. They then brought action against G. in which evidence was given, not produced in the former case, that the shares once held by G. had been transferred to H., but were not registered in the company's books. On this evidence the court below gave judgment in favour of G. Held, affirming such judgment, that the shares were duly transferred to H. though not registered, as it appeared that H. had acted for some time as president of, and executed documents for the company, and the only way he could have held shares entitling him to do so was by transfer from G. Held, also, that although there appeared to be a failure of justice from the result of the two actions, the inability of the plaintiffs to prove their case against H. in the first could not affect the rights of G. in the subsequent suit.—The company in which G. held stock was incorporated in 1886 and empowered to build a certain line of railway. In 1890 an Act was passed intitled “An Act to consolidate and amend” the former Act but authorizing additional works to be constructed, increasing the capital stock, appointing an entirely different set of directors, and giving the company larger powers. One clause repealed all Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent therewith. G. had transferred his shares before the latter Act came into force. The judgment against the company was recovered in 1895. Held, that G. was never a shareholder of the company against whom such judgment was obtained. Hamilton v. Grant, xxx., 566.

45. Joint stock company—Payment for shares—Equivalent for cash—Written contract.—M. and C. each agreed to take shares in a joint stock company paying a portion of the price in cash and receiving receipts for the full amount, the balance to be paid for in future services. The company afterwards failed. Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal (27 Ont. App. R. 396) that, as there was no agreement in writing for the payment of the difference by money's worth instead of cash under s. 27 of the Companies Act, M. & C. were liable to pay the balance of the price of the shares to the liquidator of the company. Morris v. Union Bank of Canada; Union Bank of Canada v. Morris; Code v. Union Bank of Canada, xxxi., 594. Judgment appealed from (33 N. B. Rep. 77) affirmed.

46. “The Companies Act, 1890” (B. C.) and amendment—Construction of statute—Memorandum of association—Conditions imposed by statute—Public policy—Preference stock—Election of directors.]—In the memorandum of association of a joint stock company formed under the provisions of the British Columbia “Companies Act, 1890,” and its amendment in 1891, there was a clause purporting to give to the holders of a certain block of shares, being a minority of the capital stock issued, the right at each election of the board of directors to elect three of the five directors or trustees for the management of the business of the company, notwithstanding anything contained in the Act.—Held, that the shares to which such privilege was sought to be attached could not be considered preference shares within the meaning of the statute, and that the agreement was ultra vires of the powers conferred by the statute, and null and void, being repugnant to the conditions as to elections of trustees and directors imposed by the Act as matters of public policy.—Judgment appealed from (9 B. C. Rep. 275) reversed. Colonist Printing and Publishing Co. et al. v. Dunsmuir et al., xxxii., 679.

53. Winding-up proceedings—Contributories—Subscription for stock—Payment by services.—The Act of incorporation of a joint stock company provided "that no subscription for stock should be legal or valid until ten per cent. should have been actually and bonâ fide paid thereon." C. gave to the manager of the company a power of attorney to subscribe for him ten shares in the company, containing the words: "and I herewith enclose ten per cent. thereof, and ratify and confirm all that my said attorney may do by virtue thereof." The ten per cent. was not, in fact, enclosed, but the amount was placed to the credit of C. in the books of the company, and a certificate of stock issued to him which he held for several years. The company having failed, proceedings were taken to have C. placed on the list of contributors. The sum to his credit was for professional services to the company as solicitor, and there had been an arrangement that his stock was to be paid for by such services. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (12 Ont. App. R. 486), Henry, J., dissenting, that C. was rightly placed on the list of contributors. Caston's Case, xii., 644.

54. Contributory—Promoter's shares—Transfer of property to company—Adequacy of consideration.—In proceedings under the "Winding-up Act" the Master has no authority to inquire into the adequacy of the consideration paid for shares with a view to placing the holder on the list of contributors. *In re Hess Mfg. 2. Fire insurance—Condition in policy—Notice of additional insurance—Duty of insured.—A policy of insurance against fire contained a condition requiring notice of insurances existing at the time the policy issued or afterwards made on the same property, and that a memorandum thereof should be indorsed on the policy, otherwise that the policy should be void, a proviso being added that the company should have the option to cancel the policy, or, if it remained in force with their consent, then the company to be liable only for rateable proportion of loss or damage. Insured applied for additional insurance while this policy was in force, on 10th July, 1895, in another company, and on 17th July his application was accepted, but notice of acceptance did not reach him until the 20th. The insured property was destroyed by fire on the 18th July, and the company refused payment on the ground that the policy was void for want of notice of the additional insurance, and indorsement thereof, as required by the condition.—Held, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, that the policy was not avoided; that the condition did not require the insured to give notice of insurance of which he had no knowledge, but only covered the case of insurance effected before a loss of which notice could be given, also before loss. *Commercial Union Insurance Co. v. C.—Matters judicially noticed.—In an action to recover advances with interest under an agreement in respect to the manufacture of binder twine at the Central Prison at Toronto, the defence was the general issue, breach of contract and an incidental demand of damages for the breach. The judgment appealed from maintained the action and dismissed the incidental demand, giving the plaintiffs interest according to the terms of the contract. Held, per Sedgewick, King and Girouard, J.J., that the evidence disclosed a conspiracy and that, although under the provisions of the Civil Code the moneys so advanced could be recovered back, yet no interest before action could be allowed thereon, as the law merely requires that the parties should be replaced in the position they respectively occupied before the illegal transactions took place. *Rolland v. In the present case, the concurrent findings of both courts below, amply supported by evidence ought not to be disturbed, and as the company itself prevented the performance of the condition of the agreement in question requiring the assent of the Government to the transfer of the binder twine manufacturing contract, its non-performance cannot be admitted as a defence to the action upon the executed contract.—Gwynne, J., also dissented on the ground that the judgment appealed from proceeded upon wholly inadmissible evidence and that, therefore, the action should have been dismissed and further, that the evidence which was received and acted on, though inadmissible for the purposes for which it was intended, shewed that the action was based upon a contract between the plaintiffs and defendant for the commission of an indictable offence; that neither party could recover either by action or by counterclaim upon such a contract and, therefore, that the incidental demand, as well as the action, should be dismissed. *Consumers Cordage Co. v. On appeal to the Privy Council this decision was reversed, the order set aside and a new trial ordered upon terms or, alternatively, that the judgment of the Court of Review should be restored, August, 1903.

in that court, and the residences of the judges thereof referred to the Supreme Court of Canada for hearing and consideration by His Excellency the Governor-General-in-Council under the provisions of s. 52 of the Supreme and Exchequer Court Act by order-in-council bearing date the 15th day of May, 1883.—1st Question: Is the Supreme Court of British Columbia a provincial court within the meaning of the 14th sub-section of section 92 of the British North America Act?—Opinion: The Supreme Court of British Columbia is a provincial court within the meaning of the 14th sub-section of s. 92 of the British North America Act.—2nd Question: Has the Legislature of the province exclusive legislative authority over the procedure in all civil matters in the Supreme Court of the province? If not, to what extent has it such authority?—Opinion: The Legislature of the province has exclusive legislative authority over the procedure in all civil matters in the Supreme Court of the province which come within the legislative jurisdiction of the Provincial Legislature.—3rd Question: If that Legislature can make rules to govern the procedure of that court, can it delegate this power to the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council?—Opinion: The Legislature can make rules to govern the procedure of that court in all such matters as limited by the preceding answer, and can delegate this power to the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council.—4th Question: Is the “Judicial District Act, 1879,” British Columbia, within the powers of the Legislature of that province? If so, does it apply to judges appointed before that Act came into force?—Opinion: “The Judicial District Act, 1879,” is within the powers of the Legislature of that province and does apply to judges appointed before that Act came into force.—5th Question: Are the following Acts passed by the Legislature of British Columbia, namely, the “Better Administration of Justice Act, 1878,” 42 Vict. c. 20, 1878; 42 Vict. c. 12, 1879, “An Act to amend the Practice and Procedure of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, and for other purposes relating to the Administration of Justice,” 44 Vict. c. 1, “An Act to carry out the objects of the ‘Better Administration of Justice Act, 1878,’ and ‘The Judicial District Act, 1879,’” so far as they relate to procedure in the Supreme Court of British Columbia, they are within the legislative authority of the Legislature of British Columbia. Sevell v. N. A. Act (1867) s. 93, s.s. 3.—Section 22 of the Manitoba Act, 33 Vict. c. 3 (D.), enacts: “In and for the province the said Legislature may exclusively make laws in relation to education, subject and according to the following provisions:—(1) Nothing in any such law shall prejudicially affect any right or privilege with respect to denominational schools which any class of persons have by law or practice in the province at the union. (2) An appeal shall lie to the Governor-General-in-Council from any act or decision of the Legislature of the province, or of any provincial authority, affecting any right or privilege of the Protestant or Roman Catholic minority of the Queen's subjects in relation to education." Sub-section 3 of s. 93 of the British North America Act (1867) enacts:

(3) "Where in any province a system of separate or dissentient schools exists by law of the union, or it is thereafter established by the Legislature of the province, an appeal shall lie to the Governor-General-in-Council from any act or decision of any provincial authority affecting any right or privilege of the Protestant or Roman Catholic minority of the Queen's subjects in relation to education."—By certain statutes of the Province of Manitoba relating to education, passed in 1871, and subsequent years, the Catholic minority of Manitoba enjoyed up to 1890 immunity from taxation for other schools than their own, etc., etc., but by the Public Schools Act, 53 Vict. c. 38 (1890) these Acts were repealed and the Roman Catholics were made liable by assessment for the public schools which are non-denominational, but were left free to send their children to the public schools. On a petition and memorials sent to the Governor-General-in-Council by the Catholic minority, alleging that rights and privileges in the matter of education secured to them since the union had been affected, and praying for relief under s.-ss. 2 and 3 of s. 22 of the Manitoba Act, 1871, a special case was submitted to the Supreme Court of Canada, and it was: Held, 1. That the said rights and privileges in the matter of education, being rights and privileges which the Legislature of Manitoba had itself created, and there being no clear express and unequivocal words in s. 22 of the Manitoba Act, 1871, restricting the constitutional right of the Legislature of the province to repeal the laws it might itself enact in relation to education, no right of appeal lies to the Governor-General-in-Council as claimed either under s.-s. 2 of s. 22 of the Manitoba Act, or s.-s. 3 of s. 93 of the British North America Act, 1867. Fournier and King, JJ., contra. 2. That the right to appeal given by s.-s. 2 of s. 22 of the Manitoba Act is only from an Act or decision of the Legislature, which might affect any rights or privileges existing at the time of the union as mentioned in s.-s. 1, or of any provincial, executive or administrative authorities affecting any right or privilege existing at the time of the union. 3. Construction of statute—British North America Act, ss. 112, 114, 115, 116, 118—36 Vict. c. 30 (D.)—47 Vict. c. 4 (D.)—Provincial subsidies—Half-yearly payments—Reduction of interest.—By s. 111 of the British North America Act, Canada is made liable for the debt of each province existing at the union. By s. 112, Ontario and Quebec are jointly liable to Canada for any excess of the debt of the Province of Canada at the time of the union over $62,500,000, and chargeable with 5 per cent. interest thereon; ss. 114 and 115 make a like provision for the debts of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick exceeding eight and seven million dollars respectively; and by s. 116, if the debts of those provinces should be less than said amounts they are entitled to receive, by half-yearly payments, in advance, interest at the rate 5 per cent. on the difference. Section 118, after providing for annual payments of fixed sums to the several provinces for support of their governments, and an additional sum per head of the population, enacts that "such grants shall be in settlement of all future demands on Canada, and shall be paid half-yearly, in advance, to each province, but the Government of Canada shall deduct from such grants, as against any province, all sums chargeable as interest on the public debt of that province in excess of the several amounts stipulated in this Act." The debt of the Province of Canada at the union exceeded the sum mentioned in s. 112.—On appeal from the award of arbitrators appointed to adjust the accounts between the Dominion and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec.—Held, affirming said award, that the subsidy of the provinces under s. 118 was payable from the 1st of July, 1867, but interest on the excess of debt should not be deducted until 1st January, 1868; that unless expressly provided interest is never to be paid before it accrues due; and that there is no express provision in the British North America Act that interest shall be deducted in advance on the excess of debt under s. 118.—By 36 Vict. c. 30 (D.), passed in 1873, it was declared that the debt of the Province of Canada at the union was then ascertained to be $73,006,088.84, and that the subsidies should thereafter be paid according to such amount. By 47 Vict. c. 4, in 1884, it was provided that the accounts between the Dominion and the provinces should be calculated as if the last mentioned Acts had directed that such increase should be allowed from the coming into force of the British North America Act, and it also provided that the total amount of the half-yearly payments which would have been made on account of such increase from July 1st, 1867, to January 1st, 1873, with interest at 5 per cent. from the day on which it would have been so paid to July 1st, 1884, should be deemed capital owing to the respective provinces, bearing interest at 5 per cent., and payable after July 1st, 1884, as part of the yearly subsidies.—Held, affirming the said award, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the last mentioned Acts did not authorize the Dominion to deduct interest in advance from the subsidies payable to the provinces half-yearly, but leaves such deduction as it was under the British North America Act. Dominion of Canada v. Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, xxiv., 498.

4. Province of Canada—Treaties with Indians—Surrender of Indian lands—Annuity to Indians—Revenue from lands—Increase of annuity—Charge upon lands—B. N. A. Act, s. 109.—In 1850 the late Province of Canada entered into treaties with the Indians of the Lake Superior and Lake Huron districts, by which the Indian lands were surrendered to the Government of the province in consideration of a certain sum paid down and an annuity to the tribes, with a provision that "should all the territory hereby ceded by the Indians at any future period produce such an amount as will enable the Government of this province, without incurring loss, to increase, the annuity hereby secured to them, then, and in that case, the same shall be augmented from time to time." By the B.

N. A. Act the Dominion of Canada assumed the debts and liabilities of the Province of Canada, and s. 109 of that Act provided that all lands, etc., belonged to the several provinces in which the same were situate "subject to any trust existing in respect thereof, and to any interest other than that of the province in the same." The lands so surrendered are situate in the Province of Ontario, and have for some years produced an amount sufficient for the payment of an increased annuity to the Indians. The Dominion Government has paid the annuities since 1867 (from 1874, at the increased amount), and claims to be reimbursed therefor.—Held, reversing the said award, Gwynne and King, JJ., dissenting, that the provision in the treaties as to increased annuities had not the effect of burdening the lands with a "trust in respect thereof" or "an interest other than that of the province in the same," within the meaning of said s. 109, and therefore Ontario held the lands free from any trust or interest, and was not solely liable for repayment to the Dominion of the increased annuities, but only liable jointly with Quebec as representing the Province of Canada. Ontario v. Canada and Quebec; In re Indian Claims, xxv., 434. (Affirmed by Privy Council).

Q. arts. 1375-1378.* — The beds of public harbours not granted before confederation are the property of the Dominion of Canada. Holman v. Green (16 Can. S. C. R. 707) followed. — The beds of all other waters not so granted belong to the respective provinces in which they are situate, without any distinction between the various classes of waters. — Per Gwynne, J. The beds of all waters are subject to the jurisdiction and control of the Dominion Parliament, so far as required for creating future harbours, erecting beacons or other public works for the benefit of Canada under the British North America Act, s. 92, item 10, and for the administration of the fisheries. — R. S. C. c. 92, "An Act respecting certain works constructed in or over navigable rivers," is intra vires of the Dominion Parliament. — The Dominion Parliament has power to declare what shall be deemed an interference with navigation, and to require its sanction to any work in navigable waters. — A province may grant land extending into a lake or river for the purpose of there being built thereon a wharf, warehouse or the like, and the grantee on obtaining the sanction of the Dominion may build thereon subject to compliance with R. S. C. c. 92. — Riparian proprietors before confederation had an exclusive right of fishing in non-navigable, and in navigable non-tidal lakes, rivers, streams, and waters, the beds of which had been granted to them by the Crown. Robertson v. The Queen (6 Can. S. C. R. 52) followed. — The rule that riparian proprietors own ad medium flum aquæ does not apply to the great lakes or navigable rivers. — Where beds of such waters have not been granted the right of fishing is public and not restricted to waters within the ebb and flow of the tide. — Where the provisions of Magna Charta are not in force, as in the Province of Quebec, the Crown in right of the province may grant exclusive rights of fishing in tidal waters, except in tidal public harbours in which, as in public harbours, the Crown in right of the Dominion may grant the beds and fishing rights. Gwynne, J., dissenting. — Per Strong, C.J., and King and Girouard, JJ. The provisions of Magna Charta relating to tidal waters would be in force in the provinces in which such waters exist (except Quebec) unless repealed by legislation, but such legislation has probably been passed by the various provincial legislatures; and these provisions of the charter so far as they affect public harbours have been repealed by Dominion legislation. — The Dominion Parliament cannot authorize the giving by lease, license or otherwise the right of fishing in non-navigable waters, nor in navigable waters, the beds and banks of which are assigned to the provinces under the British North America Act. — The legislative authority of Parliament under s. 91, item 12, is confined to the regulation and conservation of sea-coast and inland fisheries under which it may require that no person shall fish in public waters without a license from the Department of Marine and Fisheries, may impose fees for such license, and prohibit all fishing without it, and may prohibit particular classes, such as foreigners, unconditionally from fishing. The license as required will, however, be merely personal conferring qualification, and give no exclusive right to fish in a particular locality. — Section 4 and other portions of Revised Statutes of Canada, c. 95, so far as they attempt to confer exclusive rights of fishing in provincial waters, are ultra vires. Gwynne, J., contra. — Per Gwynne, J. Provincial Legislatures have no jurisdiction to deal with fisheries. Whatever comes within that term is given to the Dominion by the British North America Act, s. 91, item 12, including the grant of leases or licenses for exclusive fishing. — Per Strong, C.J., Taschereau, King and Girouard, JJ. R. S. O. c. 24, s. 47, and ss. 5 to 13 and 19 to 21 of the Ontario Act of 1892, are intra vires, but may be superseded by Dominion legislation. — R. S. Q. arts. 1375 to 1378 are also intra vires. — Per Gwynne, J. R. S. O. c. 24, s. 47, is ultra vires so far as it assumes to authorize the land covered with water within public harbours. — The margins of navigable rivers and lakes may be sold if there is an understanding with the Dominion Government for protection against interference with navigation. — The Act of 1892 and R. S. Q. arts. 1375 to 1378 are valid if passed in aid of a Dominion Act for protection of fisheries. If not they are ultra vires. In re Jurisdiction over Provincial Fisheries, xxvi., 444.

6. Convention of 1818 — Construction of treaty — Construction of statute — Fisheries — Three mile limit — Foreign fishing vessels — "Fishing" — 59 Geo. III., c. 38 (Imp.) — R. S. C. cc. 94 & 95. — Where fish had been enclosed in a seine more than three marine miles from the coast of Nova Scotia and the seine pursued up and secured to a foreign vessel, and the vessel was afterwards seized with the seine still so attached within the three mile limit, her crew being then engaged in the act of bailing the fish out of the seine; Held, Strong, C.J., and Gwynne, J., dissenting, affirming the decision of the court below, that the vessel when so seized was "fishing" in violation of the convention of 1818, between Great Britain and the United States of America and of the Imperial Act 59 Geo. III. c. 38, and the Revised Statutes of Canada, c. 94, and consequently liable with her cargo, tackle, rigging, apparel, furniture, and stores to be condemned and forfeited. *The Ship "Frederick Gerring, Jr." v. 7. B. N. A. Act, s. 142—Award of 1870, Validity of—Upper Canada improvement fund—School fund—B. N. A. Act, s. 109—Trust created by—Effect of confederation on trust.—The arbitrators appointed in 1870, under s. 142 of the B. N. A. Act, were authorized to "divide" and "adjust" the accounts in dispute between the Dominion of Canada and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, respecting the former Province of Canada. In dealing with the common school fund established under 12 Vict. c. 200 (Can.), they directed the principal of the fund to be retained by the Dominion and the income therefrom to be paid to the provinces.—Held, that even if there was no ultimate "division and adjustment," such as the statute required, yet the ascertainment of the amount was a necessary preliminary to such "division and adjustment," and therefore intra vires of the arbitrators.—Held, further, that there was a division of the beneficial interest in the fund, and a fair adjustment of the rights of the provinces in it which was a proper exercise of the authority of the arbitrators under the statute.—By 12 Vict. c. 200, s. 3 (Can.), one million acres of the public lands of the Province of Canada were to be set apart to be sold, and the proceeds applied to the creation of the "common school fund," provided for in s. 1. The lands so set apart were all in the present Province of Ontario.—Held, that the trust in these lands created by the Act for the common schools of Canada did not cease to exist at confederation, so that the unsold lands and proceeds of sales should revert to Ontario, but such trust continued in favour of the common schools of the new Provinces of Ontario and Quebec.—In the agreement of reference to the arbitrators appointed under Acts passed in 1891 to adjust the said accounts questions respecting the Upper Canada improvement fund were excluded, but the arbitrators had to determine and award upon the accounts as rendered by the Dominion to the two provinces up to January, 1889. — Held, that the arbitrators could pass upon the right of Ontario to deduct a proportion of the schools lands, the amount of which was one of the items in the accounts so rendered. Provinces of Ontario and Quebec v. Dominion of Canada; In re Common School Fund and Lands, xxviii., 609.

8. B. N. A. Act, 1867, s. 111 — Debts of Province of Canada — Deferred liabilities—Toll bridge—8 Vict. c. 90 (Can.)—Reversion to Crown — Indemnity — Arbitration and award — Condition precedent — Petition of right—Remedial process.—A toll bridge with its necessary buildings and approaches was built and maintained by Y. at Chambly, in the Province of Quebec, in 1845, under a franchise granted to him by an Act (8 Vict. c. 90) of the late Province of Canada, in 1845, on the condition therein expressed that on the expiration of the term of fifty years the works should vest in the Crown as a free bridge for public use and that Y., or his representatives should then be compensated therefor by the Crown, provision being also made for ascertaining the value of the works by arbitration and award. Held, affirming the judgment of the Exchequer Court of Canada (6 Ex. C. R. 103), that the claim of the suppliants for the value of the works at the time they vested in the Crown on the expiration of the fifty years' franchise was a liability of the late Province of Canada coming within the operation of s. 111 of the British North America Act, 1867, and thereby imposed on the Dominion; that there was no lien or right of retention charged upon the property; and that the fact that the liability was not presently payable at the date of the passing of the British North America Act, 1867, was immaterial. The Attorney-General of Canada v. The Attorney-General of Ontario ([1897] A. C. 199; 25 Can. S. C. R. 434) followed. Held, also, that the arbitration provided for by s. 3 of the Act, 8 Vict. c. 90, did not impose the necessity of obtaining an award as a condition precedent but merely afforded a remedy for the recovery of the value of the works at a time when the parties interested could not have resorted to the present remedy by petition of right, and that the suppliants' claim for compensation under the provisions of that Act (8 Vict. c. 90), was a proper subject for petition of right within the jurisdiction of the Exchequer Court of Canada. *The Queen v. 9. Treaties with Indians—Contingent annuities—B. N. A. Act (1867) s. 112—Debts of the Province of Canada—Res judicata.—The award complained of by the Province of Quebec determined that certain payments made by the Dominion of Canada in virtue of the Huron and Superior Treaties with the Ojibway Indians for arrears of augmented annuities and interest from 1867 to 1873, and for increased annuities in excess of the fixed annuities with interest paid subsequently should be taken into account and included in the debt of the late Province of Canada mentioned in s. 112 of the British North America Act, 1867. Held, affirming the decision of the arbitrators, that the question of these contingent annuities had been considered and decided by Her Majesty's Privy Council in the case of The Attorney-General of Canada v. The Attorney-General of Ontario ([1897] A. C. 199), and that the payments so made by the Dominion were recoverable from the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec conjointly in the same manner as the original annuities. *Province of Quebec v. Act, 1867, ss. 18, 41, 91, s.-ss. 13 & 14 of s. 92, and ss. 101 & 129—Dominion courts.]—The Parliament of Canada by "The Dominion Controverted Elections Act, 1874," imposed on provincial courts and the judges thereof the duty of trying controverted elections of members of the House of Commons. After the general elections of 1878, L. filed an election petition in the Superior Court, Province of Quebec, against the return of V. as a member of the House of Commons. V. objected to the jurisdiction of the court held by Meredith, C.J., on the ground that the Act was ultra vires.—Held, affirming the judgment of Meredith, C.J. (5 Q. L. R. 1), that the Act was not ultra vires of Parliament, and whether or not it established a Dominion court, Parliament had jurisdiction to give to the Superior Courts of the respective provinces, and the judges thereof, the power, and to impose upon them the duty, of trying controverted elections of members of the House of Commons, and did not, in utilizing existing judicial officers and established courts to discharge the duties assigned to them by the Act, in any particular, invade the rights of the Provincial Legislatures.—Upon abandonment by the House of Commons of the jurisdiction exercised over controverted elections without express legislation thereon, the power of dealing therewith would fall, ipso facto, within the jurisdiction of the Superior Courts of the provinces by virtue of the inherent original jurisdiction of such powers over civil rights.—The Dominion Parliament has the right to interfere with civil rights, when necessary for the purpose of legislating generally and effectually in relation to matters within its jurisdiction.—The exclusive power of legislation given to Provincial Legislatures by s.-s. 14 of s. 92, B. N. A. Act, over procedure in civil matters, means procedure in civil matters within the powers of the Provincial Legislatures.—Per Ritchie, C.J., and Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ. 14. Canada Temperance Act, 1878—Powers of Parliament—Sections 91 & 92, B. N. A. Act, 1867—Sale of intoxicating liquors—Prohibition.]—Held, 1. That "The Canada Temperance Act, 1878," is within the legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada. 2. That by the B. N. A. Act, 1867, plenary powers of legislation are given to the Parlia- ment of Canada over all matters within the scope of its jurisdiction, and that they may be exercised either absolutely or conditionally; in the latter case the legislation may be made to depend upon some subsequent event, and may be brought into force in one part of the Dominion and not in the other. 3. That under powers in s.-s. 2 of s. 91, B. N. A. Act, 1867, as to the "regulation of trade and commerce," the Parliament of Canada alone has authority to prohibit traffic in intoxicating liquors in the Dominion or in any part of it, and the court has no right whatever to inquire what motive induced Parliament to exercise its powers. 17. *Obiter dictum—Foreign corporation—Winding-up Act—Insolvency—Powers of Parliament—Conflict of laws—45 Vict. c. 23 (D.)]—Per Ritchie, C.J., and Strong, J., That although the provisions of the Winding-up Act do not apply to foreign corporations, yet, in this decision, there is nothing which might impugn the powers of the Parliament of Canada in respect to insolvent foreign corporations by express provisions not in conflict with any imperial legislation. 21. Legislative jurisdiction — Winding up insolvent bank—Banking and incorporation of banks—Bankruptcy and insolvency—31 Vict. c. 17 (D.)—33 Vict. c. 40 (D.)—B. N. A. Act, s. 91—Crown lands — Exemption from taxation—R. S. O. 1887, c. 193, s. 7, s.-s. 1.—In 1866 the Bank of Upper Canada became insolvent and assigned all its property and assets to trustees. By 31 Vict. c. 17, the Dominion Parliament incorporated said trustees giving them authority to carry on the business of the bank so far as was necessary for winding up the same. By 33 Vict. c. 40 all the property of the bank vested in the trustees was transferred to the Dominion Government which became seized of all the powers of the trustees.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (sub nom. The Queen v. County of Wellington, 17 Ont. App. R. 421) that these Acts were intra vires of the Dominion Parliament.—Per Ritchie, C.J., that the legislative authority of Parliament over "banking and the incorporation of banks" and over "bankruptcy and insolvency" empowered it to pass said Acts.—Per Strong, Taschereau, and Patterson, JJ., the authority to pass said Acts cannot be referred to the legislative jurisdiction of Parliament over "banking and incorporation of banks" but to that over "bankruptcy and insolvency" only.—After the property of the bank became vested in the Dominion Government a piece of land included therein was sold and a mortgage taken for the purchase money, the mortgagor covenanting to pay the taxes. Not having done so, the land was sold for non-payment. In an action to set aside the tax sale.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the Crown having a beneficial interest in the land it was exempt from taxation as Crown lands. Quirt v. The Queen, xix., 510.

22. Legislative jurisdiction — Administration of justice — Provincial courts — Appointment of judges — Criminal procedure—B. N. A. Act, 1867, s. 92, s.-s. 14—References under 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25 (D.)—The power given to the Provincial Governments by the B. N. A. Act, 1867, s. 92, s.-s. 14, to legislate regarding the constitution, maintenance and organization of provincial courts includes the power to define the jurisdiction of such courts territorially as well as in other respects and also to define the jurisdiction of the judges who constitute such courts.—C. S. B. C. c. 25, s. 14, enacts that "any County Court judge appointed under this Act may act as County Court judge in any other district upon the death, illness, or unavoidable absence of, or at the request of the judge of that district, and while so acting the said first mentioned judge shall possess all the powers and authorities of a County Court judge in the said district; provided, however, the said judge so acting out of his district shall immediately thereafter report in writing to the Provincial Secretary the fact of his so doing and the cause thereof," and by 53 Vict. c. 8, s. 9 (B. C.), it is enacted that "until a County Court judge of Kootenay is appointed, the judge of the County Court of Yale shall act as and perform the duties of the County Court judge of Kootenay, and shall, while so acting, whether sitting in the County Court District of Kootenay or not, have, in respect of all actions, suits, matters, or proceedings being carried on in the County Court of Kootenay, all the powers and authorities that the judge of the County Court of Kootenay, if appointed and acting in the said district, would have possessed in respect of such actions, suits, matters, and proceedings; and for the purpose of this Act, but not further, or otherwise, the several districts as defined by ss. 5 & 7 of the County Courts Act, over which the County Court of Yale and the County Court of Kootenay, respectively, have jurisdiction shall be united."—Held, that these statutes were intra vires of the Legislature of British Columbia under said section of the B. N. A. Act, 1867.—By the Dominion statute, 51 Vict. c. 47, "The Speedy Trials Act," jurisdiction is given to "any judge of the County Court," to try certain criminal offences.—Held, that the expression, "any judge of the County Court," in such Act means any judge having by force of the provincial law regulating the constitution and organization of County Courts, jurisdiction in the particular locality in which he may hold a "speedy trial." The statute would not authorize a County Court judge to hold a "speedy trial" beyond the limits of his territorial jurisdiction without authority from the Provincial Legislature to do so.—"The Speedy Trials Act" is not a statute conferring jurisdiction, but is an exercise of the power of Parliament to regulate criminal procedure.—Per Taschereau, J. It is doubtful if Parliament had power to pass those sections of 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, which empower the Governor-General-in-Council to refer certain matters to the Supreme Court of Canada for an opinion. Re County Court Judges (B. C.) xxi., 446.

23. Territorial rights — Exercise of—Territorial or prerogative rights — Beneficial interest — Great seal — Suits by Dominion Government — Exchequer Court — Jurisdiction.—The Crown, in right of the Dominion, has a right to take proceedings to restrain an individual from making use of a provincial grant in a way to embarrass the Dominion in the exercise of its territorial rights.—The rights of the Crown, territorial or prerogative, are to be passed under the Great Seal of the Dominion or province (as the case may be), in which is vested the beneficial interest therein.—The Parliament of Canada has the right to enact that all actions and suits of a civil nature at common law or equity, in which the Crown in right of the Dominion is plaintiff or petitioner, may be brought in the Exchequer Court. Taschereau, J., dubitante. Farwell v. The Queen, xxii., 553.

24. Foreshore of harbour — Property in—44 Vict. c. 1, s. 18 (D.)—Authority to railway company to use foreshore—Jus publicum—Access to public harbour.—The Dominion statute, 44 Vict. c. 1, s. 18, gave the C. P. Ry. Co. the right to take and use the land below high water mark in any stream, lake, etc., so far as required for the purposes of the railway.—Held, that the right of the public to have access to a harbour, the foreshore of which had been taken by the company under this Act, was subordinate to the rights given to the company thereby, and the latter could prevent by injunction an interference with the use of the foreshore so taken. City of Vancouver v. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co., xxiii., 1.

25. *Dominion Government — Liability to action for tort — Injury to property on public work—Non-feasance—39 Vict. c. 27 (D.).—R. S. C. c. 40, s. 6—50 & 51 Vict. c. 16 (D.).—50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, ss. 16 and 58 confers upon the subject a new or enlarged right to maintain a petition of right against the Crown for damages in respect of a tort (Taschereau, J., expressing no opinion on this point).—By 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, s. 16 (D.), the Exchequer Court is given jurisdiction to hear and determine inter alia: “(c) Every claim against the Crown arising out of any death or injury to the person, or to the property, on any public work, resulting from the negligence of any officer or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope of his duties or employment: (d) Every claim against the Crown arising under any law of Canada.” . . . In 1877 the Dominion Government became possessed of the property in the City of Quebec, on which the Citadell was situated. Many years before that a drain had been constructed through this property by the Imperial authorities, the existence of which was not known to the officers of the Dominion Government, and it was not discovered at an examination of the premises in 1880 by the city engineer of Quebec and others. Before 1877 this drain had become choked up, and the water escaping gradually loosened the earth, until, in 1889, a large portion of the rock fell from the cliff into a street of the city below, causing great damage, for which compensation was claimed from the Government.—Held, per Taschereau, Gwynne and King, JJ., affirming the decision of the Exchequer Court, that as the injury to the property of the city did not occur upon a public work, s.-s. (c) of the above Act did not make the Crown liable, and, moreover, there was no evidence that the injury was caused by the negligence of any officer or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope of his duties or employment.—Held, per Strong, C.J., and Fournier, J., that while s.-s. (c) of the Act did not apply to the case, the city was entitled to relief under s.-s. (d); that the words “any claim against the Crown” in that sub-section, without the additional words, would include a claim for a tort; that the added words “arising under any law of Canada,” do not necessarily mean any prior existing law or statute law of the Dominion, but might be interpreted as meaning the general law of any province of Canada, and even if the meaning be restricted to the statute law of the Dominion, the effect of s. 58 of 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16 is to reinstate the provision contained in s. 6 of the repealed Act R. S. C. c. 40, which gives a remedy for injury to property in a case like the present; that this case should be decided according to the law of Quebec, regulating the rights and duties of proprietors of land situated on different levels; and that under such law the Crown, as proprietor of land on the higher level, was bound to keep the drain thereon in good repair, and was not relieved from liability for damage caused by neglect to do so by the ignorance of its officers of the existence of the drain.—Held, also, per Strong, C.J., and Fournier, J., that, independently of the enlarged jurisdiction conferred by 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, the Crown would be liable to damages for the injury complained of not as for tort but for a breach of its duty as owner of the superior heritage, by altering its natural state to the injury of the inferior proprietor. City of Quebec v. The Queen, xxiv. 420.*

26. *Powers of executive councillors—“Letter of credit”—Ratification by Legislature—Obligations binding on the province—Discretion of the Government as to the expenditures—Petition of right—Negotiable instrument—“Bills of Exchange Act, 1890”—“The Bank Act.” R. S. C. c. 120.]—The Provincial Secretary of Quebec wrote the following letter to D., with the assent of his colleagues, but not being authorized by order-in-council:—“J’ai l’honneur de vous informer que le gouvernement fera voter, dans le budget supplémentaire de 1891-92, un intem de six mille piastres qui vous seront payées immédiatement après la session, et cela à titre d’acompte sur l’impression de la ‘Liste des terres de la Couronne, concédées depuis 1763 jusqu’au 31 décembre, 1890.’ dont je vous ai confié l’impression dans une lettre en date du 14 janvier, 1891. Cette somme de six mille piastres sera payée au porteur de la présente lettre, revêtue de votre endossement.” D. indorsed the letter to a bank as security for advances to enable him to do the work.—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Queen’s Bench, that the letter constituted no contract between D. and the Government; that the Provincial Secretary had no power to bind the Crown by his signature to such a document; and that a subsequent vote of the Legislature of a sum of money for printing “liste des terres de la Couronne,” etc., was not a ratification of the agreement with D., the Government not being obliged to expend the money though authorized to do so, and the vote containing no reference to the contract with D., nor to the said letter of credit.—Held, also, that a bank cannot deal in such securities as the said letter of credit which is dependent on the vote of the Legislature, and therefore not a negotiable instrument within the Bills of Exchange Act of 1890, or the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, ss. 45 and 60. Jacques-Cartier Bank v. The Queen, xxv., 84.*

27. Municipal corporation—Powers of legislature—License—Monopoly—Highways and ferries—Navigable streams—By-laws and resolutions—Intermunicipal ferry—Tolls—Disturbance of licensee—North-West Territories Act, R. S. C. c. 50, ss. 13 and 24—B. N. A. Act s. 92 s.-ss. 8, 10 and 16—Rev. Ord. N. W. T. (1888) c. 28—N. W. T. Ter. Ord. No. 7 of 1891-92, s. 4.]—The authority given to the Legislative Assembly of the North-West Territories, by R. S. C. c. 50, and orders-in-council thereunder, to legislate as to “municipal institutions” and “matters of a local and private nature” (and perhaps as to license for revenue), within the Territories includes the right to legislate as to ferries.—The Town of Edmonton, by its charter, and by “The Ferries Ordinance” (Rev. Ord. N. W. T. (1888) c. 28), can grant the exclusive right to maintain a ferry across a navigable river which is not within the territorial limits of the municipality; and as under the charter the powers vested in the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council by the Ferries Ordinance are transferred to the municipality, such right may be conferred by license and a by-law is not necessary.—A “club” or partnership styled “The Edmonton Ferry Company” was formed for the purpose of building, establishing, and operating a ferry within the limits assigned in the license by the municipality granting exclusive rights to ferry across the river in question, the conditions being that any person could become a member of the club by signing the list of membership, and taking at least one share of $5 therein, which share entitled the signer to 100 tickets that were to be received in payment of ferry service according to a prescribed tariff, and when expended could be renewed by further subscriptions for shares ad infinitum. The club supplied their ferryman with a list of membership, and established and operated their ferry, without any license, within a short distance of one of the licensed ferries, thereby, as was claimed, disturbing the licensee in his exclusive rights.—Held, that the establishment of the club ferry and the use thereof by members and others under their club regulations was an infringement of the rights under the license, and that the licensee could recover damages by reason of such infringement. Dinner v. Humberstone, xxvi., 252.

29. Government railway—R. S. C. c. 38, s. 50—Liability for negligence by employee of the Crown.—In s. 50 of the Government Railways Act (R. S. C. c. 38) providing that "Her Majesty shall not be relieved from liability by any notice, condition, or declaration in the event of any damage arising from any negligence, omission, or default of any officer, employee, or servant of the Minister," the words "notice, condition, or declaration" do not include a contract or agreement by which an employee has renounced his right to claim damages from the Crown for injury from negligence of his fellow servants. Grand Trunk Railway Co. v. Vogel (11 Can. S. C. R. 612) disapproved. The Queen v. Grenier, xxx., 42.

30. Constitutional law — Powers of Canadian Parliament—Prohibited contract—Consolidated Railway Act, 1879.—For the reasons given by the court below the Supreme Court of Canada affirmed the judgment appealed from (Q. R. 8 Q. B. 555), which held, that the "Consolidated Railway Act, 1879," s. 19, s.-s. 16, was within the legislative jurisdiction of the Parliament of Canada, which, having power to legislate on railway matters, could also legislate on all incidents required to carry out the objects it had in view connected with and primarily intended to assist in carrying out such principal object; that the capacity of directors was such an object essentially connected with the internal economy of a railway company; that a contract prohibited by statute is void although not specially stated to be so in the statute, which merely provides a penalty against an offender, and that, where the president of a railway company, subject to that Act, entered secretly into partnership with contractors for the construction of the railway, no action could be maintained upon the partnership contract by him against his partners. Macdonald v. Riordon, xxx., 619.

ada is not restricted to the establishment of a court for the administration of laws of Canada and, consequently, there was constitutional authority to enact the provisions of s. 3 of the Dominion statute 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, authorizing appeals from the Superior Court, sitting in review, in the Province of Quebec.—On the merits, this appeal was allowed with costs, Girouard, J., dissenting, the decision in *L'Association St. Jean-Baptiste de Montréal v. Circuit Court, or the Magistrates' Court, such duties payable in stamps." The Act is declared to be an amendment and extension of 27 & 28 Vict. c. 5, by s. 3, s.s. 2, of which, the duties are to be "deemed to be payable to the Crown." [This judgment was affirmed by the Privy Council, 10 App. Cas. 141.]

52. Legislative jurisdiction — Navigable rivers—Municipal limits—43 & 44 Vict. c. 62 (Que.) — The Legislature of Quebec has power to include public navigable waters within the territorial limits of a municipality. Central Vermont Ry. Co. v. Town of St. Johns, xiv., 288.

53. Legislative jurisdiction — Navigation — Municipal corporation—By-law—Double tax—Taxation of ferry boats—Jurisdiction of harbour commissioners—39 Vict. c. 52 (Que.) — Under 39 Vict. c. 52, s. 1, s.s. 3, authorizing the City of Montreal to impose an annual tax on "ferry-men or steamboat ferries;" the city council passed a by-law imposing an annual tax of $200 on proprietors of each and every steamboat ferry conveying to Montreal for hire travellers from any place not more than nine miles distant, and obtained from the Recorder's Court a warrant of distress to levy upon the appellant such tax of $200 for each steamboat employed by the company during the year as ferry-boats between Longueuil and Montreal. The action by the company, claimed that the statute was ultra vires of the Legislature; and that the by-law was ultra vires of the corporation, and asked for an injunction. — Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 3 Q. B. 172), that the legislation was intra vires. — 2. Reversing that judgment, that the by-law was ultra vires, as the statute only authorized a single tax on the owner of each ferry, irrespective of the number of boats or vessels by means of which the ferry should be worked. — 3. Affirming the judgment, that the jurisdiction of the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal within certain limits does not exclude the right of the city to tax and control ferries within such limits. Longueuil Navigation Co. v. City of Montreal, xv., 566.

54. Legislative jurisdiction—Municipal by-law—Licenses—Prohibitory fee—Restraint of trade—Sale of meat in private stalls—37 Vict. c. 51, s. 123, s.s. 27, 31 (Que.) — B. N. A. Act, s.s. 9 of s. 92—"Other licenses." — By 37 Vict. c. 51, s. 123, ss. 27, 31 (Que.) the council of the City of Montreal is authorized to regulate and license the sale, in any private stall or shop in the city outside of the public meat markets, of any meat, fish, vegetables or provisions usually sold in markets. — Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (33 L. C. Jur. 221), that the provisions in question are intra vires of the Provincial Legislature, and a by-law may validly be passed under their authority imposing a fee of $200 for a license to sell in a private stall in addition to the business tax, levied upon all traders under another by-law. — Per Strong, J. The words "other licenses" in s. 92, s.s. 9, B. N. A. Act, 1867, include such a license as the Provincial Legislature have empowered the City of Montreal to impose by the terms of the above statute. Lamb v. Bank of Toronto (12 App. Cas. 575), and Severn v. The Queen (2 Can. S. C. R. 70) distinguished. In re Pigeon, xvii., 495.

55. 51 & 52 Vict. c. 91, ss. 9, 14 (Q.) — Interpretation Act, s. 19 R. S. Q. — Railway subsidy — Discretionary power of Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council — Petition of right — Misappropriation of subsidy moneys by order-in-council. — Where money is granted by the Legislature and its application is prescribed in such a way as to confer a discretion upon the Crown, no trust is imposed enforceable against the Crown by petition of right. — The appellant railway company alleged by petition of right that by virtue of 51 & 52 Vict. c. 91 (Que.), the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council was authorized to grant 4,000 acres of land per mile for 30 miles of the Hereford Railway; that by an order-in-council dated 6th August, 1888, the land subsidy was converted into a money subsidy, the 9th section, of said c. 91 of 51 & 52 Vict., enacting that "it shall be lawful" etc., to convert the land subsidy into a money subsidy; that the company completed the construction of their line of railway, relying upon the said subsidy and order-in-council, and built the railway in accordance with the Act 51 & 52 Vict. c. 91, and the provisions of the Railway Act of Canada, 51 Vict. c. 29, and they claimed to be entitled to the sum of $49,000, balance due on said subsidy. The Crown demurred on the ground that the statute was permissive only, and by exception pleaded inter alia, that the money had been paid by order-in-council to the sub-contractors for work necessary for the construction of the road; that the president had by letter agreed to accept an additional subsidy on an extension of their line of railway to settle difficulties, and signed a receipt for the balance of $6,500 due on account of the first subsidy. The petition of right was dismissed. Held, that the statute and documents relied on did not create a liability on the part of the Crown to pay the money voted to the appellant company enforceable by petition of right (Taschereau and Sedgewick, JJ., dissenting), but assuming it did, the letter and receipt signed by the president of the company did not discharge the Crown from such obligation to pay the subsidy, and payment by the Crown of the sub-contractors' claim out of the subsidy money, without the consent of the company, was a misappropriation of the subsidy. Hereford Ry. Co. v. The Queen, xxiv., 1.

56. Powers of Provincial Legislatures — Direct taxation—Manufacturing and trading licenses—Distribution of taxes—Uniformity of taxation—55 & 56 Vict. c. 10 and 56 Vict. c. 15 (Q.) — British North America Act, 1867. — The provisions of the Quebec statute, 55 & 56 Vict. c. 10, as amended by 56 Vict. c. 15, do not involve a regulation of trade and commerce, and the license fee thereby imposed is a direct tax, and intra vires of the Legislature. The license required to be taken out by the statute is merely an incident to the collection of the tax, and does not alter its character.—Where a tax has been imposed by competent legislative authority, the want of uniformity or equality in the apportionment of the tax is not a ground sufficient to justify the courts in declaring it unconstitutional. Bank of Toronto v. Lambe (12 App. Cas. 575) followed. Attorney-General v. The Queen Insurance Co. (3 App. Cas. 1090) distinguished. Fortier v. Lambe, xxv., 422.

57. Railways—Farm crossings—Legislative powers.—The provincial legislatures in Canada have no jurisdiction to make regulations in respect to crossings or the structural condition of the roadbed of railways subject to the provisions of "The Railway Act of Canada." The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. v. The Corporation of Notre-Dame de Bonsecours, ([1899] A. C. 467) followed. Grand Trunk Ry. Co. v. Therrien, xxx., 485.

58. Legislative powers—B. N. A. Act, 1867—Criminal code, 1892—R. S. C. c. 159—R. S. Q. art. 2920—53 Vict. c. 36 (Que.)—Lottery—Indictable offences—Contract—Illegal consideration—Co-relative agreements—Nullity—Invalidity judicially noticed—Arts. 13, 14, 989, 990 O.C.—The Provincial Legislatures have no jurisdiction to permit the operation of lotteries forbidden by the criminal statutes of Canada.—A contract in connection with a scheme for the operation of a lottery forbidden by the criminal statutes of Canada is unlawful and cannot be enforced in a court of justice.—The illegality which vitiates such a contract cannot be waived or condoned by the conduct or pleas of the party against whom it is asserted and it is the duty of the courts, ex mero motu, to notice the nullity of such contracts at any stage of the case and without pleading.—Per Grouard, J. (dissenting). In Canada before the Criminal Code, 1892, lotteries were mere offences or contraventions and not crimes, and consequently the Act of the Quebec Legislature was constitutional. L'Association St. Jean-Baptiste v. Brault, xxx., 598.

5. NOVA SCOTIA ACTS.

64. Queen's Counsel—Power of appointment—37 Vict. cc. 20 & 21 (N.S.)—Legislative authority—Precedence—Retrospective Act—Great seal of Nova Scotia—40 Vict. c. 3 (D.)—40 Vict. c. 2 (N.S.)—Appeal—Jurisdiction—Prerogative.—By 37 Vict. c. 20 (N.S.), the Lieutenant-Governor was authorized to appoint Queen's Counsel for the province, and by 37 Vict. c. 21 (N.S.), to grant to any member of the bar a patent of precedence in the courts of the province. R. was appointed on the 27th December, 1872, under the great seal of Canada, a Queen's Counsel, and by the uniform practice of the court he had precedence over all members of the bar not holding patents prior to his own. By letters patent, dated 26th May, 1876, under the great seal of the province, several members of the bar were appointed Queen's Counsel for Nova Scotia, and precedence was granted to them, as well as to other Queen's Counsel appointed by the Governor-General after the 1st July, 1867. A list of Queen's Counsel to whom precedence had been thus given by the Lieutenant-Governor, was published in the Royal Gazette, and the name of R. was included, but it gave precedence and pre-audience before him to several persons, including appellants, who did not enjoy it before. R. obtained a rule nisi to grant him rank and precedence over all Queen's Counsel appointed in and for the Province of Nova Scotia since the 26th December, 1872, and to set aside, so far as they affected R.'s precedence, the letters patent, dated the 26th May, 1876. This rule was made absolute by the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, which held.—1. That the letters patent of precedence, issued by the Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, were not issued under the great seal of the Province of Nova Scotia; 2. That 37 Vict. c. 20, 21 (N.S.), were not ultra vires; 3. That s. 2, c. 21, 37 Vict., was not retrospective, and that the letters patent of the 26th May, 1876, issued under that Act could not affect the precedence.—A preliminary objection was raised to the jurisdiction of the court to hear the appeal.—On the argument in appeal before the Supreme Court of Canada the question of the validity of the great seal of Nova Scotia was declared to have been settled by 40 Vict. c. 3 (D.) and 40 Vict. c. 2 (N.S.) and it was held, 1. That the judgment of the court below was one from which an appeal would lie to the Supreme Court of Canada; (Fournier, J., dissenting). 2. Per Strong, Fournier and Taschereau, JJ. That 37 Vict. c. 21 (N.S.), has no retrospective effect, and letters patent issued under it could not affect the precedence of the Queen's Counsel appointed by the Crown. 3. Per Henry, Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ. That the B. N. A. Act, 1867, has not invested the Legislatures of the provinces with any control over the appointment of Queen's Counsel; that Her Majesty forms no part of the Provincial Legislatures, as she does of the Dominion Parliament, and therefore no provincial Act can affect her prerogative right to appoint Queen's counsel in Canada directly, or through her representative the Governor-General, or vest such prerogative right in the Lieutenant-Governors of the provinces: and that 37 Vict. cc. 20 & 21

(N.S.), are ultra vires and void. [NOTE.—Reversed in Atty.-Gen. of Can. v. Atty.-Gen. of Ont. (23 Can. S. C. R. 458).]—4. Per Strong and Fournier, JJ. That this court ought never, except in cases when such adjudication is indispensable to the decision of a cause, to pronounce upon the constitutional power of a Legislature to pass a statute, and that there was no necessity in this case to express an opinion upon the validity of the Acts in question. *Lenoir v. 66. Boom company—Jurisdiction of Provincial Legislatures—Obstructions to navigation—Tidal and navigable rivers—45 Vict. c. 100 (N.B.)—B. N. A. Act, 1867, s. 91.—Although a Provincial Legislature may incorporate a boom company, it can not give it power to obstruct a tidal navigable river, and therefore the Act 45 Vict. c. 100 (N.B.), so far as it authorized erecting booms and other works in the Queddy River, obstructing its navigation, was ultra vires of the New Brunswick Legislature. Queddy River Driving Boom Co. v. Davidson, x., 222.

67. N. B. Liquor License Act, 1887—Prohibition of sale of liquor—Granting licenses—Disqualifying liquor sellers—Restraint of trade.—Applications for licenses under the New Brunswick Liquor License Act, 1888, must be endorsed by the certificate of one-third of the ratepayers of the district for which the license is asked. No holder of a license can be a member of the municipal council, a justice of the peace, or a teacher in the public schools. Held, that the legislature could properly impose these conditions to the obtaining of a license, and the provision is not ultra vires as being a prohibitory measure by reason of the ratepayers being able to prevent any licenses being issued; nor is it a measure in restraint of trade by affixing a stigma to the business of selling liquor. Danaher v. Peters; O'Regan v. Peters, xvii., 44.

Act of Manitoba provides that persons paying taxes shall be allowed 10 per cent. discount; and after a certain time 10 per cent. on the original amount shall be added to delinquent taxes. Held, reversing the court below, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the 10 per cent. added is only an additional rate or tax imposed as a penalty for non-payment which the local legislature, under its authority to legislate with respect to municipal institutions, had power to impose, and it was not "interest" within the meaning of s. 91 of the B. N. A. Act. Ross v. Torrance (2 Legal News 186) overruled. Lynch v. Canada N. W. Land Co.; South Dufferin v. Mornden; Gibbins v. Barber, xix., 204.

69. Manitoba Act—Education—Legislative jurisdiction—Denominational schools—Rights acquired "by practice"—53 Vict. c. 38 (Man.)—33 Vict. c. 3 (D.)—The exclusive right to make laws with respect to education in Manitoba is assigned to the Provincial Legislature by 33 Vict. c. 3 (D.), provided that nothing in any such law "shall prejudicially affect the rights or privileges with respect to denominational schools which any class of persons had by law or practice in the province at the union." The words "or practice" are an addition to the terms of the B. N. A. Act, 1867, s. 91, s.s. 1, under which the N. B. Public School Act was upheld.—Prior to the union the Roman Catholics of Manitoba had no schools established by law, but there were schools under the control of the church for the education of Roman Catholic children.—In 1890 the Legislature of Manitoba passed 53 Vict. c. 38, by which control of all matters relating to education and schools was vested in a department of education consisting of a committee of the Executive Council and advisory boards established as provided by the Act; the schools of the province were to be free and non-sectarian and no religious exercises were to be had except as prescribed by the advisory boards; and the ratepayers of each municipality were to be indiscriminately taxed for their support. A Roman Catholic ratepayer moved to quash a by-law of the City of Winnipeg for collecting these school rates shewing by affidavit the position of Roman Catholic schools before the union, the practice of the church to control and regulate the education of Roman Catholics and to have the doctrines of their church taught in the schools, and that Roman Catholic children would not be allowed to attend the public schools. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (7 Man. L. R. 273), that the Act (53 Vict. c. 38), by depriving Roman Catholics of the right to have their children taught according to the rules of their church, and by compelling them to contribute to the support of schools to which they could not conscientiously send their children, prejudicially affected rights and privileges with respect to their schools which they had by practice in the province at the union, and was ultra vires of the Legislature of the province. Ex parte Renaud [1 Pugs. (N.B.) 273] distinguished. Barrett v. City of Winnipeg, xix., 374.

On 29th August, 1885, this certificate was cancelled, and on the same day a like certificate was issued to respondents, and on the 31st July, 1889, letters patent under the great seal of British Columbia were issued to respondents. By the agreement ratified by 47 Vict. c. 6 (D.), it was also agreed that three and a half million additional acres in Peace River District should be conveyed to the Dominion Government in satisfaction of the right of the Dominion under the terms of union to have made good to it, from public lands contiguous to the railway belt, the quantity of land that might at the date of the conveyance be held under pre-emption right or by Crown grant. On an information by the Attorney-General for Canada to recover possession of the 640 acres: Held, affirming the Exchequer Court, (3 Ex. C. R. 293) that the land in question was exempt from the statutory conveyance to the Dominion Government, and that upon the pre-emption right granted to D. et al. being subsequently abandoned or cancelled, the land became the property of the Crown in right of the province, and not in right of the Dominion. *The Queen v. 81. Navigable waters — Title to bed of stream—Crown—Dedication of public lands—Presumption of dedication—User—Obstruction of navigation—Public nuisance—Balance of convenience.—The title to the soil in the beds of navigable rivers is in the Crown in right of the provinces, not in right of the Dominion. Dixon v. Snetsinger (23 U. C. C. P. 235) discussed.—The property of the Crown may be dedicated to the public, and a presumption of dedication will arise from facts sufficient to warrant such an inference in the case of a subject.—By 23 Vict. c. 2, s. 35 (Can.), power was given to the Crown to dispose of and grant water lots in rivers and other navigable waters in Upper Canada, and the power to grant the soil carried with it the power to dedicate it to the public use.—The user of a bridge over a navigable river for thirty-five years is sufficient to raise a presumption of dedication. If a province before confederation had so dedicated the bed of a navigable river for the purposes of a bridge that it could not have objected to it as an obstruction to navigation, the Crown as representing the Dominion, on assuming control of the navigation, was bound to permit the maintenance of the bridge.—An obstruction to navigation cannot be justified on the ground that the public benefit to be derived from it outweighs the inconvenience it causes. It is a public nuisance though of very great public benefit and the obstruction of the slightest possible degree. The Queen v. Moss, xxvi., 322.

CONTEMPT OF COURT.

1. Contempt of court—Constructive contempt—Obstructing litigation—Prejudice to suitor—Locus standi.—On an application to commit a solicitor for a constructive contempt of court by obstructing litigation the alleged contempt consisted in publishing in a newspaper comments on a judgment rendered by a master in chambers in a cause in which the writer was solicitor for defendant. The motion to commit was made by the relator in such cause. Notice of appeal from said judgment had been given, but before the motion was made the notice was countermanded and the appeal abandoned. Held, that the proceedings in the cause before the Master being at an end the relator in the cause could not be prejudiced, as a suitor, by the publication complained of; and as such prejudice was the only ground on which he could institute the proceedings for contempt he had no locus standi and his application should not have been entertained. 1. BREACH OF CONTRACT.

1. Construction — License to cut timber—Ownership and control — Draft for stumpage.—Respondents granted C. & S. a license to cut timber on 25 square miles in consideration of stumpage dues; "Said stumpage to be paid in the following manner: Said company shall first deduct from the amount of stumpage on the timber or lumber cut by grantees on this license as aforesaid, an amount equal to the mileage paid by them as aforesaid, and the whole of the remainder, if any, shall, not later than the 15th April next, be secured by good indorsed notes, or other sufficient security to be approved of by the said company, and payable on the 15th July next, and the lumber not to be removed from the brows or landings till the stumpage is secured as aforesaid. And said company reserves and retains full and complete ownership and control of all lumber which shall be cut from the aforementioned premises, wherever and however it may be situated, until all matters and things appertaining to or connected with this license shall be settled and adjusted, and all sums due or to become due for stumpage or otherwise shall be fully paid, and any and all damages for non-performance of this agreement, or stipulations herein expressed, shall be liquidated and paid. And if any sum of money shall have become payable by any one of the stipulations or agreements herein expressed, and shall not be paid or secured in some of the modes herein expressed within ten days thereafter, then, in such case, said company shall have full power and authority to take all or any part of said lumber wherever or however situated, and to absolutely sell and dispose of the same either at private or public sale, for cash; and, after deducting reasonable expenses, commissions, and all sums which may then be due or may become due from any cause whatever, as herein expressed, the balance, if any there may be, they shall pay over on demand to said grantees, after a reasonable time for ascertaining and liquidating all amounts due, or which may become due, either as stumpage or damages." For securing the stumpage payable to respondents under this license, C. & S. gave to the respondents an accepted draft upon J. & Co., which was approved of by the respondents, but which was not paid at maturity. After giving the draft C. & S. sold the lumber to J. & Co., who knew the lumber was cut on the plaintiff's land under the said agreement. J. & Co. failed, and appellant, their assignee, took possession of the lumber and sold it.—Held, per Strong, Taschereau, and Gwynne, JJ., (affirming the judgment of the court below), Ritchie, C.J., and Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting, that upon the case as submitted, and by mere force of the terms of the agreement, the absolute property in the lumber in question did not pass to C. & S. immediately upon the receipt by the company of the accepted draft of C. & S. on J. & Co., and that appellant was liable for the actual payment of the stumpage. McLeod v. New Brunswick Ry. Co., v., 281.

2. Sale of goods—Payment—Appropriation—Nonsuit.—The respondent sued for the price of coal sold and delivered to appellants during 1866, 1867, and 1868. S. and M. and McG. were partners carrying on business under the name of the Albertine Oil Co., S. furnishing the capital. S. who was a large stockholder in the plaintiff company purchased the coal for the Albertine Oil Co., the members of which he named; the president of the plaintiff company told S. they would look to him for payment, as the other partners were poor; the terms of sale were cash on delivery on board vessels; and S. agreed that the dividends on his stock should be applied in payment for the coal. The plaintiff credited the Albertine Oil Co. with S.'s dividends from time to time down to August, 1866, leaving a balance of $912 due to S. The coal delivered was charged in the plaintiff's books to the Albertine Oil Co., and the bills of lading of the coal were made out in the name of that company. Some time afterwards a notice by S. and M. was given to the plaintiff, complaining of the inferior quality of the coal, and claiming damages. In 1868, S. repudiated the agreement to appropriate his dividends to the payment of coal, and refused to sign receipts therefor. He had signed the receipt for the dividend of 1866. The action (in 1873) was against S. and M., surviving partners. S. shortly afterwards sued for the dividends; the claim was referred to arbitration, and an award was made in his favour for $15,280, which the plaintiff paid in July, 1874. The receipt stated that it was in full satisfaction of the judgment in the suit of S. against the Albert Mining Co., and it appeared (though the evidence was objected to) that it included the dividends for 1867 and 1868.—The trial judge nonsuited the plaintiff, but the full court of N. S. set aside the nonsuit.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (22 N. B. Rep. 346), Strong, J., dissenting, that there being clear evidence of the appropriation of S.'s dividends in pursuance of agreement made with him, and therefore of the plaintiff having been paid for the coal in the manner and on the terms agreed, the plaintiff had been properly nonsuited. Spurr v. Albert Mining Co., ix., 35.

3. Breach — Charter-party — Conditions — Stranding — Unavoidable delay — Refusal of cargo — Evidence.] — By charter-party, 11th December, 1878, it was agreed that plaintiff's ship, then on her way to Shelburne, N. S., should proceed with all possible despatch, after arrival at Shelburne, to St. John, N. B. and there load from the charterers a cargo of deals for Liverpool; and if the ship did not arrive at Shelburne on or before 1st January, 1879, the charterers were to be at liberty to cancel the charter-party. The ship arrived at Shelburne in December, and sailed at once for St. John. At the entrance of the harbour of St. John she got upon the rocks and was so badly damaged that it became necessary to put her on the blocks for repairs, and was not ready to receive her cargo until 21st April. On 26th March the charterers gave the owners notice that they would not furnish a cargo for her. The owners sued for breach of charter-party, and on the trial defendants gave evidence, subject to objection, that freights between St. John and Liverpool were usually much higher in winter than in summer; that lumber would depreciate in value by being wintered over at St. John, and also as to the relative value of lumber during the winter and in the spring in the Liverpool market; and it was contended that the time occupied in repairing damage was unreasonable and entirely frustrated the object of the voyage. The judge directed the jury that if the time occupied in getting the vessel off the rocks and repairing her was so long as to put an end, in a commercial sense, to the commercial speculation entered into by the ship-owners and charterers, they should find for defendants. The verdict was for defendants, and the full court ordered a new trial. — Held, affirming the court below (21 N. B. Rep. 558), that as there was no condition in the charter-party that the ship should be at St. John at any fixed date, and as the time taken in repairing damage was not unreasonable, and the delay did not entirely frustrate the object of the voyage, the charterers were not justified in refusing to carry out the contract. Carvill v. Schofield, ix., 370.

4. Resolutory condition — Promise of sale — Rescission — Nise en demeure — Arts. 1022, 1067, 1478, 1536, 1537, 1538, 1550 C. C. — G. agreed to sell a farm to M., then a minor, for $1,200—of which $500 was paid at the time, balance payable in seven yearly instalments of $100 each, with interest at 7 per cent. M. to have immediate possession and to ratify the deed on becoming of age, and to be entitled to a deed, if instalments were paid as they became due, but if M. failed to make such payments he was to forfeit all right to a deed and all moneys paid, which then would be considered as rent, the agreement null and void, and the parties as lessor and lessee. M. became of age and left the country without ratifying the sale; he paid none of the instalments, and G. retained possession of the farm. Some time afterwards, M. returned, tendered the balance of the price, and claimed the farm. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (3 Dor. Q. B. 212), Strong and Taschereau, JJ., dissmissing, that the condition of the promise of sale not having been complied with within the time specified in the contract, the terms of the contract placed the plaintiff en demeure, without the necessity of any formal demand or rescission immediately upon failure in performance of the condition when, ipso facto, the relation of the parties became changed from that of vendor and vendee to lessor and lessee. Grange v. McLennan, ix., 385.

5. Breach — Construction of tramway — Use of traction engine — Steam engine — Construction of agreement.] — A clause in an agreement under an Ontario Act between the Municipality of York and the Toronto Gravel Road Co., for a right to construct a tramway from their gravel pits to the City of Toronto, was as follows:—"So soon as this agreement shall have been ratified by the said corporation, the said company shall forthwith withdraw their said traction engine from the public highway of the said county, and shall discontinue the use and employment of the said traction engine, or of any other traction engine, upon or along such public highways." The company claimed the right to put steam engines upon the road, over such public highway, notwithstanding the above clause in their agreement. — Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (11 Ont. App. R. 765), that the use of steam engines was an infraction of the said clause. Toronto Gravel Road Co. v. County of York, xii., 517.

6. Railway aid — Agreement to take stock — Breach — Special damages — Arts. 1065, 1070, 1073, 1077, 1840, & 1841, C. C. — The Corporation of the County of Ottawa under the authority of a by-law undertook to deliver to the M., O. and W. Ry. Co. for stock subscribed by them 2,000 debentures of the corporation of $100 each, payable twenty-five years from date and bearing 6 per cent. interest, and subsequently, without any valid cause or reason, refused to issue said debentures. In an action solely for damages for their neglect to issue said debentures, Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 1 Q. B. 46), Ritchie, C.J., and Gwynne, J., dissenting, that apart from its liability for the amount of the debentures and interest thereon, the corporation was liable under arts. 1065, 1073, 1840, 1841, C. C., for damages for breach of the covenant. County of Ottawa v. Montreal, Ottawa and Western Ry. Co., xiv., 193.

7. Non-fulfilment — Temporary exception — Incidental demand — Damages — Cross-appeal.] — In March, 1883, B. contracted with C. for the delivery of an engine in accordance with the Herreshoff system to be placed in the yacht "Ninie" then in course of construction. The engine was built, placed in the yacht, and upon trial was found defective. On 31st August, C. took out a saisie conservatoire of the yacht, and claimed $2,199.37 for the work and materials furnished. B. petitioned to annul the attachment and pleaded that the amount was not yet due, as C. had not performed the contract, and by incidental demand claimed a large amount. After various proceedings the saisie conservatoire was abandoned, and the Court of Queen's Bench, on appeal on the principal action and incidental demand, ordered that experts should ascertain whether the engine was built according to the contract and report on the defects. A report was made by which it was declared that C.'s contract was not carried out, and that work and materials of the value of $225 were still necessary to complete the contract.—On motion to homologate the expert's report, the Superior Court adjudicated upon the merits of the demand in chief and of the incidental demand, and held that as C. had not built an engine as covenanted B.'s plea should be maintained, but as to the incidental demand held the evidence insufficient to warrant a judgment in favour of B. On appeal, the Queen's Bench, taking into consideration the fact that the yacht had, since the institution of the action, been sold in another suit at the instance of one of B.'s creditors and purchased by C., the proceeds being deposited in court to be distributed amongst B.'s creditors, credited B. with $225 necessary to complete the engine, allowed $750 damages on B.'s incidental demand, and gave judgment in favour of C. for the balance, viz., $1,225 with costs.—The fact of the sale and purchase of the yacht subsequent to the institution of the action did not appear on the pleadings.—On appeal and cross-appeal as to amount allowed on incidental demand:—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, Ritchie, C.J., and Taschereau, J., dissenting, that as it was shewn that at the time of the institution of C.'s action it was through faulty construction that the engine and machinery therewith connected could not work according to the Herreshoff system, on which system C. covenanted to build it, the action was premature.—Held, also, that the evidence in the case fully warranted the $750 allowed by the Court of Queen's Bench on B.'s incidental demand, and therefore he was entitled to a judgment for that amount on said incidental demand with costs.—Taschereau, J., was of opinion, on cross-appeal, that B.'s incidental demand should have been dismissed with costs. Bender v. Carrier, xv., 19.

8. Parol agreement — Part performance—Carriage of mails—Authority to bind the Crown—R. S. C. c. 35.—An action will not lie against the Crown for breach of a contract for carrying mails for 9 months at the rate of $10,000 a year, made by parol with the Postmaster-General and accepted by the contractor by letter, notwithstanding it was partly performed, as, if a permanent contract, being for a larger sum than $1,000 it could not be made without the authority of an order-in-council, and if temporary it was revocable at the will of the Postmaster-General. Judgment appealed from (2 Ex. C. R. 386) affirmed. Humphrey v. The Queen, xx., 591.

9. Breach—"Transmit"—Construction of agreement—Telephone service—Use of wires.—The E. T. Co. carried on business of executing orders by telephone for messenger boys, cabs, etc., which it sold to the E. D. Co., agreeing among other things not to transmit or give, in any manner, directly or indirectly, any orders for messengers, cabs, etc., to any person or persons, company or corporation, except to the E. D. Co. The G. N. W. Co. afterwards established a messenger service for the purposes of which the wires of the Telephone Co. were used. In an action for breach of the agreement with the E. D. Co. and injunction to restrain the Telephone Co. from allowing their wires to be used for giving orders for messengers, etc.: Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (17 Ont. App. R. 292), Ritchie, C.J., doubting, that the Telephone Co., being ignorant of the nature of communications sent over their wires by subscribers, did not "transmit" such orders within the meaning of the agreement; that the use of the wires by subscribers could not be restricted; and that the Telephone Co. was under no obligation, even if it were possible to do so, to take measures to ascertain the nature of all communications with a view to preventing such orders being given. Electric Despatch Co. v. Bell Telephone Co., xx., 83.

10. Agreement to insure to amount of advances—37 Vict. c. 15 (Que.)—Continuance of cause—Suspension of prescription.—The claim arose out of alleged breach of contract by S. & Co., in not insuring to the full extent of advances on the ship "Empress Eugenie," belonging to G.—For several years previous to 1857, S. & Co. had large dealings with G., principally advances, made on the security of ships, which appellant, a ship-builder, constructed and disposed of through them. On 18th August, 1854, G. assigned to S. & Co. the ship "Empress Eugenie," with freights and earnings, for £18,500, in trust, to sell her at such time and place as they might judge best; to receive the price and earnings thereof; and out of the moneys arising from such sale, freight, earnings or hire, or otherwise coming into their hands on account of G., to retain £18,500, and all other sums then due to them by the G., or which they might thereafter pay, lay out or advance for him, and all other moneys due for charges, expenses, interest and commission, as specified in the deed. It was stipulated that the vessel and her freights should at all times be kept insured by S. & Co. to at least the full amount advances made by them in respect thereof, and to such further reasonable amount as G. might see fit, the premiums to be deducted from the moneys received.—The "Empress Eugenie" left Quebec for Liverpool with a full cargo, but owing to the depressed state of the market she could not be sold, and it was agreed that she should be classed and coppered, in order that she might be run with freight until a more favourable opportunity occurred to dispose of her. While the vessel was at Liverpool expenses were incurred by S. & Co., with the assent of G. $41,003.67 for classing and coppering, as well as for discharging and loading her. In the meantime S. & Co. received $22,001.29 for freight on her voyage to Liverpool, and $43,382.36, from other sources, which, according to the deed they were entitled to credit on advances. The vessel, after being classed and coppered, was insured for $68,000, and left Liverpool for Quebec with cargo, freight of which valued at $7,600, and insured for that sum. She was lost on her voyage. S. & Co. credited the amount received to G., and in 1857 brought an action for £2,929 4s. 9d. on their general account. G. pleaded that S. & Co. neglected to insure "Empress Eugenie" to the full extent of their advances, that he had thereby lost money, exceeding their claim which was thereby compensated, and he prayed that the action be dismissed. The appellant made no incidental demand.—In 1873, while the case was still pending, the record was destroyed by the burning of the Quebec Court House. More than two years after, G. petitioned under 37 Vict. c. 15, to recommence proceedings, and instituted the present action against the respondent as representing S. & Co. The Court of Queen's Bench, Lower Canada, was of opinion that the demand of G., not having been made in the first case, could not be deemed to be a recommencing of the cause or proceeding of which the record was burned within the meaning of 37 Vict. c. 15, and was not a continuance of said cause or proceeding so as to suspend prescription within the meaning of ss. 7 and 21 of that Act. But the court did not consider it necessary to enter into the consideration of the question of prescription, preferring to rest their judgment on the broader ground that respondents were only bound to insure for the amount of their claim.—Held, per Ritchie, C.J., and Strong and Gwynne, JJ., affirming the Court of Queen's Bench. (Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting), that the amount for which S. & Co. were bound to insure the ship under the agreement was the amount of any balances which at any time might be due to them by G., for moneys for which the ship was liable to them under the deed, and not for the cost of said ship, or the aggregate amount of all advances which they might have made, irrespective of the sums received by them to be applied on account of such advances. Appeal dismissed with costs. Gingras v. Symes, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 14.

11. Breach—Engagement to sell on commission—Damages—Evidence — Defendant's books—Supplemental demand—Settlement of accounts—Prescription—Interruption—Arts. 345, 346, C. C. P.—Technical objection not taken in court below.—By written contract of 23rd Jan., 1868, plaintiff contracted with defendants to sell their goods in the Maritime Provinces, the engagement to continue for a period of five years, subject to co-partnership or business changes. By the contract he was to have 5% commission on all goods of defendants' manufacture and 2½% on all other goods. This commission was to be paid to him on all sales, no matter whether such sales had been effected by him or had been made direct to purchasers by defendants without his knowledge or intervention. Plaintiff was opening up an entirely new market for defendants' goods, entered upon his duties under the contract, and in two years succeeded in establishing a trade for defendants. On 5th Dec., 1870, defendants terminated the engagement, alleging that they did so in consequence of the interruption to their business by a late fire and some changes they expected to make in their business firm the ensuing year.—Plaintiff objected to his agency being terminated, and at the expiration of the five years, sued to recover a balance of $1,000 for unpaid commissions due, and $10,000 damages for breach of contract.—The plaintiff examined defendant Ames, who produced from defendants' ledgers a full statement of sales effected by defendants in Maritime Provinces up to 5th Dec., 1870. Thereupon plaintiff made a supplemental demand, claiming $1,289.50 additional for unpaid commissions.—The Superior Court rejected plaintiff's claim for damages on the ground that co-partnership and business changes took place in December, 1870, in defendant's firm, and that this by the terms of the contract entitled them to terminate it as they did. As to the claim for commissions up to 5th Dec., 1870, the court held the same to be a good open existing demand, and referred the accounts to an accountant, who found $1,705.78 due to plaintiff for commissions. This report the court by final judgment adopted, and condemned defendants in $1,705.78 and interest from service of process and costs.—The Queen's Bench reversed this judgment and dismissed the action, on the ground that it was proved that after each trip made by plaintiff, accounts were settled for commission due to satisfaction of plaintiff, and that there was a settlement on 29th Dec., 1869, when engagement terminated, and that the evidence produced by defendants shewed that plaintiff was fully paid for all commissions earned. Held, that nothing had occurred at the settlement of commission, from time to time paid by the defendants to the plaintiff upon the sales as the defendants themselves, who alone had a perfect knowledge of them, represented them to be, which would disentitle the plaintiff to have an account taken of all the sales upon which he was by his contract entitled to commission at least up to 5th Dec., 1870. The plaintiff was not aware of the large sales which had been made by defendants, and there could be no binding acquiescence when plaintiff was not aware of his rights. That the result of the account taken could not be objected to, and therefore the judgment of the Superior Court should be affirmed.—Per Taschereau, J. The prescription, if any, was interrupted by a letter written by defendants to plaintiff before it accrued, and Walker v. Sweet (21 L. C. Jur. 21) must be followed as long as it stands unreversed. The objection, that the report was not duly received in evidence in the case, according to arts. 345 and 346 C. C. P., had not been taken in the court below, and the rule in the Privy Council, that a purely technical objection not made in the court below cannot be entertained in appeal, must be followed.—Appeal allowed with costs. Fuller v. Ames, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 140; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 144.

12. Breach of contract to supply meat—Sole arbiter—Decision binding on the parties—Forfeiture of deposit—Damages.—Action for breach of contract for supplying the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, with meat, etc., from 1st May to 1st November, 1880, which contained the following clause:—"The quantity and quality of the foregoing supplies to be satisfactory to the steward of the hotel, and two hundred dollars ($200) are now handed the Windsor Hotel Syndicate as security for the due fulfilment of the contract, to be forfeited in case of non-performance, and if at any time the hotel steward is obliged to procure supplies elsewhere through any cause or negligence of ours, any excess of cost then paid over the prices of this contract shall be chargeable against the deposit of two hundred dollars. The said deposit shall not bear interest.—This contract may be cancelled by the Windsor Hotel Syndicate at any time should they lease or sell the hotel, or should the hotel from any cause be closed before 1st November next.—Should this contract be satisfactorily fulfilled the deposit of two hundred dollars, or any balance of the same remaining in accordance with foregoing terms, shall be returnable on demand to us."—Plaintiff supplied meat until 30th June. The steward was dissatisfied and repeatedly notified plaintiff of his dissatisfaction, but did not immediately stop receiving meat. The supplies continuing unsatisfactory to the steward, and in his opinion not according to the contract, he so decided and reported his decision, and the contract was cancelled whereby the deposit became forfeited. The defendants had been obliged to expend $168 more than the deposit in obtaining meat elsewhere.—Held, affirming the Queen's Bench, that the parties having agreed to make the steward the sole judge and to abide by his decision, the plaintiff was bound by it. Further, the evidence showed that the steward's dissatisfaction was justified by the inferiority of the meat supplied, and that there was no mala fides on his part, but that he had acted bonâ fide under a reasonable sense of dissatisfaction. — Appeal dismissed with costs (Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting). Brown v. Allan, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 146.

13. Breach—Damages—Repairs to printing press and freight charges—Lease with privilege of purchasing—Dilatory exceptions—Art. 120, s-s. 7 C. C. P.—In 1878, plaintiffs made an agreement with defendant, in the form of a lease of a printing press with its appurtenances for 6 months, at a rental of $1,000 payable in advance, obliging themselves to erect the press on the premises of defendant. The lease gave the said lessee the privilege of purchasing the press, at the expiration of the lease, for $4,500, and provided that failing purchase, defendant would deliver the press and appurtenances at the expiration of the lease in as good order and condition as the same were at the commencement of the lease, reasonable wear and tear and accident by fire excepted, free of all charges and unbroken, free on board in Montreal, with freight paid to New York.—Plaintiffs erected a press; defendant paid $1,000, and held the press under the lease until its expiration; and then instead of returning it continued to use it. Some time after the lease terminated, plaintiffs, considering that defendant had exercised the option to purchase took action against defendant, with saisie conservatoire for the purchase price, $4,500.—The defendant pleaded in effect, "never exercised option to purchase," and that whatever remedy plaintiffs had, they had no right to a suit for the price of the press, as for goods bought and sold. The plaintiffs' action was dismissed, and this judgment was affirmed by the Court of Review.—While this suit was pending, defendant continued to use the press for 17 months, when plaintiffs obtained possession under saisie revendication, and removed it to New York. On arrival it was found to be in disrepair and large expenditure was necessary to put it in the condition in which it was at the time that it had been leased.—Plaintiffs then sued claiming. 1.—$2,809.13, value of the use during the 17 months, at the rate established in the lease ($1,000 for 6 months); 2.—$2,809.13, as damages sustained through the use, employment and retention by defendant of the press and its appurtenances, after the expiration of the lease; 3.—$299.35 as costs and expenses of taking down, packing, loading and removal to New York, including freight and charges.—Defendants filed dilatory exceptions (art. 120, C. C. P.), setting up that plaintiffs were not residents and no power of attorney had been produced, which were dismissed, and pleas to the merits raising only issues of fact.—The Superior Court gave plaintiffs $2,000, for deterioration and damages, and $160.50 for cost of transport, this judgment being affirmed.—Held, that the judgment appealed from should be affirmed (Henry, J., dissenting). Mullin v. Roe, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 219.

14. Breach—Construction of railway—Delivery of bonds—Assignment of right to receive bonds—Special reference—Appeal to Privy Council.—On 31st Oct., 1876, A. entered into a contract with the Government of Nova Scotia for the construction of the Eastern Extension Ry. On 20th Dec., A. assigned all his right to said contract to appellants, and, on the same day, an agreement was made between appellants and the Canada Improvement Co., whereby the latter undertook to build and equip the Eastern Extension Ry. On 22nd Dec., G. agreed with the Can. Imp. Co. to do the work, for which the company agreed to pay per mile $4,800 in cash, and $3,750 in first mortgage bonds. As security for his performance of the agreement, G. gave to the Can. Imp. Co. a bond, with two sureties, in the penal sum of $100,000, which bond was afterwards assigned to the Government of Nova Scotia.—G. proceeded with the work according to agreement but the mortgage bonds were not delivered as the work progressed, and the Can. Imp. Co. represented that they could not be issued at that time. G., therefore, suspended work and took proceedings against the Can. Imp. Co. for breach of contract. These proceedings were settled by a payment to G. in cash and notes, and an agreement was entered into between the appellants of the first part; the Can. Imp. Co. of the second part, and G. of the third part, which, after reciting the above facts, provided:—That the Can. Imp. Co. would deliver to G. $80,000 of first mortgage bonds of appellant's company as soon as the same could be legally issued, and use every diligence to have them issued, and they should, so far as the parties of the first and second parts could make them, be a lien on the Truro and Pictou Branch Railway, which the Government of Canada was to hand over to the appellants, upon the Eastern Extension Railway and upon the appellant company and its property rights and privileges set forth in s. 32 of its Act of incorporation. That such bonds or other conveyances, or lien by which they might be secured, should be free from any clauses restraining a sale of the property to which such lien attached, or in any way impairing the remedy of the holders thereof in default of payment. That the whole issue of first mortgage bonds should not exceed $1,250,000 and should bear interest at 6 per cent., and that no other security should take precedence of the bonds to be given to G. But provision might be made for giving clear titles of the company's bonds in the event of their being sold, the proceeds to be secured for the benefit of the bondholders. That the appellants covenanted and guaranteed that the bonds would be delivered to G. as above set out, and that they would, if necessary, endeavour to procure such legislation as would remedy any defects now existing in their organization. That the Government of Nova Scotia would use all means within its power to enforce the delivery of such bonds and might refuse government aid to said companies, until satisfied that G.'s right to receive the said bonds was protected and assured. That the contract between the Can. Imp. Co and G. should be cancelled, and the bond given by G. delivered up to him.—On 1st Feb., 1879, the appellants entered into an agreement with the Governments of the Dominion and of Nova Scotia relinquishing their rights to the "Pictou Branch Railway," mentioned in said agreement, and agreed to the repeal of the Act providing for the transfer of the same to the appellants, and that it should be retained by the Dominion until the Eastern Extension Railway to the Strait of Canso and the steam ferry across the strait should be completed, and then transferred to the appellants on certain conditions. — G. claimed this to be a breach of agreement, and brought action against the appellants and the Can. Imp. Co., the latter, however, not being served with the writ. — Defendants pleaded that as to $40,000 of the bonds the plaintiff had given an order on the Can. Imp. Co. for delivery to the Provincial Secretary of Nova Scotia, which had been accepted by the company, and was, in effect, an assignment of that portion of the bonds. The evidence of the plaintiff on the trial, in regard to such order, was that it was given on the condition that an order-in-council should be passed by the Nova Scotia Government protecting the right of the plaintiff to have the said bonds delivered to him, and the bonds given to the Can. Imp. Co., as security for the due performance by the plaintiff of the work on the Eastern Extension Railway, delivered up to plaintiff; and on these conditions being fulfilled the plaintiff was to give to the Government a formal assignment of the said mortgage bonds to the extent of $40,000, but that such conditions were never carried out. — The plaintiff recovered, and his verdict was affirmed by the Supreme Court, whereupon defendants appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada, and, on the argument an agreement was entered into between the parties, and the Government of Nova Scotia, empowering the court to decide the case on the merits irrespective of the pleadings or any technical defence raised thereon, and limiting the amount in question to the sum of $40,000, the balance being satisfied by a judgment recovered by G. against the Can. Imp. Co. — Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (4 Russ. & Geld. 436), that the agreement entered into by the appellants with the Governments of the Dominion and Nova Scotia, was a breach of the agreement made between appellants, the Can. Imp. Co. and G. — Held, also, that the order was given on conditions which were never carried out, and was not an assignment of the bonds, and therefore G. was entitled to recover $40,000, with interest from the date of the breach of agreement — Appeal dismissed with costs. Halifax & Cape Breton Coal & Ry. Co. v. Gregory, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 727.

[The Privy Council refused leave to appeal and held that in deciding the case under the agreement entered into at the hearing of the appeal, the Supreme Court was not acting in its ordinary jurisdiction as a court of appeal, but under special reference, and even if it were open to give leave to appeal, the questions raised were not of sufficient public interest to depart from the rule where an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada has failed. (11 App. Cas. 229).]

15. Sale of land — Building restrictions — Description — Street boundaries — Construction of covenant. — [The owners of a block of land in Toronto, bounded on the north by Wellesley Street and west by Sumach Street, entered into an agreement with B., whereby the latter agreed to purchase a part of said block, which was vacant wild land, not divided into lots, and containing neither buildings nor streets, though a by-law had been passed for the construction of a street immediately south of it to be called Amelia Street. The agreement contained certain restrictions as to buildings to be erected on the property purchased, which fronted on the two streets north and west of it respectively, and the vendors agreed to make similar stipulations in any sale of land on the south side of Wellesley Street, produced. A deed was afterwards executed of said land pursuant to the agreement which contained the following covenants: "And the grantors . . . covenant with the grantees . . . that in case they make sale of any lots fronting on Wellesley Street Sumach Street on that part of lot 1, in the City of Toronto, situate on the south side of Wellesley Street and east of Sumach Street now owned by them, that they will convey the same subject to the same building agreement or conditions" (as in the agreement). The vendors afterwards sold a portion of the remaining land fronting on Amelia Street, a one hundred feet east of Sumach Street, and the purchaser being about to erect thereon building forbidden by the restrictive covenants in the deed, B. brought an action against the vendors for breach of said covenant, claiming that it extended to the whole block. — Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the covenant included all the property south of Wellesley Street: that the land not being divided into lots any part of it was a portion of a lot of land fronting on Wellesley and Sumach Streets, and so within the purview of the deed; and that the vendors could not be dividing the property as they saw fit narrow the operation and benefit of their own deed. Per Gwynne, J. The piece of land in question did not front nor abut on either Wellesley or Sumach Streets, but on Amelia Street alone and was not, therefore, literally within the covenant of the vendors. Dumoulin v. Burnett, xxii., 120.

16. Sale of deals — Contract — Breach of Delivery — Acceptance — Quality — Warranty — Damages — Arts. 1073, 1473, 1507, C. C. — [In a contract for the purchase of deals from S. et al., merchants in London, it was stipulated, inter alia, as follows: — "Quality — Sellers guarantee quality to be equal to the usual Etchemin Stock, and to be marked with the Beaver Brand," and the mode of delivery was f. o. b. vessels at Quebec, and payment by drafts, payable in London 120 days' sight from date of shipment. The deals were shipped at Quebec on board vessels owned by P. & Bros., at the request of P. & I. intending purchasers of the deals. When the deals arrived in London they were inspected by S. et al., and found to be of inferior quality, and S. et al., after protesting sold them at reduced rates. — In an action for damages for breach of contract. — Held, reversing the judgment of the court below, that the delivery was to be at Quebec, subject to an acceptance in London, and that the purchasers were entitled to recover under the express warranty as to quality, there being abundant evidence that the deals were not of the agreed quality. Strong, C.J., and Sedgwick, J., dissenting. Stewart v. Atkinson, xxii., 315.

17. Principal and agent — Master and servant — Insurance agent — Duty — Appointment — Acting for rival company — Divided interest — Dismissal. — [To act as agent for a rival insurance company is a breach of an insurance agent's agreement, "to fulfil conscientiously all the duties assigned to him, and to act constantly for the best interest of his employer and is sufficient justification for his dismissal. — Judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario (22 Ont. App. R. 408) affirmed. Eschmure v. Canada Accident Assur. Co., xxv., 69 risk after breach—Authority of agent.]—A policy of fire insurance on a factory and machinery contained a condition making it void if the said property was sold or conveyed, or the interest of the parties therein changed. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (34 N. B. Rep. 113), that by a chattel mortgage given by the assured on said property his interest therein was changed and the policy forfeited under said condition. Held, further, that an agent with powers limited to receiving and forwarding applications for insurance had no authority to waive a forfeiture caused by such breach. Torrop v. Imperial Fire Assur. Co., xxvi., 585.

18. Fire insurance — Conditions in policy — Breach — Waiver — Recognition of exist-

19. Agreement in writing—Municipal corporation—Waterworks—Extension of works—Repairs—By-law—Resolution—Injunction—Highways and streets—R. S. Q. art. 4485—Art. 1033a, C. C. P.]—By a resolution of the Council of the Town of Chicoutimi, on 9th October, 1890, based upon an application previously made by him, L. obtained permission to construct waterworks in the town and to lay the necessary pipes in the streets wherever he thought proper, taking his water supply from the river Chicoutimi at whatever point might be convenient for his purposes, upon condition that the works should be commenced within a certain time, and completed in the year 1892. He constructed a system of waterworks, and had it in operation within the time prescribed, but the system proving insufficient a company was formed in 1895 under the provisions of R. S. Q., art. 4485, and given authority by by-law to furnish a proper water supply to the town, whereupon L. attempted to perfect his system, to alter the position of the pipes, to construct a reservoir, and to make new excavations in the streets for these purposes without receiving any further authority from the council.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (Q. R. 5 Q. B. 542), (Gwynne, J., dissenting), that these were not actually necessary repairs but new works, actually part of the system required to be completed during the year 1892, and which after that date could not be proceeded with except upon further permission obtained in the usual manner from the council of the town.—Held, further, that the resolution and the application upon which it was founded constituted a "contract in writing," and a "written agreement" within the meaning of article 1033a of the Code of Civil Procedure of Lower Canada, and violation of its conditions was a sufficient ground for injunction to restrain the construction of the new works. Ville De Chicoutimi v. Legaré, xxvii., 329.

20. Breach of contract—Evidence—Custom of trade—Local usage—Damages—Sale of goods.]—On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench (Q. R. 8 Q. B. 221), which held that in an action for damages for failure to deliver goods at the time specified in a contract, a claim for the difference between the purchase prices and those at which the goods were selling at the time fixed for delivery was not too remote. Leggat v. Marsh, xxix., 739.

21. Public work—Breach of contract—Appropriation of land—Damages—Interest.]—The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the Exchequer Court (7 Ex. C. R. 55), Taschereau, J., dissenting.—By the judgment appealed from it was held as follows:—"1.

There may be some question as to whether Walker v. The London and North Western Railway Company (L. R. 1 C. P. D. 518) should be accepted as establishing a general proposition that if in contracts creating a forfeiture for not proceeding with work at the rate required, a time is fixed for its completion, the forfeiture cannot be enforced on the ground of delay after that date.—"But at all events any notice given after such date to determine the contract and enforce the forfeiture must give the contractor a reasonable time in which to complete the work, and the contractor must, with reference to such reasonable time for completion, make default or delay in diligently continuing to execute or advance the work to the satisfaction of the engineer. The engineer is to decide, having regard to a time that in the opinion of the court is reasonable, and the contractor is to have notice of his decision."—"2. Where there is a breach of contract the damages are to be measured as near as may be by the profits the contractor would have made by completing the contract in a reasonable time."—"3. In this case the contractor claimed for loss of profits in respect of certain extra work not covered by the contract." Held, that inasmuch as it was not possible to say either that the engineer would have directed it to be done by him had the work remained in the suppliant's hands, or that in case the engineer had done so, that he would have fixed a price for it from which a profit would have been derived, it could not be taken into consideration."—"4. where in such a case the Crown dispossessed the contractor of his plant and used it for the purposes of the completion of the work, the contractor was held entitled to recover the value of such plant as a going concern, that is, its value to anyone situated as the contractor himself was at the time of the taking of the plant."—"5. Where the contractor was not allowed interest upon the value of such plant, it was held that he was not to be charged with interest upon the balance of the purchase price of a portion of the plant which, with his consent, the Crown had subsequently paid." *The King v. 2. CANCELLATION OF CONTRACT.

27. Rescission of agreement—Work and labour done—Finding of jury—Recovery on common counts.—Plaintiff was employed by defendant under written agreement, not under seal, to saw lumber in his mill, of which, under the agreement, plaintiff had possession and charge.—It was contended on behalf of plaintiff at the trial that this agreement was rescinded, and that plaintiff was entitled to recover on the common counts, for the work actually done up to the time of the alleged rescission.—The jury found in favour of plaintiff upon the facts bearing upon the alleged rescission, and the Supreme Court (N.S.) refused a new trial (5 Russ. & Geld. 381).—It was contended on behalf of plaintiff that the judgment appealed from was correct, because there was sufficient evidence to warrant the finding that the agreement in question had been rescinded, and that defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff for the work done by the latter up to the time of the rescission.—On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, Held, that for the reasons given by Rigby, J., in the court below, the judgment should be affirmed (Ritchie C.J., and Strong, J., dissenting.) — Appeal dismissed with costs. Young v. Tracey, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 147.

28. Construction of contract—Construction of statute—12 Vict. c. 18, s. 20—Notice to cancel contract—Gas supply shut off for non-payment of gas bill on other premises—Mandamus.—An agreement to furnish gas contained an express provision that either of the contracting parties should have the right to cancel the contract by giving twenty-four hours' notice in writing. Notices were sent in writing to the consumer that his gas would be shut off at a certain number on a street named, unless he paid arrears of gas bills due upon another property. Held, that such notices could not be considered as notices given under the contract for the purpose of cancelling it. Cadieux v. Montreal Gas Co., xxviii, 382.

NOTE.—Leave to appeal to the Privy Council was granted (1898) A. C. 718, and subsequently the Sup. Ct. decision was reversed [(1899) A. C. 589.]

29. Municipal corporation—Waterworks—Rescission of contract—Notice—Mise en demeure—Long user—Waiver—Art. 1067 C. C.—A contract for the construction and maintenance of a system of waterworks required them to be completed in a manner satisfactory to the corporation and allowed the contractors thirty days after notice to put the works in satisfactory working order. On the expiration of the time for the completion of the works the corporation served a protest upon the contractors complaining in general terms of the insufficiency and unsatisfactory construction of the works, without specifying particular defects, but made use of the works complained of for about nine years when, without further notice, action was brought for the rescission of the contract and forfeiture of the works under conditions in the contract. Held, that after the long delay, when the contractors could not be replaced in the original position, the complaint must be deemed to have been waived by acceptance and use of the waterworks, and it would, under the circumstances, be inequitable to rescind the contract. Held, further, that a notice specifying the particular defects to be remedied was a condition precedent to action and that the protest in general terms was not a sufficient compliance therewith to place the contractors in default. Tor of Richmond v. Lafontaine, xxx., 155.

30. Contract—Duration—Right to cancel Repugnant clauses.—A contract for supplying light to a hotel contained the following provisions: "This contract is to continue in force for not less than 36 consecutive calendar months from date of first burning, and thereafter until cancelled (in writing) by one of the parties hereto. . . . Special condition if any. This contract to remain in force after the expiration of the said 36 months for the term that the party of the second part renews his lease for the Russell House." After the expiration of the 36 months the lease was renewed for five years longer. Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal (1 Ont. L. R. 73), that neither of the parties to the contract had a right to cancel it again: the will of the other during the renewed term. Ottawa Electric Co. v. St. Jacques, xxxi., 63.

31. Construction of works—Deductions for portions omitted—Partial cancellation of contract—Arts. 1065, 1691 C. C.—The provisions of article 1691 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada do not give the owner of work being constructed under a contract at a fixed price the power of cancelling the contract in part, and maintaining it as to another part: the contract must, under that article, be either cancelled in toto or not at all. *Ville de Maisonneuve v. 3. CARRIERS.

42. Carriers of goods—Bill of lading—Conditions—Bailment—Warehousemen—Liability for negligence—Transit—Connecting lines.—One of the conditions in a contract to carry goods to P., a place beyond the terminus of the company's line, provided that the company "should not be responsible for any loss, mis-delivery, damage or detention that might happen to goods sent by them. If such loss, mis-delivery, damage or detention occurred after said goods arrived at the stations or places on their line nearest to the points or places which they were consigned to, or beyond their said limits." Held, that this condition would not relieve the company from liability for loss or damage occurring during transit, even if such loss occurred beyond the limits of the company's own line. Held, per Strong and Taschereau, J.J., that the loss having occurred after the transit was over, and the goods delivered at P., and the liability of the carriers having ceased, this condition reduced the contract to one of mere bailment as soon as the goods were delivered, and also exempted the company from liability as warehousemen, and the goods were from that time in custody of the company on whose line P. was situate, as bailees for the shipper. (Fournier and Gwynne, J.J., dissenting.) G. T. Ry. Co. v. MacMillan, xvi., 543.

43. Railway—Carriage of goods—Carriage over connecting lines—Authority of agent.—E., in British Columbia, being about to purchase goods from G. in Ontario, signed, on request of the freight agent of the Northern Pacific Railway Company in British Columbia, a letter to G. asking him to ship goods via Grand Trunk Railway and Chicago & N. W. care Northern Pacific Railway at St. Paul. This letter was forwarded to the freight agent of the Northern Pacific Railway Company at Toronto, who sent it to G., and wrote to him "I enclose you card of advice and if you will kindly fill it up when you make the shipment send it to me, I will trace and hurry them through, and advise you of delivery to consignee." G. shipped the goods as suggested in this letter, deliverable to his own order in British Columbia. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (21 Ont. App. R. 322), that on arrival of the goods at St. Paul the Northern Pacific Railway Company was bound to accept delivery of them for carriage to British Columbia and to expedite such carriage; that they were in the care of said company from St. Paul to British Columbia; that the freight agent at Toronto had authority so to bind the company; and that the company was liable to G. for the value of the goods which were delivered to E. at British Columbia without an order from G., and not paid for. Northern Pacific Ry. Co. v. Grant, xxiv., 546.

44. Railway—Carriage of goods—Connecting lines—Special contract—Fire in warehouse—Negligence—Pleading.—Action by S., against appellants. S. purchased goods to be delivered, some to G. T. R. Co., and the C. P. R. Co., and other companies, to be, and the same were, transferred to appellants, for carriage to Merlin, Ont., and delivered to S. There was also alleged a contract by the appellants for storage and delivery to S. when requested, and lack of proper care whereby the goods were lost. The goods were destroyed by fire while stored in a building owned by the appellants at Merlin. Held, reversing the Court of Appeal, that as to the goods delivered to the G. T. R. Co. to be transferred to the appellants, if the cause of action was one arising ex delicto it must fail, as the evidence shewed that the goods were received from the G. T. R. Co. for carriage under the terms of a special contract in the bill and shipping note given by the G. T. R. Co. to the consignors, and if it was an action on contract it must also fail as the contract under which the goods were received by the G. T. R. Co. provided that the company would not be liable for loss of goods by fire; that goods stored should be at sole risk of the owners; and that the provisions should apply to and for the benefit of every carrier. Held, further, that as to the goods delivered to the companies other than the G. T. R. Co. to be transferred to the appellants, the latter company was liable under the contract for storage; that the goods were in their possession as warehousemen, and the bills of lading contained no clause, as did those of the G. T. R. Co., giving subsequent carriers the benefit of their provisions; and that as the two courts below had held that the loss was caused by the negligence of servants of the appellants, such finding should not be interfered with. Held, also, that as to goods carried on a bill of lading issued by the appellants, there was an express provision that owners should incur all risk of loss of goods in charge of the company as warehousemen and that such a condition was reasonable as the company only undertakes to warehouse goods of necessity and for convenience of shippers. Lake Erie & D. R. Ry. Co. v. Sales, xxvi., 663.

45. Shipping receipt—Carriers—Limitation of liability—Damages—Negligence—Connecting lines—Wrongful conversion—Sale of goods for non-payment of freight—Principal and agent—Varying terms of contract.—Conditions in a shipping receipt relieving the carrier from liability for loss or damages arising out of "the safe keeping and carriage of the goods" even though caused by the negligence, carelessness or want of skill of the carrier's officers, servants or workmen, without the actual fault or privity of the carrier, and restricting claims to the cash value of the goods at the port of shipment do not apply to cases where the goods have been wrongfully sold or converted by the carrier.—A shipping receipt with terms as above was for carriage by the defendants' and other connecting lines of transportation and made the freight payable on delivery of the goods at the point of destination. The defendants had previously made a special contract with the plaintiff but delivered the receipt to his agent at the point of shipment with a variation of the special terms made with him in respect to all shipments to him as consignee during the shipping season of 1899, the variation being shewn by a clause stamped across the receipt of which the plaintiff had no knowledge. One of the shipments was sold at an intermediate point on the line of transportation on account of non-payment of freight by one of the companies in control of a connecting line to which the goods had been delivered by the defendants. Held, that the plaintiff's agent at the shipping point had no authority, as such, to consent to a variation of the special contract, nor could the carrier do so by inserting the clause in the receipt without the concurrence of the plaintiff; that the sale, so made at the intermediate point, amounted to a wrongful conversion of the goods by the defendants and that they were not exempted from liability in respect thereof, at their full value, under the terms of the shipping receipt.—As the evidence shewed definitely what damages had been sustained, and there being no good reason for remitting the case back for a new trial, the Supreme Court of Canada, in reversing the judgment appealed from, ordered that the damages should be reduced to those proved in respect of the goods sold and converted. Armour, J., however, was of opinion that the judgment of Craig, J., at the trial should be restored. Wilson v. Canadian Development Co., xxxiii., 432.

54. Construction of railway—Condition precedent—Certificate of engineer—Want of diligence—Laches.—McC. entered into a contract with McG., the contractor for the construction of the North Shore Railway between Montreal and Quebec, to perform works of construction on a portion of the road, agreed "to keep open at certain times hours at his own cost and expense the line for the passage of traffic or express trains run by McG. without any charge the latter;" but there was a proviso "any time occupied on the road over above what may be required by the h hereinbefore mentioned, or any expense ca thereby shall be paid by the contractor M on a certificate to that effect signed by superintendent of the contractor."—On ac for damages caused by the interruption of work by the passing of respondent's tra. Held, affirming the judgment appealed f (14 Rev. de Leg. 422; 12 Q. L. R. 373), it was the duty of the plaintiff to get superintendent's certificate within a reasonable time, and not having taken any step get it until six years after the superintendent had left defendant's employment, the i ure to produce such certificate was suffic ground for dismissing the appellant's act *McCarron v. 55. Bonus by-law — Conditions precedent to granting aid — Railway company—Agreement with municipal corporation—Performance of conditions—Damages.]—A municipal corporation entered into an agreement with railway company by which the latter was to receive a bonus on certain conditions, one of which was that the company "should construct at or near the corner of Colborne William streets (in Toronto) a freight passenger station with all necessary accommodation, connected by switches, sidings, otherwise with said road" upon the completion of the town passing a by-law granting a necessary right of way.—Held, 1. That such condition was not complied with by erection of a station building not used, intended to be used, and for which pro officers, such as station master, ticket agent etc., were not appointed. Strong, J., dissenting.—2. Per Strong, J., that the condition only called for the construction of a building with the required accommodation and connections, and did not amount to a contract to run the trains to such station or any other use of it.—3. The words "all necessary accommodation," in the condition, required that grounds and yards sufficient for freight and passenger traffic in case the station were used should be provided.—On division of opinion, the judgment appealed from (14 Ont. App. R. 32) stood affirmed. Bickford v. Town of Chatham, xvi., 235.

56. Construction of railway — Engineer certificate — Condition precedent.]—A contract for the construction of part of a railway provided that, "The said work shall in all particulars, be made to conform to the plans, specifications and directions of the party of the second part, and of his engineer by whose classifications, measurements and calculations, the quantities and amounts of the several kinds of work performed under this contract shall be determined, and we shall have full power to reject and condemn all work or materials which, in his opinion do not conform to the spirit of this agreement, and who shall decide every question which may or can arise between the parties relative to the execution thereof, and his decision shall be conclusive and binding upon both parties hereto. The party of the second part hereby agrees, and binds himself, that upon the certificates of his engineer that work contemplated to be done under this contract has been fully completed by the party of the first part, he will pay said party of the first part for the performance of the same in full for materials and workmanship. It is further agreed by the party of the second part, that estimates shall be made during the progress of the work on or about the first of each month, and that payments shall be made by the second party upon the estimate and certificate of his engineer, to the party of the first part, on or before the 20th day of each month, for the amount and value of work done, and materials furnished during the previous month, 10% being deducted and retained by the party of the second part until the final completion of the work embraced in this contract, when all sums due the party of the first part shall be fully paid, and this contract considered cancelled."—Upon completion of the contract the engineer made a final estimate fixing the value of the work done by the sub-contractor at $70,142.65, and after deducting the money paid to and received by the sub-contractor, and a clerical error appearing on the face of the certificate, a sum of $4,187.32 remained due to the sub-contractor.—In an action by the sub-contractor to recover $36,312.12, the Superior Court, (affirmed by the Queen's Bench), granted the plaintiff $4,187.32 with interest and costs. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the estimate as given by the engineer was substantially such a certificate as the contract contemplated, but if not the plaintiff must fail as a final certificate of the engineer was a condition precedent to his right to recover. Guilbault v. McGreevy, xviii., 609.

57. Quebec harbour works — Engineer's certificate—Errors in calculation—Finality—Bulk sum contract — Extras—Deductions—Engineer's powers — Interest.—In a bulk sum contract for various works and materials executed, performed and furnished on the Quebec harbour works, the contractors were allowed by the final certificate of the engineers a balance of $52,011. The contract contained the ordinary powers given in such contracts to the engineers to determine all points in dispute by their final certificate. The work was completed and accepted by the commissioners on the 11th October, 1882; but the certificate was only granted on 4th February, 1886. In an action by the contractors for $181,241 for alleged balance of contract price and extra work; Held, 1. That the certificate of the engineers was binding on the parties and could not be set aside as regards any matter coming within the jurisdiction of the engineers, but that the engineers had no right to deduct any sum from the bulk sum contract price on account of an alleged error in the calculation of the quantities of dredging to be done stated in the specifications and the quantities actually done, and therefore the certificate in this case should be corrected in that respect.—2. That interest should not be computed from an earlier date than from the date of the final certificate fixing the amount due to the contractors under the contract, viz., 4th February, 1886.—Strong and Gwynne, JJ., were of opinion that the certificate could have been reformed as regards an item for the removal of sand erroneously paid for to other contractors by the commissioners and charged to the plaintiffs. Peters v. Quebec Harbour Commissioners, xix., 685.

58. Condition precedent — Certificate of engineer—Statement of claim — Pleading—31 Vict. c. 13, s. 18 (D.)—Leave to amend.—The petition alleged that suppliants were contractors for the building of section No. 4, Intercolonial Railway, and duly entered upon and completed their contract under the Act intitled "An Act respecting the construction of the Intercolonial Railway," within the time, and according to its terms, covenants and conditions. That in following the directions and instructions of the commissioners and engineers employed and placed in charge of the works, which directions and instructions given from time to time, as provided by the contract, the suppliants were bound to follow, and did follow, they performed a large amount of extra work not comprised in the contract, nor in the data furnished to them at the time the contract was entered into, nor in the schedules and specifications referred to in the contract and connected therewith, and not intended to be covered by the lump sum, which formed the consideration money of the contract. That they were put to great expense by delays in preparations by the commissioners and engineers, and to great loss and damage by reason of changes and alterations necessitated by the unskilful manner in which the works had been laid out by the engineers. That the suppliants were deceived and misled in making their estimates by insufficient and erroneous data in the schedule of works and quantities prepared and published by the chief engineer. That it had not been the usage, nor was it the intention of the parties, to be held to the strict letter of the contract when the schedule gave erroneous or insufficient information, entailing extra work which could be performed only with ruinous consequences, but they were entitled to be paid for such extra work. They set out at length the various kinds of extra work done and changes made, and prayed for a settlement of accounts, that they might be allowed their claim for extra work done, for the materials provided by them, for damages resulting from defects of plans, specifications and surveys, from changes made in location, grade, etc., from the negligence and want of skill of the government engineers, and for breach of the contract in being prevented from proceeding with the work, and that they might be reimbursed sums advanced during the progress of the work with interest. — The Attorney-General demurred on grounds: That it did not appear by the petition that the chief engineer of the Intercolonial Railway had certified that the work for or on account of which the suppliants claimed had been duly executed, or that the suppliants were entitled to be paid therefor or for any part thereof, nor that such certificate had been approved of by the commissioners of said railway as required by s. 18 of the Act respecting the construction of the Intercolonial Railway: that the Crown was not responsible for the damages and injuries mentioned; that it did not appear by the terms of the contract that the commissioners or their engineers were under any obligation to lay out work or furnish specifications therefor; that it appeared by the petition that the extra work claimed for was done in pursuance of directions given by the engineers as provided by the contract, and it was not alleged any extra payment was to be made therefor; that it was immaterial that the schedules of works were defective or erroneous, because such schedules were not alleged to have been warranted as accurate, but only of probable quantities, and the demurrer denied liability for any of the other matters mentioned in the petition on the ground that the contract provided for them, or that the work, if done, was not in any way warranted by the Crown, or had been done under the directions of the engineers acting within the contract.—In the Exchequer Court, Henry, J., overruled the demurrer with costs. Held, that the applicant's petition was too indefinite in form, and was insufficient in not setting out the contract, and a compliance with the requirements of s. 18 of 31 Vict. c. 13 (D.), or satisfactory ground of non-compliance with the condition precedent required by that section.—Appeal allowed. Judgment of the Exchequer Court reversed, with leave to suppliant (the Crown assenting) to amend his petition, on payment of costs of appeal and demurrer, by setting out the contract and such averments as he might be advised. The Queen v. Smith, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 634.

59. Condition precedent—Direction to jury—Implied promise—Part performance—Benefit from works done.—In April, 1872, M. gave W. an order by letter for mill machinery, to be put in complete operation to M.'s satisfaction in a building to be provided by him. All the machinery, with the exception of a slab saw, was supplied, and the mill was put in operation in the summer of 1872. M. found fault with the machinery, and after alterations and repairs made by W. in 1873, M. put additional machinery into the mill and worked it until 1875, when it was destroyed by fire. M. had insured the whole machinery, including that supplied by W. for $7,700, the additional machinery put in by himself being valued at $2,500, and received the benefit of the insurance to the full amount of the loss. The contract price was $4,250, with freight and expenses, making in all $4,790. Some payments were made, but M. refusing to pay a balance of $1,900, W. brought an action on assumption, adding the common counts.—At the close of plaintiffs' case a nonsuit was moved for on the ground that it was a condition precedent to M.'s liability that the work should be done to his satisfaction, and plaintiffs' evidence shewed that M. never was satisfied, but was always complaining. This being overruled, M. undertook to shew that the machinery was not as represented, but defective and in many parts had to be repaired, and that he had already paid what it was worth. Evidence was given on this issue, and W. endeavoured to shew that any defect in the working of the mill was attributable to the shifting of the foundation erected by M., and to the want of skill of the men employed by him. The trial judge left it to the jury to say whether the machinery was reasonably fit and proper for the purpose for which it was intended, and if not, directed them that M. was only bound to pay as much as it was worth. The jury returned a verdict for W. for $1,850, having deducted $200 for defects and $80 for machinery not supplied.—A rule nisi to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial was made absolute by the Supreme Court (N. B.) (2 Pugs. & Bur. 11), on the ground that the learned judge should have directed the jury that "the length of time that the defendant used the machinery, the complaints he made about it from time to time, and all the circumstances connected with it, should have been left to the jury, with a direction for them to consider whether from the defendant's dealings with it they could infer a new implied contract on his part to keep the machinery and pay what it was worth, though less than the contract price." Held, that in suing upon this contract it was not necessary for the plaintiffs to have averred, as a condition precedent to their right to recover, that the work, besides having been skilfully, properly, sufficiently and in a workmanlike manner executed, was completed to the satisfaction of the defendant.—In cases in which something has been done under a special contract, but not in strict accordance with the terms of the contract, although the party cannot recover the remuneration stipulated for in the contract because he has not done that which was to be the consideration of it, still, if the other party has derived any benefit from the work done, as it would be unjust to allow him to retain that without paying for it, the law implies a promise upon his part to pay such remuneration as the benefit conferred upon him is reasonably worth. The jury in this case having decided upon the evidence that the defendant had derived a greater benefit from the work done than was compensated by the amount he had already paid, the plaintiffs were entitled to retain the benefit of the verdict, and the rule granting a new trial should be discharged with costs. Waterou v. Morrow, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 138.

60. Condition—Final certificate of engineer—Amended estimate.—McG. in the written agreement for construction of several bridge reserved the option of altering the works and terminating the contract at any time upon notice and payment for work and material up to the time of notice "on production of the certificate of the engineer of the said McG. establishing amount due." McG. acted on his option and on the date of his notice his engineer certified $14,872.13 to be due including the cost of two turn-tables, and after deducting a payment on account of a note for $8,000. The engineer made another estimate, apparently in amendment on same date, establishing the amount at $22,131.92 without reference to the amount of the note. Defendant contended the estimates did not establish correctly either the amount of work done or value of materials furnished, but were merely progress estimates and that plaintiffs had been fully paid all they were entitled to. Plaintiffs recovered $15,042.44, the trial judge deducting the cost of turn-tables, and on appeal the Queen's Bench made a further reduction of $2,006.03 for which no estimate was given.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from that the certificate in question was delivered as a final estimate to shew the correct debt due on materials prepared for the works on which work was stopped by defendant. McGreevy v. Boomer, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 139.

61. Petition of right—46 Vict. c. 27 (Q.)—Final certificate of engineer—Extras—Practice as to plea in bar not set up.—A contract entered into between Her Majesty the Queen in right of the Province of Quebec, and S. X. Cimon for the construction of three departmental buildings at Quebec, contained the usual clauses that the balance of the contract price was not payable until a final certificate by the engineer in charge was delivered, shewing the total amount of work done, and materials furnished, and the cost of extras and the reduction in the contract price upon any alterations. There was a clause providing for the final decision by the Commissioner of Public Works, in matters in dispute upon the taking over or settling for the works. The Commissioner of Public Works, after hearing the parties, gave his decision that nothing was due to the contractors, and the engineer in charge, by his final certificate, declared that a balance of $31.36 was due upon the contract price, and $42.84 on extras. The suppliants by their petition of right claimed inter alia $70,000 due on extras. The Crown pleaded general denial and payment. The Superior Court granted the suppliants $74.20, the amount declared to be due under the final certificate of the engineer. On appeal the Queen's Bench increased the amount to $13,198.77, with interest and costs.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, and restoring the judgment of the Superior Court, that the suppliants were bound by the final certificate given by the engineer under the terms of the contract.—Per Fournier and Taschereau, JJ., dissenting, that as the final certificate had not been set up in the pleadings as a bar to the action, and there was an admission of record by the Crown that the contractor was entitled to 20 per cent. commission on extras ordered and received, the evidence fully justified the finding of the Court of Queen's Bench that the commission of 20 per cent. was still due and unpaid on $65,837.09 of said extra work. The Queen v. Cimon, xxiii., 62.

62. Electric plant—Reference to experts by court—Adoption of report by two courts—Appeal on question of fact—Arbitration clause in contract—Right of action.—The Royal Electric Company having sued the City of Three Rivers for the contract price of the installation of a complete electric plant, which, under the terms of the contract, was to be put in operation for at least six weeks before payment of the price could be claimed, the court referred the case to experts on the question whether the contract had been substantially fulfilled, and they found that owing to certain defects the contract had not been satisfactorily completed. The Superior Court adopted the finding of fact of the experts, and dismissed the action. The Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada (appeal side), on an appeal affirmed the judgment of the Superior Court.—On an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada: Held, affirming the judgments of the courts below, that it being found that the appellants had not fulfilled their contracts within the time specified, they could not recover.—Held, also, that when a contract provides that no payment shall be due until the work has been satisfactorily completed a claim for extras, made under the contract, will not be exigible prior to the completion of the main contract.—Quere. Whether a right of action exists although a contract contains a clause that all matters in dispute between the parties shall be referred to arbitration. Quebec Street Railway Company v. City of Quebec (18 Q. L. R. 205) referred to. Royal Electric Co. v. City of Three Rivers, xxiii., 289.

63. Construction of contract—Inconsistent conditions—Dismissal of contractor—Architect's powers—Arbitrator—Disqualification—Probable bias—Rejection of evidence—Judge's discretion as to order of evidence.—A contract for the construction of a public work contained the following clause: "In case the works are not carried on with such expedition and with such materials and workmanship as the architect or clerk of the works may deem proper the architect shall be at liberty to give the contractors ten days' notice in writing to supply such additional force or material as in the opinion of the said architect is necessary, and if the contractors fail to supply the same it shall then be lawful for the said architect to dismiss the said contractors and to employ other persons to finish the work." The contract also provided that "the general conditions are made part of this contract (except so far as inconsistent herewith), in which case the terms of this contract shall govern." The first clause in the "general conditions" was as follows: In case the works from the want of sufficient or proper workmen or materials are not proceeding with all the necessary despatch, then the architect may give ten days' notice to do what is necessary, and upon the contractor's failure to do so, the architect shall have the power at his discretion (with the consent in writing of the court house committee, or commission as the case may be), without process or suit at law, to take the work or any part thereof mentioned in such notice out of the hands of the contractors. Held, Sedgewick and Girouard, JJ., dissenting, that this last clause was inconsistent with the above clause of the contract, and that the latter must govern. The architect therefore had power to dismiss the contractor without the consent in writing of the committee.—At the trial, the plaintiff tendered evidence to shew that the architect had acted maliciously in the rejection of materials, but the trial judge required proof to be first adduced tending to shew that the materials had been wrongfully rejected, reserving until that fact should be established the consideration of the question whether malice was necessary to be proved, and if necessary what evidence would be sufficient to establish it. Upon this ruling plaintiff declined to offer any further evidence, and thereupon judgment was entered for the defendants.—Held, that this ruling did not constitute a rejection, but was merely a direction as to the marshalling of evidence within the discretion of the trial judge. Neelon v. City of Toronto, xxv., 579.

64. Bailees—Common carriers—Express company—Receipt for money parcel—Conditions precedent—Formal notice of claim—Pleading—Money had and received—Special pleas.—Where an express company gave a receipt for money to be forwarded with the condition endorsed that the company should not be liable for any claim in respect of the package, unless within sixty days of loss or damage a claim should be made by written statement, with a copy of the contract annexed.—Held, that the consignor was obliged to comply strictly with these terms as a condition precedent to recovery against the express company for failure to deliver the parcel to the consignee. Richardson v. Canada West Farmers' Ins. Co. (16 U. C. C. P. 430) distinguished.—In an action to recover the value of the parcel, on the common count for money had and received, the plea of "never indebted," put in issue all material facts necessary to establish the plaintiff's right of action. Judgment appealed from (10 Man. L. R. 595) reversed. Northern Pacific Express Co. v. Martin et al., xxvi., 135.

65. Contract—Subsequent deed—Inconsistent provisions.—C., by agreement of 6th April, 1891, agreed to sell to the Erie County

Gas Co., all his gas grants, leases, and franchises, the company agreeing, among other things, to "reserve gas enough to supply the plant now operated or to be operated by them on said property." On 20th April, a deed was executed and delivered to the company transferring all the leases and property specified in said agreement, but containing no reservation in favour of C. such as was contained therein. The Erie Company, in 1894, assigned the property transferred by said deed to the Provincial Natural Gas and Fuel Co., who immediately cut off from the works of C. the supply of gas, and an action was brought to prevent such interference.—Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, that as the contract between the parties was embodied in the deed subsequently executed the rights of the parties were to be determined by the latter instrument, and as it contained no reservation in favour of C. his action could not be maintained. Carroll et al. v. Provincial Natural Gas and Fuel Co., xxvi, 181.

66. Resolutive condition—Conditional sale—Arts. 379, 2017, 2083, 2085, 2089 C. C.—Hypothecary creditor—Unpaid vendor—Property real and personal—Immovables by destination—Movables incorporated with the freehold—Severance from reality.—An action was brought by L. to revendicate an engine and two boilers under a resolutive condition (condition résolutoire) contained in a written agreement providing that, until fully paid for, they should remain the property of L., and that all payments on account of the price should be considered as rent for their use, and further that, upon default, L. should have the right to resume possession and remove the machinery. The machinery in question had previously been imbedded in foundations in a sawmill which had been sold separately to the defendants, and at the time of the agreement the boilers were still attached to the building, but the engine had been taken out and was lying in the mill-yard, outside of the building. While in this condition the defendants hypothecated the mill property to B., and the hypothecs were duly registered. The engine was subsequently replaced in the building and used for some time in connection with the boilers for the purpose of running the mill. The agreement respecting the engine and boilers was not registered. B. intervened in the action of revendication and claimed that the machinery formed part of the freehold and was subject to his hypothecs upon the lands.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (Q. R. 4 Q. B. 354), that the agreement between L. and the defendants could not be considered a lease, but was rather a sale subject to a resolutive condition with a clause of forfeiture as regards the payments made on account. But whether the agreement was a lease or a sale on condition, L. having, as respects the boilers and their accessories, consented to their incorporation with the immovable, and dealt with them while so incorporated, they became immovables by destination within the terms of art. 379 of the Civil Code, and subject to the duly registered hypothecs of the respondent. Wallbridge v. Farwell (18 Can. S. C. R. 1), followed. Lainé et al. v. Béland, xxvi, 419.

67. Insurance, life—Conditions and warranties—Indorsements on policy—Inaccurate statements—Misrepresentations—Latent disease—Material facts—Cancellation of policy—Return of premium—Statute, construction of—55 Vict. c. 39, s. 33 (Ont.)]—The provision of s.-s. 2 of s. 33 of "The Insurance Corporations Act, 1892," (Ont.), limiting conditions and warranties indorsed on policy providing for the avoidance of the contract by reason of untrue statements in the applications, to cases where such statements are material to the contract, do not require the materiality of the statements to appear by indorsements, but the contract will be avoided only when such statements may subsequently be judicially found to be material, as provided by s.-s. 3.—Misrepresentations upon an application for life insurance so found to be material will avoid the policy notwithstanding that they may have been made in good faith and in the conscientious belief that they were true. Venner v. Sun Life Ins. Co. (17 Can. S. C. R. 364) followed. Jordan v. Province of the Protestant Institution, xxviii, 554.

68. Fire insurance—Construction of contract—"Until"—Condition precedent—Waiver—Estoppel—Authority of agent.—Certain conditions of a policy of fire insurance required proofs, etc., within fourteen days after the loss, and provided that no claim should be payable for a specified time after the loss should have been ascertained as proved in accordance with this condition. There were two subsequent clauses providing respectively that until such proofs were produced, no money should be payable by the insurer and for forfeiture of all rights of the insured if the claim should not, for the space of three months after the occurrence of the fire, be in all respects verified in the manner aforesaid. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (31 N. S. Rep. 337), that the condition as to the production of proofs within fourteen days was a condition precedent to the liability of the insurer; that the force of the word "until" in the subsequent clause could not give to the omission to produce such proofs, within the time specified, the effect of postponing recovery merely until after their production; and that the clause to forfeiture after three months did not apply to the conditions specially required to be fulfilled within any lesser period. Commerce Union Assur. Co. v. Margeson, xxix, 601.

69. Construction of railway—Certificate engineer—Condition precedent.—Where a contract for construction of a railway provided that the work was to be done to the satisfaction of the chief engineer of a railway company not a party to such a contract, it was to be the sole and final arbiter of all disputes between the parties, the contractor was not bound by such condition when the person named as arbiter proved to be, in fact, the engineer of the other party to the contract. Judgment appealed from (26 Ont. App. 133) affirmed. Dominion Construction Co. v. Good & Co., xxx, 114.

70. Condition as to inspection—Sale of lumber.—A contract for the sale of lumber was made wholly by correspondence, and the letter which completed the bargain contained the following provision: "The inspection of this lumber to be made after the same is landed here" (at Windsor) "by a competent inspector to be agreed upon between buyer and seller and his inspection to be final." Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, that it was not essential for the parties to agree upon an inspector before the inspection was begun; and a party chosen by buyer having inspected the lumber and before his work was completed the seller having agreed to accept him as inspector the contract was satisfied and the inspection final and binding on the parties. Thomson v. Matheson, xxx., 357.

71. Municipal work—Condition as to subletting—Consent of council.—Where a contract with a municipal corporation provides that it shall not be sub-let without the consent of the corporation it is incumbent on the contractor to obtain such consent before subletting, and if he fails to do so he cannot maintain an action against a proposed sub-contractor for not carrying on the portion of the work he agreed to do. — In an action against the sub-contractor the latter pleaded the want of assent by the council whereupon the plaintiff replied that the assent was withheld at the wrongful request and instigation of the defendant and in order wrongfully to benefit said defendant and enable him, if possible, to repudiate and abandon the contract. Issue was joined on this replication. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (27 Ont. App. R. 135.), that the only issue raised by the pleadings was whether or not the defendant had wrongfully caused the consent to be withheld and that the plaintiff had failed to prove his case on that issue. Ryan v. Willoughby, xxxi., 33.

72. Insurance against fire — Condition in policy—Interest of insured — Mortgage as owner—Further insurance.—By a condition in a policy of insurance against fire the policy was to become void "if the assured is not the sole and unconditional owner of the property . . . or if the interest of the assured in the property whether as owner, trustee . . . mortgagee, lessee, or otherwise is not truly stated." Held, that a mortgagor was sole and unconditional owner within the terms of said condition.—By another condition the policy would be avoided if the assured should have or obtain other insurance, whether valid or not, on the property. The assured applied for other insurance but before being notified of the acceptance of his application the premises were destroyed by fire. Held, that there was no breach of said condition. Commercial Union Assur. Co. v. Temple (29 Can. S. C. R. 206) followed. Western Assur. Co. v. Temple, xxxi., 373. Judgment appealed from (35 N.B. Rep. 77) affirmed.

5. CONSIDERATION.

83. Implied agreement—Failure of consideration — Impossibility of performance.—When one contracts to do work for another, the preparation for which involves outlay and expense, a corresponding agreement, in the absence of any express provision, will be implied on the part of the person with whom he contracts to furnish the work; but no such implication will be made where, from circumstances known to, and in the contemplation of, both parties at the date of the agreement to do the work it was, and continued to be beyond, the power of the party to carry out such implied agreement. Henry, J., dissenting. Judgment appealed from (14 Ont. App. R. 339) affirmed. McKenna v. McNamee, xv., 311.

84. Condition precedent — Certificate of engineer—Progress estimate—Final estimate—Evidence.—B. was contractor to build railway bridges for M. who reserved the right to substitute iron for the wooden superstructures of any of them, and by notice to B. to terminate the contract at any time, paying plaintiffs for work done and materials provided up to the time of giving notice, "on production of the certificate of the engineer of the said" defendant "establishing amount due." M. acted on this provision with respect to three bridges, by notice dated 2nd October, 1875, and his engineer reported and certified under same date $14,872.13 to be due, including $4,100 for iron-work for two turn-tables purchased by B. for the work, and deducting payment on account by a note for $8,000. The engineer made another estimate, apparently in amendment of his previous one, dated the same day, establishing the amount at $22,131.93, without reference to the note for $8,000.—M. contended that the estimates of the engineer did not establish correctly either the amount of work done or value of materials, but were merely progress estimates to enable work to progress generally under the contract, until a final examination and acceptance of the works, and that, as a matter of fact, the plaintiffs had been fully paid all they were entitled to. The Superior Court judgment awarding B. $15,042.44, deducting the turn-tables, was affirmed by the Queen's Bench with the exception of a further deduction of $2,006.03 for which there appeared to have been no estimate given. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the proper conclusion from the evidence was, that the certificate in question was delivered to B. as a final estimate, intending to represent as correct the debt of M. to B. for amount due on materials prepared for the bridges, upon which work was stopped by defendant. McGreevy v. Boomer, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 139.

85. Construction of agreement—Right of way—Removal of timber—Necessary route.—The plaintiff was the owner of a farm, of about a mile in breadth and five-sixths of a mile in length. About two-thirds of the farm was heavily wooded, and the rest of it was cleared and cultivated. The defendant became the purchaser of the trees and timber upon the land under an agreement which provided, among other things, that the purchaser should have "full liberty to enter into and upon the said lands for the purpose of removing the trees and timber, at such times and in such manner as he may think proper," but reserved to the plaintiff the full enjoyment of the land "save and in so far as may be necessary for the cutting and removing of the trees and timber." To have removed the timber through the wooded land at the time it was removed, would have involved an expenditure which would have possibly amounted to a sacrifice of the greater portion of the timber. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (19 Ont. App. R. 176), that the defendants had a right to remove the timber by the most direct and available route, provided they acted in good faith and not unreasonably, and the reservation in favour of the plaintiff did not minimize or modify the defendant's right, under the general grant of the trees, to remove the trees across the cleared land. Gwynne, J., dissenting. Stephens v. Gordon, xxii, 61.

86. Construction of contract—Street railway—Permanent pavements—Arbitration and award.—The Toronto St. Ry. Co. was incorporated in 1861, and its franchise was to last 30 years, at the expiration of which period the city could assume the ownership of the railway and property of the company on payment of the value thereof, to be determined by arbitration. The company was to keep the roadway between the rails, and for 18 inches outside each rail paved and macadamized and in good repair, using the same material as that on the remainder of the street, but if a permanent pavement should be adopted by the corporation the company was not bound to construct a like pavement between the rails, etc., but was only to pay the cost price of the same, not to exceed a specified sum per yard. The city laid upon certain streets traversed by the company's railway permanent pavements of cedar blocks, and issued debentures for the whole cost of such works. A by-law was then passed, charging the company with its portion of such cost in the manner and for the period that adjacent owners were assessed, under the Municipal Act for local improvements. The company paid the several rates assessed up to the year 1886, but refused to pay for subsequent years, on the ground that the cedar block pavement had proved to be by no means permanent, but defective and wholly insufficient for streets upon which the railway was operated. An action having been brought by the city for these rates, it was held that the company was only liable to pay for permanent roadways, and a reference was ordered to determine, among other things, whether the pavements laid by the city were permanent. This reference was not proceeded with, but an agreement was entered into which all matters in dispute to the end of the year 1888 were settled, and thereafter the company was to pay a specific sum annua per mile in lieu of all claims on account of debentures maturing after that date, and "in lieu of the company's liability for construction, renewal, maintenance, and repair in respect of all the portions of streets occupied by the company's track so long as the franchise of the company to use the said street now extends." The agreement provided that it was not to affect the rights of either party in respect to the arbitration to be had if the city took over the railway, nor any matter not specifically dealt with therein, and it was not to have any operation "beyond the period over which the aforesaid franchise now extends." This agreement was ratified by an Act of the Legislature passed in 1890, which also provided for the holding of the said arbitration which having been entered upon, the city claimed to be paid the rates imposed upon the company for construction of permanent pavements for which debentures had been issued payable after the termination of the franchise. The arbitrators having refused to allow this claim, an action was brought by the city to recover the said amount.—Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, that the claim of the city could not be allowed; that the said agreement discharged the company from all liability in respect to construction, renewal, maintenance and repair of the said streets; and that the clause providing that the agreement should not affect the rights of the parties in respect to the arbitration, etc., must be considered to have been inserted ex majori cautela and could not do away with the express contract to relieve the company from liability.—Held further, that by an Act passed in 1877, a by-law made in pursuance thereof, the company was only assessable as for local improvements, which, by the Municipal Act, constitute a lien upon the property assessed, but not a personal liability upon the owners or occupiers after they have ceased to be such; therefore after the termination of the franchise the company would not be liable for these rates. City of Toronto v. Toronto Street Ry. Co. xxi, 198.

87. Agreement respecting lands — Boundaries — Referee's decision — Boundary Arbitrations — Arts. 941-945 and 1341 et seq. C. C. P.—The owners of contiguous farms executed a deed for the purpose of settling the boundary line between their lands, there naming a third person to ascertain and mark the true division line upon the ground, and agreeing further to abide by his decision, and to accept the line which he might establish as correct. On the conclusion of the referee's operations one of the parties refused to accept or act upon his decision, and action was brought by the other party to have the line so established declared to be the true boundary, and to revalidate the strip of land lying upon his side of it.—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench that the agreement thus entered into was a contract binding upon the parties to be cuted between them according to the terms therein expressed and was not subject to the formalities prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure relating to arbitrations. McGoey v. Leamy, xxviii., 545.

6. CROWN CONTRACTS—PUBLIC WORKS.

89. Public works — Claim for extras — Certificate of engineer—Condition precedent—31 Vict. c. 12 (D.)—Authority to bind the Crown.—The suppliant contracted with the Minister of Public Works, to construct, finish, and complete, for $78,000, a deep sea wharf at Richmond, N. S., agreeably to the plans and specifications, and under directions of the engineer in charge. By the seventh clause of contract no extra work could be performed, unless "ordered in writing by the engineer in charge before the execution of the work." By letter of 26th August, 1873, the Minister authorized suppliant to erect a coal floor, for the additional sum of $18,400, and further extra work amounting to $2,781, was performed under another letter from the department. The work was completed, and on the final certificate of the engineer in charge $9,681, as the balance due, was paid to suppliant, who gave the following receipt, dated 30th April, 1875: "Received from the Intercolonial Railway, in full, for all amounts against the Government for works under contract as follows: 'Richmond deep water wharf, works for storage of coals, works for bracing wharf, rebuilding two stone cribs the sum of $9,681.'" Suppliant sued for extra work alleged not to be covered by this payment, and for damages caused by deficiency in and irregularity of payments.—Held, affirming judgment of the Exchequer Court (4 Can. S. C. R. 543) that all work performed by the suppliant for the Government was either contract work within the plans or specifications, or extra work within the meaning of the seventh clause of the contract; that he was paid in full the contract price, and also the price of all extra work for which he could produce written authority, and that the written authority of the engineer and the estimate of the value of the work are conditions precedent to the right of the suppliant to recover payment for any other extra work. Henry, J., dissenting.—Per Ritchie, C.J., that neither the engineer, nor the clerk of the works, nor any subordinate officer in charge of any of the works of the Dominion of Canada has any power or authority express or implied, under the law to bind the Crown to any contract or expenditure not specially authorized by the express terms of the contract duly entered into between the Crown and the contractor according to law, and then only in the specific manner provided for by the express terms of the contract. O'Brien v. The Queen, iv., 529.

90. Intercolonial Railway — 31 Vict. c. 13, s. 18—Certificate of chief engineer—Condition precedent—Extras—Tort against the Crown—Misrepresentation—Fraudulent misconduct of Crown servants—Forfeiture — Liquidated damages — Time limit.—J. & S. contracted with the Intercolonial Railway Commissioners to construct and complete section No. 7 of the Intercolonial Railway for a bulk sum of $557,750. During the progress of the work changes were made. The works were sufficiently completed to allow of rails being laid, and the line opened for traffic on the 11th November, 1870. The total amount paid on the 10th February, 1873, was $557,750, the amount of the contract. The contractors claimed $116,463.83 for extra work, etc., beyond what was included in their contract. The commissioners, on a report from the chief engineer, recommended that $31,091.85 (less items of $8,300 and $10,354.24) be paid upon full discharge of all claims of every kind or description under the contract. This balance was tendered to suppliants and refused. The petition of right claimed $124,663.33 from the Crown for extras outside of and beyond the written contract, alleging that by orders of the chief engineer additional work and alterations were required, but these orders were carried out only on the understanding that such additional work and alterations should be paid for extra; and further, that they were put to large expense and compelled to do much extra work which they were entitled to be paid for, in consequence of misrepresentations in plans and bills of works exhibited at the time of letting.—On the profile plan it was stated that best information in possession of chief engineer as to probable quantities of the several kinds of work would be found in schedules, "but contractors must understand that these quantities are not guaranteed;" and in the bill of works an abstract of all information in possession of the commissioners and chief engineer with regard to the quantities, it was stated, "the quantities herein given as ascertained from the best data obtained are, as far as known, approximately accurate, but at the same time they are not warranted as accurate, and no claim of any kind will be allowed, though they may prove to be inaccurate."—The contract provided that the price of $557,750 should be held to be full compensation for all works embraced in, or contemplated by the contract, or which might be required in virtue of any of its provisions, or by law, and that the contractors should not, upon any pretext whatever, be entitled, by reason of any change, alteration or addition made in or to such works, or plans and specification or by reason of the exercise of any of the powers vested in the Governor-in-Council by the "Act respecting the construction of the Intercolonial Railway," or in the commissioners or engineer, by the contract or by law, to claim or demand any further or additional sum for extra work, or as damages or otherwise, the contractors thereby expressly waiving and abandoning any such claim or pretension except as provided in the 4th section of the contract, relating to alterations in the grade or line of location: and that the contract and specification should be in all respects subject to the provisions of the said Act (31 Vict. c. 13), and also, in so far as they might be applicable, to the provisions of "The Railway Act of 1868."—The Act, 31 Vict. c. 13, s. 91 enacts that no money shall be paid to any contractor until the chief engineer shall have certified that the work, for or on account of which the same shall be claimed, has been duly executed, nor until such certificate shall have been approved of by the commissioners. No certificate was given by the chief engineer of the execution of the work.—Held, by the Exchequer Court of Canada, Ritchie, J., that as the contract required that any work done on the road must be certified to by the chief engineer, until he so certified and such certificate was approved of by the commissioners, the contractors were not entitled to be paid anything; that if the work in question was extra work, the contractors had by the contract waived all claim for payment for any such work; that if such extra work was of a character so peculiar and unexpected as to be considered dehors the contract, then there was no such contract with the commissioners as would give the contractors any legal claim against the Crown; the commissioners alone being able to bind the Crown, and they only as authorized by statute; that there was no guarantee, express or implied, as to the quantities, nor any misrepresentations respecting them; but, even if there had been, a petition of right will not lie against the Crown for tort, or for a claim based on an alleged fraud, imputing to the Crown fraudulent misconduct of its servants.—In the contract it was also provided that if the contractors failed to perform the works within the time agreed upon (1st July, 1871), the contractors would forfeit all money then due and owing to them under the terms of the contract and also the further sum of $2,000 per week for all the time during which said works remained incomplete after that date, by way of liquidated damages for such default. The contract was not completed till the end of August, 1872. Held, that if the Crown insisted on a decree for the penalties, time being declared the essence of the contract, the damages attached, and the Crown was entitled to $2,000 per week from the 1st July, 1871, till the end of August, 1872, for liquidated damages. Jones v. The Queen, vii., 570.

91. Liability of the Crown — Quantum meruit — Petition of right — Public work — Executory contract—31 Vict. c. 12, ss. 7, 15, 20 — Unauthorized expenditure — Appropriations.]—W., a sculptor, was employed by the Dominion Government to prepare plans, models, specifications and designs, for the laying out, improvement and establishment of the Parliament Square at Ottawa; he did so, and superintended the work and construction of improvements for six months. He claimed $50,000 for the value of his work.—31 Vict. c. 12, ss. 7 and 15 provide certain requisites for executory contracts in writing as to signing, etc., to be binding; and before any expenditure is incurred for previous sanction of Parliament, except for such repairs and alterations. Section 20 requires tenders for all works except in emergency, or where the work could be more expeditiously and economically executed by the officers and servants of the department.—Held, by the Exchequer Court of Canada, Richards, C.J.: That the Crown in this Dominion cannot be held responsible under a petition of right on an executory contract entered into by the Department of Public Works for the performance of certain works placed by law under the control of the department, when the agreement therefor was not made in conformity with 31 Vict. c. 12, s. 7; that under s. 15 of said Act, if Parliament has not sanctioned the expenditure, a petition of right will not lie for work done for and at the request of the Department of Public Works, unless it be for work done in connection with repairs and alterations which the necessities of the public service demanded; and in this case, if Parliament has made appropriations for the works and so sanctioned the expenditure, and if the work done was of the kind that might properly be executed by the officers and servants of the department under s. 20, then no written contract would be necessary to bind the Crown, and suppliant should recover for work so done. Wood v. The Queen, vii., 634.

92. Tender — Acceptance — Breach — Liability of Crown — Parliamentary or departmental printing — Form of contract.]—The clerk of the joint committee on printing, advertised for tenders for the printing, furnishing the printing papers and the binding required for the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, and suppliants' tender was accepted by adoption of the committee's report, and a contract was executed between the suppliants and the clerk, which was contended to be acceptance, constituting a contract between suppliants and Her Majesty, entitling them to do the whole of the printing required for the Parliament of Canada, and, not having been given the same, and they claimed compensation.—Held, reversing the Exchequer Court, that the Parliamentary printing was a matter connected with the internal economy of the Senate and House of Commons over which the Executive Government had no control; and that the Crown was no party to the contract with the suppliants and could not be held responsible for a breach of it.—32 & 33 Vict. c. 7, provides that printing, binding and other like work for the departments of the Government shall be done under contracts to be entered into under authority of the Governor-in-Council after advertisement for tenders. The Under Secretary of State advertised for tenders for the printing "required by the several departments of the Government." The suppliants tendered with specifications annexed, supplied by the Government, containing provisions as to performing the work and giving security. The tenders were accepted by the Governor-in-Council, and an indenture executed between the suppliants and Her Majesty, by which they agreed to perform "all jobs or lots of printing for the several departments of the Government of Canada, of every description coming within the denomination of departmental printing, and all the work and services connected therewith and appertaining thereto, as set forth in the specification annexed, in such numbers and quantities as may be specified in requisitions made from time to time by said departments." Part of the departmental printing having been given to others, the suppliants claimed compensation, contending that they were entitled to the whole of said printing.—Held, affirming the Exchequer Court (1 Ex. C. R. 363). Taschereau and Gwynne, J.J., dissenting, that having regard to the whole scope and nature of the transaction, the statute, the advertisement, the tender, the acceptance, and the contract, there was a clear intention shewn that the contractors should have all the printing that should be required by the several departments of the Government, and that the contract was not a unilateral contract but a binding mutual agreement. The Queen v. MacLean, viii., 210.

93. Breach — Public work — Transfer — Assent by Crown — Evidence — Cancellation — Right to recover.]—H. C. & F. contracted with Her Majesty for a public work, and after commencement of the work, associated partners with them in the work, amongst others S. & R. (respondents), and on 30th June, 1879, the whole contract was assigned to S. & R. On 25th July, 1879, the contract was cancelled by order-in-council, on the ground that satisfactory progress had not been made. On 5th August, 1879, S. & R. notified the minister of the transfer made to them. On 9th August, the order-in-council was sent to H. C. & F. On 14th August an order-in-council was passed stating that as the Government had never assented to the transfer and assignment of the contract to S. & R., the contractors should be notified that the contract was taken out of their hands and annulled. In consequence S. & R. ceased work, and with the consent of the minister realized their plant and presented a claim for damages, and finally H. C. & F. and S. & R. filed a petition of right claiming damages for breach of contract.—The defence set up the 17th clause of the contract which provided against assignment of the contract and, in case of assignment without consent, enabled the works to be taken out of the contractor's hands and means employed to complete them; and that in such case the contractor should have no claim for any further payment in respect of the works performed, but remained liable for loss by reason of non-completion. In the Exchequer Court, Henry, J., found that the minister knew that S. & R. were partners; that he was satisfied to have them connected with the works; that the department knew S. & R. were carrying on the works, and that S. & R. had been informed by the deputy minister that all that was necessary to be officially recognized as contractors was to send a letter to the Government from H. C. & F.—The suppliants were awarded damages.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (1 Ex. C. R. 376). Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting that there was no evidence of a binding assent on the part of the Crown to an assignment of the contract to S. & R., who, therefore, were not entitled to recover. 2. That H. C. & F., the original contractors, by assigning their contract put it in the power of the Government to rescind the contract absolutely, which was done by the order-in-council of the 14th August, and the contractors under the 17th clause could not recover either for the value of work actually done, the loss of prospective profits, or the reduced value of the plant. Queen v. Smith, x., 1.

94. Intercolonial Railway—31 Vict. c. 13, s. 18 (D.)—Certificate of engineer—Condition precedent — Extra work — Forfeiture — Penalty.—Suppliants agreed, by contracts under seal, dated 25th May, 1870, with the Intercolonial Railway Commissioners (authorized by 31 Vict. c. 13) to build, construct and complete sections three and six of the railway for a lump sum for section 3 of $462,444, and for section 6 of $456,946.43. In the contract it was distinctly understood, intended, and agreed that the lump sum should be the price of, and be held to be full compensation for, all works embraced in or contemplated by the contract, or which might be required in virtue of any of its provisions or by-laws, and the contractors should not, upon any pretext whatever, be entitled, by reason of any change, alteration, or addition made in or to such works, or in said plans or specifications, or by reason of the exercise of any of the powers vested in the Governor-in-Council by the said Act, or in the commissioners or engineers by the said contract or by-law, to claim or demand any further sum for extra work, or as damages or otherwise, the contractors thereby expressly waiving and abandoning all and every such claim or pretension, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, except as provided in the 4th section of the contract relating to alteration in the grade or line of location; and that the said contract and the said specification should be in all respects subject to the provisions of 31 Vict. c. 13, that the works embraced in the contracts should be fully and entirely complete in every particular and given up under final certificates and to the satisfaction of the engineers, on 1st July, 1871 (time being declared to be material and of the essence of the contract), and in default of such completion contractors should forfeit all right, claim, etc., to money due or percentage agreed to be retained, and to pay as liquidated damages $2,000 for each and every week for the time the work might remain uncompleted; that the commissioners upon giving 7 clear days' notice, if the works were not progressing so as to ensure their completion within the time stipulated or in accordance with the contract, had power to take the works out of the hands of the contractors and complete the works at their expense; in such case the contractors were to forfeit all right to money due on the works and to the percentage retained. The work was taken out of the hands of the contractors for not having been satisfactorily proceeded with.—Held, affirming the judgment of the Exchequer Court (1 Ex. C. R. 346). Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting, 1st. That by their contracts the suppliants had waived all claim for payment of extra work. 2nd. That the contractors not having previously obtained, or been entitled to, a certificate from the chief engineer, as provided by 31 Vict. c. 13, s. 18, for or on account of the money which they claimed, the petition of the suppliants was properly dismissed. 3rd. Under the terms of the contract, the work not having been completed within the time stipulated, or in accordance with the contract, the commissioners had the power to take the contract out of the hands of the contractors and charge them with the extra cost of completing the same, but that in making up that amount the court below should have deducted the amount awarded for the value of the plant and materials taken over from the contractors by the commissioners. Berlinguet v. The Queen, xiii., 26.

95. Public work—Extras—Certificate of engineer—Condition precedent—Arbitration—31 Vict. c. 12—Costs.—S. made a contract with the Minister of Public Works, for the construction of a bridge for a lump sum. After the completion of the bridge a final estimate was given by the chief engineer, and payment thereof made, but S. preferred a claim for the value of work, not included in such final estimate, alleged to have been done in the construction of the bridge, and caused by changes and alterations ordered by the chief engineer of so radical a nature as to create, according to the contention of the claimants, a new contract between the parties. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (1 Ex. C. R. 301). Fournier, J., dissenting, that the engineer could not make a new contract binding on the Crown; that the claim came within the original contract and the provisions thereof which made the certificate of the engineer a condition precedent to recovery, and such certificate not having been obtained, the claim must be dismissed.—The Crown having referred the claim to arbitration instead of insisting throughout on its strict legal rights, no costs were allowed. The Queen v. Starrs, xvii., 118.

96. Public work — Extras — Intercolonial Railway—31 Vict. c. 13, ss. 16, 17, 18 and 37 Vict. c. 15—Change of chief engineer—Final closing certificate—Reference of claim—Report by chief engineer—Approval by commissioner or minister—Condition precedent.—In 1879 M. filed a petition of right for $608,000 for extra work and damages arising out of his contract for the construction of section 18 of the Intercolonial Railway without having obtained a final certificate from F., at the time chief engineer. In 1880, F. having resigned, S. was appointed chief engineer, investigated respondent's claim, and reported a balance in his favour of $120,371. Thereupon respondent amended his petition and made a special claim for the $120,371, alleging that S.'s report was a final certificate within the meaning of the contract, which question was submitted for the opinion of the court by special case. This report was never approved of by the commissioners nor by the Minister of Railways and Canals under 31 Vict. c. 13, s. 18. The Exchequer Court (Fournier, J.) held that suppliant was entitled to recover on the certificate of S. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (1 Ex. C. R. 321), 1. per Ritchie, C.J., and Gwynne, J., that the report of S., assuming him to have been the chief engineer to give the final certificate under the contract, cannot be construed to be a certificate of the chief engineer which does or can entitle the contractor to recover any sum as remaining due and payable to him under the terms of his contract, nor can any legal claim whatever against the Government be founded thereon. 2. Per Ritchie, C.J., that the contractor was not entitled to be paid anything until the final certificate of the chief engineer was approved of by the commissioners or Minister of Railways and Canals, Jones v. The Queen (7 Can. S. C. R. 570) followed. 3. Per Patterson, J., that although S. was duly appointed chief engineer, and his report may be held to be the final and closing certificate to which suppliant was entitled under clause 11 of the contract, yet as it is provided by clause 4 that any allowance for increased work is to be decided by the commissioners and not by the engineer, suppliant is not entitled to recover on S.'s certificate.—Per Strong and Taschereau, JJ., (dissenting), that S. was chief engineer and as such had power under clause 11 to deal with the suppliant's claim and his report was "a final closing certificate" entitling the respondent to the amount found by the Exchequer Court on the case submitted.—Per Strong, Taschereau and Patterson, JJ., that the office of commissioners having been abolished by 37 Vict. c. 15, and their duties and powers transferred generally to the Minister of Railways and Canals, the approval of the certificate was not a condition precedent to entitle the suppliant to claim the amount awarded to him by the final certificate of the chief engineer. The Queen v. McGreevy, xviii., 371.

97. Contract—Public work—Authority of Government engineer to vary terms—Delay.—Under a contract with the Dominion Government for building a bridge, the specification of which called for timber of a special kind, which the contractor could only procure in North Carolina, the Government was not obliged, in the absence of a special provision therefor, to have such timber inspected at that place, and was not bound by the act of the Government engineer in agreeing to such inspection, the contract containing a clause that no change in its terms would be binding the Crown, unless sanctioned by order of council.—A provision that the contractor should have no claim against the Crown in reason of delay in the progress of the work arising from the acts of any of Her Majesty's servants, was also an answer to a suit by contractor for damages caused by delay in having the timber inspected. Mayer v. The Queen, xxiii., 454.

98. Crown domain—Disputed territory—License to cut timber—Implied warranty of title—Breach of contract—Damages.—The claimant applied to the Government of Canada for licenses to cut timber on ten timber belts situated in the territory lately in dispute between that Government and the Government of Ontario. The application was granted on the condition that the applicant should pay certain ground-rents and bonuses, make surveys and build a mill. The claimant knew of the dispute which was at the time of and public. He paid the rents and bonuses made the surveys and enlarged a mill he had previously built, which was accepted as equivalent to building a new one. The dispute was determined adversely to the Government of Canada, at the time six leases or licenses were current, and consequently the Government could not renew them. The leases were granted under ss. 49 and 50 of 46 Vict. c. 1 and the regulations made under the Act of 1879, provided that "the license may be renewed for another year subject to such revision of the annual rental and royalty to be paid therefor as may be fixed by the Governor-in-Council."—In a claim for damages by the licensee: Held, 1. orders-in-council issued pursuant to 46 Vict. c. 17, ss. 49 and 50 authorizing the Minister of the Interior to grant licenses to cut timber did not constitute contracts between the Crown and proposed licensees, such orders-in-council being revocable by the Crown until acted upon by the grant of licenses under them. 2. The right of renewal of the licenses was optional with the Crown, and the claimant was entitled to recover from the Government only the money paid to them for ground-rents and bonuses. Bulmer v. The Queen, xxiii., 488.

99. Constitutional law—Powers of executive councillors—"Letter of credit"—Ratification by Legislature—Obligations binding on the province—Discretion of the Government as to expenditure—Petition of right—Negotial instrument—"Bills of Exchange Act, 1891"—"The Bank Act." R. S. C. c. 120.—The Provincial Secretary of Quebec wrote the following letter to D., with the assent of his colleagues, but not being authorized by order-in-council: "J'ai l'honneur de vous informer que le gouvernement fera voter, dans le budget supplémentaire de 1891-92, un item de 5 mille piastres qui vous seront payées immédiatement après la session, et cela à titre d'acompte sur l'impression de la 'Liste des terres de la Couronne concédées depuis 1713 jusqu'au 31 décembre 1890,' dont je vous confie l'impression dans une lettre en date du 14 janvier, 1891." "Cette somme de 5 mille piastres sera payée au porteur de la présente lettre, revêtue de votre endossement D. indorsed the letter to a bank as security for advances to enable him to do the work Held, affirming the judgment of the Court in Queen's Bench, that the letter constituted a contract between D. and the Government; that the Provincial Secretary had no power to bind the Crown by his signature to such a document; and that a subsequent vote of the Legislature of a sum of money for printing "liste des terres de la Couronne," etc., was not a ratification of the agreement with D., the Government not being obliged to expend the money, though authorized to do so, and the vote containing no reference to the contract with D., nor to the said letter of credit. Jacques-Cartier Bank v. The Queen, xxv., 84.

100. Public work—Progress estimates—Engineer's certificate—Revision by succeeding engineer—Action for payment on monthly certificate.—[A contract with the Crown for building locks and other work on a government canal provided for monthly payments to the contractors of 90 per cent. of the value of the work done, at the prices named in a schedule annexed to the contract, such payments to be made on the certificate of the engineer, approved by the Minister of Railways and Canals, that the work certified for had been executed to his satisfaction, the certificate so approved was to be a condition precedent to the right of the contractors to the monthly payments, and the remaining 10 per cent. of the whole of the work was to be retained until its final completion; the engineer was to be the sole judge of the work and materials, and his decision on all questions with regard thereto, or as to the meaning and intention of the contract, was to be final; and he was to be at liberty to make any changes or alterations in the work which he should deem expedient. Held, that though the value of the work certified to by the monthly certificates was only approximate and subject to revision on completion of the whole, yet where the engineer in charge had changed the character of a particular class of work, and when completed had classified it and fixed the value, his decision was final and could not be re-opened and revised by a succeeding engineer. Held, also, that the contractors could proceed by action if payment on a monthly certificate was withheld, and were not obliged to wait the final completion of the work before suing. Judgment appealed from (5 Ex. C. R. 19) reversed. Murray v. The Queen, xxvi., 203.

101. Contract, construction of — Public works—Arbitration—Progress estimates—Engineer's certificate—Approval by head of department—Condition precedent.—[The eighth and twenty-fifth clauses of the appellant's contract for the construction of certain public works were as follows:—"8. That the engineer shall be the sole judge of work and material in respect of both quantity and quality, and his decision on all questions in dispute, with regard to work or material, or as to the meaning or intention of this contract, and the plans, specifications, and drawings shall be final, and no works or extra or additional work or charges shall be deemed to have been executed, nor shall the contractor be entitled to payment for the same, unless the same shall have been executed to the satisfaction of the engineer, as evidenced by his certificate in writing, which certificate shall be a condition precedent to the right of the contractor to be paid therefor;" but before the contract was signed by the parties the words "as to the meaning or intention of this contract, and the plans, specifications and drawings" were struck out. "25. Cash payments to about ninety per cent. of the value of the work done, approximately made up from returns of progress measurements and computed at the prices agreed upon or determined under the provisions of the contract, will be made to the contractor monthly on the written certificate of the engineer that the work for, or on account of, which the certificate is granted has been duly executed to his satisfaction, and stating the value of such work computed as above mentioned, and upon approval of such certificate by the minister for the time being, and the said certificate and such approval thereof shall be a condition precedent to the right of the contractor to be paid the said ninety per cent., or any part thereof."

A difference of opinion arose between the contractor and the engineers as to the quantity of earth in certain embankments which should be paid for at an increased rate as "water-tight" embankment under the provisions of the contract and specifications relating to the works, and the claim of the contractor was rejected by the engineer, who afterwards, however, after the matter had been referred to the Minister of Justice by the Minister of Railways and Canals, and an opinion favourable to the contention of the contractor given by the Minister of Justice, made a certificate upon a progressive estimate for the amount thus in dispute in the usual form, but added after his signature the following words:—"Certified as regards item 5 (the item in dispute), in accordance with the letter of Deputy Minister of Justice, dated 15th January, 1896." The estimate thus certified was forwarded for payment, but the Auditor-General refused to issue a cheque therefor. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (5 Ex. C. R. 293), that under the circumstances of the case the certificate sufficiently complied with the requirements of the twenty-fifth section of the contract; that the decision by the engineer rejecting the contractor's claim was not a final decision under the eighth clause of the contract adjudicating upon a dispute under said eighth section, and did not preclude him from subsequently granting a valid certificate to entitle the contractor to receive payment of his claim, and that the certificate given in this case whereby the engineer adopted the construction placed upon the contract in the legal opinion given by the Minister of Justice, was properly granted within the meaning of the twenty-fifth clause of the contract. Murray v. The Queen (26 Can. S. C. R. 203) discussed and distinguished. Goodwin v. The Queen, xxviii., 273.

102. Construction of statute—Public works—Railways and canals—R. S. C. c. 37, s. 23—Contracts binding on the Crown—Goods sold and delivered on verbal order of Crown officials—Supplies in excess of tender—Errors and omissions in accounts rendered—Findings of fact—Interest—Arts. 1067 & 1077 C. C.—50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, s. 33.—[The provisions of the twenty-third section of the "Act respecting the Department of Railways and Canals" (R. S. C. c. 37), which require all contracts affecting that department to be signed by the minister, the deputy minister or some person specially authorized, and countersigned by the secretary, have reference only to contracts in writing made by that department (Gwynne, J., contra).—Where goods have been bought by and delivered to officers of the Crown for public works, under orders verbally given by them in the performance of their duties, payment for the same may be recovered from the Crown, there being no statute requiring that all contracts by the Crown should be in writing. (Gwynne and King, JJ., contra).

Judgment appealed from (6 Ex. C. R. 39) affirmed. The Queen v. Henderson, xxviii., 425.

103. Contract binding on the Crown—Public work—Formation of contract—Ratification—Breach.—On Nov. 22nd, 1879, the Government of Canada entered into a contract with C., by which the latter undertook to do all the Government binding for five years from said date. The contract was executed under the authority of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 7, s. 6, and on Nov. 25th, 1879, was assigned to W., who performed all the work sent to him up to Dec. 5th, 1884, when, the term fixed by the contract having expired, he received a letter from the Queen's Printer, as follows: "I am directed by the Honourable, the Secretary of State, to inform you that, pending future arrangements, the binding work of the Government will be sent to you for execution, under the same rates and conditions as under the contract which has just expired." W. performed the work for two years under authority of this letter, and then brought an action for the profits he would have had on work given to other parties during the seven years.—Held, that the letter of the Queen's Printer did not constitute a contract binding on the Crown; that the statute authorizing such contract was not directory, but limited the power of the Queen's Printer to make a contract, except subject to its conditions; that the contractor was chargeable with notice of all statutory limitations upon the power of the Queen's Printer; and that he could not recover in respect of the work done after the original contract had expired.—On Oct. 30th, 1886, an order-in-council was passed which recited the execution and assignment of the original contract, the execution of the work by W. after it expired, and the recommendation of the Secretary of State that a formal contract should be entered into extending the original contract to Dec. 1st, 1887, and then authorized the Secretary of State to enter into such formal contract with W., but subject to the condition that the Government should waive all claims for damages by reason of non-execution or imperfect execution of the work, and that W. should waive all claims to damages because of the execution of binding work by other parties, up to the date of said extension. W. refused to accept the extension on such terms.—Held, that W. could not rely on the order-in-council as a ratification of the contract formed by the letter of the Queen's Printer; that the element of consensus enters as much into a ratification of a contract as into the contract itself; and W. could not allege a ratification after expressly repudiating its terms and refusing to be bound by it.—After an appeal from the final judgment of the Exchequer Court was lodged in the Supreme Court, the Crown obtained leave to appeal from an order of reference to ascertain the amount of the suppliant's damages.—Held, that the judge of the Exchequer Court had authority to allow the appeal, and it was properly before the Supreme Court. Judgment appealed from (6 Ex. C. R. 12) reversed. The Queen v. Woodburn, xxix., 112.

104. Inquiry as to public matters—Contract binding on the Crown—Right of action—Quantum meruit—Public officer—Solicitor and client—R. S. C. c. 114, 115.—The judgment appealed from (7 Ex. C. R. 351) held that a person appointed under R. S. C. c. 115, as commissioner to make inquiry and report on conduct in office of an officer or servant of the Crown, could not recover for his services as such commissioner, there being no provision for such payment; that such service was not rendered in virtue of any contract but merely by virtue of appointment under the statute and that such appointment partakes more of the character of a public office than of a mere employment under a contract express or implied. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment appealed from, Strong, C.J., and Girouard, J., dissenting. Tucker v. The King, xxxii., 722.

105. Public work—Abandonment and substitution of work—Implied contract.—The supplants contracted with the Crown to do certain work on the Cornwall canal, the contract providing that they should provide all labour, plant, etc., for executing and completing all the works set out or referred to in the specifications, namely, "all the dredging and other works connected with the deepening and widening of the Cornwall canal on section No. 8 (not otherwise provided for)" on a date named; "that the several parts of this contract shall be taken together to explain each other and to make the whole consistent; and if it be found that anything has been omitted or misstated which is necessary for the proper performance and completion of any part of the work contemplated the contractors will, at their own expense, execute the same as though it had been properly described;" and that the engineer could, at any time before or during construction, order extra work to be done or changes to be made, either to increase or diminish the work to be done, the contractors to comply with his written requirements therefor. By s. 34 it was declared that no contract on the part of the Crown should be implied from anything contained in the signed contract or from the position of the parties at any time. After a portion of the work had been done the Crown abandoned the scheme of constructing dams contemplated by the contract and adopted another plan the work on which was given to other contractors. After it was completed the supplants filed a petition of right for the profits they would have made had it been given to them.—Held, affirming the judgment of the Exchequer Court (7 Ex. C. R. 221), that the contract contained no express covenant by the Crown to give all the work done to the suppliant and s. 34 prohibited any implied covenant therefor. Therefore the petition of right was properly dismissed. Gilbert Blasting & Dredging Co. v. The King, xxxiii., 21.

8. DETERMINATION.

112. Construction of agreement to discontinue business — Determination of agreement. — B., a manufacturer of glassware, entered into a contract with two companies in the same trade, by which in consideration of certain quarterly payments, he agreed to discontinue his business for five years. The contract provided that if at any time during the five years any furnace should be started by other parties for the manufacture of glassware, either of the said companies could, if it wished, by written notice to B., terminate the agreement "as on the first day on which glass has been made by the said furnace," and the payments to B. should then cease, unless he could shew "that said furnace or furnaces at the time said notice was given could not have a production of more than one hundred dollars per day." — Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Review, that under this agreement B. was only required to shew that any furnace so started did not have an actual output worth more than $100 per day on an average for a reasonable period, and that the words "could not have a production of more than one hundred dollars per day" did not mean mere capacity to produce that quantity whether it was actually produced or not. North American Glass Co. v. Barsalou, xxiv., 490.

113. Contract of hiring — Duration of service — Dismissal — Notice. — Where no time is limited for the duration of a contract of hiring and service, whether or not the hiring is to be considered as one for a year is a question of fact to be determined according to the circumstances of the case (24 Ont. 10. EXECUTED CONTRACTS.

117. Executed contract — Agreement by agent — Authority to bind company — Sub-con- tractor — Adoption of agreement — Payments on account — Evidence — Question for the jury — Corporate seal — Ratification. — An agreement for fencing of a railway was as follows: — "Memo. of fencing between Muskrat river, east, to Renfrew. T. & W. M. to construct same next spring for C. C. R. Co., to be equal to 5 boards 6 inches wide, and posts 7 and 8 feet apart, for $1.25 per rod, company to furnish cars for lumber," and signed by plaintiffs and F., who controlled nine-tenths of the stock, and publicly appeared and acted as manager of the company, although he was at one time contractor for the building of the whole railway. T. & W. M. built the fence, and the C. C. R. Co. supplied cars as agreed and had the benefit of the work. The case was tried with a jury and on the evidence, in answer to questions submitted the jury found that T. & W. M., when they contracted, considered they were contracting with the company through F., that there was no evidence that the company repudiated the contract till the action was brought, that the payments made were as of money which the company owed, which they were not paying to be charged to F., and a general verdict was found for T. & W. M. for $12,218.51. — On appeal, Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (7 Ont. App. R. 646), that it was properly left to the jury to decide whether the work performed, of which the company received the benefit, was contracted for by the company through the instrumentality of F., or whether they adopted and ratified the contract, and that the verdict could not be set aside on the ground of being against the weight of evidence; (Ritchie, C.J., and Taschereau, J., dissenting, on the ground that there was no evidence that F. had any authority to bind the company; that T. & W. M. were only sub-contractors, and that there was no evidence of ratification.) Held, also, that although the contract entered into by F. for the company was not under seal, the action was maintainable. Canada Central Ry. Co. v. Murray, viii., 313.

(Leave to appeal refused by Privy Council, 30th June, 1883; 8 App. Cas. 574.)

118. Corporate seal — By-law — Executed works — Manitoba Municipal Act, 1884. — A corporation is liable on an executed contract for the performance of work, within the purposes for which it was created, which it has adopted and of which it has received the benefit, though the contract was not executed under its corporate seal, and this applies to municipal as well as other corporations. Judgment appealed from (6 Man. L. R. 88) reversed. Ritchie, C.J., and Strong, J., dissenting. Bernardin v. North Dufferin, xix., 581.

119. Executed contract — Sale of land — Rescission — Fraudulent misrepresentation — Evidence. — Where the court appealed from dismissed the plaintiff's bill praying for the rescission of an executed contract, Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (1 Man. L. R. 46), that a clear case of fraud must be established to obtain the rescission of an executed contract, and the allegations of fraud made by the plaintiff being uncorroborated and contradicted in every particular by the defendant, neither the court below nor the court in appeal would be justified in rescinding the contract in question. Henry, J., dissenting, on the ground that the evidence bore out the allegations of fraud. Hutchinson v. Calder, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 785.

120. Rescission—Innocent misrepresentation—Common error—Sale of land—Failure of consideration.—An executed contract for the sale of an interest in land will not be rescinded for mere innocent misrepresentation. But where, by error of both parties and without fraud or deceit, there has been a complete failure of consideration a court of equity will rescind the contract and compel the vendor to return the purchase money. Thus where, on the sale of a mining claim, it turned out that the whole property sold was included in prior claims whereby the purchaser got nothing for his money the contract was rescinded though the vendor acted in good faith and the transaction was free from fraud. Judgment appealed from (6 B. C. Rep. 205) affirmed. Cole v. Pope, xxix., 291.

12. FORMATION OF CONTRACT.

126. Sale of land—Offer to sell—Acceptance—Condition—Completion of title—Specific performance.—M. wrote to H. as follows:—"A. McI. agrees to take $35,000 for property known as McM. block. Terms—one-third cash, balance in one year at eight per cent. per annum." H. accepted in the following terms:—"I beg to accept your offer made this morning. I will accept the property known as McM. block, being the property on M. street, for $35,000, payable one-third cash on completion of title, and balance in one year at eight per cent. You will please have papers and abstract submitted by your solicitor N. F. H., 22 D. block, as soon as possible, so that I may get conveyance and give mortgage." Held, reversing the Court of Queen's Bench for Manitoba, Ritchie, C.J., and Fournier, J., dissenting, that there was no binding, unconditional acceptance of the offer of sale, and therefore no completed contract of sale between the parties, and that specific performance should not be decreed. McIntyre v. Hood, ix., 556.

127. Manufacture of patented articles—Substitution of new agreement—Evidence.—B.

was patentee of a machine called the Windsor loom, for making skirtings, etc., and in 1884, she agreed to supply the company with the looms, on which they were to manufacture goods and pay a royalty of one cent a square yard thereon, the minimum royalty to be $50 a month. The patent was to expire in 1891. Prior to this agreement, in 1882, B. had granted to P., the head of the company, a license to manufacture blankets under another patent for a like royalty. These agreements were carried out until 1887. In the meantime B. had patented another device for making blankets, and after some correspondence, the company, agreed to take both patents for a year, paying therefor a specified royalty, which B. accepted. At the end of the year B. claimed that the original agreement was still in force and brought action for the royalties. Held, reversing the Court of Appeal for Ontario, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the correspondence and other evidence showed that the agreement made in 1887 was in substitution for and superseded the original agreement, and B. had no right to claim any royalty under the latter. Penman Manufacturing Co. v. Broadhead, xxi., 713.

128. Principal and agent—Sale of lands—Authority to deliver deed and receive purchase money—Memo. to agent—New agreement—Right of action.—W. sold land under power of sale, and F. became purchaser, and paid 10% of the price, the balance to be paid in notes. Shortly after A. brought a deed to F. and demanded the notes. The deed was left with F. on his delivering to A. a writing as follows:—"Received from E. A. a deed given by W. for land bought at auction . . . The above mentioned deed I receive only to be examined, and if lawfully and properly executed to be kept, if not lawfully and properly executed to be returned to E. A. When the said deed is lawfully and properly executed to the satisfaction of my attorney, I will pay the amount of balance due on said deed, $572, provided I am given a good warrantee deed, and the mortgage, which is on record, is properly cancelled if required." The deed was not returned to A. and he brought action for the $572.—The verdict was for defendant, under direction of the judge, and leave reserved to plaintiff to move for a verdict in his favour for nominal damages, the purchase money having in the meantime been paid to W. On plaintiff moving for such leave the court set aside the verdict and entered verdict for plaintiff. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from. (19 N. B. Rep. 22), Strong, J., dissenting, that the memorandum did not constitute a new contract between plaintiff and defendant to pay the purchase money to plaintiff, who was merely the agent of W., and therefore the verdict for defendant should stand.—Per Strong, J. That the said writing did constitute a new agreement between the parties, but that if A. was merely an agent of W. in the transaction, he could still sue, as his principal had not interfered.—Appeal allowed with costs. Fawcett v. Anderson, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 8.

129. Contract by correspondence—Letters after closing—Completion of contract.—Where it is sought to establish a contract by correspondence, the whole of the correspondence relating to the matter in question which has passed between the parties must be taken into consideration; accordingly, where a letter written by plaintiff to defendant and replied to by the latter made a complete contract, but, before there was any performance or breach, other letters passed from which it appeared that both parties still treated the matter as being in negotiation, it was Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (23 N. B. Rep. 356), that no binding contract had been concluded, between the parties.—As the rule en banc had been taken for a new trial only, the court refused to direct a nonsuit or verdict for the defendant, but affirmed the rule for new trial made in the court below. Jones v. DeWolf, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 767.

130. Correspondence—Carriage of goods—Transportation Co.—Carriage over connecting lines—Bill of lading.—Where a court has to find a contract in a correspondence, and not in one particular note or memorandum formally signed, the whole of what has passed between the parties must be taken into consideration. Hussey v. Horne-Payne (4 App. Cas. 311) followed.—A shipping agent cannot bind his principal by receipt of a bill of lading after the vessel containing the goods shipped has sailed, and the bill of lading so received is not a record of the terms on which the goods are shipped.—Where a shipper accepts what purports to be a bill of lading, under circumstances which would lead him to infer that it forms a record of the contract of shipment, he cannot usually, in the absence of fraud or mistake, escape from its binding operation merely upon the ground that he did not read it, but that conclusion does not follow where the document is given out of the usual course of business and seeks to vary terms of a prior mutual assent.—Taschereau, J., dissented on the ground that the correspondence in the case did not contain the contract relied on, and that the injury to the goods for which the action was brought took place while they were not under the control of the company. North-west Transportation Co. v. McKenzie, xxv., 38.

131. Insurance against fire—Mutual insurance company—Notice rejecting application—Statutory conditions—R. S. O. (1887) c. 167—Waiver—Estoppel—Evidence.—B. applied to a mutual company for insurance on his property for four years, giving an undertaking to pay the amounts required from time to time and a four months' note for the first premium. He received a receipt beginning as follows: "Received from B. an undertaking for the sum of $46.50, being the premium for an insurance to the extent of $1,500 on the property described in his application of this date," and then providing that the company could cancel the contract at any time within fifty days by notice mailed to the applicant, and that non-receipt of a policy within the fifty days, with or without notice, should be absolute evidence of rejection of the application. No notice of rejection was sent to B., and no policy was issued within the said time, which expired on March 4th, 1891. On April 17th, B. received a letter from the manager asking him to remit funds to pay his note maturing on May 1st. He did so and his letter of remittance crossed another from the manager, mailed at Owen Sound, April 20th, stating the rejection of his application and returning the undertaking and note. On April 24th the insured property was destroyed by fire, B. notified the manager by telegraph, and on April 29th the latter wrote returning the money remitted by B., who afterwards sent it again to the manager, and it was again returned. B. then brought an action, which was dismissed at the hearing, and a new trial ordered by the Divisional Court and affirmed by the Court of Appeal. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (22 Ont. App. R. 68), Gwynne, J., dissenting, that there was a valid contract by the company with B. for insurance for four years; that the statutory conditions in the Ontario Insurance Act (R. S. O. [1887] c. 167), governed such contract though not in the form of a policy; that if the provision as to non-receipt of a policy within fifty days was a variation of the statutory conditions, it was ineffectual for non-compliance with condition 115, requiring variations to be written in a different coloured ink from the rest of the document, and if it had been so printed the condition was unreasonable; and that such provision, though the non-receipt of the policy might operate as a notice, was inconsistent with condition 19, which provides that notice shall not operate until seven days after its receipt. Held, also, that there was some evidence for the jury that the company, by demanding and receiving payment of the note, had waived the right to cancel the contract, and were estopped from denying that B. was insured. Dominion Grange Mutual Fire Assur. Assn. v. Bradt, xxv., 154.

132. Fire insurance—Application—Owner-ship of property insured—Misrepresentation.—A condition indorsed on a policy of insurance against fire provided that if the application for insurance was referred to in the policy it would be considered a part of the contract and a warranty by the insured, and that any false representation by the assured of the condition, situation and occupancy of the property, or any omission to make known a fact material to the risk would avoid the policy. In the application for said policy the insured stated that he was sole owner of the property to be insured, and of the land on which it stood, whereas it was, to his knowledge and that of the sub-agent who secured the application, situated upon the public highway. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (34 N. B. Rep. 515), that as the application was more than once referred to in the policy it was a part of the contract for insurance, and that the misrepresentation as to the ownership of the land avoided the policy under the above condition. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Co. v. LeBell, xxix., 470.

133. Offer and acceptance—Telegrams—Completion—Mutuality.—S. a grain merchant in Truro, N. S., telegraphed to C., a grain merchant in Toronto, "Quote bottom prices 20 to 25 cars, thousand bushels each, white oats delivered, basis Truro freight, bagged in our bags even four bushels each." C. replied next day, "White oats 32 half, Truro, bags two cents bushel extra." S. wired same day, "How much less can you do mixed oats for? Might work white at thirty-two, but not any more. Answer." C. answered, "Mixed oats scarce but odd cars obtainable half cent less. Exporters bidding 23 for white. Highest freight, Truro freight two half over Halifax. Offer white 32 bulk, 34 half in four bushel bags, Truro." Next day S. wired, "I confirm purchase 20,000 bushels oats, white at thirty-two; mixed at thirty-one half, bagged even four bushels in my bags. Confirm. May yet order five cars more in bulk," and he confirmed it also by letter. C. answered telegram at once, "Cannot confirm bagged. Am asked half a cent for bagging. Bags extra." S. replied, "All right: Book order. Will have to pay for bagging." C. wired same day, "Too late to-day. Made too many sales already. Will try confirm to-morrow." On receipt of this S. wrote urging action, and next day wired, "Will you confirm oats? Completed sale receipt first telegram yesterday. Expect you to ship." C. answered next day, "Market advanced two cents here since yesterday noon. Had oats under offer expecting your order until noon yesterday. When you accepted bagged parties demanded half cent for bagging. They sold before your second wire yesterday. This is why I could not confirm. Think advance too sudden to last." He wrote to S. to the same effect that day. The oats were never delivered and S. brought an action for damages. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (33 N. S. Rep. 179), that there was no completed contract between the parties, as they did not come to an understanding in respect to some of the material terms, and S. could not recover. Cole v. Sumner, xxx., 379.

134. Contract by correspondence—Acceptance—Mailing—Indication of place of payment—Delivery of goods sold—Arts. 85, 86 C. C.—Post Office Act.—An offer was made by letter dated and mailed at Quebec, defendant's acceptance being by letter dated and mailed at Toronto. In a suit upon the contract in the Superior Court at Quebec, defendant (served substitutionally), opposed a judgment against him by default by petition in revocation of judgment, first by preliminary exception to the jurisdiction of the court over the cause of action and then, as incidental plaintiff, making a cross-demand for damages to be set off against plaintiffs' claim. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (which affirmed Q. R. 16 S. C. 22), that in the Province of Quebec, as in the rest of Canada, in negotiations carried on by correspondence, it is not necessary for the completion of the contract that the letter accepting an offer should have actually reached the party making it, but it is complete on the mailing of such letter in the general post-office. Underwood v. Maguire (Q. R. 6 Q. B. 237) overruled.—Article 85 of the Civil Code, as amended by 52 Vict. c. 48 (Que.), providing that the indication of a place of payment in any note or writing should be equivalent to election of domicile at the place so indicated, requires that such place should be actually designated in the contract. Magann v. Auger, xxxi., 186.

135. Contract by agent—Sale of goods—Evidence to vary written instrument—Admission of evidence.—Plaintiffs carried on business at Montreal under the style of "A. R. Williams & Co." and sued respondent for the price of an engine, ordered in writing, and other machinery supplied in connection with repairs to the foundry, amounting to $495.91. The order was given through the plaintiff's agent W. The principal defence was that the company supposed it was dealing with a company carrying on business in Toronto as "The A. R. Williams Machinery Co." with which it had previous dealings, and which, at the time, had in its possession machinery belonging to defendant of the value of $780 which it was agreed with W. should be accepted in payment for the machinery ordered. The Supreme Court, Gwynne, J., dissenting, affirmed the judgment appealed from (33 N. S. Rep. 21) which had affirmed the decision of the trial judge (33 N. S. Rep. 22) who found that the business carried on in Montreal was distinct from that carried on in Toronto, but that at the time the order was given defendant believed it was contracting with the Toronto company, and that there were surrounding circumstances to lead to the belief that the business carried on in Montreal and Toronto were one and the same. He held that the plaintiffs were bound by the bargain made with W., and, on the ground that it was not inconsistent with the written agreement to prove that payment was to be made otherwise than in cash, he received evidence of the agreement relied on by the defendant. Wilson v. Windsor Foundry Co., xxxi., 381.

138. Fire insurance—Void policy—Renewal—Mortgage clause.—By s. 167 of The Ontario Insurance Act a mercantile risk can only be insured for one year and may be renewed by a renewal receipt instead of a new policy. Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal (3 Ont. L. R. 127), and restoring that at the trial (32 O. R. 369), Girouard, J., contra, that the renewal is not a new contract of insurance. Therefore, where the original policy was void for non-disclosure of prior insurance the renewal was likewise a nullity though the prior insurance had ceased to exist in the interval. Held, per Girouard, J., that the renewal was a new contract which was avoided by non-disclosure of the concealment in the application for the original policy. *London & Liverpool & Globe Ins. The original contract with the City of Three Rivers embraced conditions of which the defendants had no knowledge, and included the supply of other totally different plant from that which they subsequently undertook to supply to the appellants. The appellants, upon completion of the works, having sued the City of Three Rivers for the agreed contract price, the city pleaded that the work was not completed, and set up defects in the steam engine and boilers, and the appellants thereupon brought an action en garantie simple against the respondents. Held, affirming the judgment of the courts below, that there was no legal connexion (connexité) existing between the contract of the defendant and that of the plaintiffs with the City of Three Rivers, upon which the principal demand was based, and therefore the action en garantie simple was properly dismissed. *Royal Electric Co. v. 151. Agreement to purchase railway—Hire of rolling stock—Appeal—Arbitration and award—R. S. O. (1877) c. 50, s. 189—Consent reference.]—B., contractor for building the E. & H. Ry., and, practically, owner thereof, negotiated with the solicitor of the C. S. Ry. for the sale to the latter of the E. & H. Ry. when built. While negotiations were pending B. went to California, and the agents who looked after the affairs of the E. & H. Ry. in his absence applied to the manager of the C. S. Ry. for some rolling stock to assist in construction. The manager of the C. S. Ry. was willing to supply the rolling stock on execution of the agreement for sale of the road which was communicated to B., who s. c. d.—12.

wrote a letter to the manager in which the following passage occurred: "If from any cause our plan of handing over the road to your company should necessarily fail, you may equally depend on being paid full rates for the use of engine and cars and any other assistance or advantage you may have given Mr. Farquier (the agent)."—The negotiations for the purchase of B.'s railway by the C. S. Ry. having fallen through, an action was brought by the company against B. and the E. & H. Ry. Co., for the hire of the rolling stock which was resisted by B. on two grounds, one that the rolling stock was supplied in pursuance of the negotiations for sale, which had fallen through by no fault of B., and the other, that if plaintiffs had any right of action it was only against the E. & H. Ry. Co., and not against him.—By consent the matter was referred to arbitration of a County Court Judge, with provision in the submission that proceedings should be same as on reference by order of court, and that there should be a right of appeal from the award as under R. S. O. (1877) c. 50, s. 189.—The arbitrator gave an award in favour of plaintiff; the Queen's Bench Divisional Court held that there was no appeal from the award on the merits, and as it was regular on its face refused to disturb it; the Court of Appeal held that there was an appeal on the merits but upheld the award. The Supreme Court of Canada held, affirming the Court of Appeal, that the arbitrator was justified in awarding the amount to the plaintiff, and that B. as well as the company was liable therefor. Bickford v. Canada Southern Ry. Co., xiv., 743.

152. Specific performance—Agreement to perform services—Relationship of parties.]—M., on his father's death, at the age of three years, went to live with his grandfather W. who sent him to school until he was sixteen years old, and then took him into his store where he continued as the sole clerk for eight or nine years, when W. died and M. died a few days later. Both having died intestate, the administratrix of M.'s estate brought an action against the representatives of W., for the value of such services rendered by M., and on the trial there was evidence of statements made by W. during the time of such service to the effect that if he (W.) died without having made a will M. would have good wages, and if he made a will he would leave the business and some other property to M. Held, reversing the decision appealed from (25 N. S. Rep. 172), Gwynne, J., dissenting, that there was sufficient evidence of an agreement between M. and W., that the services of the latter were not to be gratuitous, but were to be remunerated by payment of wages, or a gift by will to overcome the presumption to the contrary arising from the fact that W. stood in loco parentis towards M. There having been no gift by will the estate of W. was therefore liable for the value of the services as estimated by the jury. McGugan v. Smith (21 Can. S. C. R. 263) followed. Murdoch v. West, xxiv., 305.

153. Insurance company—Appointment of medical examiner—Breach of contract—Authority of agent.]—The medical staff of the Equitable Life Assurance Society at Montreal consists of a medical referee, a chief medical examiner and two or more alternate medical examiners. In 1888 L. was appointed an alternate examiner in pursuance of a suggestion to the manager by local agents that it was advisable to have a French Canadian on the staff. By his commission L. was entitled to the privilege of such examinations as should be assigned to him by, or required during the absence, disability or unavailability of the chief examiner. After L. had served for four years it was found that his methods in holding examinations were not acceptable to applicants, and he was requested to resign, which he refused to do, and another French Canadian was appointed as an additional alternate examiner, and most of the applicants thereafter went to the latter. L. then brought an action against the company for damages by loss of the business and injury to his professional reputation by refusal to employ him, claiming that on his appointment the general manager had promised him all the examinations of French Canadian applicants for insurance. He also alleged that he had been induced to insure his own life with the company on the understanding that the examination fees would be more than sufficient to pay the premiums, and he asked for re-payment of amounts paid by him for such insurance. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (Q. R. 3 Q. B. 513), that by the contract made with L. the company were only to send him such cases as they saw fit, and could dismiss him or appoint other examiners at their pleasure; that the manager had no authority to contract with L. for any employment other than that specified in his commission; and that he had no right of action for re-payment of his premiums, it being no condition of his employment that he should insure his life, and there being no connection between the contract for insurance and that for employment. La-berge v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., xxiv., 595.

154. Master and servant—Contract of hiring—Duration of service—Evidence—Dismissal—Notice.—Where no time is limited for the duration of a contract of hiring and service, whether or not the hiring is to be considered as one for a year is a question of fact to be decided upon the circumstances of the case.—A business having been sold, the foreman, who was engaged for a year, was retained in his position by the purchaser. On the expiration of his term of service no change was made, and he continued for a month longer at the same salary, but was then informed that if he desired to remain his salary would be considerably reduced. Having refused to accept the reduced salary he was dismissed, and brought an action for damages claiming that his retention for the month was a re-engagement for another year on the same terms. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (24 Ont. App. R. 296), which reversed Meredith, C.J., (27 O. R. 369), that as it appeared that the foreman knew that the business before the sale had been losing money and could not be kept going without reductions of expenses and salaries, as he had been informed that the contracts with the employees had not been assumed by the purchaser, and as upon his own evidence there was no hiring for any definite period, but merely a temporary arrangement, until the purchaser should have time to consider the changes to be made, the foreman had no claim for damages, and his action was rightly dismissed. *Bain v. 15. ILLEGAL CONTRACTS.

159. Impossibility of performance—Violation of building by-law passed after contract—Onus of proof.—The contractors for the erection of a building for W. in St. John, N. B., claimed W. had prevented their carrying out the contract. The declaration contained the common counts, part of the work having been performed. By the terms of the contract the building, when erected, would not have conformed to the provisions of the city by-law, under 41 Vict. c. 7 (N.B.), passed two days after the contract was signed.—The plaintiffs were nonsuited, and the Supreme Court (N.B.) refused to set the nonsuit aside. Held, Henry, J., dissenting, that the by-law made the contract illegal, and, therefore, the plaintiffs could not recover. Walker v. McMillan (6 Can. S. C. R. 241), followed.—Per Henry, J., that the erection of the building would not, so far as the evidence shewed, be a violation of the by-law, and therefore the nonsuit should be set aside and a new trial ordered. Spears v. Walker, xi., 113.

160. Bond—Illegal consideration—Stifling prosecution.—In an action on a bond executed by J. to secure a debt of L. to the bank the evidence shewed that L., who had married an adopted daughter of J., was agent of the bank, and, having embezzled the bank funds, the bond was given in consideration of an agreement not to prosecute. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (23 N. S. Rep. 302), that the consideration for the bond was illegal and J. was not liable thereon. People's Bank of Halifax v. Johnson, xx., 541.

161. Conveyance—Illegal or immoral consideration—Intention of grantor—Character of grantee—Pleading.—A contract for transfer of property with intent by the transferor, and for the purpose, that it will be applied by the transferee to the accomplishment of an illegal or immoral purpose is void and cannot be enforced; but mere knowledge of the transferor of the intention of the transferee so to apply it will not void the contract unless, from the particular nature of the property, and the character and occupation of the transferee, a just inference can be drawn that the transferor must also have so intended.—Judgment of the Court of Appeal (20 Ont. App. R. 198) affirmed, Taschereau, J., dissenting. Clark v. Hagar, xxii., 510.

162. Immoral consideration—Trust—Husband and wife—Evidence—Lien for costs.—Action for money claimed as a proportion of sums received by a solicitor for stifling proceedings involving publicity in connection with a divorce suit by plaintiff's husband against her. The defendant held part of the money for his costs in the divorce suit and divided the balance according to an agreement between him and the husband and wife. The Supreme Court (N.S.), decided that it could not lend assistance in the enforcement of the immoral agreement, vacated the judgment of the trial court, McDonald, C.J., holding that there was a cause of action but that the evidence was insufficient to justify a verdict for plaintiff, and dismissed the plaintiff's action with costs (31 N. S. Rep. 425). The Supreme Court of Canada agreed with the trial judge that the evidence was insufficient and dismissed an appeal with costs. Byron v. Tremaine, xxix., 445.

C.]—The Provincial Legislatures have no jurisdiction to permit the operation of lotteries forbidden by the criminal statutes of Canada.—A contract in connection with a scheme for the operation of a lottery forbidden by the criminal statutes of Canada is unlawful and cannot be enforced in a court of justice.—The illegality which vitiates such a contract cannot be waived or condoned by the conduct or pleas of the party against whom it is asserted, and it is the duty of the courts, ex mero motu, to notice the nullity of such contracts at any stage of the case and without pleading.—Per Girouard, J. (dissenting). In Canada, before the Criminal Code, 1892, lotteries were mere offences or contraventions and not crimes, and consequently the Act of the Quebec Legislature was constitutional. L'Association St. Jean-Baptiste v. Brault, xxx., 598.*

164. *Prohibited contract—Penal statute—Nullity—Railway director—Partnership with contractor—Action.]—On appeal the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench (Q. R. 8 Q. B. 555), by which it was held that where a contract is prohibited by statute, such a contract is void, although the statute may not actually declare its nullity but merely imposes a penalty on the offender, and that where the president of a railway company secretly entered into a partnership with contractors for the construction of the road, he could not maintain an action against his partners to enforce his agreement with them. *Macdonald v. C.—Matters judicially noticed.]—In an action to recover advances with interest under an agreement in respect to the manufacture of binder twine at the Central Prison at Toronto, the defence was the general issue, breach of contract and an incidental demand of damages for the breach. The judgment appealed from maintained the action and dismissed the incidental demand, giving plaintiffs interest according to the terms of the contract. Held, per Sedgewick, King and Girouard, J.J., that the evidence disclosed a conspiracy and that, although under the provisions of the Civil Code the moneys so advanced could be recovered back, yet no interest before action could be allowed thereon, as the law merely requires that the parties should be replaced in the position they respectively occupied be-* fore the illegal transactions took place. Roland v. Caisse d'Economie, de Québec (24 S. C. R. 405) discussed, and L'Association St. Jean-Baptiste de Montréal v. Brault (30 S. C. R. 598) referred to. Held, also, that laws of public order must be judicially noticed by the court ex proprio motu, and that, in the absence of any proof to the contrary the foreign law must be presumed to be similar to that of the forum having jurisdiction in an action ex contractu.—Per Taschereau, J. (dissenting.) 1. A new point should never be entertained on appeal, if evidence could have been brought to affect it, had objection been taken at the trial. 2. In the present case, the concurrent findings of both courts below, amply supported by evidence, ought not to be disturbed, and as the company itself prevented the performance of the condition of the agreement in question requiring the assent of the Government to the transfer of the binder twine manufacturing contract, its non-performance cannot be admitted as a defence to the action upon the executed contract.—Gwynne, J., also dissented on the ground that the judgment appealed from proceeded upon wholly inadmissible evidence and that, therefore, the action should have been dismissed and further, that the evidence which was received and acted on, though inadmissible for the purposes for which it was intended, shewed that the action was based upon a contract between the plaintiffs and defendant for the commission of an indictable offence; that neither party could recover either by action or by counterclaim upon such a contract and, therefore, that the incidental demand, as well as the action, should be dismissed. *Consumers Cordage Co. v. 16. INCAPACITY TO CONTRACT.

169. Intention of parties—Agreement for transfer of vessel—Absolute or conditional sale—Findings of fact.]—In a suit for account of earnings of a steamer transferred to defendants by plaintiff the case had been heard and judgment given when defendants made application to put in newly discovered evidence, which was refused by the court below but allowed by the Supreme Court of Canada, which also gave leave to both parties to amend pleadings. The original answer of defendants alleged that the transfer of the steamer was made by plaintiff as security for all advances made or to be made, while plaintiff claimed that it was only as security for a fixed amount. After the order of the Supreme Court of Canada defendants set up a new case, namely, that the transfer was absolute in consideration of an annuity of $1,000 to be paid to plaintiff during his life. This defence was raised in accordance with the newly discovered evidence which consisted of an agreement purporting to be executed by plaintiff to transfer to defendants said steamer and all power and control over the same in consideration of such annuity and to execute an absolute bill of sale thereof to defendant. Pursuant to the order of the Supreme Court evidence was taken of the execution of this agreement and resulted in a judgment by the judge in equity, declaring that it did not contain the true agreement between the parties, that it was executed by plaintiff while intoxicated and incapable of transacting business and that the only consideration for the transfer to defendant was the fixed sum stated by plaintiff, and he ordered an account to be taken as to the state of the general accounts between the parties. This judgment was affirmed by the Supreme Court (N. S.) in banc. Held, that upon the evidence and considering the nature of the transaction and all the circumstances attending it the courts below could not have found otherwise than they did and their decision should be affirmed. See ton v. King, xviii., 712.

17. INTEREST.

170. Contract for construction of works—Deductions for portions omitted—Partial cancellation of contract—Arts. 1065, 1691 C. C.—Appeal on special questions—Deferred payment—Computation of interest—Payments in advance—Rebates—Powers of appellate court.—The municipality agreed to pay for works to be constructed by promissory notes payable in two years without interest, said notes to be delivered to the contractor on the completion of the works and to bear a date assumed to be the mean date of completion of the works as carried on in detail. The amount of the notes represented the price of the tender with average interest added, and the municipality reserved the privilege of making payments upon the acceptance of progressive estimates on the works as completed from time to time, without interest or previous notice "en déduisant les intérêts composés au taux de six pour cent par an à échoir après l'époque des paiements et lesquels étaient compris dans le prix de soumission pour la totalité des deux années." The mean date was settled as 15th December, 1899, and the notes for the balance due were delivered in 1900. The trial court allowed the municipality interest on advance payments from the dates on which they had been respectively made, both before and after 15th December, 1899, up to 15th December, 1901, but the judgment appealed from disallowed all interest prior to 15th December 1899, on the payments which were made before that date. Held, that upon the proper construction of the contract the method followed by the Court of Appeal as to the calculation of interest on the advance payments was correct. — The Court of Appeal, however, calculated this interest on the basis of the actual price of the works as tendered for. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from on this point, that the interest should be calculated on the basis of the price actually mentioned in the contract, and upon the actual amount of the advance payments made.—Certain of the works were not executed, by orders from the municipality and, on this head, the trial court deducted $2,442.50 from the plaintiff's claim. The judgment appealed from restored this amount and added it to the judgment in favour of the plaintiff. It appeared, however, that the plaintiff had, at least tacitly, consented to this diminution and made no protest in respect thereof. — Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that, under the circumstances, the plaintiff could not claim the sum in question as damages under arts. 1065 and 1691 of the Civil Code. *Ville de Maisonneuve v. swamp lots only whilst it actually included sixteen adjoining lots in addition thereto, a contract for the sale of the whole property made in consequence by her agent was held not binding upon her, and was set aside by the court on the ground of error, as the parties were not ad idem as to the subject matter of the contract, and there was no actual consent by the owner to the agreement so made for the sale of her lands. *Murray v. 179. Contract for construction of works—Specifications—“From” and “to” streets—Reference to annexed plan—Construction of deed—Mistake—Costs.—The words “from” and “to” streets mentioned in specifications for the construction of works undertaken by an agreement in writing as shewn on a plan annexed to and declared to form part of the contract are not necessarily exclusive and, in the case in question, where the agreement provided that the works should be constructed “along Notre-Dame street from Berri street to Lacroix street as shewn on the said plan” these words mean as far as the plan shews along Notre-Dame street but not exceeding the most distant side of Lacroix street. — Mills and Armour, JJ., dissenting, were of opinion that the plan was annexed to the written agreement merely for the purposes of illustration and that the words in the agreement limited the contract so that the works undertaken would not include constructions shewn on the plan over any portion of either Berri street or Lacroix street. *City of Montreal v. In addition to the count for balance due on the agreement the plaintiff inserted in his declaration the common counts for work and labour. On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada: Held, that there was not a sufficient fulfilment of the agreement, and inasmuch as L. had given no particulars, nor any evidence under the indubitatus counts, the rule absolute of the court below, ordering judgment to be entered for the defendants, should be affirmed and the appeal dismissed with costs. *Lakin v. 185. Condition as to time—Divisibility of contract—Completion of works.—By a contract to remove spans from a wrecked bridge in the St. Lawrence the contractors agreed “to remove both spans of the wrecked bridge and put them ashore for the sum of $25,000, we to be paid $5,000 as soon as one span is removed from the channel and another $5,000 as soon as one span is put ashore and the balance as soon as the work is completed. . . It being understood and agreed that we push the work with all reasonable despatch, but if we fail to complete work this season we are to have the right to complete it next season.” Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, Taschereau and Davies, JJ., dissenting, that the contract was divisible, and the contractors having removed one span from the channel and put it ashore were entitled to the two payments of $5,000 each notwithstanding the whole work was not completed in the second season. *Collins Bay Rafting and Forwarding Co. v. 23. PENAL CLAUSE.

192. Contract — Building of engine and boiler—Time for completion—Damages—Construction of contract.—The action was for the contract price of building an engine and boiler for defendants (appellants), and the defence was that the work was not done within the time provided for in the contract, and that defendants were entitled to deduct $20 a day for each day's default in completion, as the agreement allowed, the balance being paid into court. The trial judge held plaintiffs entitled to recover, finding that the delay was occasioned by defendants, but he deducted a small amount as damages for delay for a time attributable to plaintiffs. The Divisional Court reversed this judgment and dismissed the action. The Court of Appeal for Ontario (21 Ont. App. R. 160), restored the original judgment, and allowed plaintiffs the amount deducted at the trial.—The Supreme Court of Canada affirmed the judgment appealed from, being of opinion that the delay was caused by the defendants themselves, and that the Court of Appeal rightly held plaintiffs entitled to recover the full contract price. French River Tug Co. v. Kerr Engine Co., xxiv., 703.

24. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

194. Agreement with ship's husband — Breach — Action — Special assumpsit—Accord and satisfaction — Evidence — Nonsuit — Question for jury.—W. part owner, (before the Com. Law Prac. Act, 1873,) sued V. & Co., merchants and ship-brokers in England, complaining that while he had entire charge of the vessel as ship's husband, they, being his agents, refused to follow his directions, and committed a breach of agreement not to charter or send the vessel on any voyage, except as ordered by W. or with his consent. E. V. had obtained from W. a one-fourth share in the vessel, the purchase being effected by V. & Co. On arrival of the vessel at Liverpool, V. & Co. incurred a large expense in coppering her, contrary to directions, and sent her on a voyage of which W. disapproved. W. wrote complaining and protesting, and V. & Co. replied that there could be no cause of complaint against their management, and that they would not have purchased a fourth in the vessel if they were not to have management and control on the other side of the Atlantic. Correspondence ensued, and finally W. wrote, referring to "eternal bickerings," re-asserted his right to control, stated in detail his grounds of complaint against them, and closed with the words: "To end the matter, if your brother, (E. V.) will dispose of his quarter, I will purchase it, say for $4,200 in cash." This amount was accepted, and the transfer made to W. Defendants filed, amongst others, a plea of accord and satisfaction and the trial judge, considering it established by the letter lastly referred to, entered a nonsuit.—Held, on appeal, reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick (2 P. & B. 70), which had affirmed the nonsuit, that the onus of proof of accord and satisfaction was upon defendants and depended upon verbal testimony adduced, and should have been passed upon by the jury; that in the letter the expression "to end the matter" might be construed as applying to "bickerings" as to future management, and there had not been an accord and satisfaction.—Held, also, that the agreement having been made between W. and V. & Co. only, and, being a contract of agency apart from any question of ownership, the action was properly brought by W. in his own name. Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting. Weldon v. Vaughan, v., 35.

195. Principal and agent — Sale by agent — Commission — Evidence.—The appellant company deal in electrical supplies at Halifax and had at times sold goods on commission for the defendant, a company manufacturing electric machinery in Montreal. In 1897 the appellant telegraphed the respondent as follows:—"Windsor electric station completely burned. Fully insured. Send us quotations for new plant. Will look after your interest." The reply was:—"Can furnish Windsor 180 Killowatt Stanley two phase complete exciter and switchboard, $4,900, including commission for you. Transformers, large size, 75 cents per light." . . . The manager of appellant company went to Windsor but could not effect a sale of this machinery. Shortly after a travelling agent of the defendant company came to Halifax and saw the manager and they worked together for a time trying to make a sale but the agent finally sold a smaller plant to the Windsor Company for $1,800. The Starr Company claimed a commission on this sale and on its being refused brought an action therefor.—Held, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the Starr Company was not employed to effect the sale actually made; that the Montreal company offered the commission only on the sale of the specific plant mentioned in the answer to the request for quotations; and that there was no evidence of any course of dealing between the two companies which would entitle the Starr Company to such commission. Starr, Son & Co. v. Royal Electric Co., xxx., 384.

196. Principal and agent — Municipal corporation — Water commissioners — Statutory body — Powers — Action — Parties — 37 Vict. c. 79 (Ont.).—By 37 Vict. c. 79 (Ont.) the waterworks of Windsor are under management of a Board of Commissioners who collect the revenue, pay the city any surplus therefrom, and initiate works for improving the system, the city supplying the funds. The total expenditure is not to exceed $300,000 and not more than $20,000 can be expended in any one year without a vote of the ratepayers.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (27 Ont. App. R. 566), that the Board is merely the statutory agent of the city in carrying out the purposes of the Act, and a contract for work to be performed in connection with the waterworks, not authorized by by-law of the council, and incurring an expenditure which would exceed the statutory limit was not a binding contract.—Held, also, that if an action could have been brought on such contract the city corporation would have been a necessary party.—Quære, Would not the city corporation have been the only party liable to be sued? Macdougall v. Water Commissioners of Windsor, xxxi., 326.

28. RESTRAINT OF TRADE.

207. Company law—Foreign corporation—Telegraph lines—Exclusive rights—Restraint of trade—Public interest—Comity of nations.—In 1869 the E. N. A. Ry. Co., owning the road from St. John, N.B., westward to the United States boundary, made an agreement giving the W. U. Tel. Co., exclusive right for 99 years to construct and operate a line of telegraph over its road. In 1876, a mortgage on the road was foreclosed and the road sold under a decree to the St. J. M. Ry. Co., which, in 1883, leased it to the N. B. Ry. Co. for 999 years. The telegraph line was constructed by the W. U. Tel. Co. under the agreement, and continued ever since without any new agreement with the St. J. M. Ry. Co. or the N. B. Ry. Co. The W. U. Tel. Co. is incorporated by the State of New York, for the purpose of constructing and operating telegraph lines in the State. Its charter neither allows it to engage, nor prohibits it from engaging, in business outside of the State. In 1888, the C. P. Ry. Co. completed a road from Montreal to St. John, a portion of it having running powers over the line of the N. B. Ry. Co., on which the W. U. Tel. Co. had constructed its telegraph line. The N. B. Ry. Co. having given permission to the C. P. R. Co. to construct another telegraph line over the same road, the W. U. Tel. Co. applied for and obtained an injunction to prevent its being built.—Held, 1. That the agreement of 1869 with the E. N. A. Ry. Co. is binding on the present owners of the road.—2. That the contract with the W. U. Tel. Co. was consistent with the purpose of its corporation, and not prohibited by its charter nor by the local laws of New Brunswick, and its right to enter into such a contract and carry on the business provided for thereby is a right recognized by the comity of nations.—3. The exclusive right granted to the W. U. Tel. Co. does not avoid the contract as being against public policy, nor as being a contract in restraint of trade.—Per Gwynne, J., dissenting. The comity of nations does not require the courts of this country to enforce, in favour of a foreign corporation, a contract depriving a railway company in Canada of the right to permit a domestic corporation, created for the purpose of erecting telegraph lines in the Dominion, to erect such a line upon its land, and depriving it of the right to construct a telegraph line upon its own land. 30. SALE OF GOODS.

210. Sale of perishable goods—Future delivery—Condition of prepayment—Bill of lading—Principal and agent—Vesting of ownership—Bill of exchange—Failure of consideration.—W. purchased and shipped a cargo of corn on the order of C., drawing at ten days for the price, freight and insurance. This draft was discounted at a bank by W., and the corn insured by him for his own benefit, shipped by him under a bill of lading, which with the policy of insurance, was assigned by him to the bank. The bank forwarded the draft, policy and bill of lading to their agents, with instructions that the corn was not to be delivered until the draft was paid. The draft was accepted by C., but the cargo arriving in damaged condition before maturity, C. refused to receive it, or to pay draft. The bank and W. sold the cargo on account of whom it might concern, credited C. with the proceeds, and W. filed a bill to recover balance of draft and interest.—Held, reversing the Court of Appeal for Ontario (5 Ont. App. R. 626), Strong, J., dissenting, that the contract was not one of agency; that the property in the corn remained by the act of W. in himself and his assignees, until after the arrival of the corn and payment of the draft; and the damage to the corn having occurred while the property in it continued to be in W. and his assignees, C. should not bear the loss. Corby v. Williams, vii., 470.

211. Sale of goods by sample—Place of inspection—Delivery—Sale through brokers—Agency—Acquiescence.—Where goods are sold by sample the place of delivery is, in the absence of a special agreement to the contrary, the place for inspection by the buyer, and refusal to inspect there when opportunity therefor is afforded is a breach of the contract to purchase.—Evidence of mercantile usage will not be allowed to add to or affect the construction of a contract for sale of goods unless such custom is general. Evidence of usage in Canada will not affect the construction of a contract for sale of goods in New York by parties domiciled there, unless the latter are shewn to have been cognizant of it, and can be presumed to have made their contract with reference to it.—If parties in Canada contract to purchase goods in New York through brokers, first by telegram and letters, and completed by exchange of bought and sold notes, signed by the brokers, the latter may be regarded as agents of the purchasers in Canada; but if not, if the purchasers make no objection to the form of the contract, or to want of authority in the brokers, and after the goods arrive refuse to accept them on other grounds, they will be held to have ratified the contract. Trent Valley Woollen Mfg. Co. v. Oelrichs, xxiii., 682.

212. Sale of timber—Delivery—Time for payment—Premature action.—By agreement in writing, I. agreed to sell and the V. H. L. Co. to purchase timber to be delivered "free of charge where they now lie within ten days from the time the ice is advised as clear out of the harbour so that the timber may be counted. . . . Settlement to be finally made inside of thirty days in cash, less 2 per cent. for the dimension timber which is at John's Island. — Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, that the last clause did not give the purchaser thirty days after delivery for payment; that it provided for delivery by vendor and payment by purchasers within thirty days from the date of the contract; and that if purchasers accepted the timber after the expiration of thirty days from such date, an event not provided for in the contract, an action for the price could be brought immediately after the acceptance. Victoria Harbour Lumber Co. v. Irwin, xxiv., 607.

213. Sale by sample—Objections to invoice—Reasonable time—Acquiescence—Evidence.—If a merchant receives an invoice and retains it for a considerable time without making any objection, there is a presumption against him that the price stated in the invoice was that agreed upon. Judgment of the Queen's Bench, that the evidence was sufficient to rebut the presumption reversed, and trial court judgment (Q. R. 9 S. C. 128) restored.—Gwynne, J., dissented, holding that the appeal depended on mere matters of fact as to which an appellate court should not interfere. Kearney v. Letellier, xxvii., 1.

214. Construction of agreement to secure advances—Sale—Pledge—Delivery of posses- sion—Arts. 434, 1025, 1026, 1027, 1472, 1474, 1492, 1494c, C. C.—Bailment to manufacturer.—K. B. made an agreement with T. for the purchase of the output of his sawmill during the season of 1896, a memorandum being executed between them to the effect that T. sold and K. B. purchased all the lumber that he should saw at his mill during the season, delivered at Hadlow wharf, at Levis; that the purchasers should have the right to refuse all lumber rejected by their culler; that the lumber delivered, culled and piled on the wharf should be paid for at prices stated; that the seller should pay the purchasers $1.50 per hundred deals, Quebec standard, to meet the cost of unloading cars, classification and piling on the wharf; that the seller should manufacture the lumber according to specifications furnished by the purchasers; that the purchasers should make payments in cash once a month for the lumber delivered, less two and a half per cent.; that the purchasers should advance money upon the sale of the lumber on condition that the seller should, at the option of the purchasers, furnish collateral security on his property, including the mill and machinery belonging to him, and obtain a promissory note from his wife for the amount of each cullage, the advances being made on the culler's certificates shewing receipts of logs not exceeding $25 per hundred logs of fourteen inches standard; that all logs paid for by the purchasers should be stamped with their name, and that all advances should bear interest at the rate of 7 per cent. Before the river-drive commenced, the logs were culled and received on behalf of the purchasers, and stamped with their usual mark, and they paid for them a total sum averaging $32.33 per hundred. Some of the logs also bore the seller's mark, and a small quantity, which were buried in snow and ice, were not stamped, but were received on behalf of the purchasers along with the others. The logs were then allowed to remain in the actual possession of the seller. During the season a writ of execution issued against the seller, under which all moveable property in his possession was seized, including a quantity of the logs in question, lying along the river-drive and at the mill, and also a quantity of lumber into which part of the logs in question had been manufactured, at the seller's mill.—Held (Taschereau, J., taking no part in the judgment upon the merits), that the contract so made between the parties constituted a sale of the logs, and, as a necessary consequence, of the deals and boards into which part of them had been manufactured. King v. Dupuis dit Gilbert, xxviii., 388.

215. Agreement to supply goods—Property in goods supplied—Execution—Seizure.—By an agreement between H., of the one part, and W. and wife of the other, the latter were to provide and furnish a store, and H. to supply stock, and replenish same when necessary; W. was to devote his whole time to the business; W. and wife were to make monthly returns of sales and cash balances, quarterly returns of stock, etc., on hand, and to remit weekly proceeds of sales with certain deductions. H. had a right at any time to examine the books and have an account of the stock, etc.; the net profits were to be shared between the parties; the agreement could be determined at any time by H. or by W. and wife on a month's notice.—Held, that the goods supplied by H. under this agreement as to stock of the business were not sold to W. and wife, and remained the property of H. until sold in the ordinary course; such goods, therefore, were not liable to seizure under execution against H. at the suit of a creditor. Ames-Holden Co. v. Hatfield, xxix., 95.

216. Sale of goods—Delivery—"At" shed—"Into" shed or grounds adjacent.]—A tender by H. to supply coal to the Town of Goderich pursuant to advertisement thereof contained an offer to deliver it "into the coal shed, at pumping station or grounds adjacent thereto where directed by you," (that is by a committee of the council). The tender was accepted and the contract afterwards signed called for delivery "at the coal shed." A portion of the coal was delivered, without directions from the committee, from the vessel on to the dock, about 80 feet from the shed and separated from it by a road.—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, that the coal was not delivered "at the coal shed" as agreed by the contract signed by the parties which was the binding document.—Held, also, that if the contract was to be decided by the terms of the tender the delivery was not in accordance therewith the place of delivery not being "at the pumping station or grounds adjacent thereto." Town of Goderich v. Holmes, xxxii., 211.

217. Contract by—Correspondence—Sale of goods—Condition as to acceptance—Post letter—Time limit—Term for delivery—Breach of contract—Damages—Counterclaim—Condition precedent—Right of action.]—The appellant, O., wrote a letter, dated 2d October, 1899, offering to supply the company with thirty-seven car loads of hay at prices mentioned "subject to acceptance in five days, delivery within six months." On 5th Oct. the company wrote and mailed a letter in reply, as follows:—"We would now inform you that we will accept your offer on timothy hay as per your letter to us of the 2nd instant. Please ship as soon as possible the orders you already have in hand and also get off the seven cars as early as possible as our stock is very low. Try and ship us three or four cars so as to catch the next freight here from Northport. We will advise you further as to shipment of the thirty cars. Should we not be able to take it all in before your roads break up, we presume you will have no objection to allowing balance to remain over until the farmers can haul it in. Do the best you can to get some empty cars at once, as we must have three or four cars by next freight."—This letter was registered and, although it reached O.'s post office within the five days, yet by reason of the registration it was not received by him until the following day. On 12th Oct. O.'s agent wrote the company acknowledging the letter and saying that acceptance of the offer arrived too late and that therefore the hay could not be furnished. On 6th Nov. the company replied insisting on delivery of the hay as contracted for by the 15th of that month, and notifying O. that, in case of default, they would replace the order charging him with any extra cost and expenses.—Held, that the correspondence did not constitute a binding contract as the parties were never ad idem as to all the terms proposed. — Prior to the expiration of the six months mentioned in O.'s letter, the company, in defence to an action by him against them, counterclaimed for damages for his alleged breach of contract for delivery of the thirty-seven car loads of hay.—Held, that as the six months limited for making delivery had not expired, the company had no right of action for damages, even had there been a contract, and that the filing of the counterclaim was premature. Oppenheimer v. Brackman & Ker Milling Co., xxxii., 699. See 9 B.C. Rep. 343

31. SALE OF LAND.

227. Contract of sale—Contre lettre—Principal and agent—Construction of contract.]—A sale of property was controlled by a writing in the nature of a contre lettre, by which it was agreed as follows: "The vendor in consideration of the sum of $2,940 makes and executes this day a clear and valid deed in favour of the purchaser of certain property (therein described), and the purchaser for the term of three years is to let the vendor have control of the said deeded property, to manage as well, safely and properly as he would if the said property was his own, and bargain and sell the said property for the best price that can be had for the same, and pay the rent, interest and purchase money when sold, and all the avails of the said property to the purchaser to the amount of $2,940, and interest at the rate of 8% per annum from the date of these presents, and then the said purchaser shall re-deed to the vendor any part of the said property that may remain unsold after receiving the aforesaid amount and interest." The vendor was at the time indebted to the purchaser in the sum of $2,941. The two documents were registered. The vendor had other properties, and gave the purchaser a power of attorney to convey all his real estate in the same locality. The term of three years mentioned in the contre lettre was continued by mutual consent. The vendor subsequently paid amounts on account of his general indebtedness to the purchaser. It was only after the purchaser's death that the vendor claimed from the heirs of the purchaser the balance, above mentioned, of $1,470, as owing to him for the management of his properties.—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, and restoring the judgment of the Superior Court, that the proper construction of the contract was to be gathered from both documents and dealings of the parties, and that the property having been deeded merely as security it was not an absolute sale, and that plaintiff was not purchaser's agent in respect of this property.—Held, also, that the only action plaintiff had was the actio mandata contraria with a tender of his reddition de compte. *Hunt v. 32. SALE OF MINING RIGHTS.

237. Construction of deed — Sale of phosphate mining rights—Option to purchase other minerals found while working — Transfer of rights.]—M. by deed sold to W. the phosphate mining rights of certain land, the deed containing a provision that "in case the said purchaser in working the said mines should find other minerals of any kind he shall have the privilege of buying the same from the said vendor or representative by paying the price set upon the same by two arbitrators, appointed by the parties." W. worked the phosphate mines for five years, and then discontinued it. Two years later he sold his mining rights in the land, and by various conveyances they were finally transferred to B., each assignment purporting to convey "all mines, minerals and mining rights already found or which may hereafter be found" on said land. A year after the transfer to B. the original vendor, M., granted the exclusive right to work mines and veins of mica on said land to W. & Co., who proceeded to develop the mica. B. then claimed an option to purchase the mica mines, under the original agreement, and demanded an arbitration to fix the price, which was refused, and she brought an action to compel M. to appoint an arbitrator and for damages.—Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench, that the option to purchase other minerals could only be exercised in respect to such as were found when actually working the phosphate, which was not the case with the mica, as to which B. claimed the option. Baker v. McLelland, xxiv., 416.

238. Contract — Mining claim—Agreement for sale—Construction—Enhanced value.]—

By agreement in writing signed by both parties B. offered to convey his interest in certain mining claims to N. for a price named with a stipulation that, if the claims proved on development to be valuable and a joint stock company was formed by N. or his associates, N. might allot or cause to be allotted to B. such amount of shares as he should deem meet. By a contemporaneous agreement, N. promised and agreed that a company should immediately be formed and that B. should have a reasonable amount of stock according to its value. No company was formed by N., and B. brought an action for a declaration that he was entitled to an undivided half interest in the claims or that the agreement should be specifically performed.

—Held, reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, that the dual agreement above mentioned was for a transfer at a nominal price in trust to enable N. to capitalize the properties and form a company to work them on such terms as to allotting stock to B. as the parties should mutually agree upon; and that, on breach of said trust, B. was entitled to a re-conveyance of his interest in the claims and an account of moneys received or that should have been received from the working thereof in the meantime. Briggs v. Newswander, xxxi., 405.

33. SALE OF PATENT.

239. Sale of patent—Future improvements.]

—By contract under seal M. agreed to sell to B. and S. the patent for an acetylene gas machine for which he had applied and a caveat had been filed, and also all improvements and patents for such machine that he might thereafter make, and covenanted that he would procure patents in Canada and the United States and assign the same to B. and S. The latter received an assignment of the Canadian patent and paid a portion of the purchase, but when the American patent was issued it was found to contain a variation from the description of the machine in the caveat and they refused to pay the balance, and in an action by M. to recover the same, they demanded by counterclaim a return of what had been paid on account.—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, that the agreement was not satisfied by an assignment of any patent that M. might afterwards obtain; that he was bound to obtain and assign a patent for a machine described in the caveat referred to in the agreement; and that as the evidence shewed the variation therefrom in the American patent to be most material, and to deprive the purchasers of a feature in the machine which they deemed essential, M. was not entitled to recover.—Held, further, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that as B. and S. accepted the Canadian patent and paid a portion of the purchase money in consideration thereof, and as they took the benefit of it, worked it for their own profit and sold rights under it, they were not entitled to recover back the money so paid as money had and received by M. to their use. Bingham v. McMurray, xxx., 159.

34. SALE OF TIMBER.

240. Construction—Sale of timber—Failure of consideration—Right to recover back money paid.—C., after personal examination made an agreement with W., who sold him all the pine timber standing on a lot, "such as will make good merchantable waney-edged timber, suitable for his purpose, at the rate of $13 per hundred cubic feet," and paid $1,000, "the balance to be paid for before the timber is removed from the lot." C. cut $651.17 worth of first-class timber, suitable for the Quebec market, which was all of that class to be found on the lot, and sued W. to recover back the balance of the $1,000, namely, $348.83.—Held, that the true construction of the contract was that W. sold and granted to C. permission to enter upon his lot, and cut all the "good merchantable timber there growing, suitable for his purpose," and not merely "first-class timber;" and that as there was more than sufficient "good merchantable timber" still remaining on the lot to cover the balance of the $1,000, there was no failure of consideration and plaintiff could not recover back the balance of the money he had paid.—Per Taschereau and Gwynne, J.J., held; That the payment of the $1,000 was an absolute payment, the plaintiff believing and representing to defendant that there was sufficient timber to cover that amount, if not more, on the faith of which representation defendant entered into the contract, which he otherwise would not have done, and that if the plaintiff made an error, he, and not the defendant, must suffer the consequences of this error. 35. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

242. Specific performance — Terms of delivery — Reasonable time — Arts. 1067, 1073, 1544, C. C.—Trade custom—Measure of dam- ages.—On 7th May, 1874, L. sold C. five hundred tons of hay, a memo. being made and signed by L., as follows: "Sold to G. A. C. 500 tons of timothy hay of best quality, at the price of $21 per ton f. o. b. propellers in canal, Montreal, at such times and in such quantities as the said G. A. C. shall order. The said hay to be perfectly sound and dry when delivered on board, and weight tested if required. The same to be paid for on delivery of each lot, by order or draft on self, at Bank of Montreal, the same to be consigned to order of Dominion Bank, Toronto."—L. delivered 147 tons and 33 pounds of hay, after which C. refused to receive any more. L., having several times notified C. verbally and in writing, by formal protest on the 28th July, 1874, required him to take delivery of the remaining 354 tons of hay.—The action was for damages for breach of contract, and for extra expenses incurred in consequence.—On appeal, Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, that the contract was intended to be executed within a reasonable time; that, from the evidence of usages of the trade, the delivery, under the circumstances, was intended to be made before the new crop of hay; that C. being in default to receive the hay when required, within reasonable time of the coming in of the new crop, he was liable for the damages sustained, and that the proper measure of damages was the difference at the place of delivery between the value when acceptance was refused and the contract price with the addition of the consequent necessary expenses, the amount of which, being a matter of evidence, is properly within the province of the court below to determine. Chapman v. Larin, iv., 349.

243. Executors — Powers — Sale of wild lands—Unknown quantity — Specific performance.—A sale of a lot of wild land of unknown area at so much per acre, by executors under powers to sell such portion as might be necessary to pay debts due by their testator, proved upon survey to exceed the estimate made before the sale both as to the quantity of land and the amount necessary to meet the liabilities.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that the purchaser at a rate per acre was entitled to conveyance of the whole of the lot so sold, and that the execution of such conveyance would not constitute a breach of trust under the will. (See 2 B. C. Rep. 67.) Sea v. McLean, xiv., 632.

244. Sale of land — Specific performance — Agreement to assign mortgage in part payment — Second mortgage — Negotiable instrument.—In a sale of land for $4,800, L. agreed to give in part payment a second mortgage on another parcel for $2,500, which was subsequent to first mortgage for a large amount. W. refused to accept the mortgage, and in an action on the agreement to recover the purchase money and interest represented by such mortgage it was admitted that the mortgage was not a first mortgage, that no notice had been given to W. of its being a second mortgage, nor had there been any waiver of his right to demand a first mortgage. On the contrary he had asked, "Is this a negotiable instrument?" and was told "It is all right."—Held, affirming the Court of Queen's Bench for Manitoba, that under the terms of the agreement plaintiff was entitled to a good marketable mortgage—that is a first mortgage upon the real estate.—Per Ritchie, C.J. The words "negotiable instrument" did not mean a nego-

tible instrument in the nature of a promissory note, but an instrument which could be taken into the market as a saleable instrument—Per Strong, J. An agreement to assign a mortgage on land by way of absolute transfer or sale, or, as in the present case, to assign a mortgage on land in payment, or part payment, of other land sold by the proposed transferee to the proposed transferor, is a contract of which a Court of Equity would decree specific performance, and in carrying out a decree for specific performance, the purchaser is always entitled to a reference as to title whatever may be the nature of the property which is the subject of the sale, the right to a reference of title not being confined to sales of real estate. A Court of Equity would not compel a party who agreed to purchase a mortgage on land simply to take any other than a mortgage of the legal estate free from all prior incumbrances. The title in such a case which the vendor of the mortgage impliedly undertakes to give is a good marketable title, which means a title to a mortgage of a legal estate in possession, just as the vendor who sells land, without saying more, impliedly agrees to shew a good title to both the mortgage debt, the money secured by the mortgage, and to the security holden for the debt, the land; and he can only shew this by proving that the legal estate free from all incumbrances has passed under the mortgage. The same rule should prevail in a court of law, the construction of contracts being the same in both jurisdictions. If the agreement had been executed the remedy of the plaintiff would have been upon any covenants which the transfer might have contained, or, if still in fieri, if it could be shewn there had been any waiver of the right to call for a good title, the plaintiff might be concluded; and this might have been a consequence of distinct notice to him during the negotiations that the mortgage was upon the equity of redemption only, but there was no proof of any such waiver or acceptance of notice from which it might be inferred—Per Henry, J. When it was stipulated in general terms that a mortgage was to be assigned the agreement could only be performed by assigning a first mortgage.—Appeal dismissed with costs. Lynch v. Wood, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 783.

245. Specific performance — Title to land — Objections to title—Waiver.—To entitle a party to a contract to a decree for specific performance, he must have been prompt himself in performance of the obligations devolving upon him, and always ready to carry out the contract within a reasonable time, even although time might not have been of the essence of the agreement.—Specific performance will not be decreed when the party asking performance has declared his inability to carry out the agreement on his part.—A purchaser of land who takes possession of the property and exercises acts of ownership by making repairs and improvements, will be held to have waived any objections to the title.—Objections to title cannot be raised where the purchaser has made a tender of a blank deed of mortgage for execution, for the purpose of carrying out the purchase. Judgment appealed from (29 N. S. Rep. 424) affirmed. Wallace v. Hesselin, xxix., 171.

36. STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

248. Interest in mine — Agreement to transfer portion of proceeds of sale — Statute of Frauds.—An agreement by the owner of an interest in a gold mine to transfer to another, in consideration of services performed in working the mine, a portion of such owner's share in the proceeds when it was sold is not a contract for sale of an interest in land within the Statute of Frauds. (24 N. S. Rep. 526, reversed). Stuart v. Mott, xxiii., 384.

249. Statute of Frauds — Memorandum in writing—Repudiating contract by.—A writing containing a statement of all the terms of a contract for the sale of goods requisite to constitute a memo., under the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds, may be used for that purpose though it repudiates the sale. Judgment appealed from (22 Ont. App. R. 468) affirmed. Martin v. Haubner, xxvi., 142.

250. Partnership — Dealing in land—Statute of Frauds.—A partnership may be formed by a parol agreement notwithstanding it is to deal in land, the Statute of Frauds not applying to such a case. Judgment appealed from (6 B. C. Rep. 260) affirmed, Gwynne and Sedgwick, JJ., dissenting. Archibald v. McNerhanie, xxix., 564.

38. SURETYSHIP.

254. Financial agent's commission — Security for advances—Suretyship—Indorsement of unused note—Right to commission for indorsing—Consideration.—M., by writing, agreed to become surety for McD. by indorsing a promissory note, and McD. agreed to transfer property to M. as security, to do everything necessary to be done to realize such securities, to protect M. against any loss or expense in regard thereto, or in connection with the note, to pay him a commission for indorsing, and to retire note within 6 months from date of agreement. The note was made and indorsed and the securities transferred, but was never used. In an action by M. for his commission:—Held, affirming the Court of Appeal for Ontario, Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting, that M. having done everything on his part to be done to earn his commission, and having had no control over the note after he indorsed it, and being in no way responsible for the failure to discount it, was entitled to the commission. McDonald v. Manning, xix., 112.

39. TENDER.

257. Tender — Unilateral undertaking — Bond — Condition — Acceptance.—H. tendered for construction of a railway pursuant to advertisement, and his offer was conditionally accepted. At the same time H. executed a bond reciting the fact of the tender, conditioned, within 4 days, to provide 2 acceptable sureties and deposit 5% of the amount of his tender in the Bank of Montreal, and also to execute all necessary arrangements for the commencement and completion of the work by specified dates, and the prosecution thereof until completed. These conditions were not performed and the contract was eventually given to other persons. In an action on the bond:—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (18 Ont. App. R. 415), that the agreement made by the bond was unilateral; that the railway company was under no obligation to accept the sureties offered or to give H. the contract; that the bond and the agreement for the construction of the works were to be contemporaneous acts, and as no such agreement was entered into H. was not liable on the bond. Brantford, W. & Lake Erie Ry. Co. v. Huffman, xix., 336.

258. Tender by firm—Assignment of interest — Alteration of specification after tender and before acceptance — Provision inserted against assignment — Incomplete contract—Locus standi — Action.—On 1st February, 1880, the corporation of St. Gabriel called for tenders for waterworks for the village, according to plan and specification.—St. J. & Co. tendered "to do the several works of supplying and laying water pipes in this village according to plan and specification," for $37,600.99.—The specification had no prohibition against transferring the contract. The tender of St. J. & Co., when the tenders were opened on 2nd March, was the lowest but one, that of D. & Co. By a memo. of agreement, made 5th March, 1880, between St. J. and C., doing business together under the name of St. J. & Co., and T. St. J. & C. transferred all their interest in or to and by virtue of the tender to T. for $500, a further sum of $500 to be paid by T. when contract should be awarded by by-law duly passed.—D. & Co. availed themselves of certain irregularities to withdraw their tender, the St. Gabriel council decided to make some changes in the plans and specifications, and at a meeting on 12th July, 1880, resolved that the specification as made by the engineer of the corporation, with the corrections as amended by the council, be accepted and adopted, and that St. J. should be allowed two days to consider the specification and, if he should accept, that he should attend on the 15th at 3 p.m. to sign the contract.—The new specification contained the following: "The contractor will not be permitted to sub-let any portion of the work, except for the delivery of materials, without the consent of the municipal council." On 15th July, St. J. and C. went to the office of the respondent's notary to sign the contract. At the same time T. presented himself, and claimed the right to sign the contract as transferee, producing and communicating to the mayor, who was present, the document by which St. J. & Co. had transferred to him all their interest in the contract in question.—The mayor thereupon requested delay until the evening to consult the council, which was to meet in accordance with the terms of the adjournment on the 12th July, when he made a report of the respective pretensions of St. J. and C. and of T. St. J. was called upon by the members of the council to state whether T.'s pretensions were founded, and whether it was true that he was transferee of St. J. & Co.'s interests under the tender which they had submitted. The result was that the council determined not to give the contract to St. J. & Co., but sent for the next lowest tenderers, to whom they made an offer on the terms and conditions proposed to St. J. & Co. at the meeting of 12th July, and this offer being accepted it was resolved to give them the contract, and it was signed the next day.

St. J. in his own name, and as the only person interested in the tender of St. J. & Co., then instituted an action in damages for breach of the contract which he pretended was entered into between himself and respondent under the resolutions of 12th July, 1880.—The Superior Court (12 R. L. 15) dismissed plaintiff's action, holding that the evidence shewed no individual tender by St. J., but one by St. J. and C., as constituting the firm of St. J. & Co., that therefore the plaintiff had no locus standi to maintain the action in his own name; that, besides, under the circumstances there never had been any completed contract between the parties; the provision against assigning the contract was a material stipulation which had been violated by the assignment to T., and that the council had been justified in refusing to accept the tender.—This judgment was reversed by the Court of Review at Montreal, but restored by the Queen's Bench.—On appeal the Supreme Court of Canada, Henry, J., dissenting, affirmed the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench.. Appeal dismissed with costs. St. James v. Corporation of St. Gabriel, 12th May, 1885, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 147.

41. VARYING TERMS.

261. Oral agreement in variation of written contract — Consideration.—Defendant had agreed in writing to accept goods in payment of two bills of exchange accepted by plaintiff, and plaintiff, having delivered the goods in payment of such bills, was subsequently sued by an indorsee of one of them, and compelled to pay it. In an action to recover the amount so paid by plaintiff, defendant offered evidence to shew that at the time the agreement in writing was made, the plaintiff orally agreed that the goods should not be taken as payment in full of the bills, and that he would pay the balance as soon as he was able. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment appealed from (20 N. S. Rep. 210) which held that such agreement, if made, was void for want of consideration. Cox v. Seeley, 6th May, 1896.

262. *Railways — Expropriation of land — Title to land—Tenants in common—Propriétaires par indivis—Construction of agreement — Misdescription—Plans and books of reference — Satisfaction of condition as to indemnity — Registry laws — Estoppel — R. S. Q. arts. 5163, 5164, art. 1590 C. C.]—The provisions of the Civil Code respecting the registration of real rights have no application to proceedings in matters of expropriation of lands for railway purposes under the provisions of the Revised Statutes of Quebec.—Pending expropriation proceedings begun against lands held in common, (par indivis) for the purposes of appellant's railway, the following instrument was signed and delivered to the company by six out of nine of the owners par indivis, viz.: "Be it known by these presents that we, the legatees Patterson of the Parish of Beauport, County of Quebec, do promise and agree that as soon as the Quebec, Montmorency and Charlevoix Railway is located through our land in Parishes of Notre-Dame des Anges, Beauport and L'Ange-Gardiens, and in consideration of its being so located, we will sell, bargain and transfer to the Quebec, Montmorency and Charlevoix Railway Company, for the sum of one dollar, such part of our said land as may be required for the construction and maintenance of the said railway, and exempt the said company from all damages to the rest of the said property, and that pending the execution of the deeds we will permit the construction of said railway to be proceeded with over our said land, without hindrance of any kind, provided that the said railway is located to our satisfaction. As witness our hands at Quebec, this 11th day of June, in the year of Our Lord, one thousand, eight hundred and eighty-six." Afterwards the line of the railway was altered and more than one year elapsed without the deposit of an amended plan and book of reference to shew the deviation from the line as originally located. The company, however, took possession of the land and constructed the railway across it and, in August, 1889, the same persons who had signed the above instrument granted an absolute deed of the lands to the company for a consideration of five dollars, acknowledged to have been paid, reciting therein that the said lands had "been selected and set apart by the said railway company for the ends and purposes of its railway and being already in the possession of the said railway company since the eleventh day of June, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six, in virtue of a certain promise of sale sous seing privé by the said vendors in favour of the said company." Neither of the instruments* were registered. G. purchased the New Waterford Cove property in 1889 and, after registering his deed, executed by all the owners par indivis, brought a petitory action to recover that part of the property taken by the railway company, alleging that the instruments mentioned constituted a donation of the lands and did not come within the operation of arts. 5163 and 5164 of the Revised Statutes of Quebec. Held, that the terms of s.-s. 10 of art. 5164, R. S. Q. were sufficiently wide to include and apply to donations; that the instrument in question was not properly a donation, but a valid agreement or accord within the provisions of said tenth sub-section, under onerous conditions of indemnity which appeared to have been satisfied by the company; that, as the agreement stipulated no time within which the new plan should be filed and the location appeared to have been made to the satisfaction of the required proportion of the owners, it was sufficient for the company to file the amended plan and book of reference at any time thereafter; and that, as the indemnity agreed upon by six out of nine of the owners par indivis had been satisfied by changing the location of the railway line as desired, the requirements of art. 5164 R. S. Q., had been fully complied with and the plaintiff's action could not, under the circumstances, be maintained. Quebec, Montmorency & Charlevoix Ry. Co. v. Gibsons; Gibsons v. Quebec, Montmorency & Charlevoix Ry. Co., xxix., 340.

263. *Oral agreement — Evidence — Withdrawal of questions from jury — New trial.]—D. gave instructions in writing to H. respecting the sale of a coal mine on terms mentioned and agreeing to pay a commission of 5% on the selling price, such commission to include all expenses. H. failed to effect a sale. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (6 B. C. Rep. 505), that in an action by H. to recover expenses incurred in an endeavour to make a sale, and reasonable remuneration, parol evidence was admissible to shew that the written instructions did not constitute the whole of the terms of the contracts, but there had been a collateral oral agreement in respect to the expenses, and that the question as to whether or not there had been a collateral oral agreement in respect to the expenses and that the question as to whether or not there was an oral contract in addition to what appeared in the written instructions was a question that ought to have been submitted to the jury. *Dunsmuir v. 1. Carrier's contract — Shipping receipt — Limitation of liability — Damages — Negligence — Connecting lines—Wrongful conversion — Sale of goods for non-payment of freight — Principal and agent — Varying terms of contract.—A shipping receipt with conditions relieving the carrier from liability for loss or damages arising out of "the safe-keeping and carriage of the goods," even though caused by the negligence, carelessness or want of skill of the officers, servants or workmen of the carrier, without his fault or privity, and restricting claims to the cash value of the goods at the port of shipment, agreed for the carriage by the defendants' and other connecting lines of transportation, and made the freight payable on delivery of the goods at the point of destination. The defendants had previously made a special contract with the plaintiff but delivered the receipt to his agent at the point of shipment with a variation of the special terms made with him in respect to all shipments to him as consignee during the season of 1899, the variation being shewn by a clause stamped across the receipt of which the plaintiff had no knowledge. One of the shipments was sold at an intermediate point on the line of transportation on account of non-payment of freight by one of the companies in control of a connecting line to which the goods had been delivered by the defendants. Held, that the plaintiff's agent at the shipping point had no authority, as such, to consent to a variation of the special contract, nor could the carrier do so by inserting the clause in the receipt without the concurrence of the plaintiff; that the sale, so made at the intermediate point, amounted to a wrongful conversion of the goods by the defendants, and that they were not exempt from liability in respect thereof, at their full value. Wilson v. Canadian Development Co., xxxiii., 432.

COPYRIGHT.

1. Infringement of copyright—Textual copy —Source of information—Statutory forms—Notice on title page—Deposit of copies.—The publisher of a work containing biographical sketches cannot copy them from a copyrighted work, even where he has applied to the subjects of such sketches and been referred to the copyrighted work therefor.—In works of this nature where so much may be taken by different publishers from common sources and the information given must be in the same words, the courts will be careful not to restrict the right of one publisher to publish a work similar to that of another, if he obtains the information from common sources and does not, to save himself labour, merely copy from the work of the other that which has been the result of the latter's skill and diligence.—The notice of copyright to be inserted in the title page of a copyrighted work is sufficient if it substantially follows the statutory form. The omission of the words "of Canada" in such form is not a fatal defect, and, even if a defect, it is cured by s.s. 44, s. 7 of the Interpretation Act.—Depositing in the office of the Minister of Agriculture copies of a book containing notice of copyright before the copyright has been granted does not invalidate the same when granted. Garland v. Gemmill, xiv., 321.

2. Publication of dictionary—Source of information—Infringement—Evidence—Textual copy.—In an action for infringement of copyright in a dictionary the un rebutted evidence shewed that the publication complained of treated of almost all the subjects in the exact words used in the dictionary first published and repeated a great number of errors that occurred in the plaintiff's work. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from. (Q. R. 10 Q. B. 255), that the evidence made out a prima facie case of piracy against the defendants which justified the conclusion that they had infringed the copyright. Cadieus v. Beauchemin, xxxi., 370.

Terrebonne v. Sœurs de la Providence, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 434; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 81.

13. Appeal—Jurisdiction—Amount in controversy—Affidavits—Conflicting as to amount—The Exchequer Court Acts—50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, ss. 51-53 (D.)—54 & 55 Vict. c. 26, s. 8 (D.)—The Patent Act—R. S. C. c. 61, s. 36.—On a motion to quash an appeal where the respondents filed affidavits stating that the amount in controversy was less than the amount fixed by the statute as necessary to give jurisdiction to the appellate court, and affidavits were also filed by the appellants, shewing that the amount in controversy was sufficient to give jurisdiction under the statute, the motion to quash was dismissed, but the appellants were ordered to pay the costs, as the jurisdiction of the court to hear the appeal did not appear until the filing of the appellants' affidavits in answer to the motion. Dreschel v. Auer Incandescent Light Mfg. Co., xxviii., 268.

14. Abandonment of expropriation proceedings—Usurpation of lands—Illegal detention.—After the commencement of expropriation proceedings the city took possession of lands, constructed works thereon and incorporated it with a public street. Acting under a special statute subsequently passed, the expropriation proceedings were abandoned without payment of indemnity or return of the property. The declaration in an action by plaintiff to obtain relief was defective but an amendment was ordered under s. 63, Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act for the purpose of determining the actual controversy and as defendant's conduct had been tyrannical and flagrantly illegal the plaintiff was allowed his costs in all the courts. City of Montreal v. Hogan, xxxi., 1.

15. Contract for sale—Action for price—Counterclaim—Specific performance—Costs.—In an action for the price of land under an agreement for sale, or in the alternative for possession, defendant filed a counterclaim for specific performance and paid into court the amount of the purchase money and interest, demanding therewith a deed with covenants of warranty of title. Plaintiff proceeded with his action and recovered judgment at the trial for the amount claimed and costs, including costs on the counterclaim, the decree directing him to give the deed demanded by the defendant as soon as the costs were paid. The verdict was affirmed by the court en banc. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (33 N. S. Rep. 334), that as defendant had succeeded on his counterclaim he should not have been ordered to pay the costs before receiving his deed and the decree was varied by a direction that he was entitled to his deed at once with costs of appeal to the court below en banc, and to the Supreme Court of Canada against plaintiff. Parties to pay their own costs in court of first instance.—Held, per Gwynne, J. Defendant should have all costs subsequent to the payment into court. Millard v. Darrow, xxxi., 196.

16. Controverted election—Change of solicitors—Payment of costs—Stay of proceedings on appeal.—While an appeal was pending, on 1st October, 1901, motion was made for a change of solicitors of record and was granted on deposit being made of $400 to secure former solicitor's costs. Thereupon s. c. d.—13 counsel for appellant stated that an agreement for postponement of the hearing had been come to and the order for postponement was made accordingly. Beaudin, K.C., then asked leave to present a petition to have a new petitioner appointed on the ground that the postponement was the result of fraudulent collusion between the new solicitors and the former petitioner who had been paid to abandon proceedings. Leave for the application was granted after notice in order that, if collusion was proved, the order to postpone might be rescinded. On 22nd November another motion to change solicitors was made and granted, on consent of parties, the hearing being ordered to be peremptorily fixed for the term then in session and not later than 29th November. This date for hearing was fixed by the court suo motu. On 29th November appellant's counsel applied to stay proceedings till costs of the solicitor on the record from 1st October to 22nd November had been paid. The order was refused and the hearing ordered to proceed forthwith. Upon appellant's counsel stating that the case could not be distinguished from the Two Mountains Election Case (31 Can. S. C. R. 437) the appeal was dismissed with costs. Terrebonne Election Case, 29th November, 1901.

17. Provincial bonds—Succession duties—Exempted securities—Sale under will—Duty on proceeds—Proceedings by or against the Crown—Costs.—Costs will be given for or against the Crown as in other cases. 3. REFUSAL OF COSTS.

35. Appeal standing dismissed on equal division—Discretion of court in awarding costs saved—38 Vict. c. 11, s. 38.]—By the Act 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 38, the Supreme Court of Canada being authorized, in its discretion, to order payment of costs of appeal, the decision in this case, being on an equal division that the respondent should not have costs, did not necessarily prevent the majority of the court from ordering the payment of costs of appeal in other cases of an equal division of opinion amongst the judges. The Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Co. v. Wyld, i., 605, at pp. 693-696.

36. Court equally divided—Costs refused.]—The practice of the court has been to refuse costs when the court has been equally divided. Curry v. Curry, 13th March, 1880, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 676; McLeod v. N. B. Ry. Co., v., 283; Côté v. Morgan, vii., 1. McCallum v. Odette, vii., 36; Shield's v. Peak, viii., 579; *Milloy v. 37. Mutual error—Preliminary exception—Jurisdiction—Objection taken by court—Division of costs.] — Either through erroneous views held in common by both parties or by mutual agreement to let the matter pass in silence a question as to the jurisdiction of the court to hear an appeal was not raised but the case was argued on the merits. The court raised the question proprio motu and quashed the appeal without costs. Bank of Toronto v. Les Curé, etc., de la Nativité de la Sainte Vierge, xii., 25.

38. Quashing appeal—Objection taken by court.] — Where an appeal is quashed for want of jurisdiction it will be quashed without costs, if the objection has been taken by the court itself. Major v. City of Three Rivers, 18 C. L. J. 122, 17th November, 1882, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 422; Gladwin v. Cummings, 3rd November, 1883, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 426; Gendron v. McDougall, 4th March, 1885, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 429; Bank of Toronto v. Les Curé, etc., de la Nativité, xii., 25; Monette v. Lefebvre, xvi., 387.

39. Printing of case—Unnecessary matter—One-third cost deducted.] — The cost of printing unnecessary and useless matter in case was not allowed on taxation. L'Heureux v. Lamarche, xii., at p. 465; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 674.

40. Claim on public works contract—Waiver of legal rights—Costs withheld from Crown.]—Where a claim against the Government was referred to arbitration, the Crown not insisting on its strict legal rights and the claimants thereby put to great expense, the Crown was deprived of costs in all the courts. The Queen v. Starrs, xvii., 118.

41. Quashing appeal—Objection taken by court—Jurisdiction.]—On quashing an appeal for want of jurisdiction on suggestion by a member of the court at the hearing no costs were allowed. Accident Ins. Co. of N. A. v. McLachlin, xviii., 627.

42. Objections taken for first time on appeal—Amending answers.]—Where objections were taken for the first time on appeal the appellant was not allowed costs. Canada Southern Ry. Co. v. Norvell; Canada Southern Ry. Co. v. Cunningham; Canada Southern Ry. Co. v. Duff; Canada Southern Ry. Co. v. Gatfield, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 34; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 83.

43. Motion to quash—Want of jurisdiction—Delay in application—Refusal of costs.]—On quashing an appeal for want of jurisdiction the court refused costs because a motion to quash had not been made at the earliest convenient opportunity. Gendron v. McDougall, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 429; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.)

44. Taxation in Supreme Court of Canada—Solicitor and client.]—An application for an order directing registrar to tax costs between solicitor and client was refused, the Chief Justice stating that the question was duly considered by the judges at the organization of the Supreme Court, and it was not thought advisable to regulate costs between solicitor and client. Boak v. Merchants Mar. Ins. Co., Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 677.

45. Counsel fee—Advocate arguing appeal in person as respondent.] — The respondent who was an advocate, argued his appeal in person. Motion to tax counsel fee was refused. Fournier and Henry, J.J., dissenting. Charlevoix Election (Case Valin v. Langlois), Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 140.

46. Application for habeas corpus—Appeal in favorem libertatis.—Costs are not given, as a general rule, in habeas corpus matters. In re Johnson, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 329, 677; S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 53, 83.

47. Libel—Slander—Privileged statements—Public interest—Charging corruption against political candidate—Challenging to sue—Justification—Costs.—The defendant had caused a defamatory statement to be printed in a newspaper, and on a separate fly-sheet, and circulated through the constituency, during a Parliamentary election, with a printed challenge to the plaintiff and others implicated in the charges made to justify their innocence by taking an action for damages in case they were not guilty, and offering at the same time to make a deposit to cover the costs of suit.—The Supreme Court of Canada, in affirming the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada (which had reversed the judgment of the Superior Court in favour of the plaintiff, and dismissed the action with costs), refused to allow costs under the circumstances. Strong, C.J., dissented, being of opinion that the Superior Court judgment for $100 damages with costs as of an action for that amount should be restored. Gauthier v. Jeannotte, xxviii., 590.

48. Assignment for benefit of creditors—Fraudulent preference—Bribery.—Where the appellant was an inspector of an insolvent estate and participated in arrangements intended to secure a fraudulent preference to a particular creditor the appeal was allowed with costs but the action against him was dismissed without costs and an order made that no costs should be allowed in any of the courts below. Brigham v. Banque Jacques-Cartier, xxx., 429.

49. Action for personal injuries—Prescription—Failure to plead exception—Judicial notice of limitation—Dismissal of action—Arts. 2188, 2262, 2267 C. C.—In an action for bodily injuries where the extinction of the right of action by prescription was not pleaded or raised in the courts below and upon an appeal the prescription was judicially noticed and the action dismissed, the appeal was allowed without costs. City of Montreal v. McGee, xxx., 582.

50. Construction of written contract—Specifications—"From" and "to" streets—Reference to annexed plan—Mistake—Apportionment of costs.—Where the contentions of neither party were fully adopted, the appeal was allowed without costs in the Supreme Court of Canada. *City of Montreal v. 4. OTTIER CASES.

69. In Exchequer Court—Security for costs—Time for application—Petition of right—Discretionary order.—Per Fournier, J., in the Exchequer Court of Canada. Where, by a letter addressed to the suppliant, the Secretary of the Public Works Department stated, that he was desired by the Minister of Public Works to offer the sum of $3,950 in full settlement of the suppliant's claim against the department, an application on behalf of the Crown for security for costs was refused, on the ground that the power of ordering a party to give security for costs, being a matter of discretion and not of absolute right, the Crown in this case could suffer no inconvenience from not getting security, as well as on the ground of delay in making the application. Application for security for costs in the Exchequer Court must be made within the time allowed for filing statement in defence, except under special circumstances. Wood v. The Queen, vii., 631.

70. Action by firm of solicitors—Set-off—Mutual debts—Appeal—Final judgment.—In an action by a firm of attorneys for costs defendants cannot set off a sum paid by one of them to one of the attorneys for special services rendered by him, there being no mutuality and the payment not being for the general services covered by the retainer to the firm.—Per Taschereau, J. The judgment of the Court of Appeal affirming the Divisional Court judgment on appeal from a report of the taxing officer on a reference is not a final judgment from which an appeal lies to the Supreme Court of Canada. McDougall v. Cameron; Bickford v. Cameron, xxi., 379.

71. Supreme and Exchequer Courts of Canada—Parol evidence—Quantum meruit.—In proceedings before the Supreme and Exchequer Courts of Canada an attorney has the right to establish the quantum meruit of his services by oral evidence in an action for his costs. Paradis v. Bossé, xxi., 419.

72. Distraction—Motion to amend pleadings.—In appeal, where distraction of costs has not been asked for by the pleadings, or by the factum, it should be asked for when judgment is rendered. If not then asked for, any subsequent application must be made to the court upon notice to the other side. See Converse v. Clarke, 12 L. C. R. 402; The Waterworks Co. of Three Rivers v. Dostaler, 18 L. C. J. 196; Lator v. Campbell, 7 Legal News, 163. Letourneau v. Dansereau, Cass Dig. (2 ed.) 677; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 84.

73. Estoppel—Loss of right of appeal—Acquiescence in judgment—Reception of costs by appellant.—The judgment appealed from gave certain costs to the appellant which were taxed and paid to him out of moneys in court to the credit of the cause. A motion to quash the appeal was made on the ground that by accepting these costs the appellant has acquiesced in the judgment appealed from by taking a benefit thereunder. Held, that the reception of these costs was in no way inconsistent with the appeal against the construction the judgment placed upon the will in dispute in the case. In re Ferguson; Turner v. Bennett; Turner v. Carson, xxviii., 38.

74. Appeal—Discretion of court appealed from—Costs.—It is only when some fundamental principle of justice has been ignored, or some other gross error appears that the Supreme Court will interfere with the discretion of provincial courts in awarding or withholding costs. Smith v. St. John City Ry. Co.; Consolidated Electric Co. v. Atlantic Trust Co.; Consolidated Electric Co. v. Pratt, xxviii., 603.

75. Drainage—Qualification of petitioner—"Last revised assessment roll"—R. S. O. (1897) c. 226—Costs of non-appealing party.—The judgment appealed from (1 Ont. L. R. 156, 292) reversed the trial court judgment (32 O. R. 247) and held that the "last revised assessment roll" governing the status of petitioners in proceedings under the Drainage Act, was the roll in force at the time the petition was adopted by the municipal council and referred to the engineer for report, and not the roll in force at the time that the by-law was finally passed. The contractor had been made party in the Court of Appeal for Ontario and appeared at the hearing, but did not himself appeal. The judgment appealed from held that the effect of allowing the appeal did not give him any costs on the appeal. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment appealed from. *Challoner v. COUNSEL.

Right of action for fees—Retainer—Refresher—Fishery commission—Petition of right—Quantum meruit—Lex loci.—An advocate of the Province of Quebec, one of Her Majesty's counsel, was retained by the Government of Canada as of counsel for Great Britain before the Fishery Commission at Halifax pursuant to the Treaty of Washington. As to terms of retainer, the judge in the Exchequer Court found "that each of the counsel engaged was to receive a refresher equal to the retaining fee of $1,000, that they were to be at liberty to draw on a bank at Halifax for $1,000 a month during the sittings of the commission, that the expenses of the suppliant and his family were to be paid, and that the final amount of fees was to remain unsettled until after the award." The amount awarded by the commissioners was $5,500,000. The suppliant claimed $10,000 as his remuneration, in addition to $8,000 already received by him. Held, per Fournier, Henry and Taschereau, JJ., that the suppliant, under the agreement entered into with the Crown, was entitled to sue by petition of right for a reasonable sum in addition to the amount paid him, and that $8,000 awarded him in the Exchequer Court was a reasonable sum.—Per Fournier, Henry, Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ. By the law of the Province of Quebec, counsel and advocates can recover for fees stipulated for by an express agreement.—Per Fournier and Henry, JJ. By the law also of the Province of Ontario counsel can recover for such fees.—Per Ritchie, C.J. As the agreement between the suppliant and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, on behalf of Her Majesty, was made at Ottawa, in Ontario, for services to be performed at Halifax, in Nova Scotia, it was not subject to the law of Quebec; that in neither Ontario nor Nova Scotia could a barrister maintain an action for fees, and therefore that the petition would not lie.—Per Strong, J. The terms of the agreement, as established by the evidence, shewed, in addition to an express agreement to pay the suppliant's expenses, only an honorary and gratuitous undertaking on the part of the Crown to give additional remuneration for fees beyond the amount of fees paid, which undertaking is not only no foundation for an action but excludes any right of action as upon an implied contract to pay the reasonable value of the services rendered; and the suppliant could therefore recover only his expenses in addition to the amount so paid.—Per Gwynne, J. By the Petition of Right Act, s. 19, the subject is denied any remedy against the Crown in any case in which he would not have been entitled to such remedy in England, under similar circumstances. By the laws in force there prior to 23 & 24 Vict. c. 34 (Imp.), counsel could not, at that time, in England, have enforced payment of counsel fees by the Crown, and therefore the suppliant should not recover.—The Queen v. Doutre, vi., 343.

[NOTE.—On appeal to the Privy Council, it was Held, 1. that in Quebec an advocate is entitled, in the absence of special stipulation, to sue for and recover on a quantum meruit in respect of professional services rendered by him, and may lawfully contract for any rate of remuneration which is not contra bonos mores, or in violation of the rules of the bar.—2. That in the absence of stipulation to the contrary, express or implied, Mr. Doutre must be deemed to have been employed upon the usual terms upon which such services are rendered, and that his status in respect both of right and remedy was not effected either by the lex loci contractus or the lex loci solutionis. — 3. That the Petition of Right Act, 1876, s. 19, s.s. 3, does not in such case bar the remedy against the Crown by petition. 9 App. Cases 745.]

COUNTERCLAIM.

1. Solicitor and client—Action by sheriff for fees—Pleading—Setting off claim for overcharges in bills paid—Signed bill of costs.—

In an action by the sheriff against a solicitor for office fees and charges, the solicitor cannot counterclaim for overcharges in former bills paid to the sheriff by him in respect of matters in which the solicitor may have acted for the parties interested, because any such overcharges, if recoverable from the sheriff, do not belong to the solicitor but to the clients for whom he acted, but, in such an action, the solicitor may set up by way of counterclaim his costs in a suit in which he had appeared for the sheriff notwithstanding his omission to render a signed bill of the costs prior to the filing of the counterclaim. *Taylor v. COUNTY COURTS AND JUDGES.

1. Statute—Amending Act—Retroaction—Sale of lands—Judgments and orders.—Until 1897 it was the practice in Manitoba for the Court of Queen's Bench to grant orders for the sale of lands on judgments of the County Court under rules 803 et seq. of the Queen's Bench Act, 1895. In that year the Court of Queen's Bench decided that this practice was irregular, and in the following session the Legislature passed an Act providing that "in the case of a County Court judgment, an application may be made under rule 803 or rule 804, as the case may be. This amendment shall apply to orders and judgments heretofore made or entered, except in cases where such orders or judgments have been attacked before the passing of this amendment." Held, Sedgewick, J., dissenting, that the words "orders and judgments" in said clause refer only to orders and judgments of the Queen's Bench for sale of lands on County Court judgments and not to orders and judgments of the County Courts. Held, further, reversing the judgment of the King's Bench (13 Man. L. R. 419), Davies, J., dissenting, that the clause had retroactive operation only to the extent that orders for sale by the Queen's Bench on County Court judgments made previously were valid from the date on which the clause came into force but not from the date on which they were made. Held, per Sedgewick, J., that the clause had no retroactive operation at all. *Schmidt v. COURT.

1. *Jurisdiction—Action for redemption—Foreign lands—Lex rei sitae—Action in personam.]—An Ontario Court will not grant a decree for redemption of a mortgage on lands in Ontario at suit of a judgment creditor of a mortgagor, whose judgment being registered is, by statute in Manitoba, a charge upon the lands, the judgment creditor and mortgagee both having domicile in Ontario.—The only locus standi the judgment creditor would have in an Ontario Court would be to have direct relief against the land by means of a sale to which relief he would be restricted in such a case in a suit in the courts of Manitoba, and a decree for a sale would not have been enforceable in the latter province.—A court of equity will, where personal equities exist between two parties over whom it has jurisdiction, though such equities may refer to foreign lands, give relief by a decree operating not directly upon the lands, but directly in personam, but such relief will never be extended so far as decreeing a sale in the nature of an equitable execution. *Henderson v. CRIMINAL CONVERSATION.

Statute of Limitations—Adulterous intercourse—Damages.—The Statute of Limitations is not a bar to an action for criminal conversation where the adulterous intercourse between defendant and plaintiff's wife has continued to a period within six years from the time the action is brought. Judgment appealed from (27 Ont. App. R. 703) affirmed.—Quære, Does the statute only begin to run when the adulterous intercourse ceases, or is the plaintiff only entitled to damages for intercourse within the six years preceding the action? King v. Bailey, xxxi., 338.

CRIMINAL LAW.

1. Larceny—Unstamped promissory note—Valuable security—32 & 33 Vict. c. 21 (D.)—Form of indictment.—S. was indicted, tried and convicted for stealing a note for the payment and value of $258.33, the property of A. McC. and another. The evidence shewed that the note was drawn by A. McC. and C. R., and made payable to S.'s order and was given by mistake to S., it being supposed that $258.33 was due to him, instead of $175.00.

The mistake being immediately discovered, S. returned the note to the drawers, unstamped and undorsed, in exchange for another note of $175.00, but S. afterwards, on the same day stole the note, caused it to be stamped, indorsed it, and tried to collect it. Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada (appeal side), that S. was not guilty of larceny of "a note" or of "a valuable security" within the meaning of the statute, and that the offence of which he was guilty was not correctly described in the indictment. Scott v. The Queen, ii., 349.

2. Reserved case—Obtaining money under false pretences—Preferment of indictment—Delegation of authority by Attorney-General—32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 28—Quashing indictment.—Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 28, the Attorney-General cannot delegate to the judgment and discretion of another the power which he is authorized personally to exercise in directing that an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences should be laid before the grand jury; and it being admitted that the Attorney-General gave no directions with reference to the indictment, in the case reserved, a motion to quash should have been granted. [The judgment appealed from (1 Dor. Q. B. 126) was reversed and the conviction set aside.] Abrahams v. The Queen, vi., 10.

3. Indictment—Misjoinder of counts—Manslaughter—Evidence.—An indictment contained two counts, one charging murder, the other manslaughter of the same person, on the same day. Upon "a true bill," found, a motion to quash the indictment for misjoinder was refused, the prosecutor electing to proceed on the first count only, and the prisoner was found guilty of manslaughter. Held, affirming the Supreme Court of New Brunswick (5 P. & B. 449), that the indictment was good and that as the crime charged in the second count was involved in that charged by the first count the prisoner could not be prejudiced and the trial had been regular.—The prisoner was convicted of manslaughter in killing his wife, who died 10th November, 1881. The immediate cause of death was acute inflammation of the liver, which might be occasioned by a blow or a fall against a hard substance. On 17th October preceding her death, the prisoner had knocked his wife down with a bottle; she fell against a door, and remained on the floor insensible for some time; she was confined to her bed soon afterwards and never recovered. Evidence was given of frequent acts of violence by the prisoner upon his wife within a year of her death, by knocking her down and kicking her in the side.—The reserved questions were whether the evidence of assaults and violence prior to 10th November or 17th October, 1881, was properly received, and whether there was any evidence to leave to the jury to sustain the charge in the first count of the indictment? Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the evidence was properly received, and that there was evidence to submit to the jury that the disease which caused her death was produced by the injuries inflicted by the prisoner. Theal v. The Queen, vii., 397.

4. Negative averments—Indictment for perjury—Evidence of special facts.—D., in answering to faits et articles on the contestation of a saisie arrêt, or attachment, stated, among other things, "1st, that he, D., owed nothing for his board; 2nd, that he, D., from about the beginning of 1880 to towards the end of the year 1881, had paid the board of one F., the rent of his room, and furnished him with all the necessities of life with scarcely any exception: 3rd, that he, F., during all that time, 1880 and 1881, had no means of support whatever." D. being charged with perjury, in the assignments of perjury and in the negative averments, the facts sworn to by D. in his answers were distinctly negatived in the terms in which they were made. Held, that under the general terms of the negative averments it was competent for the prosecution to prove special facts to establish the falsity of the answers given by D. in his answers on faits et articles, and the conviction could not be set aside because of the admission of such proof. Even if the evidence was inadmissible there being other charges in the same count which were pleaded to, a judgment given on a general verdict of guilty on that count would be sustained. Dovnie v. The Queen, xv., 358.

5. Procedure—Indictment for rape—Conviction for assault with intent—Attempt—R. S. C. c. 174, s. 183—Punishment.—An assault with intent to commit a felony is an attempt to commit such felony within the meaning of s. 183 of R. S. C. c. 174.—On an indictment for rape a conviction for assault with intent to commit rape is valid.—On such conviction the prisoner was held properly sentenced to imprisonment under R. S. C. c. 162, s. 38. John v. The Queen, xv., 384.

6. Trial—Felony—Jury attending church—Preacher's remarks—Influence on jury—Expert testimony.—In the course of a trial for murder by shooting the jury attended church in charge of a constable, and the clergymen directly addressed them, referring to the case of a man hanged for murder in P. E. I., and urging if they had the slightest doubt of the guilt of the prisoner they were trying, to temper justice with equity. The prisoner was convicted. Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Crown Cases reserved in Nova Scotia, that, although the remarks of the clergyman were highly improper, it could not be said that the jury were so influenced by them as to affect their verdict.—A witness was called at the trial to give evidence as a medical expert and in answer to the Crown prosecutor he said, "there are indicia in medical science from which it can be said at what distance small shot were fired at the body. I have studied this—not personal experience, but from books." He was not cross-examined as to the grounds of this statement and no medical witnesses were called by the prisoner to confute it. The witness then stated the distance from the murdered man at which the shot must have been fired in the case before the court, and on what he based his opinion as to it, giving the result of his examination of the body. Held, Strong and Fournier, JJ., dissenting, that by his preliminary statement, the witness had established his capacity to speak as a medical expert, and it not having been shewn by cross-examination, or other testimony, that there were no such indicia as stated, his evidence as to the distance at which the shot was fired was properly received. Prepper v. The Queen, xv., 401.

7. Trial—Crown cases reserved—R. S. C. c. 174, ss. 246, 249—Summoning jury—Personation of juror—Irregularity—Cured by verdict.—B., found guilty of feloniously administering poison with intent to murder, moved in arrest of judgment on the ground that one of the jurors who had tried the case had not been returned as such. The general panel of jurors contained the names of Joseph L. and Moise L. The special panel for the term of the court, at which the prisoner was tried, contained the name of Joseph L. The sheriff served Joseph L.'s summons on Moise L., and returned Joseph L. as the party summoned. Moise L. appeared in court, answered to the name of Joseph, and was sworn as a juror without challenge when B. was tried. On a reserved case, Held, per Ritchie, C.J., and Taschereau, and Gwynne, JJ., that the point should not have been reserved by the judge at the trial, it not being a question arising at the trial within the meaning of R. S. C. c. 174, s. 259, Held, also, per Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ., affirming the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, that assuming the point could be reserved, R. S. C. c. 174, s. 246 clearly covered the irregularity complained of. Strong and Fournier, JJ., dissented. Brisebois v. The Queen, xv., 421.

8. Assault on constable—Serving summons—Indictable offence—Competency of wife as witness—Defendant—R. S. C. c. 162, s. 34; R. S. C. c. 174, s. 216.—An assault on a constable attempting to serve a summons issued by a magistrate on information charging violation of the Canada Temperance Act is an assault on a peace officer in the due execution of his duty and indictable under R. S. C. c. 162, s. 34.—On the trial of an indictment for such assault the wife of the defendant is not a competent witness on his behalf. McFarlane v. The Queen, xvi., 393.

9. Indictment—Names of deceased—Alias dictus—Proof of names—Variance.—Where two or more names are laid in an indictment under an alias dictus it is not necessary to prove them all.—J. was indicted for the murder of A. J., otherwise called K. K., and, on trial, was convicted of manslaughter. Deceased was known by the name of K. K., but there was no evidence that she ever went by the other name. Held, affirming the Court of Crown Cases Reserved (Quebec), that this variance between the indictment and the evidence did not invalidate the conviction for manslaughter. Jacobs v. The Queen, xvi., 433.

10. Criminal procedure—Error—Crown challenges—Standing aside jurors a second time—Question of law not reserved at trial—R. S. C. c. 174, ss. 164, 259 & 266.—When a panel had been gone through and a full jury had not been obtained the Crown on the second calling over the panel was permitted, against the objection of the prisoner, to direct eleven of the jurymen on the panel to stand aside a second time, and the judge presiding at the trial was not asked to reserve and neither reserved nor refused to reserve the objection. After conviction and judgment a writ of error was issued.—Held, per Taschereau, Gwynne and Patterson, JJ., affirming the judgment appealed from, that the question was one of law arising on the trial which could have been reserved under R. S. C. c. 174, s. 259, and the writ of error should, therefore, be quashed.—Per Ritchie, C.J., and Strong and Fournier, JJ. That the question arose before the trial commenced and could not have been reserved, and as the error of law appeared on the face of the record the remedy by writ of error was applicable. Brisebois v. The Queen (15 Can. S. C. R. 421) referred to.—Per Ritchie, C.J., and Strong, Fournier and Patterson, J.J., that the Crown could not without shewing cause for challenge direct a juror to stand aside a second time. The Queen v. Lacombe (13 L. C. Jur. 259) overruled.—Per Gwynne, J. That all the prisoner could complain of was a mere irregularity in procedure which could not constitute a mis-trial. Morin v. The Queen, xviii., 407.

11. Extradition—Forgery—Uttering forged order for payment of money—Forged indorsement—Trying for offence other than that for which prisoner extradited—Appeal—Demurrer.—The prisoner was tried at the October Term, 1884, of the Supreme Court at Halifax, the indictment, charging—1. That the said J. C. did feloniously offer, utter, dispose of and put off, knowing the same to be forged, a certain check or order for the payment of money, which said forged order is as follows, that is to say—

“No. E. 43460.

Halifax, N.S., February 13th, 1884.
Merchants' Bank of Halifax:

Pay William McFatridge, or order, two hundred and twenty-four dollars and seventeen cents ($224.17).

(Sgd.) Longard Bros.

And indorsed as follows: “W. McFatridge.”

With intent to defraud.—2. That the said J. C. afterwards, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, having in his custody and possession a certain other order for the payment of money, which said last mentioned order is as follows, that is to say—

No. E. 43460.

Halifax, N.S., February 13th, 1884.
Merchants' Bank of Halifax:

Pay William McFatridge, or order, two hundred and twenty-four dollars and seventeen cents ($224.17).

(Sgd.) Longard Bros.

—He, the said James Cunningham, afterwards, to wit, on the day and year last aforesaid, at Halifax aforesaid, feloniously did forge on the back of said last mentioned order a certain indorsement of said order for the payment of money, which said forged indorsement is as follows, that is to say, “W. McFatridge,” with intent to defraud.—3. That the said J. C. afterward, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, feloniously did offer, utter, dispose of and put off, a certain other forged order for the payment of money, which forged order is as follows, that is to say—

No. E. 43460.

Halifax, N.S., February 13th, 1884.
Merchants' Bank of Halifax:

Pay William McFatridge, or order, two hundred and twenty-four dollars and seventeen cents ($224.17).

(Sgd.) Longard Bros.

And indorsed “W. McFatridge.”

With intent thereby then to defraud.—Counsel for prisoner, before the jury were sworn, objected to the jurisdiction of the court on the ground that the indictment charged an offence or offences different from that for which the prisoner was extradited, to which plea the Attorney-General demurred. Judgment was pronounced sustaining the demurrer and the trial proceeded. The prisoner was convicted on the first and third counts of the indictment, and acquitted on the second.—At the close of the trial counsel for prisoner renewed his application. The C.J. agreed to reserve a case for the opinion of the judges and submitted:—(1) Whether the prisoner was indicted and tried for another and different offence, or other and different offences, than that for which he was extradited at the instance of the Government of Canada; and if so, whether the court had jurisdiction to try and convict the prisoner of such offence or offences.—(2) Whether the evidence on the part of the Crown, as reported herewith, is sufficient to sustain a conviction on the first and third counts of the indictment or on either of those counts. The papers put in evidence on the trial to be considered and read as part of the case.—The majority of the Supreme Court (N.S.), Held, that the prisoner was properly convicted on the third count (6 R. & G. 31.) Held, per Fournier, Henry and Taschereau, J.J., (Ritchie, C.J. and Strong, J., dissenting), that evidence of the uttering of a forged indorsement of a negotiable check or order is insufficient to sustain a conviction on a count of an indictment charging the uttering of a forged check or order. On the second question reserved, therefore, the judgment of the court below should be reversed and the prisoner ordered to be discharged.—Per Ritchie, C.J. The question raised by the demurrer was not properly before the Court in Appeal, the court below having been unanimous with respect to it.—Per Strong, J. The court below rightly held, on the authority of Rex v. Faderman (Den. C. C. 572), that the question raised by the demurrer was not properly before the court, the Chief Justice having given judgment on the demurrer overruling it at the trial. Moreover, there was nothing in the law under which the prisoner was extradited to prevent the court from trying him for any offence for which he was, according to the law of the Dominion, justiciable before it.—Appeal allowed. Queen v. Cunningham, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 194.

12. Criminal proceeding—Contempt of court.—Contempt of court is a criminal proceeding. Ellis v. The Queen, xxii., 7.

13. Criminal appeal—Criminal Code, 1892, s. 742—Undivided property of co-heirs—Fraudulent appropriations—Unlawfully receiving—R. S. C. c. 164, ss. 65, 83, 85.—Where on a criminal trial a motion for a reserved case made on two grounds is refused, and on appeal to the Court of Queen's Bench (appeal side), that court is unanimous in affirming the decision of the trial judge as to one of such grounds, but not as to the other, an appeal to the Supreme Court can only be based on the one as to which there was dissent.—A conviction under s. 85 of the Larceny Act, R. S. C. c. 164, for unlawfully obtaining property, is good, though the prisoner, according to the evidence, might have been convicted of a criminal breach of trust under s. 65.—A fraudulent appropriation by the principal, and a fraudulent receiving by the accessory, may take place at the same time and by the same Act.—Two bills of indictment were presented against A. and B. under ss. 83 and 85 of the Larceny Act. By the first count each was charged with having unlawfully and with intent to defraud taken and appropriated to his own use $7,000 belonging to the heirs of C., so as to deprive them of their beneficiary interest in the same. The second count charged B. (the appellant) with having unlawfully received the $7,000, the property of the heirs which had before then been unlawfully obtained and taken and appropriated by said A., the taking and receiving being a misdemeanour under s. 85, c. 164, R. S. C. at the time when he so received the money. A. who was the executor of C.'s estate, and the custodian of the money, pleaded guilty to the charge on the first count. B. pleaded not guilty, was acquitted of the charge on the first count, but was found guilty of unlawfully receiving. On the question submitted, in a reserved case, whether B. could be found guilty of unlawfully receiving money from A., who was custodian of the money as executor, the Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada (on appeal), Sir A. Lacoste, C.J., dissenting, held the conviction good. At the trial it was proved that A. and B. agreed to appropriate the money, and that when A. drew the money he purchased his railway ticket for the United States, made a parcel of the money, took it to B.'s store, and handed it to him saying: "Here is the bundle; take good care of it." On the same evening, he absconded to New York.—On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada: Held, affirming the judgment of the court below, that whether A. be a bailee or trustee, and whether the unlawful appropriation by A. took place by the handing over of the money to B. or previously, B. was properly convicted under s. 85, c. 164, R. S. C., of receiving it knowing it to have been unlawfully obtained. Gwynne, J., dissenting. McIntosh v. The Queen, xxiii., 180.

14. Betting on election—Stakeholder—R. S. C. c. 159, s. 9—Accessories—R. S. C. c. 145, s. 7.—The depositary of money staked by two individuals on the result of an election for the House of Commons is guilty of a misdemeanour under R. S. C. c. 159, s. 9 (Crim. Code, s. 204), and the bettors are accessories to the commission of the offence. Reg. v. Dillon (10 Ont. F. R. 352) overruled. Walsh v. Trebilcock, xxiii., 695.

15. Will—Devise—Death of testator caused by devisee—Felonious act.—No devisee can take under the will of a testator, whose death has been caused by the criminal and felonious act of the devisee himself, and in applying this rule no distinction can be made between a death caused by murder and one caused by manslaughter. Taschereau, J., dissenting. Lundy v. Lundy, xxiv., 650.

16. The Criminal Code, s. 575 — Persona designata—Officers de facto and de jure—Chief constable—Common gaming house—Confiscation of gaming instruments, moneys, etc.—Evidence—The Canada Evidence Act, 1893, ss. 2, 3, 20 and 21.—Section 575 of the Criminal Code, authorizing the issue of a warrant to seize gaming implements on the report of "the chief constable or deputy chief constable" of a city or town, does not mean that the report must come from an officer having the exact title mentioned, but only from one exercising such functions and duties as will bring him within the designation used in the statute. Therefore, the warrant could properly issue on the report of the deputy high constable of the City of Montreal. Girouard, J., dissenting.—The warrant would be good if issued on the report of a person who filled de facto the office of deputy high constable though he was not such de jure.—In an action to revindicate the moneys so seized, the rules of evidence in civil matters prevailing in the province would apply, and the plaintiff could not invoke "The Canada Evidence Act, 1893," so as to be a competent witness in his own behalf in the Province of Quebec.—Per Strong, C.J. A judgment declaring the forfeiture of money so seized cannot be collaterally impeached in an action of revindication. O'Neill v. Attorney-General of Canada, xxvi., 122.

17. Appeal—Jurisdiction—Criminal Code, 1892, ss. 742-750 — New trial—Statute, construction of.—An appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada does not lie in cases where a new trial has been granted by the Court of Appeal under the provisions of the Criminal Code, 1892, ss. 742 to 750 inclusively.—The word "opinion" as used in the second subsection of section seven hundred and forty two of "The Criminal Code, 1892," must be construed as meaning a "decision" or "judgment" of the Court of Appeal in criminal cases. Viau v. The Queen, xxix., 90.

18. Construction of statute—20 & 21 Vict. c. 54, s. 12 (Imp.)—Application—Criminal prosecution—Embezzlement of trust funds—Suspension of civil remedy—Stifling prosecution—Partnership.—The Imperial Act, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 54, s. 12, provides that "Nothing in this Act contained, nor any proceeding conviction or judgment to be had or taken thereon against any person under this Act, shall prevent, lessen or impeach any remedy at law or in equity, which any party aggrieved by any offence against this Act might have had if this Act had not passed; . . . and nothing in this Act contained shall affect or prejudice any agreement entered into, or security given by any trustee, having for its object the restoration or re-payment of any trust property misappropriated."—Held, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of British Columbia (5 B. C. Rep. 571), that the class of trustees referred to in said Act were those guilty of misappropriation of property held upon express trusts.—Semble, that the section only covered agreements or securities given by the defaulting trustee himself.—Quare, Is the said Imperial Act in force in British Columbia?—If in force it would not apply to a prosecution for an offence under R. S. C. c. 264 (Larceny Act), s. 58.—Action was brought on a covenant given for the purpose of stifling a prosecution for the embezzlement of partnership property under R. S. C. c. 264, s. 58 [not re-enacted in Crim. Code, 1892].—Held, that the alleged criminal act, having been committed before the Code came into force, was not affected by its provisions and the covenant was illegal at common law. Further, the partnership property not having been held on an express trust, the civil remedy was not preserved by the Imperial Act. Major v. McCraney, xxix., 182.

19. Appeal—Habeas corpus—Extradition—Necessity to quash.—By s. 31 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act (R. S. C. c. 135), "no appeal shall be allowed in any case of proceedings for or upon a writ of habeas corpus arising out of any claim for extradition made under any treaty." On application to the court to fix a day for hearing a motion to quash such an appeal. Held, that the matter was coram non judice and there was no necessity for a motion to quash. In re Lazier, xxix., 630.

20. Crime—Lottery—Indictable offence—Criminal Code, 1892—R. S. C. 159—R. S. Q. art. 2920—53 Vict. c. 36 (Que.)—Per Girouard, J. dissenting. In Canada before the Criminal Code, 1892, lotteries were mere offences or contraventions and not crimes, and consequently the Act of the Quebec Legislature was constitutional. L'Association St. Jean-Baptiste v. Brault, xxx., 598.

21. Manslaughter—Indictment against body corporate—Crim. Code, s. 213—Fine.]—Under s. 213 of the Criminal Code a corporation may be indicted for omitting, without lawful excuse, to perform the duty of avoiding danger to human life from anything in its charge or under its control—The fact that the consequence of the omission to perform such duty might have justified an indictment for manslaughter in the case of an individual is not a ground for quashing the indictment.—As s. 213 provides no punishment for the offence the common law punishment of a fine may be imposed on a corporation indicted under it.—Judgment appealed from (7 B. C. Rep. 247) affirmed. Union Colliery Co. v. The Queen, xxxi., 81.

22. Conspiracy—Robbery—Withdrawal of conspirator—King's evidence.]—The accused was convicted at Dawson, in the Yukon Territory, on an indictment for conspiracy, and it appeared that he had before the commission of the offence refused to take part in the proposed robbery as it was "too strong for him," but remained willing to share in the result. After the robbery accused gave information which led to the arrest and conviction of his fellow conspirators. The trial judge reserved a case for the opinion of the Supreme Court as to whether or not the withdrawal relieved the accused from criminal liability as a party to the robbery, notwithstanding that he remained with a guilty mind, being ready to accept his share of the stolen property and doing nothing to prevent the commission of the crime. Upon hearing counsel for the Crown, no one appearing on behalf of the convict, the conviction was affirmed. Rea v. Harris, 22nd May, 1902.

23. Appeals in criminal cases—Construction of 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34 (D.)]—Appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada in criminal cases are regulated solely by the provisions of the Criminal Code. Rice v. The King, xxxii., 480.

24. Perjury—Judicial proceeding—De facto tribunal—Misleading justice—Jurisdiction—Construction of statute—R. S. Q. arts. 5551, 5561—Criminal Code, s. 145.]—The hearing of a charge by a magistrate, assuming to act as a justice of the peace having authority to hear it, is a judicial proceeding within the meaning of s. 145 of the Criminal Code and a person swearing falsely upon such hearing may be properly convicted of perjury, notwithstanding that the magistrate had no jurisdiction over the subject matter of the complaint. Mills, J., dissenting.—Evidence by the wife of the person accused of acts performed by her under directions of counsel sent to her by the accused to give the directions, is not a communication from the husband to his wife in respect of which the Canada Evidence Act forbids her to testify. Mills, J., dissenting.—Per Girouard, J. (dissenting). The communications between husband and wife contemplated by the Canada Evidence Act, 1893, may be de verbo, de facto or de corpore. Sexual intercourse is such a communication and in the case under appeal neither the evidence by the accused that bloodstains upon his clothing were caused by having such intercourse at a time when his wife was unwell, nor the testimony of his wife in contradiction of such statement as to her condition, ought to have been received.—Per Mills, J. (dissenting). Under the provisions of the Canada Evidence Act, 1893, and its amendments the husband or wife of an accused person is competent as a witness only on behalf of the accused and may not give testimony on the part of the Crown.—Per Taschereau, C.J. The reports of debates in the House of Commons are not appropriate sources of information to assist in the interpretation of language used in a statute. *Gosselin v. The full court should be constituted of the Chief Justice and two puisne judges. On appeal to the Supreme Court, under 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 49; Held, that, although the conviction had been affirmed by but two judges, the decision was unanimous and, therefore, not appealable. *Amer v. 1. ACTIONS BY OR AGAINST THE CROWN.

1. Public work—Government railway—Negligence of Crown servant—Prescription—50 & 51 Vict. c. 16—Arts. 2262, 2267, 2188, 2211, C. C.—R. S. C. c. 38.]—Held, that even assuming that under the common law of Quebec, or by R. S. C. c. 38, or 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, or any statutes in force at the time of the injury received, the Crown could be held liable for an injury caused by negligence of its servants, where such injury was received more than a year before the filing of the petition of right, the action was prescribed under arts. 2262 and 2267 C. C. The Queen v. Martin, xx., 240.

2. Action against provincial government—Style of cause—Amendment.]—In an action against the Government of Quebec, the Supreme Court of Canada, at the hearing ordered the style of cause to be amended by substituting the name of "Her Majesty the Queen" for the "Province of Quebec." Grant v. The Queen, xx., 297.

3. Parol agreement—Part performance—Carriage of mails—Authority to bind the Crown—R. S. C. c. 35.]—An action will not lie against the Crown for breach of a contract for carrying mails for 9 months at the rate of $10,000 a year, made by parol with the Postmaster-General and accepted by the contractor by letter, notwithstanding it was partly performed, as, if a permanent contract, being for a larger sum than $1,000 it could not be made without the authority of an order-in-council, and if temporary it was revocable at the will of the Postmaster-General. Judgment appealed from (2 Ex. C. R. 386) affirmed. Humphrey v. The Queen, xx., 591.

4. *Suretyship—Postmaster's bond—Penal clause—Lex loci contractus—Negligence—Laches of Crown officials—Release of sureties—Arts. 1053, 1054, 1131, 1135, 1927, 1929-1965 C. C.]—In an action by the Crown on the information of the Attorney-General for Canada upon a bond executed in the Province of Quebec in the form provided by the "Act respecting the Security to be given by the Officers of Canada" (31 Vict. c. 37; 35 Vict. c. 19) and "The Post Office Act" (38 Vict. c. 7); Held, Sir Henry Strong, C.J., dissenting, that the right of action under the bond was governed by the law of the Province of Quebec. Held, further, that such a bond was not an obligation with a penal clause within the application of articles 1131 and 1135 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada. Held, also, that the rule of law that the Crown is not liable for the laches or negligence of its officers obtains in the Province of* Quebec except where altered by statute. Black v. The Queen, xxix., 693.

5. *Contract—Right of action—Public officer—Solicitor and client—R. S. C. cc. 114, 115—Inquiry as to public matters—Remuneration of commissioner—Quantum meruit.]—The judgment appealed from (7 Ex. C. R. 351), held, that a person appointed under R. S. C. c. 115, as commissioner to make inquiry and report on conduct in office of an officer or servant of the Crown, could not recover for his services as such commissioner, there being no provision for such payment; that such service was not rendered in virtue of any contract, but merely by virtue of appointment under the statute and that such appointment partakes more of the character of a public office than of a mere employment under a contract express or implied. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment appealed from, Strong, C.J., and Girouard, J. dissenting. Tucker v. The King, xxxii., 722.*

6. *Provincial bonds—Succession duties—Exempted securities—Sale under will—Duty on proceeds—Proceedings by or against the Crown—Costs.]—Costs will be given for or against the Crown as in other cases. 2. CANADIAN WATERS; FISHERIES; NAVIGATION, ETC.

18. Constitutional law—Navigable waters—Title to alveus—Dedication of public lands—Presumption of dedication—User—Obstruction to navigation—Public nuisance—Balance of convenience.—The user of a bridge over a navigable river for 35 years is sufficient to raise a presumption of dedication—If a province before confederation, had so dedicated the bed of a navigable river for the purposes of a bridge, that it could not have objected to it as an obstruction to navigation, the Crown as representing the Dominion, on assuming control of the navigation, was bound to permit the maintenance of the bridge.—An obstruction to navigation cannot be justified on the ground that the public benefit to be derived from it outweighs the inconvenience it causes. It is a public nuisance though of very great public benefit, and the obstruction of the slightest possible degree. The Queen v. Moss, xxvi., 322.

19. Public work—Navigation of River St. Lawrence—Negligence—Repair of channel—Parliamentary appropriation—Discretion as to expenditure.—Action for damages to SS. "Arabia" sustained by striking an obstruction in the River St. Lawrence ship channel which had been deepened by the Department of Public Works and subsequently swept once. The suppliants contended that the Crown was obliged to keep the channel clear, and that failure to do so amounted to negligence. The judgment appealed from (7 Ex. C. R. 150) held that the channel was not a public work after the work of deepening was completed, and even if it was, no negligence had been proved to make the Crown liable under s. 16, (c) of the Exchequer Court Act (1887). It also decided that the department charged with the repair and maintenance of the work with money voted by Parliament for that purpose was not obliged to expend the appropriation as such matters were within the discretion of the Governor-in-Council and Minister, who were responsible only to Parliament in respect thereof. — The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment appealed from. *Hamburg American Packet Co. v. Judgment appealed from (2 Ex. C. R. 78) affirmed, Strong and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting on the ground that the chief engineer had no authority to bind the Crown to pay damages beyond any injury done. The Queen v. St. John Water Commissioners, xix., 125.

25. Payment by departmental authority—Salaries of license inspectors—Approval by Governor-in-Council—Liquor License Act, 1883, s. 6—Action—Ultra vires.—Claim by license commissioners for moneys paid to license inspectors with the approval of the Department of Inland Revenue, in excess of the salaries fixed 2 years later by order-in-council under s. 6 of the Liquor License Act, 1883. Held, per Fournier, Taschereau and Patterson, JJ., affirming the judgment appealed from (2 Ex. C. R. 293), that the Crown could not be held liable for any excess of the salary fixed and approved of by the Governor-General-in-Council.—Per Strong, J. The Act under which appellant was appointed having been declared ultra vires the petition of right was not maintainable. Burroughs v. The Queen, xx., 420.

26. Crown lands—Dominion license to cut timber—Implied covenant—Warranty of title—Quiet enjoyment.—Licenses granted and actually current in 1884 and 1885 conferred upon the licensee "full right, power and license to take and keep exclusive possession of the said lands except as hereinafter mentioned for and during the period of one year from the 31st December, 1883, to 31st December, 1884, and no longer."—Quere. Though this was in law a lease for one year of the lands comprised in the license, was the Crown bound by any implied covenant to be read into the license for good right and title to make the lease and for quiet enjoyment? *Bulmer v. R. 396), that under 43 Vict. c. 8, confirming the agreement of sale to the Crown of the Rivière du Loup branch of the Grand Trunk Railway, the Crown cannot be held liable for damages caused from the accumulation of surface water to land crossed by the railway since 1879 unless it is caused by acts or omissions of the Crown's servants, and as the damages in the present case appear, by the evidence relied on, to have been caused by the non-maintenance of the boundary ditches of claimant's farm, which the Crown is under no obligation to repair or keep open, the appellant's claim for damages must be dismissed. *Morin v. Act (1867) ss. 91, 92, 102 & 109.]—On appeal to the Supreme Court the parties agreed that the appeal should be limited to the question, as to whether or not the Government of Canada or of the province was entitled to estates escheated to the Crown for want of heirs.—Held, Ritchie, C.J., and Strong, J., dissenting, that the Province of Ontario does not represent Her Majesty in matters of escheat in said province, and therefore the Attorney-General for Ontario could not appropriate the property escheated to the Crown in this case for the purposes of the province, and that the Escheat Act, c. 94, R. S. O. was ultra vires.—Per Fournier, Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ. That any revenue derived from escheats is by s. 102 of the B. N. A. Act 1867, under the control of the Parliament of Canada as part of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada, and no other part of the Act exempts it from that disposition. Mercer v. C. c. 50, s. 108—Reservation in Crown grant—Dedication — User — Estoppel — Assessment of lands claimed as highway — Evidence.]—The user of old travelled roads or trails over the waste lands of the Crown in the North-West Territories of Canada, prior to the Dominion Government survey thereof does not give rise to a presumption that the lands over which they passed were dedicated as public highways.—The land over which an old travelled trail had formerly passed, leading to the Hudson Bay trading post at Edmonton, N.-W. T., had been enclosed by the owner, divided into town lots and assessed and taxed as private property by the municipality, and a new street substituted therefor shewn upon registered plans of sub-division, and laid out upon the ground had been adopted as a boundary in the descriptions of lands abutting thereon in the grants thereof by letters patent from the Crown.—Held, reversing the decision of the Supreme Court of the North-West Territories, that under the circumstances, there could be no presumption of dedication of the lands over which the old trail passed as a public highway either by the Crown or by the private owner notwithstanding long user of the same by settlers in that district prior to the Dominion Government survey of the Edmonton Settlement. *Heimick v. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (20 N. S. Rep. 30), Ritchie, C.J., and Gwynne, J., dissenting, that a contractor with the Minister of Railways and Canals as representing the Crown, for the construction of a branch of the Intercolonial Railway, is not an "employee" of the department within this section. *Kearney v. 9. PREROGATIVE.

73. Insolvent bank—Winding-up proceedings — Priority of Crown as simple contract creditor — Estoppel—Acceptance of dividends — Waiver—45 Vict. c. 23.]—The Bank of P. E. Island became insolvent, and a winding-up order was made. The bank was indebted to Her Majesty in $93,494.20, public moneys of Canada, on deposit to the credit of the Receiver-General. The first claim filed at the request of the respondent (liquidator of the bank), did not specially notify the liquidator that Her Majesty would insist upon the privilege of being paid in full. Two dividends of 15% each were afterwards paid, and on the 28th February, 1884, there was a balance due of $65,426.95, and respondent was notified that Her Majesty intended to insist upon the prerogative right to be paid in full. At this time there was on hand a sum sufficient to pay the claim in full. The Supreme Court (P. E. I.) held that Her Majesty the Queen, represented by the Minister of Finance, and the Receiver-General, had no prerogative or other right to receive the whole amount, but only a right to receive dividends as an ordinary creditor of the bank. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, 1. That the Crown claiming as a simple contract creditor has a right to priority over other creditors of equal degree. This prerogative privilege belongs to the Crown as representing the Dominion of Canada, when claiming as a creditor of a provincial corporation in a provincial court, and is not taken away in proceed- ings in insolvency by 45 Vict. c. 23. 2. That the Crown had not waived its right* to be preferred in this case by the form in which the claim was made, and by the acceptance of two dividends. The Queen v. Bank of Nova Scotia, xi., 1.

74. *Prerogative — Insolvent bank — Assets—R. S. C. cc. 120, 124—Deposit by insurance company — Priority of note-holders.]—The prerogatives of the Crown exist in British colonies to the same extent as in the United Kingdom. The Queen v. Bank of Nova Scotia (11 Can. S. C. R. 1) followed.—The Queen is the head of the constitutional Government of Canada, and in matters affecting the Dominion at large her prerogatives are exercised by the Dominion Government.—The Crown prerogatives can only be taken away by express statutory enactment. Therefore Her Majesty's right to payment in full of a claim against the assets of an insolvent bank in priority to all other creditors is not interfered with by the provisions of the Bank Act (R. S. C. c. 120, s. 79), giving note-holders a first lien on such assets, the Crown not being named in such enactment. Gwynne and Patterson, JJ., contra.—Held, per Gwynne, J., that under legislation of the old Province of Canada, left unrepealed by the B. N. A. Act, no such prerogative could be claimed in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec; the court would not, therefore, be justified in holding that such a right attached, under the B. N. A. Act, in one Province of Canada which does not exist in them all.—An insurance company, in order to deposit $50,000 with the Minister of Finance and receive a license to do business in Canada according to the provisions of the Insurance Act (R. S. C. c. 124), deposited the money in a bank and forwarded the deposit receipt to the minister. The money in the bank drew interest which, by arrangement, was received by the company. The bank having failed the Government claimed payment in full of this money as money deposited by the Crown. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (27 N. B. Rep. 351), Strong, J., dissenting, that it was not the money of the Crown but held by the Finance Minister in trust for the company; it was not, therefore, subject to the prerogative of payment in full in priority to other creditors. Maritime Bank v. The Queen, xvii., 657.*

75. *Prerogative—Provincial rights—Insolvent bank—Note-holder's lien.]—The Government of each Province of Canada represents the Queen in the exercise of her prerogative as to all matters affecting the rights of the province. The Queen v. Bank of Nova Scotia (11 Can. S. C. R. 1) followed. Gwynne, J., dissenting.—Under s. 79 of the Bank Act (R. S. C. c. 120), note-holders have the first lien on the assets of an insolvent bank in priority to the Crown. Strong and Taschereau, JJ., dissenting. Judgment appealed from (27 N. B. 77. Railway belt—Reserve in British Columbia—47 Vict. c. 14, s. 2 (B.C.)—Provincial grant—Title to land.—By s. 11 of the order-in-council admitting the Province of British Columbia into confederation, British Columbia agreed to convey to the Dominion Government, in trust, to be appropriated in such manner as the Dominion Government might deem advisable in furtherance of the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, an extent of public lands along the line of railway. After certain negotiations between the Governments of Canada and British Columbia, and in order to settle all disputes, an agreement was entered into, and on 19th December, 1883, the legislature of British Columbia passed the statute 47 Vict. c. 14, by which:—"From and after the passing of this Act there shall be, and there is hereby, granted to the Dominion Government for the purpose of constructing and to aid in the construction of the portion of the Canadian Pacific Railway on the main land of British Columbia, in trust, to be appropriated as the Dominion Government may deem advisable, the public lands along the line of railway before mentioned, wherever it may be finally located, to a width of twenty miles on each side of the said line, as provided in the order-in-council, s. 11, admitting the Province of British Columbia into confederation." On 20th November, 1883, by public notice the Government of British Columbia reserved a belt of land of 20 miles in width along a line by way of Bow River Pass. In November, 1884, F., to comply with the provincial statutes, filed a survey of land within said belt which was finally accepted on 13th January, 1885, and letters patent under the great seal of the province issued to F. The Attorney-General of Canada by information of intrusion sought to recover possession of the land, and the Exchequer Court dismissed the information with costs. — Held, reversing the judgment of the Exchequer Court, Henry, J., dissenting, that at the date of the grant the Province of British Columbia had ceased to have any interest in the land covered by said grant, and that the title to the same was in the Crown for the use and benefit of Canada. *The Queen v. (b) Mines and Minerals.

81. Patent—Reservation of coal—Order-in-council—Agreement.—Certain Crown lands in Quebec had been granted to the suppliants, as assignees of one Kaye, the applicant for said lands, from which the Crown contended the coal thereon was reserved, which was the sole question in issue. The Exchequer Court (3 Ex. C. R. 157), held that there being no express or implied agreement to the contrary the suppliants were entitled to a grant conveying such mines and minerals as would pass without express words.—The Supreme Court of Canada affirmed the judgment of the Exchequer Court, and dismissed the appeal with costs. The Queen v. Canadian Agricultural Coal, and Colonization Co., xxiv., 713.

82. Mining law — Royalties — Dominion Lands Act—Publication of regulations—Renewal of license—Payment of royalties—Voluntary payment—R. S. C. c. 54, ss. 90, 91.]—The Dominion Government, by regulations made under The Dominion Lands Act, may validly reserve a royalty on gold produced by placer mining in the Yukon though the miner, by his license has the exclusive right to all the gold mined. Taschereau and Sedgewick, J.J., dissenting.—The "exclusive right" given by the license is exclusive only against quartz or hydraulic licenses or owners of surface rights and not against the Crown. Taschereau and Sedgewick, J.J., dissenting.—The provision in s. 91 of The Dominion Lands Act that regulations made thereunder shall have effect only after publication for four successive weeks in the Canada Gazette means that the regulations do not come into force on publication in the last of four successive issues of the Gazette, but only on the expiration of one week therefrom. Thus where they were published for the fourth time in the issue of 4th September, they were not in force until the 11th, and did not affect a license granted on 9th September.—Where regulations provided that failure to pay royalties would forfeit the claim, and a notice to that effect was posted on the claim and served on the licensee, payment by the latter under protest was not a voluntary payment.—One of the regulations of 1889 was that "the entry of every holder of a grant for placer mining had to be renewed and his receipt relinquished and replaced every year." Held, per C. J. and Girouard and Davies, J.J., reversing the judgment of the Exchequer Court (7 Ex. C. R. 414), Sedgewick, J. contra, that the new entry and receipt did not entitle the holder to mine on the terms and conditions in his original grant only, but he did so subject to the terms of any regulations made since such grant was issued.—The new entry cannot be made and new receipt given until the term of the grant has expired. Therefore, where a grant for one year was issued in December, 1896, and in August, 1897, the renewal license was given to the miner, such renewal only took effect in December, 1897, and was subject to regulations made in September of that year.—Regulations in force when a license issued were shortly after cancelled by new regulations imposing a smaller royalty. Held, that the new regulations were substituted for the others and applied to said license. The King v. Chappelle; The King v. Carmack; The King v. Tweed, xxxii., 586.

[Leave to appeal to Privy Council granted, March, 1903; 40 Can. Gaz. p. 569.]

83. Mines and minerals—Placer mining regulations—Staking claims—Overlapping locations—Renewal grant—Unoccupied Crown lands.—In August, 1899, M. staked and received a grant for a placer mining claim on Dominion Creek, Yukon, which, however, actually included part of an existing creek claim previously staked by W. In 1900 he applied for and obtained a renewal grant for the same area, W.'s claim having lapsed in the meantime, and was continuously in undisputed possession of that area, with his stakes standing from the time of his original location until March, 1901, when S. and T. staked bench claims for the lands embraced in W.'s expired location which had been overlapped by M.'s claim, as being unoccupied Crown land. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, Davies and Armour, J.J., dissenting, that the application for the renewal grant by M., after W.'s claim had lapsed, for the identical ground he had originally staked and continuously occupied, gave him a valid right to the location without the necessity of a formal re-staking and new application and that, following the rule in Osborne v. Morgan (13 App. Cas. 227), the possession of M. under his renewal grant should not be disturbed. St. Laurent v. Mercier, xxxiii., 314.

84. Railway subsidy—Dominion Lands Act—Reservation in grant.—By an equal division of opinion, the Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the Exchequer Court (8 Ex. C. R. 83), by which it was held that lands granted as subsidy to railways under 53 Vict. c. 54 (D.), were subject to the existing regulations respecting reservation of baser minerals in the grants thereof, notwithstanding that there was no reference thereto in the orders-in-council allotting the lands to the railway and that the grant was expressed in the statute to be a free grant subject merely to cost of survey. *Calgary and Edmonton Ry. 85. Permits to cut timber (Man.)—Rights of holders—Dominion Lands Act, 1879, s. 52—Trespass.—On 21st November, 1881, Sinnott obtained a permit from the Crown timber agent, Manitoba: "To cut, take and have for their own use from that part of range 10 E. that extends five miles north and five miles south of the C. P. Ry. track, the following quantities of timber, 2,000 cords of wood and 25,000 ties, permit to expire on 1st May, 1882." A similar permit was granted to Sinnott on 10th February, 1882, to cut 25,000 ties. In February, 1882, under leave granted by an order-in-council of 27th October, 1881, Scoble cut timber for the purposes of the construction of the C. P. Ry., from the lands covered by the permit of 21st November, 1881. Sinnott claimed by their "permit" the sole right of cutting timber on said lands until the 1st May, 1882, and prayed that Scoble might be restrained by injunction from cutting timber on said lands, and ordered to account for the value of the timber cut. Scoble justified under the order-in-council of the 27th October, 1881, and denied the exclusive possession or title to the lands or standing timber.—The plaintiffs applied ex parte for, and obtained, an interim injunction against the defendants. At the hearing Miller, J., made the injunction perpetual, and ordered a reference to ascertain the damages caused plaintiffs by the cutting of the timber by defendants. On re-hearing, this decree was reserved and a decree made dismissing the bill with costs and directing an account to be taken of the damages sustained by reason of the interim injunction.—Held, that the decree made on re-hearing should be affirmed, that the permit in question did not come within the provisions of the Dominion Lands Act of 1879, and did not vest in the plaintiffs any estate, right or title in the tract of land upon which they were permitted to cut, nor did it prevent the Government giving like licenses, or others of equal authority, to other persons, as long as there was sufficient timber to satisfy the requirements of the plaintiffs' licenses. Sinnott v. Scoble, xi., 571.

86. Crown lands—Setting aside grant—Error and improvidence—Evidence.—In an action to set aside letters patent for error and improvidence under the Manitoba Act, per Patterson, J.—In the construction of the statute 35 Vict. c. 3, amended by 35 Vict. c. 52, effect must be given to the term improvidence as meaning something distinct from fraud or error; letters patent may, therefore, be held to have been issued improvidently if issued in ignorance of a substantial claim by persons other than the patentee to the land which, if it had been known, would have been investigated and passed upon before the patent issued; and it is not the duty of the court to form a definite opinion as to the relative strength of opposing claims. Fonseca v. Attorney-General of Canada, xvii., 612.

87. Location tickets—Transfer of rights—Registration—Waiver by Crown—Cancellation—23 Vict. c. 2, ss. 18 & 20 (Can.)—32 Vict. c. 11, s. 13 (Q.)—36 Vict. c. 8 (Q.)—A location ticket of Crown land was granted to H. in 1863. In 1872 H. put on record with the department that by arrangement with the Crown Lands Agent, he had performed settlement duties on another lot known as the homestead lot. In 1874, H. transferred his rights to appellant, paid all moneys due with interest on the lots, registered the transfer under 32 Vict. c. 11, s. 18 (Que.), and the Crown accepted the fees for registering the transfer and for the issuing of the patent. In 1878, the commissioner cancelled the location ticket for default to perform settlement duties. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 2 Q. B. 316), Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the registration by the commissioner in 1874, of the transfer to respondent was a waiver of the right of the Crown to cancel the location ticket for default to perform settlement duties, and the cancellation was illegally effected. Holland v. Ross, xix., 566.

88. R. S. O. (1887) c. 25—License to cut timber—Renewals—Free grants—Patent—Interference with rights of patentee.—By s. 3, R. S. O. (1887) c. 25, the Lieut.-Gov.-in-Council may appropriate any public lands . . . as free grants to actual settlers, etc., and by s. 4 such grants or appropriations shall be confined to lands . . . within the tract or territory defined in that section. By s. 10 pine trees on lands located or sold within limits of the free grant territory aft

March, 1880, shall be considered as reserved from the location, and shall be the property of Her Majesty, and s. 11 enacts that patents of such lands located or sold shall contain a reservation of all pine trees on the land, and that any licensee to cut timber thereon may, during the continuance of his license, enter upon the uncleared portion and cut and remove trees, etc.—The company held a license, issued 30th May, 1888, to cut timber on land within the free grant territory, but which had not been appropriated under s. 3 of the Act. A license was first issued to the company in 1873 and had been renewed each year since that time. The license authorized the cutting of timber on lands unlocated and sold at its date; lands sold or located while it was in force; pine trees on lots sold under orders-in-council of 27th May, 1869, and pine trees, when reserved, on lots sold under order-in-council of 3rd April, 1880, upon the location described on back of license. — Regulations made by order-in-council of 27th May, 1869, provided that "all pine trees on any public land thereafter to be sold, which at the time of such sale or previously was included in any timber license, shall be considered as reserved from such sale and shall be subject to any timber license covering or including such land in force at the time of such sale, or granted within three years from the date of such sale, etc. All trees remaining on the land at the time the patent issues shall pass to the patentee." A patent for a lot in the free grant territory was issued to S. on 13th March, 1884.—On the back of the license was a schedule of lots included in the location with the date of sale or location, and the sale or location of S.'s lot was mentioned. The company claimed the right to cut timber on said lot which had not been appropriated by the L. G. in C. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (17 Ont. App. R. 322), that the provisions of R. S. O. (1887) c. 25, ss. 10, 11, relating to the pine trees in the territory, only apply to such lots as have been specifically appropriated under s. 3; that the license of the company, though renewed from year to year, was only an annual license; that the license issued in 1888 did not give the holders a right under the regulations of 27th May, 1869, to the timber on land patented in 1884, and that the company had notice, by their license of 1888, that the lot in question had been patented to S. more than three years previously. Lakefield Lumber and Mfg. Co. v. Shairp, xix., 657.

89. Right of pre-emption—Lands reserved—Agricultural settlers — 47 Vict. c. 14 (B.C.)]—By 47 Vict. c. 14, s. 8 (f) (B.C.), land conveyed to the E. & N. Ry. Co. was, for 4 years from the date of the Act, thrown open to the actual "settlers for agricultural purposes," coal and timber land excepted. H. and W. respectively claimed rights of pre-emption under this Act. Held, affirming the Supreme Court (B.C.), that the Act did not confer a right of pre-emption to lands not within the pre-emption laws of the province; that only "unreserved and unoccupied lands" came within those laws and the lands claimed had long before been reserved for a town site; and that the claimants were not upon the lands as "actual settlers for agricultural purposes," but had entered with express notice that the lands were not open for settlement. Hoggan v. Esquimault & Nanaimo Ry. Co.; Waddington v. Esquimault & Nanaimo Ry. Co., xx., 235.

C.—Practice—Title of cause.*]—Where the holder of a timber license does not verify the correctness of the official description of the lands to be covered by the license before it issues, and after its issue works on lands and makes improvements on a branch of a river which he believed formed part of his limits, but was subsequently ascertained by survey to form part of adjoining limits, he cannot recover from the Crown for losses sustained by acting on an understanding derived from a plan furnished by the Crown prior to the sale. Fournier, J., dissenting.—Per Patterson, J., the licensee's remedy would be by action to cancel the license under art. 992 C. C., with a claim for compensation for moneys expended.—This action was instituted against the Government of Quebec, but when the case came up for hearing on the appeal to the Supreme Court, the court ordered that "Her Majesty the Queen" be substituted for that of "Government of the Province of Quebec." Grant v. The Queen, xx., 297.

91. Title—Grant of non-existent sub-division—Description—Boundaries—Patent improvidently granted.]—Action for trespasses by defendant during 1878-79-80 and 1881, upon land alleged to be part of lots 34 and 35 in concession C. in the Township of Etobicoke, Ontario, and to be plaintiff's property, and damages for the cutting and removal of timber, and injunction to restrain future trespass.—Defendant contended that the land was not part of lots 34 and 35 in concession C, but part of lots 34 and 35 in concession B, and was his property.—Both parties derived title under H. J. B., who executed a mortgage dated 30th April, 1856, to S. F., comprising among other lands lots 34 and 35 in concession B, of Etobicoke.—On foreclosure of that mortgage, a final order was made 1st March, 1874, for the sale of the mortgaged lands, and under it lots 34 and 35 in concession B, of Etobicoke, were sold to J. M. to whom the lots were conveyed by the administrator and the sole devisee of the mortgage, by deed dated 10th April, 1875. On 8th May, 1875, J. M. conveyed to J. B. lots 34 and 35, in broken front, concession B. and on 14th July, 1875, J. B. conveyed to defendant lots 34 and 35, in broken front, concession B.—By deed, 27th October, 1857, after the mortgage H. J. B., the mortgagor, conveyed to plaintiff seven acres, more or less, composed of parts of lots 34 and 35 in concession B, known as the Ox-bow, described by metes and bounds, which is the land in question. Defendant did not dispute that plaintiff acquired the equity of redemption subject to the mortgage, but contended that by sale under the decree, title passed to the purchaser free from the equity as being a part of lots 34 and 35, in concession B, the whole of which lots were included in the mortgage and sold to J. M. Plaintiff contended that the land, although erroneously described in the deed of it to him, as part of lots 34 and 35 in concession B, really formed part of lots 34 and 35 in concession C, and was, therefore, not included in the mortgage, and in the alternative, that if the land did not form part of concession C, it formed part of broken front in front of, and separate from lots 34 and 35 in concession B, and therefore was not included in the mortgage—On 2nd April, 1883, after action, the Crown granted plaintiff a piece of land said to contain 3 and 75-100ths acres, and being the north bend of the Oxbow or land in question, describing it by metes and bounds as being lot 35 in concession C, of Etobicoke. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that the evidence established that there were no such lots as 34 and 35 in concession C; that the various descriptions in the patents and other title deeds also shewed that the lands in dispute formed parts of lots 34 and 35 in concession B, and therefore the description in the mortgage was sufficient to include such lands, and the defendant was entitled to a declaration that he was seized in fee; and that the patent was void, as having been improvidently granted. Johnson v. Crosson, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 848.

92. Disputed territory—License to cut timber—Implied warranty of title—Breach of contract—Damages.—The claimant applied to the Government of Canada for licenses to cut timber on ten timber berths situated in the territory lately in dispute between that Government and the Government of Ontario. The application was granted on the condition that the applicant would pay certain ground rents and bonuses, make surveys and build a mill. The claimant knew of the dispute which was at the time open and public. He paid the rents and bonuses, made the surveys and enlarged a mill he had previously built, which was accepted as equivalent to building a new one. The dispute was determined adversely to the Government of Canada, at the time six leases or licenses were current, and consequently the Government could not renew them. The lease was granted under ss. 49 and 50 of 46 Vict. c. 17, and the regulations made under the Act of 1879 provided that "the license may be renewed for another year subject to such revision of the annual rental and royalty to be paid therefor as may be fixed by the Governor-in-Council."—In a claim for damages by the licensee:—Held, 1. Orders-in-council issued pursuant to 46 Vict. c. 17, ss. 49 and 50, authorizing the Minister of the Interior to grant licenses to cut timber, did not constitute contracts between the Crown and proposed licensees, such orders-in-council being revocable by the Crown until acted upon by the granting of licenses under them.—2. The right of renewal of the licenses was optional with the Crown, and the claimant was entitled to recover from the Government only the moneys paid to them for ground rents and bonuses.—The licenses which were granted and actually current in 1884 and 1885 conferred upon the licensee "full right, power, and license to take and keep exclusive possession of the said lands, except as hereinafter mentioned for and during the period of one year from the 31st December, 1883, to the 31st December, 1884, and no longer."—Quere, though this was in law a lease for one year of the lands comprised in the license was the Crown bound by any implied covenant to be read into the license for good right and title to make the lease, and for quiet enjoyment? Bulmer v. The Queen, xxiii., 488.

Transfer of Crown lands—Art. 1007 C. P. Q. —Art. 1553 C. C.—The locatée of certain Crown lands sold his rights therein to B., reserving the right to redeem the same within nine years, and subsequently sold the same rights to M., subject to the first deed. These deeds were both registered in their proper order in the registry office for the division and in the Crown lands office at Quebec. M. paid the balance of Crown dues remaining unpaid upon the land and made an application for letters patent of grant thereof in which no mention was made of the former sale by the original locatée. In an action by scire facias for the annulment of the letters patent granted to M., Held, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the failure to mention the vente à réméré in the application for the letters patent was a misrepresentation and concealment which entitled the Crown to have the grant declared void and the letters patent annulled as having been issued by mistake and in ignorance of a material fact, notwithstanding the registration of the first deed in the Crown land office. Fonseca v. Attorney-General for Canada (17 Can. S. C. R. 612) referred to. Held, further, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that it is not necessary that such an action should be proceeded or accompanied by tender or deposit of the dues paid to the Crown in order to obtain the issue of the letters patent. The Queen v. Montminy, xxix., 484.

94. *Scire facias — Crown lands — Grant made in error—Adverse claim—Cancellation—32 Vict. c. 11, s. 26 (Que.) — R. S. Q. art. 1299) do not authorize the cancellation of letters patent by the Commissioner of Crown Lands where adverse claims to the lands exist. (Judgment appealed from reversed, and Q. R. 18 S. 95. *Timber licenses—Sales by local agent—Location ticket—Suspensive condition—Title to lands—Art. 1085 C. C.—Arts. 1269 et seq. and 1309 et seq. R. S. Subsequently the timber license was renewed, but, at the time the renewal license was issued, there had not been any express approval by the Commissioner of Crown Lands of the sales so made by the local agent as provided by art. 1269 R. S. Q. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, Taschereau and Davies, J.J., dissenting, that the approval required by art. 1269 R. S. Q. was not a suspensive condition, the fulfilment of which would have retroactive effect from the date when the sales by the local agent were made, and that, at the time of the issue of the renewal license, the lands in question were still ungranted lands of the Crown for which the timber license had been validly issued. *Leblanc v. CUSTOMS DUTIES.

1. Article imported in parts—Rate of duty—Scrap brass—Good faith—46 Vict. c. 12, s. 153 — Subsequent legislation — Legislative declaration.—A., manufacturer of an "Automatic Sprinkler," a brass device composed of several parts, was desirous of importing the same into Canada, with the intention of putting the parts together there and selling the completed articles on the market. He interviewed the appraiser of hardware at Montreal, explained to him the device and its use, and was told that it should pay duty as a manufacture of brass. He imported a number of sprinklers and paid the duty on the several parts, and the Customs officials then caused the same to be seized, and an information to be laid against him for smuggling, evasion of payment of duties, under-valuation, and knowingly keeping and selling goods illegally imported, under ss. 153, 155, of the Customs Act, 1883. Held, reversing the Exchequer Court (1 Ex. C. R. 373), that there was no importation of sprinklers, as completed articles, and the Act not imposing a duty on parts of an article, the information should be dismissed.—Held, also, that the subsequent passage of an Act, 48-49 Vict. c. 61, s. 12, re-enacted by 49 Vict. c. 32, s. 11, imposing a duty on such parts was a legislative declaration that it did not previously exist. Grinnell v. The Queen, xvi., 119.

2. Teas in transit through United States to Canada—52 Vict. c. 14—Tariff Act (1886), item 781—R. S. C. c. 33, s. 10.—Plaintiffs made two shipments of tea from Japan to New York for transportation in bond to Canada. In one case the bills of lading were marked "in transit to Canada;" in the other the teas appeared upon the consular invoice made at the place of shipment to be consigned to plaintiff's brokers in New York for transhipment to Canada. On arrival of both lots at New York, and pending sale thereof in Canada, they were allowed to be sent to a bonded warehouse as unclaimed goods for some five or six months and were finally entered at the New York Customs House for transportation to Canada, and forwarded to Montreal. There was nothing to show that plaintiffs at any time proposed to make any other disposition of the teas, and there was nothing in what they did that contravened the laws or regulations of the United States or of Canada with respect to the transportation of goods in bond. — Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (2 Ex. C. R. 126), Gwynne, J., dissenting, that as it clearly appeared that the tea was never entered for sale or consumption in the United States; that it was shipped from there within the time limited by law for goods in transit to remain in a warehouse; and that no act had been done changing its character during transit, it was therefore "tea imported into Canada from a country other than the United States but passing in bond through the United States" and under R. S. C. c. 33, s. 10, not liable to duty as goods exported from the United States to Canada. Carter, Macy & Co. v. The Queen, xviii., 706.

3. 50 & 51 Vict. c. 39, Items 88 and 173—Exemption from duty—Steel rails for use on railways—Application to street railways.—The exemption from duty in 50 & 51 Vict. c. 39, item 173, of "steel rails weighing not less than twenty-five pounds per lineal yard, for use on railway tracks," does not apply to rails to be used for street railways, which are subject to duty as "rails for railways and tramways of any form," under item 88. Strong, C.J., and King, J., dissenting. Toronto Railway Co. v. The Queen, xxv., 24.
Memo. See (1896) A. C. 551.

4. Customs duties — Duties on goods — Foreign-built ships—Customs' Tariff Act, 1897, s. 4.—A foreign-built ship owned in Canada which has been given a certificate from a British Consul and comes into Canada for the purpose of being registered as a Canadian ship is liable to duty under section 4 of the Customs' Tariff Act, 1897.—A taxing Act is not to be construed differently from any other statute. The King v. Algoma Central Ry. Co., xxxii., 277.

[Affirmed on appeal by Privy Council, 40 Can. Gaz. 400.]

5. Customs duties—Lex fori—Lex loci—Interest on duties improperly levied—Mistake of law—Répétition—Presumption as to good faith—Arts. 1047, 1049 C. C.]—The Crown is not liable, under the provisions of articles 1047 and 1049 C. C., to pay interest on the amount of duties illegally exacted under a mistaken construction placed by the customs officers upon the Customs Tariff Act. Wilson v. The City of Montreal (24 L. C. Jur. 222) approved, Strong, C.J., dubitante.—Per Strong, C.J. The error of law mentioned in arts. 1047 and 1049 C. C. is the error of the party paying and not that of the party receiving. Money paid under compulsion is not money paid under error within the terms of those articles. The Toronto Railway Co. v. The Queen (4 Ex. C. R. 262; 25 Can. S. O. R. 24; [1896] A. 1. ASSESSMENT; MEASURE OF DAMAGES; RIGHT OF ACTION.

1. Negligence—Death of wife—Damages to husband as administrator—Benefit of children—Loss of household services—Care and training of children.—Although on the death of a wife, caused by negligence of a railway company, the husband cannot recover damages of a sentimental character, yet the loss of household services, accustomed to be performed by the wife, which would have to be replaced by hired services, may be a substantial loss for which damages may be recovered, and so also may be the loss to the children of the care and moral training of their mother. Judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario (11 Ont. App. R. 1) affirmed. St. Lawrence & Ottawa Ry. Co. v. Lett, xi., 422.

[The Privy Council refused leave to appeal; 6 Can. Gaz. 583.]

2. Assessment—Material loss—Injured feelings—Misdirection as to solatium—New trial—Art. 1056 C. C.—In an action of damages brought for the death of a person by the consort and relations under art. 1056, C. C. which is a re-enactment and reproduction of the C. S. L. C. c. 78, damages by way of solatium for the bereavement suffered cannot be recovered. Judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 2 Q. B. 25) reversed and new trial ordered. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. v. Robinson, xiv., 105.

3. Death of parent—Bereavement—Negligence—Art. 1056 C. C.—Solatium—Pecuniary loss—Verdict—Cross-appeal—Practice.—In an action for damages, the descendants of L., killed driving down a street, alleged to have been at the time of the accident in a bad state of repair, by being thrown from a sleigh, the trial judge (without a jury), granted $1,000 damages by way of solatium for bereavement (M. L. R. 2 S. C. 56). Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, that the verdict could not be upheld on the ground of solatium, and as the respondents had not filed a cross-appeal to sustain it on the ground that there was sufficient evidence of a pecuniary loss for which compensation could be claimed, the action must be dismissed with costs. City of Montreal v. Labelle, xiv., 741.

4. Assessment of damages—Action for negligence—Deduction of life insurance.—A deduction of insurance on the life of deceased from the amount of a verdict upon entering judgment was held to be improper. Grand Trunk Ry. Co. v. Beckett, xvi., 713.

5. Discretion as to award—Interference on appeal—Evidence—Error in fact or law—Partiality.—The amount of damages awarded in the discretion of the trial judge should not be interfered with on appeal, unless clearly unreasonable and unsupported by the evidence, or for error in law or fact, or partiality of the judge. Levi v. Reed (6 Can. S. C. R. 482), and Gingras v. Desilets, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 212, followed. Cossette v. Dun, xviii., 222.

6. Use and occupation — Estimating damages—Prescription — Quasi delict—Pleading.]—In assessing damages for use and occupation of lands it is not merely the value of the property for agricultural purposes should be considered, but its different and even prospective capabilities should be taken into consideration (See Mayor of Montreal v. Brown, 2 App. Cas. 184).—In the case in question not only was the keeping logs in safety a prospective use which might be made of plaintiff's lands, but the actual use to which the property was put by defendants. If land be well adapted for a particular purpose, as this was, and there are those who require it for such purpose, the value of the property is to be determined, not by what it might be worth if used for other purposes, but by the value which its exceptional adaptation to special purposes gives it in the estimation of those conversant with property of that description and capable of speaking of the value of the fair use of such property. The evidence justified the finding of the Superior Court, that the property was worth $400 per annum. (See 7 Q. L. R. 286; 15 R. L. 514). Breakey v. Carter, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 463.

7. Libel in newspaper—Additional libel in plea—Incidental demand—Excessive damages—Reduction of verdict or new trial.]—Action for $10,000 damages for the publication of an article which appeared in the Toronto "Mail" 8th December, 1884. Defendant filed a plea which plaintiff alleged contained an additional libel and he filed an incidental demand claiming $5,000 further damages. At the trial the jury returned a verdict for plaintiff, $6,000 for the libel contained in the newspaper, and of $4,000 for the additional libel contained in the defendant's plea.—The Court of Review ordered judgment on the verdict and rejected a motion by defendant in arrest of judgment, for judgment non obstante veredicto and for a new trial. The Queen's Bench dismissed an appeal (M. L. R. 4 Q. B. 84). Held, that upon the plaintiff consenting to reduce the verdict to $6,000, the appeal should stand dismissed without costs, the plaintiff to have his costs in the court below, and that in the event of his not consenting to a reduction of the verdict there should be a new trial; plaintiff to signify his election by filing a consent to that effect with the Registrar within ten days.—The respondent (plaintiff) filed the necessary consent to a reduction of the verdict and judgment went accordingly. Mail Printing Co. v. Laflamme, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 493.

8. Increasing award without cross-appeal—R. S. O. (1887) c. 44, ss. 47, 48—Supreme Court, rule 61—Notice by statute.]—Under the Ont. Jud. Act, and S. C. Rule 61, the Supreme Court of Canada has power to increase an award for damages to a respondent without a cross-appeal.—Per Strong, C.J. The statute is sufficient notice to the appellant that the court may pronounce such a judgment as arbitrators ought to have given. Town of Toronto Junction v. Christie, xxv., 551.

9. Operation of electric power house—Vibration, smoke and noise—Assessment of damages—Reversal on appeal.]—In reversing the judgment appealed from, the Supreme Court, in the interest of both parties, assessed damages, once for all, at an amount deemed sufficient to indemnify the plaintiff for all injuries, past, present and future, resulting from the nuisance complained of, should she elect to accept the amount so estimated in full satisfaction thereof; otherwise, the record was ordered to be transmitted to the trial court to have the amount of damages determined. Gareau v. Montreal Street Railway Co., xxxi., 463.

10. Action for personal injuries—Assessment of damages—Future sufferings.]—When in an action for bodily injuries there is but one cause of action, damages must be assessed once for all. And when damages have been once recovered, no new action can be maintained for sufferings afterwards endured from the unforeseen effects of the original injury. City of Montreal v. McGee, xxx., 582.

11. Common law liability—Employer and employee—Defective ways, works or plant—Assessment of damages.]—Where an injury has occurred by reason of defendant's neglect to provide the best known or conceivable appliances to prevent accidents, the employer is subject to common law liability and the assessment of damages should be left to the reasonable discretion of the jury. Balch & Peppard v. Romburgh, 12th June, 1900.

12. Principle of assessment—Average estimate.]—The assessment of damages by taking the average estimate of the witnesses examined is wrong in principle—G. T. Ry. Co. v. Coupal (28 Can. S. C. R. 531) followed. Fairman v. City of Montreal, xxxi., 210.

13. Contract—Drainage — Inter-municipal works—Assessment of damages—Guarantee—Continuing liability.]—The City of Montreal, having a sewer sufficient for all its purposes within its limits and through lands lying on a lower level than those of the adjoining municipalities of Ste. Cunégonde, St. Henri and Westmount, entered into an agreement in writing with Ste. Cunégonde by which the last named city was permitted to connect its sewers with the Montreal sewer in question for drainage purposes, and by the same agreement, the City of Montreal consented that the City of Ste. Cunégonde should allow the two other municipalities to make connections with its sewers, so connected, in such a manner that waters coming from such three higher municipalities should be drained through the Montreal sewer. The privilege was granted on condition that the connection with the Montreal sewer should be made by Ste. Cunégonde at its own cost and to the entire satisfaction of the Montreal engineers; that Ste. Cunégonde should guarantee Montreal against all "damages which might result whether from the connection of said sewers or works necessary" in connection therewith, as well to the City of Montreal as to other persons or corporations and Ste. Cunégonde bound itself to pay and reimburse to the said City of Montreal all sums of money that the latter might be "called upon and condemned to pay on account of such damages and the costs resulting therefrom." In case of the Montreal sewer becoming insufficient, and its capacity requiring to be increased, or a new sewer constructed, it was provided that Ste. Cunégonde should contribute proportionately to the cost of constructing the new works. The Ste. Cunégonde sewer was accordingly connected, and the other municipalities, upon entering into similar agreements with the City of Ste. Cunégonde, were permitted by Ste. Cunégonde to make connections with its sewers w^h their lands were also drained through the Montreal sewer, the agreements of the two last municipalities binding them as the arrière-garants, respectively, of the City of Ste. Cunégonde. In an action by the City of Montreal to recover from Ste. Cunégonde damages which it had been compelled to pay for the flooding of cellars by waters from the sewer in question, the arrière-garants were made parties by the principal defendant on demands in warranty: Held, that the guarantee in question bound the several higher municipalities for all damages resulting not only from the act of making the actual connection of the sewers, but also for damages that might be subsequently occasioned from time to time on account of the user by them of the Montreal sewer for drainage purposes. Held, also, that, as the City of Montreal had not obliged itself to construct additional or new works within any fixed time in case of insufficiency, the adjoining municipalities were not relieved from any of their liabilities on account of postponement of construction of such works by the City of Montreal. Held, further, that the judgment awarding damages against the City of Montreal being a matter between third parties and not res judicata against the other municipal corporations interested, the said City of Montreal was only entitled to recover by its suit against Ste. Cunégonde, such damages as might be shewn to have resulted from the connection and user of the sewers under the agreement; that the City of Montreal, when sued, was not obliged to summon its warrantor into the action for damages, but could, after condemnation, recover such damages by separate action under the contract; that it was not, by the terms of the contract, a condition precedent to action by the City of Montreal, that it should first submit to a judicial condemnation in liquidation of such damages; and that, as between the City of Ste. Cunégonde and the arrière-garants, their contracts bound them, respectively, to pay such damages, with interest and costs in proportion to the areas drained by them respectively into the Montreal sewer. City of Montreal v. City of Ste. Cunégonde; City of Ste. Cunégonde v. City of St. Henri; City of Ste. Cunégonde v. Town of Westmount, xxxii., 135.

[Leave to appeal to the Privy Council was refused on application by the Town of Westmount, July, 1902.]

14. Assessment of damages—Estimating by guess—Concurrent findings—Reversal on appeal—New trial.—[The evidence being insufficient to enable the trial judge to ascertain the damages claimed for breach of contract, he stated that he was obliged to guess at the sum awarded and his judgment was affirmed by the judgment appealed from. The Supreme Court of Canada was of opinion that no good result could be obtained by sending the case back for a new trial and, therefore, allowed the appeal and dismissed the action, thus reversing the concurrent findings of both courts below. Armour, J., however, was of opinion that the proper course was to order a new trial. Williams v. Stephenson, xxxiii., 323.

15. Assessment of damages—Reservation of recourse for future damages—Expropriation—Res judicata—Right of action.—[A lessee of premises used as an ice house recovered indemnity from the city for injuries suffered in consequence of the expropriation of part of the leased premises, and, in his statement of claim, had specially reserved the right of further recourse for damages resulting from the expropriation. In an action brought after his death by his universal legatee to recover damages for loss of the use of the ice-house during the unexpired term of the lease, Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the reservation in the first action did not preserve any further right of action in consequence of the expropriation and, therefore, the plaintiff's action was properly dismissed by the courts below, as, in such cases, all damages capable of being foreseen must be assessed once for all and a defendant cannot be twice sued for the same cause. City of Montreal v. McGee, 30 Can. S. C. R., 582, and Chaudière Machine and Foundry Co. v. Canada Atlantic Ry. Co. (33 Can. S. C. R. 11) followed. Anctil v. City of Quebec, xxxiii., 347.

C.—Practice on appeal—Irregular procedure.]* C. on behalf of J. C. & Co., a firm of contractors of which he was a member, deposited a sum of money with the City of Montreal as a guarantee of the good faith of J. C. & Co. in tendering to supply gas for illuminating and other purposes to the city and the general public within the city limits at certain fixed rates, lower than those previously charged by companies supplying such gas in Montreal, and for the due fulfilment of the firm's contract entered into according to the tender. After the construction of some works and laying of pipes in the public streets, J. C. & Co. transferred their rights and privileges under the contract to another company and ceased operations. The plaintiff, afterwards, as assignee of C., demanded the return of the deposit which was refused by the city council which assumed to forfeit the deposit and declare the same confiscated to the city for non-execution by J. C. & Co. of their contract. After the transfer, however, the companies supplying gas in the city reduced the rates to a price below that mentioned in the tender so far as the city supply was affected, although the rates charged to citizens were higher than the price mentioned in the contract. Held, that the deposit so made was a pledge subject to the provisions of the sixteenth title of the Civil Code of Lower Canada and which, in the absence of any express stipulation, could not be retained by the pledgee, and that, as the city had appropriated the thing pledged to its own use without authority, the security was gone by the act of the creditor and the debtor was entitled to its restitution although the obligation for which the security had been given had not been executed.—On a cross-demand by the defendant for damages, to be set off in compensation against the plaintiff's claim; Held, that, as the city had not been obliged to pay rates in excess of those fixed by the contract, no damage could be recovered in respect to the obligation to supply the city; and that the breach of contract in respect to supplying the public did not give the corporation any right of action for damages suffered by the citizens individually. Held, further, that prospective damages which might result from the occupation of the city streets by the pipes actually laid and abandoned were too remote and uncertain to be set-off in compensation of the claim for the return of the deposit.—The court also decided that, following its usual practice, it would not, on the appeal, interfere with the action of the courts below in matters of mere procedure where no injustice appeared to have been suffered in consequence although there might be irregularities in the issues as joined which brought before the trial court a demande almost different for the matter actually in controversy. *Finnie v. 5. DISCRETIONARY AWARD.

49. Libel—Confidential report—Discretion of trial—Interference on appeal.—In an action for libel the trial judge awarded plaintiff $2,000. The Court of Appeal reduced the damages to $500. Held, that the amount of damages awarded by the trial judge in his discretion, should not be interfered with on appeal unless clearly unreasonable and unsupported by the evidence, or there be some error in law or fact, or partiality on the part of the judge. Levi v. Reed (6 Can. S. C. R. 482), and Gingras v. Desilets (Cass. Dig. 2 ed. 212) followed. (See M. L. R. 3 S. C. 345.) Cossette v. Dun, xviii., 222.

50. Personal injuries—Measure of damages—Findings of fact—Exemplary damages.—In an action for damages for injuries to his feelings, reputation and health the Superior Court at Three Rivers assessed damages at $3,000.—On appeal to the Queen's Bench, reduced the damages to $600 condemning plaintiff to pay all the costs of appeal. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (10 R. L. 275), Taschereau, J., dissenting, that in view of very serious injuries sustained by plaintiff and of the misconduct of defendant (who appears to have abused his position of Justice of the Peace), the amount awarded by the trial judge was not so clearly excessive as to justify interference with his judgment.—Per Fournier, J. The abuse by plaintiff of his position of J. P. was an important element to be taken into consideration in fixing the amount of damages.—Per Gwynne, J. The sound rule to adopt is that in mere matters of fact, or in the estimation of damages not capable of precise calculation, nor ascertainable by the application of any rule prescribing a measure of damage, this court should sustain the judgment of first instance, unless satisfied that its conclusions are clearly erroneous.—Appeal allowed with costs in Queen's Bench and Supreme Court. Levi v. Reed (6 Can. S. C. R. 482) approved. — Per Taschereau, J., dissenting. Though the amount awarded by the Queen's Bench was not sufficiently large, yet taking into consideration the position of the plaintiff and the nature of the injuries $3,000 was excessive. Gingras v. Desilets, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 212.

7. INJURIA SINE DAMNUM.

60. Injuria sine damnum—Counterclaim—Action of contract—Verdict for plaintiff—Technical breach by plaintiff—Defendant's nominal damages—New trial.—In an action on a contract and also on the common counts to recover the balance of the contract price for work done for the defendant, the evidence shewed that there was a technical breach of the contract by which, however, the defendant had sustained no substantial damage. A verdict was found for the plaintiff and a new trial was refused.—Held, affirming the Court of Appeal for Ontario, that a verdict would not be set aside, merely to enter a verdict for nominal damages in favour of the other party. Beatty v. Oille, xii., 706.

61. Appeal—Practice—Judgment of court—Withdrawal of opinion—Master's report—

Credibility of witnesses — Apportionment of damages — Irrelevant evidence — Severance of damages — Reasons for report — Equal division of judges in appeal — Final judgment.] — The Court of Appeal for Ontario, composed of four judges, pronounced judgment, two being in favour of dismissing an appeal, the other two pronouncing no judgment. In the Supreme Court it was objected that in the judgment appealed from no decision had been arrived at. Held, that the appellate court could not go behind the formal judgment which stated that the appeal had been dismissed; further that the proposition was the same as if the four judges had been equally divided in opinion, in which case the appeal would have been properly dismissed. — In an action against several mill-owners for obstructing the Ottawa River by throwing sawdust and refuse into it from their mills, a reference was made to the master to ascertain the amount of damages. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the master rightly treated the defendants as joint tort-feasors; that he was not called upon to apportion the damages according to the injury inflicted by each defendant, and that he was not obliged to apportion them according to the different grounds of injury claimed by the plaintiff. Held, further, that the master was the final judge of the credibility of the witnesses and his report should not be sent back because some irrelevant evidence may have been given of a character not likely to have affected his judgment, especially as no appeal was taken from his ruling on the evidence. — On a reference to a master, the latter, provided he sufficiently follows the directions of the decree, is not obliged to give his reasons or enter into a detailed explanation of his report to the court. — (Compare, 11 O. 12. NEGLIGENCE; PROXIMATE CAUSE.

70. Negligence — Work in mine — Entering shaft — Code of signals — Disregard of rules — Damages.] — A miner was getting into the bucket by which he was to be lowered into the mine when owing to the chain not being checked his weight carried him rapidly down and he was badly hurt. In an action for damages against the mine owners the jury found that the system for lowering the men was faulty; the man in charge of it negligent; and that the engine and brake by which the bucket was lowered were not fit and proper for the purpose. Printed rules were posted near the mouth of the pit providing among other things that signals should be given, by any miner wishing to go down the mine or be brought up, by means of bells, the number telling the engineer and pitman what was required. The jury found that it was not usual in descending to signal with the bells; and that the injured miner knew of the rules but had not complied with them on the occasion of the accident. On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from a judgment setting aside the verdict for plaintiff and ordering a new trial. — Held, reversing said judgment (8 B. C. Rep. 344) and restoring the judgment of the trial judge (7 B. C. Rep. 414), that there was ample evidence to support the findings of the jury that defendants were negligent; that there was no contributory negligence by non-use of the signals, the rules having, with consent of the employees and of the persons in charge of the men, been disregarded, which indicated their abrogation; the new trial should, therefore, not have been granted. — Held, further, that as the negligence causing the accident was not that of the persons having control of those going down the mine, it was not a case of negligence at common law with no limit to the amount of damages, but the latter must be assessed under the Employees' Liability Act ([1897] R. S. B. C. c. 69). Warmington v. Palmer, xxxii., 126.

13. NUISANCE.

76. Nuisance—Trespass—Continuing damage.—In 1888 the Canada Atlantic Railway Company ran their line through Britannia Terrace, a street in Ottawa, in connection with which they built an embankment and raised the level of the street. In 1895 the plaintiffs became owners of land on said street on which they have since carried on their foundry business. In 1900 they brought an action against the Canada Atlantic Railway Company alleging that the embankment was built and level raised unlawfully and without authority and claiming damages for the flooding of their premises and obstruction to their ingress and egress in consequence of such work.—Held, that the trespass and nuisance (if any) complained of were committed in 1888, and the then owner of the property might have taken an action in which the damages would have been assessed once for all. His right of action being barred by lapse of time when the plaintiff's action was taken the same could not be maintained. Chaudière Machine & Foundry Co. v. Canada Atlantic Ry. Co., xxxiii, 11.

1. Gift inter vivos—Subsequent deed—Dation en paiement—Registration—Arts. 806, 1592 C. C.—A gift inter vivos of real estate with warranty by the donor was not registered, but a subsequent deed, which was registered changed its nature from an apparently gratuitous donation to a dation en paiement. In an action by testamentary executors of the donor to set aside the donation for want of registration.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 6 Q. B. 316), that the forfeiture under art. 806 C. C. resulting from neglect to register applies only to gratuitous donations, and as the deed in this case was in effect a dation en paiement, with warranty, which under art. 1592 C. C. is equivalent to sale, the testamentary executors had no right of action against the donee based on the absence of registration of the original deed of gift inter vivos. *Lacoste v. 2. *Sale—Donation in form of—Gifts in contemplation of death—Mortal illness of donor—Presumption of nullity—Validating circumstances—Arts. 762, 989 C. This direction was carried out after his death, and the Attorney-General claimed succession duty on the whole estate. — Held, affirming the judgment appealed against (35 N. S. Rep. 223), Sedgewick and Mills, J.J., dissenting, that although the debentures themselves were not liable to the duty either in the hands of the executors or of the purchasers, the proceeds of their sale when passing to legatees were. 3. COMPOSITION AND DISCHARGE.

5. Deed of composition — Execution — Assignment in trust — Release — Authority to sign — Ratification — Estoppel.—To an action by L. against A. the defence was release by deed. A. had executed an assignment for benefit of creditors and received authority by telegram to sign for L., the deed dated 8th October, 1881. Afterwards, with knowledge of it, L. continued to send goods to A., and on 5th November, 1881, wrote to A., "I have done as you desired by telegraphing you to sign deed for me, and I feel confident that you will see that I am protected and not lose one cent by you. After you get things adjusted I would like you to send me a cheque for $800." . . . In April, 1885, A. wrote to L., "In one year more I will try again for myself and I hope to pay you in full." In November, 1886, the account sued upon was stated.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (21 N. S. Rep. 466), Taschereau and Patterson, J.J., dissenting, that the execution of the deed on his behalf being made without sufficient authority, L. was not bound by the release contained therein, and never having subsequently assented to the deed, or recognized or acted under it, he was not estopped from denying that he had executed it.—Held, per Taschereau and Patterson, J.J., that though A. had no sufficient authority to sign the deed, yet there was an agreement to compound which was binding on L., and the understanding that L. was to be paid in full would be a fraud upon the other creditors of A., who could only receive the dividends realized by the estate. Lawrence v. Anderson, xvii., 349.

6. Composition and discharge — Acquiescence in — New arrangement of terms of settlement — Waiver of time clause—Principal and agent — Deed of discharge—Notice of withdrawal from agreement — Fraudulent preferences.—Upon default to carry out the terms of a deed of composition and discharge, a new arrangement was made respecting the realization of a debtor's assets and their distribution, to which all the execution creditors appeared to have assented. Held, that a creditor who had benefited by the realization of the assets, and by his action given the body of the creditors reason to believe that he had adopted the new arrangement, could not repudiate the transaction upon the ground that the new arrangement was not fully understood, without at least a surrender of the advantage he had received through it — The debtor's assent, to such repudiation and the grant of better terms to the one creditor would be a fraud upon the other creditors, and as such inoperative and of no effect. Howland, Sons & Co. v. Grant, xxvi., 372.

7. Partnership—Insolvent firm — Assignment for benefit of creditors—Composition—Discharge of debt — Release of debtor.—T. and C. doing business under the name of & Co., made an assignment for the benefit creditors, and T. then induced the Dueber Co., a creditor, to pay off a chattel mortgage on the stock, and a composition of 25 cents on the dollar of unsecured claims, the company to receive its own debt in full with interest. The assignee of T. & Co. then transferred all the assets to the Dueber Co., and the arrangement was carried out, the company eventually as provided in a contemporaneous deed executed by the parties interested re-conveying the assets to T., taking his promissory notes and a chattel mortgage as security. In an action by the company against T. & Co. on the original debt: Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (26 Ont. App. R. 295), that the original debt was extinguished and C. was released from all liability thereunder. Dueber Watch Case Mfg. Co. v. Taggart, xxx., 373.

7. PAYMENT; INTEREST.

16. Appropriation of payments — Statements of account rendered — Rule in Clayton's case.] — In 1884 J. was unable to pay his liabilities as they matured, his principal cred- itors being appellants, (G. & Co.), for about $2,000, and C. for over $1,500.—Proposals were made for an arrangement, but before settlement each creditor issued writs against J. Pending the suits C. & P. offered to take 60 cents on the dollar or give the same for the claim of G. & Co. Appellants agreed to take 60 cents on the dollar, but both suits went to judgment. C. & P. signed judgment on 22nd January, 1885, for $1,252.44, and appellants signed judgment on 27th February, 1885, for $2,112.67. Appellants were paid by C. & P. indorsing J.'s note for $1,164.67, dated 21st February, 1885, which note was paid by C. & P. on maturity and appellant's judgment was assigned to them 2nd April, 1885, at J.'s request; as security for the amount of the note which they were obliged to pay.—After this arrangement C. & P. continued to furnish J. with goods. J. paid moneys thereafter from time to time, but never at any time did he pay his new account in full.—In January, 1887, J. owed C. & P., on all accounts about $8,000, and they then sued him and recovered a judgment against him for $3,062.07, which with the amounts of the two judgments and with some unmatured notes of J.'s made up the total amount. On 10th January, 1887, fi. fa. against the goods of J. issued on the first judgment recovered by C. & P. against J. for $1,252.42 and was placed in the sheriff's hands on the same date.—A writ of fi. fa. against the goods of J. also issued on the judgment by appellants against J. for $2,112.67, on 10th January, 1887, and was on same date placed in the sheriff's hands, but only $1,257.84 and interest was claimed thereon, being the amount actually paid by C. & P. to appellants for their claim.—On 7th February, 1887, fi. fa. against the goods of J. issued on the second judgment recovered by C. & P. for $3,062.07 and was placed in the sheriff's hands same date.—Subsequently respondents each recovered a judgment against J. and placed a writ of fi. fa. against the goods of J. in the hands of the sheriff.—On 7th February, 1888, the sheriff seized the goods and stock-in-trade of J. and on 17th February sold the same to C. & P., at 78 cents on the dollar of the invoice price, the total purchase money amounting to $6,101.16.—Immediately after the sale the sheriff received notice from respondents claiming that the two first above mentioned executions were paid and satisfied as against respondents, thereupon he paid to C. & P. the amount of the third above execution $3,062.07, and retaining the balance took interpleader proceedings, and thereupon an issue was directed to try the validity of the appellant's execution, C. & P. being the real plaintiffs.—C. & P. in the course of their dealings with J. rendered four statements of account, as follows:—1. Rendered October 22nd, 1885. This statement is divided into "Old Acct." and "New Acct." "Old Acct." extends from September 22nd, 1884, to February 27th, 1885. Debits, $2,952.75; credits, $1,594.50; balance, $1,358.25. J. Green & Co., note, $1,164.67; interest on same, $93.95; total, $2,616.87.—"New Acct." extends from April 18th, 1885, to Oct. 23rd, 1885. Debits $2,537.55; credits, $1,704.90; balance, $832.65.—2. Rendered October 21st, 1886, and marked "New Acct." To amt. acct. rendered, $832.65; debits (goods), $14,506.77; credits, $9,740.58; balance, $5,598.84.—3. Rendered October 23rd, 1886. This account is set out verbatim. 1885.—October 23rd, to amount old account, $2,616.87; 1886.—February 24th, cash note Green & Co., $88.22; February 24th, cash note, Green & Co., $41.19; by amount overcharged on interest, 78 cents; to amount old account, $2,745.50; to amount new account, as per detailed statement, $5,598.84; total, $8,344.34.—4. Rendered December 31st, 1886. To amount account rendered, $8,344.34; to debits (goods), $2,421.67; credits, $2,992.17; balance, $7,783.84. The accounts are all blended into one account in No. 3 and the balance is then carried forward into one continuous account in No. 4, and all payments credited generally. These payments are more than sufficient to pay the old account, including the G. & Co. notes.—Taylor, C.J., gave judgment for respondents holding that whatever the original arrangement was for paying off G. & Co., C. & P. by the statements rendered and the receipts they gave, had so appropriated the payments made by J., that the old account was paid off. This judgment was affirmed by the Queen's Bench.—On appeal the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment, Gwynne and Patterson, J.J., dissenting, on the ground that in their view of the evidence it was agreed that all payments made by J. after the opening of the new account in April, 1885, should be applied to the new purchases until fully paid for, which agreement was continued to be acted upon until the closing of the account, and therefore the case did not come within the rule in Clayton's Case, but rather within the exception to the rule as laid down in City Discount Co. v. McLean (L. R. 9 C. P. 693), and Heinmiker v. Wigg (4 Q. B. 791). Green v. Clark, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 614.

17. Payment to pretended agent—False representations as to authority—Ratification by creditor — Indictable offence.—Where payment is obtained from a debtor by one who falsely represents that he is agent of the creditor, upon whom a fraud is thereby committed, if the creditor ratifies and confirms the payment he adopts the agency of the person receiving the money and makes the payment equivalent to one to an authorized agent.—The payment may be ratified and the agency adopted, even though the person receiving the money has, by his false representations, committed an indictable offence. (See 31 N. B. Rep. 21). Scott v. Bank of New Brunswick, xxiii., 277.

18. Debtor and creditor—Security for debt—Security realized by creditor—Appropriation of proceeds—Res judicata.—If a merchant obtains from a bank a line of credit on terms of depositing his customers' notes as collateral security, the bank is not obliged, so long as the paper so deposited remains uncollected, to give any credit in respect of it, but when any portion of the collaterals is paid it operates at once as payment of the merchant's debt, and must be credited to him.—Under the Judicature Act, estoppel by res judicata cannot be relied on as a defence to an action unless specially pleaded. Judgment appealed from (23 Ont. App. R. 146) reversed. Cooper et al. v. The Molsons Bank, xxvi., 611.

[Affirmed on appeal to Privy Council (26 Ont. App. R. 571).]

19. Appropriation of payments—Error in appropriation — Arts. 1160, 1161 C. C.—A bank borrowed from the Dominion Government two sums of $100,000 each, giving deposit receipts therefor respectively numbered 323 and 329. Having asked for a further loan of a like amount it was refused, but afterwards the loan was made on O., one of the directors of the bank, becoming personally responsible for re-payment, and the receipt for such last loan was numbered 346. The Government having demanded payment of $50,000 on account that sum was transferred in the bank books to the general account of the Government, and a letter from the president to the Finance Department stated that this had been done, enclosed another receipt numbered 358 for $50,000 on special deposit, and concluded, "Please return deposit receipt No. 323—$100,000, now in your possession." Subsequently $50,000 more was paid and a return of receipt No. 358 requested. The bank having failed the Government took proceedings against O. on his guarantee for the last loan made to recover the balance after crediting said payments and dividends received. The defence to these proceedings was that it had been agreed between the bank and O. that any payments made on account of the borrowed money should be first applied to the guaranteed loan and that the president had instructed the accountant so to apply the two sums of $50,000 paid, but he had omitted to do so. The trial judge gave effect to this objection and dismissed the information of the Crown. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (6 Ex. C. R. 21), Taschereau and Girouard, J.J., dissenting, that as the evidence showed that the president knew what the accountant had done and did not repudiate it, and as the act was for the benefit of the bank, the latter was bound by it; that the act of the Government in immediately returning the specific deposit receipts when the payments were made was a sufficient act of appropriation by the creditor within art. 1160 C. C., no appropriation at all having been made by the debtor on the hypothesis of error; and if this were not so the bank could not now annul the imputation made by the accountant unless the Government could be restored to the position it would have been in if no imputation at all had been made, which was impossible as the Government would then have had an option which could not now be exercised. The Queen v. Ogilvie, xxix., 299.

20. Interest—Debt certain and time certain —3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 42, s. 28 (Imp.)—To entitle a creditor to interest under 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 42, s. 28 (Imp.), the written instrument under which it is claimed must shew by its terms that there was a debt certain, payable at a certain time. It is not sufficient that the same may be made certain by some process of calculation or some act to be performed in the future. Sinclair v. Preston, xxxi., 408.

8. PREFERENCES.

25. *Insolvency—Knowledge of, by creditor—Fraudulent preference—Pledge—Warehouse receipt — Novation — Arts. 1035, 1036, 1169 C. C.]—W. E. E., connected with two business firms in Montreal, viz., the firm of W. E. Elliott & Co., oil merchants, of which he was the sole member, and Elliott, Finlayson & Co., wine merchants, made a judicial abandonment on the 18th August, 1889, of his oil business. Both firms had kept their accounts with the Bank of Commerce. The bank discounted for W. E. Elliott & Co., before his departure for England on the 30th June, a note of $5,087.50 due 1st October, signed by John Elliott & Co., and indorsed by W. E. Elliott & Co., and Elliott, Finlayson & Co., and on the 5th July took, as collateral security from Finlayson, who was also W. E. Elliott's agent during his absence, a warehouse receipt for 292 barrels of oil, and the discount was credited to Elliott, Finlayson & Co. On and about the 9th July 146 barrels were sold, and the proceeds, viz., $3,528.30, were subsequently, on the 9th August, credited to the note of $5,087.50. On the 13th July, McDougall, Logie & Co. failed, and W. E. E. was involved in the failure to the extent of $17,000, of which amount the bank held $7,559.30, and on the 16th July, Finlayson, as agent for W. E. E., left with the bank as collateral security against W. E. E.'s indebtedness of $7,559.30 on the paper of McDougall, Logie & Co., customers' notes to the amount of $2,768.28, upon which the bank collected $1,603.43, and still kept a note of J. P. & Co. unpaid of $1,165.32. On the return of W. E. E., another note of John Elliott & Co., for $1,101.33, previously discounted by W. E. E., became due at the bank, thus leaving a total debit of the Elliott firms, on their joint paper, of $2,660.53. The old note of $5,087.50 due 1st October, and the one of $1,101.33 were signed by John Elliott & Co., and on the 10th August were replaced by two notes signed by Elliott, Finlayson & Co., and secured by 200 barrels of oil, 146 barrels remaining from the original number pledged, and an additional warehouse receipt of 54 barrels of oil, indorsed over by W. E. E. to Finlayson, Elliott & Co., and by them to the bank. The respondent, as curator for the estate of W. E. Elliott & Co., claimed that the pledge of the 200 barrels of oil on the 10th August, and the giving of the notes on the 16th July to the bank, were fraudulent preferences. The Superior Court held that the bank had knowledge of W. E. E.'s insolvent condition on or about the 13th of July, and declared that they had received fraudulent preferences by receiving W. E. E.'s customers' notes, and the 200 barrels of oil, but the Court of Appeal, reversing in part the judgment of the Superior Court, held that the pledging of the 200 barrels of oil by Elliott, Finlayson & Co. on the 10th August was not a fraudulent preference. (Q. R. 1 Q. B. 371.)—On an appeal and cross-appeal to the Supreme Court:—Held, 1st. That the finding of the courts below of the fact that the bank's knowledge of W. E. Elliott's insolvency dated from the 13th July, was sustained by evidence in the case, and there had therefore* been a fraudulent preference given to the bank by the insolvent in transferring over to it all his customers' paper not yet due. Gwynne, J., dissenting.—2ndly, That the additional security given to the bank on the 10th August of 54 barrels of oil for the substituted notes of Elliott, Finlayson & Co., was also a fraudulent preference. Gwynne, J., dissenting.—3rdly, Reversing the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench and restoring the judgment of the Superior Court, that the legal effect of the transaction of the 10th August was to release the pledged 146 barrels of oil, and that they became immediately the property of the insolvent's creditors, and could not be held by the bank as collateral security for Elliott, Finlayson & Co.'s substituted notes. Gwynne and Patterson, JJ., dissenting. Stevenson v. Canadian Bank of Commerce, xxiii., 530.

26. *Debtor and creditor—Payment by debtor—Appropriation — Preference — R. S. O. (1887) c. 124.]—A trader carrying on business in two establishments mortgaged both stocks-in-trade to B. as security for indorsements on a composition with his creditors, and for advances in cash, and goods to a fixed amount. The composition notes were made and indorsed by B., who made advances to an amount considerably over that stated in the mortgage. A few months after the mortgagor was in default for the advances and a portion of overdue notes, and there were some notes not matured, and B. consented to the sale of one of the mortgaged stocks, taking the purchaser's notes in payment, applying the amount generally in payment of his overdue debt, part of which was unsecured. A few days after B. seized the other stock of goods covered by his mortgage, and about the same time the sheriff seized them under execution, and shortly after the mortgagor assigned for benefit of creditors. An interpleader issue between B. and the execution creditor resulted in favour of B., who received out of the proceeds of the sale of the goods, under an order of the court, the balance remaining due on his mortgage. Horsfall v. Boisseau (21 Ont. App. R. 663). The assignee of the mortgagor then brought an action against B. to recover the amount representing the unsecured part of his debt, which was paid by the purchase of the first stock, which payment was alleged to be a preference to B. over the other creditors.—Held, affirming the decision appealed from (23 Ont. App. R. 230), that there was no preference to B. within R. S. O. [1887] c. 124, s. 2; that his position was the same as if his whole debt secured and unsecured had been overdue, and there had been one sale of both stocks of goods, realizing an amount equal to such debt, in which case he could have appropriated a portion of the proceeds to payment of his secured debt, and would have had the benefit of the law of set-off as to the unsecured debt under s. 23 of the Act; and that the only remedy of the mortgagor or his assignee was by redemption before the sale, which would have deprived B. of the benefit of such set-off. Stephens v. Boisseau, xxvi., 437.*

27. Assignment for the benefit of creditors—Preferred creditors—Moneys paid under voidable assignment—Liability of assignee—Statute of Elizabeth—Hindering and delaying creditors.]—In an action to have a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors set aside by creditors of the assignor on the ground that it is void under the Statute of Elizabeth, neither moneys paid to preferred creditors nor trust property disposed of in good faith by the assignor or persons claiming under him can be recovered, nor can persons holding under the deed be held personally liable for moneys or property so received by them. Cox v. Worrall (26 N. S. Rep. 366), questioned. (See 24 Can. S. C. R. 321). Taylor v. Cummings, xxvii., 589.

28. Insolvency—Fraudulent preferences—Chattel mortgage—Advances of money—Solicitor's knowledge of circumstances—R. S. O. (1887) c. 124—54 Vict. c. 20 (Ont.)—58 Vict. c. 23 (Ont.)—In order to give a preference to a particular creditor, a debtor who was in insolvent circumstances, executed a chattel mortgage upon his stock-in-trade in favour of a money-lender, by whom a loan was advanced. The money, which was in the hands of the mortgagee's solicitor, who also acted for the preferred creditor throughout the transaction, was at one time paid over to the creditor who, at the same time, delivered to the solicitor, to be held by him as an escrow and dealt with as circumstances might require, a bond indemnifying the mortgagee against any loss under the chattel mortgage. The mortgagee had previously been consulted by the solicitor as to the loan, but was not informed that the transaction was being made in this manner to avoid the appearance of violating the Acts respecting assignments and preferences, and to bring the case within the ruling in Gibbons v. Wilson (17 Ont. App. R. 1.) — Held, that all the circumstances, necessarily known to his solicitor in the transaction of the business, must be assumed to have been known to the mortgagee, and the whole affair considered as one transaction contrived to evade the consequences of illegally preferring a particular creditor over others, and that, under the circumstances, the advance made was not a bonâ fide payment of money within the meaning of the statutory exceptions. Burns & Lewis v. Wilson, xxviii., 207.

29. Assignment for benefit of creditors—Preferred creditors—Money paid under voidable assignment—Levy and sale under execution—Statute of Elizabeth.—Where an assignment has been held void as against the statute, 13 Eliz. c. 5, and the result of such decision is that a creditor who had subsequently obtained judgment against the assignor and, notwithstanding the assignment, sold all the debtor's personal property so transferred, becomes entitled to all the personal property of the assignor levied upon by him under his execution, such creditor has no legal right and no equity to an account or to follow moneys received by the assignee or paid by him under such assignment in respect to which he has not secured a prior claim by taking the necessary proceedings to make them exigible. Judgment appealed from (29 N. S. Rep. 162), reversed. Cummings & Sons v. Taylor, xxviii., 337.

30. Fraudulent preferences—Transfer of property—Delaying or defeating creditors—13 Eliz. c. 5.—A transfer of property to a creditor for valuable consideration, even with intent to prevent its being seized under execution at the suit of another creditor, and to delay the latter in his remedies or defeat them altogether, is not void under 13 Eliz. c. 5, if the transfer is made to secure an existing debt and the transferee does not, either directly or indirectly, make himself an instrument for the purpose of subsequently benefiting the transferor. Judgment appealed from (30 N. S. Rep. 121) reversed. Mulcahy v. Archibald, xxviii., 523.

31. Fraudulent preference—Collusion—Pressure—R. S. B. C. cc. 86, 87—The Bank Act, s. 30—Company law—Mortgage by directors—Ratification—B. C. Companies Act, 1890, 1892, 1894.—The action was to set aside a mortgage by an incorporated company to the bank, an assignment of book debts and judgment by the bank against the company on grounds: (1) that the mortgage was voluntary, fraudulent, and void under the Statute of Elizabeth; (2) void as a fraudulent preference; (3) not executed in accordance with the Companies Act; (4) that the assignment was void for same reasons and contrary to the Bank Act; and (5) the judgment voluntary, fraudulent, and void under the Statute of Elizabeth. It was contended that moneys received by the bank were exigible under plaintiffs' executions and an order asked accordingly. The judgment appealed from (8 B. C. Rep. 314) affirmed the trial judgment and held that there was good consideration for the mortgage, that it was given under pressure and should not be set aside although comprising the whole of the debtor's property and given under insolvent circumstances to the knowledge of the mortgagee and deprived the other creditors of their remedy; also, that the mortgage given by the company's directors without proper authority had been legally ratified by subsequent resolution of the shareholders. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment appealed from, Gwynne, J., taking no part in the decision, and subsequently the Privy Council refused leave for an appeal (8 B. C. Rep. 337). *Adams & Burns v. 10. SALE OF GOODS.

46. Goods sold—Person to whom credit was given—Assignment in trust—Power of attorney by trustee—Authority of attorney to use principal's name—Evidence.—A., doing business as J. A. & Sons assigned to H. for benefit of creditors. H., by power of attorney, authorized A. to collect all moneys due his estate, etc., and to carry on the business if expedient. A. continued the business as before, and in the course of it purchased goods from F., to whom on some occasions he gave notes signed "J. A. & Sons—H. trustee per A." All the goods so purchased from F. were charged in his books to J. A. & Sons, and the dealings between them after the assignment continued for five years. Finally, A. being unable to pay what was due to F., the latter brought an action against H. on notes signed as above, and for the price of goods so sold to A.—Held, reversing the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the evidence at the trial of the action clearly shewed that the credit for the goods sold was given to A. and not to H.; that A. did not carry on the business after the assignment at the instance or as the agent of H., nor for the benefit of his estate; that A. was not authorized to sign H.'s name to notes as he did; and that H. was not liable either as the person to whom credit was given or as an undisclosed principal.—Held, further, that if H. was guilty of a breach of trust in allowing A. full control over the estate, that would not make him liable to F. in this action. Hechler v Forsyth xxii. 489.

49. Loan by savings bank—Pledge of securities for—Validity of—Insolvency of borrower—Right of curator to impugn transaction—R. S. C. c. 122, s. 20.—L. borrowed a sum of money from a savings bank which he agreed to re-pay with interest, transferring in pledge as collateral security letters of credit on the Government of Quebec. L. having become insolvent the bank filed its claim for the amount of the loan, with interest, with the curator of the estate, and on appeal the appellants, as creditors of L., contested on the ground that the said securities were not of the class mentioned in the Act relating to savings banks (R. S. C. c. 122, s. 20), and the bank's act in making said loan was ultra vires and illegal. (See Q. R. 3 Q. B. 315.)—Held, that L., having received good and valid consideration for his promise to re-pay the loan, could not, nor could the appellants, his creditors, who had no other rights than the debtor himself had, impugn the contract of loan, or be admitted to assail the pledge of the securities.—Assuming that the act of the bank in lending the money, on the pledge of such securities, was ultra vires, although this might affect the pledge as regards third parties interested in the securities, it was not, of itself and ipso facto, a radical nullity of public order of such a character as to disentitle the bank under arts. 989 and 990 C. C. from claiming back the money with interest. Bank of Toronto v. Perkins (8 Can. S. C. R. 903) distinguished. Rolland v. Caisse d'Economie de Québec, xxiv., 405.

50. Conditional license to take possession of goods—Creditor's opinion of debtor's incapacity—Bona fides—Replevin—Conversion.—F., a trader, having become insolvent, and being indebted among others to the firm of T. M. & Co., composed of T. and M., arranged to pay his other creditors 50 per cent. of their claims, T. M. & Co., indorsing his notes for securing such payment, they to be paid in full, but payment to be postponed until a future named day. T. M. & Co. were secured for indorsing by an agreement under seal, by which it was agreed that if F. should at any time, in the opinion of T. M. & Co., or either of them, become incapable of attending to his business, the debt due to T. M. & Co., should at once become due, and they could take possession of the stock-in-trade, book debts, and property of F., and sell the same for their claim, having first served on F. a notice in writing, signed by the firm name, stating that in their opinion F. was so incapable; and that on a change in the firm of T. M. & Co., the agreement should enure to the benefit of the firm as changed if it assumed the liabilities of, and took over T.'s indebtedness to the old firm. This arrangement was carried out, and some time after the date for payment to T. M. & Co., payment not having been made, a bank to which F. was indebted failed, and T. M. & Co. then consisting of T. and N. M.

having retired, persuaded F. to assign his book debts to them, and afterwards served on him a notice as required by the agreement, and took possession of his place of business and stock. F. then agreed to act for T. M. & Co., until a certain day after, and resumed possession, but when T. M. & Co. returned on said day he disputed their right, and ejected them from the premises. Two days after he assigned to the official assignee for the benefit of all his creditors, and T. M. & Co. issued a writ to replevy the goods from him and the assignee. Held, affirming the decision appealed from (10 Man. L. R. 340), Gwynne, J., dissenting, that F. and the assignee were guilty of a joint conversion of the property replevied.—Gwynne, J., held that there was no conversion by either.—Held, also, affirming said decision, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that if T. M. & Co. formed an honest opinion that F. was incapable such opinion must govern, though mistaken in point of law or fact, illogical or inconclusive; that they were justified in believing from his loose business methods, waste of time over small matters, financial embarrassments, and acting under the direction of his creditors, that F. was worn down by worry and generally unfit for business; that the fact that the notice would not have been given if certain demands of T. M. & Co. had been complied with did not necessarily shew mala fides; and that the change in the firm of T. M. & Co., did not vitiate the notice as one of the original members clearly formed the opinion, if one was formed, and conveyed it to F. Francis v. Turner, xxv., 110.

S. O. c. 132), came into force, she became liable on certain promissory notes made by her. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (19 Ont. App. R. 383), that the liability of her separate property to satisfy a judgment on said promissory notes depended on the construction of the Married Woman's Real Estate Acts of 1887 (R. S. O. cc. 125, 127), and the Married Woman's Property Act, 1884 (47 Vict. c. 19), read in the light furnished by certain clauses of C. S. U. C. c. 73; and that her capacity to sue and be sued in respect thereof carried with it a corresponding right on the part of her creditors to obtain the fruits of a judgment against her by execution on such separate property. *Moore v. 1. Old trails in Rupert's Land — Crown grant—Squatter's plan of sub-division—Substitution of new way—Dedication—Highway—Adopting new street as a boundary.—A squatter in possession of public lands near the old Hudson Bay Trading Post at Edmonton, who afterwards became patentee of the greater part of the lands he occupied, had made a plan of sub-division thereof into town lots, which shewed a new roadway or street laid down in the place of the old travelled trail across said lands leading to the trading post, and subsequently, the Crown, in making grants, described several parcels of the lands in the patents as being bounded and abutting upon the said new street, or roadway, so laid down on the plan. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (1 N. W. T. Rep., pt. 4, p. 39), that the space so shewn upon the plan, as laid out for a street, had been adopted and dedicated by the Crown as and for a public street and highway, in substitution for the old travelled trail or roadway across said lands. *Brown et al. v. 1. CHARGE UPON LANDS.

1. Construction of deed—Partition—Charge upon lands.—A deed for the partition of land held in common contained a conveyance of a portion thereof to M. W., for certain considerations therein recited of which one was the condition that she should procure from her minor children, upon their coming of age, the necessary quitclaim deeds for the release of their interests in another portion of the land in question apportioned and conveyed to her co-parceners, and the amount of certain payments of money then made for the purpose of effectuating the partition, was by the deed of partition declared to remain a lien on that portion of the land thereby conveyed to M. W. until such quitclaims should have been obtained and delivered to her said co-parceners. Held, that the said recital was sufficient to charge that portion of the said land so conveyed to M. W. with the amount of the said payments of money as a security for the due execution and delivery of the quitclaims in conformity with the condition stipulated in the deed of partition. Green v. Ward, xxix., 572.

4. Substitution—Bail-à-rente—Donation—Sale—Consideration—Rente foncière—Prohibition to alienate—Onerous title—Nullity—Arts. 970, 1234 C. C.—18 Vict. c. 250—Evidence.—By 18 Vict. c. 250, W. F. and E. F. were authorized to sell lands grévés de substitution, in consideration of a non-redeemable rent representing the value of the property.

On 7 September, 1860, they assigned to A. F., part of the entailed property, in consideration of a rente foncière of £6 annually, payable by a deed stipulating that the assignee could not alienate the land, nor any part thereof, without express written consent of the assignors, under penalty of nullity. The property was subsequently seized by a judgment creditor of A. F., and W. F. opposed the sale and asked that the seizure be declared null, because the property seized could not be sold by reason of the above prohibition to alienate. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the deed was in accord with the provisions of 18 Vict. c. 250; that it was a purely onerous title on its face, and consequently the prohibition to alienate was void. Held, also, that parol testimony ought not to have been admitted as evidence to vary the character of the deed as an onerous title.—Quære, Whether the substitutes may not, when the substitution opens, attack the deed for want of sufficient consideration. Fraser v. Pouliot, iv., 515.

5. Contract—Subsequent deed—Inconsistent provisions.—C., by agreement of April 6th, 1891, agreed to sell to the Erie County Gas Co., all his gas grants, leases and franchises, the company agreeing, among other things, to "reserve gas enough to supply the plant now operated or to be operated by them on said property." On April 20th a deed was executed and delivered to the company, transferring all the leases and property specified in said agreement, but containing no reservation in favour of C. such as was contained therein. The Erie Company, in 1894, assigned the property transferred by said deed to the Provincial Natural Gas and Fuel Company, who immediately cut off from the works of C. the supply of gas, and an action was brought by C. to prevent such interference. Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, that as the contract between the parties was embodied in the deed subsequently executed the rights of the parties were to be determined by the latter instrument, and as it contained no reservation in favour of C. his action could not be maintained. Carroll v. Provincial Natural Gas and Fuel Co., xxvi., 181.

3. CONSTRUCTION.

7. Terms of deed—Servitude—Roadway—User—Art. 549 C. C.—In 1831 the owners of several contiguous farms purchased a roadway over adjacent lands to reach their cultivated fields beyond a steep mountain which crossed their properties, and by a clause inserted in the deed, to which they all were parties, they respectively agreed "to furnish roads upon their respective lands to go and come by the above purchased road for the cultivation of their lands, and that they would maintain these roads and make all necessary fences and gates at the common expense of themselves, their heirs and assigns." Prior to this deed and for some time afterwards, the use of a road from the river front to a public highway at some distance farther back, had been tolerated by the plaintiff and his auteurs, across a portion of his farm which did not lie between the road so purchased over the spur of the mountain, and the nearest point on the boundary of the defendant's land, but the latter claimed the right to continue to use the way.—In an action (négotoire) to prohibit further use of the way; Held, affirming the decision appealed from (Q. B. 5 Q. B. 572), that there was no title in writing sufficient to establish a servitude across the plaintiff's land over the roadway so permitted by mere tolerance; that the effect of the agreement between the purchasers was merely to establish servitudes across their respective lands so far as might be necessary to give each of the owners access to the road so purchased from the nearest practicable point of their respective lands across intervening properties of the others for the purpose of the cultivation of their lands beyond the mountain. Riou v. Riou, xxviii., 53.

8. Construction of deed of lands—Riparian rights—Building dams—Penning back waters—Warranty—Improvement of watercourses—Art. 5535 R. S. Q.—A deed conveying a portion of the vendor's lands bordering on a stream granted the privilege of constructing dams, etc., therein, with the proviso that, in case of damages being caused through the construction of any such works, the vendor or his successors in title to the adjoining lands should be entitled to have the damages assessed by arbitrators and that the purchasers should pay the amount awarded. Held, that, under the deed, the purchasers were liable, not only for damages caused by the flooding of lands, but also for all other damages occasioned by the building of dams and other works in the stream by them; and, that the provisions of art. 5535 R. S. Q., did not entitle them to construct or raise such dams without liability for all damages thereby caused. Hamlin v. Bannerman, xxxi., 334.

9. Railways—Construction of deed—Location of permanent way—Laying out boundaries—Fencing—Riparian rights—Notice of prior title—Registry laws—Possession—Acquisitive prescription.—In the conveyance of lands for the permanent way the deed described lands sold to the railway company as bounded by an unnavigable stream, as "selected and laid out" for the railway. Stakes were planted to shew the side lines, but the railway fences were placed inside the stakes above the water's edge, and the vendor was allowed to remain in possession of the strip of land between the fence and the middle of the bed of the stream. The deed was duly registered and, subsequently, the vendor sold the rest of his property including water rights, mills, and dams constructed in the stream to defendant's auteur, described as "including that part of the river which is not included in the right of way, etc." Held, 1. that the description in the deed included, ex jure nature, the river ad medium filum aquæ and that the company's title thereto could not be defeated by the subsequent conveyance, notwithstanding that they had not taken physical possession of all the lands described in the prior conveyance to them; 2. That the failure of the vendor to deliver the full quantity of land sold by him to the company and their abstention from troubling him and his grantees in possession of the same could not be construed as conduct placing a construction upon the deed different from its clear and unambiguous terms, or as limiting the area of the property conveyed so as to exclude the strip outside the fences or the bed of the stream ad medium filum, and 3, that such possession by the vendor and his assigns was not possession which could ripen into a title by acquisitive prescription of the property in question. Massawippi Valley Ry. Co. v. Reed, xxxiii., 457.

4. CONVEYANCE AS SECURITY.

13. Banking—Bond to secure advances—Construction—Estoppel—Misrepresentation—Literatæ obligæe.—M., a man of education, well acquainted with commercial business, executed a bond to pay money, in certain events, to the bank. By an agreement, bearing even date it was recited that, in consideration of a certain mortgage, the bank had agreed to make further advances to joint obligors with M., parties to the agreement, and that the agreement was executed to secure the bank in case there should be any deficiency in the assets of the firm, or in the value of the property comprised in said mortgage, and to secure the bank from ultimate loss; that if the firm should pay, then the bond and agreement should become wholly void. In a suit brought upon the agreement against M., alleging a deficiency in the assets of the firm and indebtedness to the bank, M. pleaded that the agreement had been executed by him on representation made to him by one of his co-obligors that it was to secure the bank against loss arising by reason of non-registration of the mortgage, or by reason of over-valuation of property in the mortgage, and not otherwise. The bank, made no representations whatever to the defendants. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (5 O. R. 112), (Gwynne, J., dissenting), that M. was bound by the execution of the documents, and liable upon them according to their tenor and effect. Moffatt v. Merchants Bank of Canada, xi., 46.

5. COVENANTS.

20. Covenant for title—Escrow—Estoppel.—To an action for breach of covenant for title in a mortgage to the plaintiffs, executed by T., the defendants' grantee, R., one of the defendants, pleaded that T. did not, after the making of that deed, convey the lands to the plaintiffs. The deed from defendants to T. was dated 22nd June, 1855, and the mortgage from T. to the plaintiff was dated 10th April, 1855. Both were registered on the 28th July, 1855—the deed first. It appeared that there were two mortgages from T. to the plaintiffs on another lot, when this mortgage was made, and instead of which it was given. After executing this mortgage, T. found that a deed from the defendants to him was necessary to give the legal title, and he got the deed in question. The two mortgages were not discharged until the 16th August, 1855. Held, (Henry, J., dissenting), reversing the judgment appealed from (1 Ont. App. R. 26), and affirming 32 U. C. Q. B. 222, that the whole transactions shewed that the mortgage was not intended to take effect until the perfecting of T.'s title and the discharge of the other mortgages for which it was given, and that the plaintiff, therefore, could recover. Also, per Richards, C.J., and Strong, J., that assuming the deed of the 10th of April, 1855, to have been a completed instrument from its date, the usual covenant contained in it that the grantor was seized in fee at the date of the deed created an estoppel, and that the estoppel was fed by the estate T. acquired by deed of 22nd June, 1855. Trust and Loan Co. v. Ruttan, i., 564.

21. Landlord and tenant—Conditions of lease—Construction of deed—Practice.—Where a written lease of lands provides for the payment of indemnity to the lessees in case they should be dispossessed by the lessor before the expiration of the term of the lease, the lessees are entitled to claim the indemnity upon being so dispossessed although the eviction may be for cause, inasmuch as the lessor could not, under the lease, dispossess the lessee except for breach of the conditions therein mentioned. The Queen v. Poirier, xxx., 36.

22. Construction of lease—Provision for termination—Sale of premises—Parol agreement—Misrepresentation—Quiet enjoyment.—A lease of premises used as a factory contained this provision: "Provided that in the event of the lessor disposing of the factory the lessees will vacate the premises, if necessary, on six months' notice." Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (26 Ont. App. R. 78), and (29 O. R. 75), that a parol agreement for the sale of the premises, though not enforceable under the Statute of Frauds, was a "disposition" of the same under said provision entitling the lessor to give the notice to vacate. Held, further, that the lessor having, in good faith, represented that he had sold the property, with reasonable grounds for believing so, there was no fraudulent misrepresentation entitling the lessee to damages even if no sale within the meaning of the provision had actually been made, nor was there any eviction or disturbance constituting a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment. Lumbers v. Gold Medal Furniture Mfg. Co., xxx., 55.

6. DELIVERY.

23. Delivery—Retention by grantor—Presumption—Rebuttal.—The fact that a deed, after it has been signed and sealed by the grantor, is retained in the latter's possession is not sufficient evidence that it was never so delivered as to take effect as a duly executed instrument.—The evidence in favour of the due execution of such a deed is not rebutted by the facts that it compromised all the grantor's property, and that while it professed to dispose of such property immediately the grantor retained the possession and enjoyment of it until his death. Judgment appealed from (31 N. S. Rep. 333) reversed. Zwicker v. Zwicker, xxix., 527.

7. DESCRIPTION OF LANDS.

24. Description of land—Extent—Terminal point—Number of rods—Railway company.—A specific lot of land was conveyed by deed, and also: "A strip of land 25 links wide, running from the eastern side of the aforesaid lot along the northern side of the railway station about twelve rods unto the western end of the railway station ground, the said lot and strip together containing one acre, more or less." Held, reversing the decision of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the strip conveyed was not limited to twelve rods in length, but extended to the western end of the station, which was more than twelve rods from the starting point. Doyle v. McPhee, xxiv., 65.

25. Construction of deed—Conveyance of land—Uncertain description—Evidence of intention—Verba fortius accipiuntur contra proferentem—Maxim applied—Patent ambiguity.—A grant of land bounded by the bank of a navigable river, or an international waterway, does not extend ad medium filum as in the case of a non-navigable river.—If in a conveyance of land the description is not certain enough to identify the locus it is to be construed according to the language of the instrument, though it may result in the grantor assuming to convey more than his title warranted.—The intention of the parties to a deed is paramount and must govern regardless of consequences. Res magis valeat quam percat is only a rule to aid in arriving at the intention, and does not authorize the court to override it.—A general description of land as being part of a specified lot must give way to a particular description by boundaries, and, if necessary, the general description will be rejected as falsa demonstratio.—Where there is an ambiguity on the face of a deed incapable of being explained by extrinsic evidence the maxim verba fortius accipiuntur contra proferentem cannot be applied in favour of either party.—Where a description is such that the point of commencement cannot be ascertained it cannot be determined at the election of the grantee.—Judgment appealed from (21 Ont. App. R. 569) reversed. Barthel v. Scotton, xxiv., 367.

26. Mortgage of trust estate—Equity running with estate—Equitable recourse—Construction of deed—Description of lands—Falsa demonstratio—Water lots—Accretion to lands—After acquired title—Contribution to redeem—Discharge of mortgage—Parol evidence to explain deed—Estoppel by deed.—On the dissolution of the firm of A. & Co. by the retirement of C. D. A. the business was carried on by the remaining partners T. A. and B. A., on the same premises, which were the property of C. D. A., the continuing partners agreeing to pay off a mortgage thereon as one of the old firm's debts. They neglected to pay, and the property was sold by the sheriff under a foreclosure decree, when they purchased and took a deed describing the lands as in said mortgage, one side being bounded by "the windings of the shore" of Sydney Harbour, and including a "water lot," part of which was known as the "stone ballast heap," in front of the shore lands. They immediately re-mortgaged the lands by the same description, adding a further or alternative description, and, at the end, the following words:—"also all and singular the water lots and docks in front of the said lots,"—although in fact they then owned none except those covered by the description in the deed from the sheriff, and they gave at the same time a collateral bond to the mortgagees for the amount of their mortgage. They then conveyed the equity to C. D. A., giving him a bond of indemnity against the mortgage they had so executed. Some time afterwards T. A. and B. A. acquired by grant certain other water lots in front of the mortgaged property, and used and occupied them as part of their business premises along with the mortgaged lands. C. D. A. sold the equity of redemption subject to the mortgage, and T. A. and B. A. settled their obligation under the indemnity bond by a compromise with the assignees of C. D. A., paying $8,000, and obtained their discharge. Upon proceedings being taken by the assignees of the mortgagees to foreclose the mortgage, and against T. A. and B. A. upon the collateral bond, T. A. and B. A. paid the amount due, and the foreclosure proceedings were continued for their benefit. Held, that the liability of the mortgagors was fully satisfied and discharged by the compromise, and as they were afterwards obliged to pay the outstanding encumbrance they were entitled to take an assignment and enforce the mortgage by foreclosure proceedings against the lands.—Per Gwynne, J. The mortgagors were only entitled to foreclosure for the realization of the amount actually paid by them in compromising their liability under the indemnity bond. Held, further, that as the construction of the mortgage depended upon the state of the property at the time it was made, parol evidence would be admitted to explain the ambiguity in the description of the lands intended to be affected; that as there were no specified descriptions or recitals tending to shew that any other property was intended to be covered by the mortgage beyond what would be satisfied by including the water lot described as the "stone ballast heap," the after acquired water lots would not be charged or liable to contribute ratably towards redemption of the mortgage; that even admitting that the description was sufficient to include the after acquired property, such property was not liable to contribute towards payment of the mortgage debt. Imrie v. Archibald et al., xxv., 368.

27. Construction of deed—Title to lands—Ambiguous description—Evidence to vary or explain deed—Possession—Conduct of parties—Presumptions from occupation of premises—Arts. 1019, 1238, 1242, 1473, 1599 C. C.—47 Vict. c. 87, s. 3 (D.); 48 & 49 Vict. c. 58, s. 3 (D.)—45 Vict. c. 20 (Q.)—By a deed made in August, 1882, the appellant ceded to the Government of Quebec, who subsequently conveyed to the respondent, an immoveable described as part of lot No. 1937, in St. Peter's Ward in the City of Quebec, situated between the streets St. Paul, St. Roch, Henderson and the River St. Charles, with the wharves and buildings thereon erected. The respondents entered into possession of the lands by virtue of said deeds and remained in possession for twelve years, without objection to the boundaries. They then brought an action to have it declared that, by the proper construction of the deeds, an additional strip of land and certain wharves were included and intended to be transferred. They contended that the description in the deed was ambiguous, and that Henderson street as a boundary should be construed as meaning Henderson street extended, and they sought to establish their case by the production of certain correspondence which had taken place between the parties prior to the execution of the deed of August, 1882. Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada, the Chief Justice and King, J., dissenting, that the words "Henderson street" as used in the deed must be construed in their plain natural sense as meaning the street of that name actually existing on the ground; that the correspondence was not shewn to contain all the negotiations or any finally concluded agreement, and could not be used to contradict or modify the deed which should be read as containing the matured conclusions at which the parties had finally arrived; that the deed should be interpreted in the light of the conduct of the parties in taking and remaining so long in possession without objection, which raised against them a strong presumption, not only not rebutted but strengthened by the facts in evidence; and that any doubt or ambiguity in the deed, in the absence of evidence to explain it, should be interpreted against the vendees, and in favour of the vendors. *City of Quebec v. 8. DURESS.

35. Conveyance—Duress—Undue pressure—Trust property.—The owner of land having died intestate leaving several children, one of them, W. R., received from the others a deed conveying to him the entire title in the land in consideration of his paying all debts against the intestate estate and those of a deceased brother. Subsequently W. R. borrowed money from his sister and gave her a deed of the land, on learning which B., a creditor of W. R., accused the latter of fraud and threatened him with criminal prosecution, whereupon he induced his sister to execute a re-conveyance of the land to him and then gave a mortgage to B. The re-conveyance not having been properly acknowledged for registry purposes, was returned to the sister to have the defect remedied, but she had taken legal advice in the meantime and destroyed the deed. B. then brought an action against W. R. and his sister to have the deed to the latter set aside and his mortgage declared a lien on the land. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (30 N. S. Rep. 405), that the sister of W. R. was entitled to a first lien on the land for the money lent to her brother; that the deed of re-conveyance to W. R. had been obtained by undue influence and pressure and should be set aside, and B. should not be allowed to set it up.—B. claiming to be a creditor of the father and deceased brother of the defendants wished to enforce the provision in the deed to W. R. by his brothers and sister for payment of the debts of the father and brother. Held, that this relief was not asked in the action, and if it had been the said provision was a mere contract between the parties to the deed of which a third party could not call for execution, no trust having been created for the creditors of the deceased father and brother. Burris v. Rhind, xxix., 498.

9. ESTOPPEL.

36. Missing deed—Evidence of execution and delivery—Certified copy—Affidavit of search—Estoppel.—Action of ejectment. The action was twice tried. Plaintiffs, executors of original plaintiff, claimed title under a deed dated 18th June, 1856, by H. McM., deceased, the former owner, conveying the land to his son, R. McM., who, on 19th April, 1869, mortgaged to the original plaintiff. This mortgage having been foreclosed, the land was purchased by the mortgagee at sheriff's sale.—At the trial plaintiff's counsel tendered a copy of the deed of 18th June, 1856, certified to be a true copy by the registrar of deeds, and accompanied by an affidavit of one of the plaintiffs.—“That the original deed of which the paper writing hereunto annexed, marked A., is a copy certified under the hand of the late registrar of deeds, in and for the said County of Inverness, is not in my or my co-plaintiff's possession, or under our control; and I further say that we have inquired for, and been unable to procure the same.”—D. McM., a son of the original owner, and one of the witnesses to the deed, gave evidence.—“I went to the registry of deeds office, and proved the deed from my father, H. McM., to R. McM., his son. It was registered 17th June, 1856. I took the deed to the registry office and left it there. . . . I am not aware of R.'s knowledge of the deed from my father.” R. McM. swore that he never saw the deed and never heard of it until a few years before the first trial in October, 1880.—It was agreed that plaintiff should become nonsuited with leave to move to set the nonsuit aside, and in case the court should think the nonsuit wrong, the court to enter a verdict for plaintiff.—The Supreme Court of Nova Scotia (Macdonald, C.J., and Rigby, Smith, and Weatherbe, J.J.), were divided, Rigby and Weatherbe, J.J., being of opinion that the presumption was that H. McM., the original owner, having signed the deed, delivered it to D., to take to the registry office to be proved and registered; that by this registration he gave notice to all the world that he had conveyed the land to R., and that there was evidence for a jury; that by his conduct in relation to the conveyance to R. he had induced the original plaintiff to accept the mortgage from R., believing the title to be vested in R. by virtue of the deed. Therefore the defendant, who also claimed through his father, was estopped from denying the due execution of the deed. Macdonald, C.J., and Smith, J., were of opinion there was not sufficient evidence of the execution of the deed.—The Supreme Court of Canada, Held, that there was sufficient evidence to establish the due execution and delivery of the deed to R. The copy having been received in evidence without objection, it was too late to object to its admissibility. Strong, J. dubitante.—Judgment appealed from (17 N. S. R. 438) reversed, and a verdict directed to be entered for plaintiffs. McDonnell v. McMaster, 22nd June, 1885, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 246.

with a view to ascertaining whether or not they thereby became fixtures incorporated with the freehold, and where articles have been only slightly affixed, but in a manner appropriate to their use, and shewing an intention of permanently affixing them with the object of enhancing the value of mortgaged premises, or of improving their usefulness for the purposes to which they have been applied, there would be sufficient ground, in a dispute between a mortgagor and his mortgagee, for concluding that both as to the degree and object of the annexation, they became parts of the realty. *Haggart v. 13. NULLITY.

A portion of the coal was delivered, without directions from the committee, from the vessel on to the dock, about 80 feet from the shed and separated from it by a road.—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal, that the coal was not delivered "at the coal shed" as agreed by the contract signed by the parties which was the binding document.—Held, also, that if the contract was to be decided by the terms of the tender the delivery was not in accordance therewith, the place of delivery not being "at the pumping station or grounds adjacent thereto." *Town of Goderich v. *Lex loci—Lex domicilii—Foreign judgment—Decree in State of New York—Force in Quebec—Submitting to jurisdiction—Domicile—Authorization to sue—Art. 14, C. C. P.—Arts. 176, 178, C. C.]—Appeal from a judgment rendered by the Court of Queen's Bench (appeal side) in Montreal, on the 19th day of September, 1883, reversing a judgment of the Superior Court rendered on the 25th of February, 1882.—The facts of the case may be summed up as follows: On the 7th of May, 1871, the appellant and respondent, both being domiciled in New York, were married there without ante-nuptial contract. By the law of New York no community of property is created between persons married there without ante-nuptial contract, and the wife holds and acquires property in her own name, entirely free from marital control, as if she were a feme sole.—Before and at the time of her marriage with respondent, appellant had a fortune in her own right, amounting to $220,775.74, inherited from her father, and consisting of cash, bonds, and other moveable property. On the 8th Jan., 1872, appellant received this fortune from her trustees, and placed it in the hands of respondent, who administered and controlled it until 25th Sept., 1876. The respondent kept his domicile in New York for about eighteen months after the marriage, when he suddenly removed to Montreal, where he established himself in business, and has resided ever since. The appellant accompanied her husband to Canada in 1872, but does not appear to have actually resided there for much more than a year, and has since lived alternately in Paris and New York. In 1876 she demanded the return of her securities, and obtained a small portion of them, and in February, being then resident in the State of New York, instituted proceedings for divorce before the Supreme Court of New York, on the ground of her husband's adultery. The respondent was personally served with process in Montreal, and appeared in the suit by attorneys, who were present at every step in the procedure, but filed no plea. In Dec., 1880, appellant obtained a decree of divorce absolute in her favour. The effect, according to the laws of New York, being to dissolve the marriage and to place appellant in the same position as if she had never been married.—On 29th Aug., 1881, appellant took the present action in the Superior Court at Montreal for an account.—The chief grounds of defence were: 1st. That* appellant was still his wife, and, 2nd, that she was not authorized to institute the action.—The Superior Court overruled the pleas, and held that the divorce alleged in the declaration was good and valid in the Province of Quebec (5 Leg. News, 79); but the Court of Queen's Bench (by a majority of a single judge) reversed this judgment, on the ground that the alleged divorce had no force in the Province of Quebec, and that, consequently, the plaintiff, being still the wife of appellant, could not institute her proceedings without marital or judicial authorization (6 Leg. News, 329).—On appeal, Held, Strong, J., dissenting, 1. Per Ritchie, C.J., and Henry and Gwynne, JJ., that under the circumstances the decree obtained by the appellant from the Supreme Court of New York should have been recognized as valid by the courts of the Province of Quebec.—2. Per Fournier, Henry and Gwynne, JJ., that it was not necessary for the appellant, a foreigner, to obtain the authorization required by arts. 176 or 178, C. C. in order to sue as, in her own country, such authorization was not necessary: art. 14 C. C. P.—Per Ritchie, C.J. The evidence established that the plaintiff had a sufficient residence in New York to enable her to obtain under the law of New York a valid divorce there, and that she did in accordance with that law without fraud or collusion, obtain such divorce from a court competent to pronounce it; that if the question of jurisdiction turns on the question of the husband's domicile, the burthen was on the husband of shewing that he had actually changed his domicile animo et de facto. Having been cited before the court of New York, appeared in the suit and submitted to and not disputed the jurisdiction of the court, the legitimate presumption against him was that he had not changed his domicile animo et de facto. That independent of any question of domicile, having appeared, submitted to and not questioned the jurisdiction, he was bound by the decree and should not be allowed to affirm that the court had no jurisdiction to pronounce it, and to claim that the marriage dissolved in New York in a proceeding to which he was an unobjecting party, and which he had never before questioned, was subsisting in Quebec.

Strong, J., dissenting. Was of opinion that as regards the question as to the validity of the divorce, the Court of Queen's Bench was perfectly right.—As regards the other question, one peculiar to French law, that as to the plaintiff's right to institute and maintain the action without the authorization of justice, from the best consideration he had been able to give the point he was of opinion the court below was right in that also. Appeal allowed with costs. Stevens v. Fisk, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 235.

1. Marriage laws—Act of marriage—Civil status—Arts. 63, 65, 79, 80, 81, 83, C. C.—Legal community.—About 1822, W. came to Canada and was employed as a shantyman on the Bonnechère, in Upper Canada. In 1827 he got out timber for himself, and in 1828, while in Quebec, where he was in the habit of going every summer with rafts of timber, he was married in September to Q. widow of McM., in his lifetime of Upper Canada, and shortly after his marriage returned to the Bonnechère to carry on lumbering operations there as formerly, and on his way up left his wife and her daughter in the neighbourhood of Aylmer, in Lower Canada. In the winter he came down for her and brought her to his home on the Bonnechère and lived there for ten or twelve years and acquired considerable wealth. W. declared in the presence of the priest who performed the ceremony that he was a journalier de la Ville de Québec, and he was so described in the certificate of marriage. Q. having died without a will, W. married again, and by his will left his property to his second wife, the appellant. The respondents claimed there was community of property between Q., their grandmother, and W. according to the laws of Lower Canada, and demanded their share of it in right of heirship. The appellant disputed this claim, contending there was no community.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 2 Q. B. 113), Fournier and Taschereau, JJ., dissenting, that the facts of the present case were not sufficient to prove that W. had acquired a domicile in the Province of Quebec at the time of his marriage; that the certificate (acte de mariage) has only relation to residence in connection with matrimonial domicile, and therefore has relation to the ceremony of marriage and its validity alone, and not to domicile in reference to the civil status of the parties. Wadsworth v. McCord, xii., 466.

[The Privy Council affirmed this judgment, 14 App. Cas. 631.]

2. Municipal assessment — Domicile — Change of domicile — Intention—59 Vict. c. 61 (N.B.)—By the St. John City Assessment Act (59 Vict. c. 61) s. 2 "for the purposes of assessment any person having his home or domicile, or carrying on business, or having any office or place of business or any occupation, employment or profession, within the city of Saint John, shall be deemed . . . an inhabitant and resident of the said city." J. carried on business in St. John as a brewer up to 1893 when he sold the brewery to three of his sons and conveyed his house and furniture to his adult children in trust for them all. He then went to New York where he carried on the business of buying and selling stocks and securities having offices for such business and living at a hotel paying for a room in the latter only when occupied. During the next four years he spent about four months in each at St. John visiting his children and taking recreation. He had no business interests there but attended meetings of the directors of the Bank of New Brunswick during his yearly visits. He was never personally taxed in New York and took no part in municipal matters there. Being assessed in 1897 on personal property in St. John he appealed against the assessment unsuccessfully and then applied for a writ of certiorari with a view to having it quashed. Held, reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, that as there had been a long continued actual residence by J. in New York, and as on his appeal against the assessment, he had avowed his bonâ fide intention of making it his home permanently, or at least for an indefinite time, and his determination not to return to St. John to reside, he had acquired a new home or domicile and that in St. John had been abandoned within the meaning of the Act. Jones v. City of St. John, xxx., 122.

3. Election of domicile—Contract by correspondence—Acceptance—Mailing—Indication of place of payment—Delivery of goods sold—Cause of action—Jurisdiction—Art. 85, l. C.—Post Office Act.—Art. 85, l. C., as amended by 52 Vict. c. 48 (Que), providing that indication of a place of payment in any note or writing should be equivalent to election of domicile at the place so indicated, requires that such place should be actually designated in the contract.—An offer was made by letter dated and mailed at Quebec, defendant's acceptance being by letter dated and mailed at Toronto. In a suit upon the contract in the Superior Court at Quebec, defendant (served substitutionally), opposed a judgment against him by default by petition in revocation of judgment, first by preliminary exception to the jurisdiction of the court over the cause of action and then, as incidental plaintiff, making a cross-demand for damages to be set off against plaintiffs' claim.—Held, that in the Province of Quebec, as in the rest of Canada, in negotiations carried on by correspondence, it is not necessary for the completion of the contract that the letter accepting an offer should have actually reached the party making it, but the mailing in the general post office of such letter completes the contract, subject, however, to revocation of the offer by the party making it before receipt by him of such letter of acceptance. Underwood v. Maguire (Q. R. 6 l. B. 237) overruled. (Q. R. 16 S. C. 22, reversed). Magann v. Auger, xxxi., 186.

Accounts of the Province of Canada—Common school funds and lands—Administration, Ontario—Remitting price of lands sold—

Default in collections—Withholding lands from sale—Uncollected balances—Jurisdiction of Dominion arbitrators.—By the submission of 10th April, 1890, amongst other matters submitted to the Dominion arbitrators were the following: "(h) The ascertainment and determination of the principal of the common school fund, the rate of interest which would be allowed on such fund, and the method of computing such interest. (i) In the ascertainment of the amount of the principal of the said common school fund, the arbitrators are to take into consideration not only the sum now held by the Government of the Dominion of Canada, but also the amount for which Ontario is liable, and also the value of the school lands which have not yet been sold." The Province of Quebec claimed that Ontario was liable (1) for the purchase money of lands sold which may have been remitted by the Province of Ontario to the purchasers; (2) for purchase moneys which might, if due diligence had been used, have been collected from the purchasers by Ontario, but which, owing to the neglect and default of the provincial officers, have not been collected but have been lost; (3) for lands which might have been sold but have not been sold, and (4) for all uncollected balances of purchase money. Held, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the Dominion arbitrators have jurisdiction, under the submission, to hear and adjudicate upon the claims so made by the Province of Quebec. *The Province of Quebec v. DONATION.

1. Revocation—Fraud—Arts. 803, 1034 C. C.—Marriage contract—Insolvency of donor—Evidence.—T. purchased lands in 1876 from L. for $12,350, of which $3,789 was paid in cash, the balance being secured by hypothec on the lands. In June, 1879, a daughter of T. was married to J. K., and on the contract of marriage T. made a donation to her of property of considerable value, and remained with no other than the mortgaged property.—In July, 1881, L. brought an action to set aside the gift claiming that the property sold had so depreciated in value as to be insufficient to cover the balance secured only by the property so sold, that the gift had reduced T. to a state of insolvency, and had been made in fraud of L., and that at the time of the gift T. was notoriously insolvent.—The only evidence of the value of the property still held by T. at the date of the donation, was that of an auctioneer as to value in November, 1881, and that of a real estate agent, who did not know the condition of the property two years before, but stated that it was not worth more than $6,000 in November, 1881, adding that he considered property better than it was two years before, although very little changed in price. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (3 Dor. Q. B. 247), that in order to obtain the revocation of the gift, it was incumbent on the plaintiffs to prove the insolvency or déconfiture of the donor at the time of the donation, and that there was no proof in this case sufficient to shew that the property remaining to the donor at the date of his donation was inadequate to pay the hypothecary claims with which it was charged. Treacey v. Liggett, ix., 441.

2. Donatio mortis causâ — Delivery to third person—Delivery of key.]—To effect a donatio mortis causâ delivery to a third person for the use of the donee is sufficient provided that such third person is not a mere trustee, agent, or servant of the donor. 3. Donatio mortis causâ—Ratification by will—Seisin—Payment of legacy—Sale of land—Charges—Action hypothécaire.]—On appeal the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench (Q. R. 8 Q. B. 511), in an hypothecary action by which it was also asked that a discharge by executors should be set aside. C. sold land to A. W. M. and C. B. M. for $150,000 secured by privilege of baillieur de fonds, of which $50,000 was payable to respondent after vendor's death. C. afterwards by his will ratified the donation and delegation of payment, A. W. M. and C. B. M. being named as testamentary executors. The C. C. Co. acquired the land assuming the obligation of paying this $50,000. The executors discharged the debt and the hypothec by which it was secured. It was held by the court below, that, even if the delegation were null on account of the donatio mortis causâ by acte entre vifs, the will validated it and the credit passed to the respondent with all its accessories including the hypothec and special privilege of baillieur de fonds, and further, as the executors were seised only for the execution of the will, and there was no necessity to use this credit to pay debts of the succession, they had no power to grant the discharge. *Consumers Cordage Co. v. DRAINAGE.

1. Defective award—Petition for works—Initiating municipality—Adjoining municipality—Report—Termini not defined—Lands benefited—Assessments in adjoining municipality.]—Under the drainage clauses of the Municipal Act a by-law was passed by the Township of Chatham founded on the report, plans, and specifications of a surveyor, made with a view of drainage of lands in that township. The by-law set out that the petition had been signed by a majority of the ratepayers of the township to be benefited by the work and recited the report, by which it appeared that to obtain sufficient fall it was necessary to continue the drain into the adjoining Township of Dover. The surveyor assessed certain lots and roads in Dover, and also the town line between Dover and Chatham, for part of the cost as for benefit. The Township of Dover appealed from this report under 46 Vict. c. 18, s. 582, on the grounds that a majority of the owners of property to be benefited had not petitioned for the works as required by the statute; that no proper reports, plans, specifications, assessments, and estimates had been made and served; that neither the Council of Chatham nor the surveyor had power to assess or charge the lands in Dover for the purposes stated in the report and by-law; that the report did not specify any facts to shew that the Council of Chatham or their surveyor had authority to assess the lots or roads in Dover for any part of the cost of the proposed work; that the assessment upon lots and roads in Dover was much too high in proportion to any benefit to be derived; that no assessment whatever should be made on lands or roads in Dover as the works would, in fact, be an injury thereto; and that the report did not sufficiently specify the beginning and end of the work, nor the manner in which Dover was to be benefited.—Three arbitrators were appointed under the Act who all agreed that Dover would be benefited by the work, but R. F., one of the arbitrators, thought $500 should be taken off the town line, and W. D. another arbitrator, held that, while the bulk sum assessed was not too great, the assessment on the respective lands and roads and parts thereof should be varied, but that this was a matter for the Court of Revision. A memorandum to this effect was signed by W. D. and A. E., the third arbitrator, at the foot of which R. F. signed a memorandum that he dissented and declined to be present at the adjourned meeting to sign the award "if in accordance with the above memoranda." W. D. and A. E. met and signed an award confirming the assessment on the lands and roads in Dover, and on the town line made by the surveyor, and dismissing the appeal for the reason that the grounds mentioned had not been sustained.—The Queen's Bench Division set aside this award for want of concurring minds in the arbitrators, and defect in the report not specifying the beginning and end of the works (5 O. R. 325). This judgment was sustained on appeal (11 Ont. App. R. 248.) On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada:—Held, Ritchie, C.J., dissenting, that the award should have been set aside upon the ground that it was not shewn that the petition was signed by a majority of the owners of the property to be benefited, so as to give the corporation of Chatham jurisdiction to enter Dover and do work therein.—That the arbitrators should have adjudicated upon the merits of the appeal against the several assessments on the lots and roads assessed, as their award was, by ss. 400 & 404 of 46 Vict. c. 18, made final, subject to appeal only to the High Court of Judicature, and it was not a matter for the Court of Revision to deal with;—also that the award was bad because it professed to be a final adjudication against Dover upon all the grounds of appeal stated in the notice, and charged every lot and road so assessed with the precise amount assessed upon them respectively, although, by a minute of the arbitrators who signed the award, it appeared that they refused to render any award upon such point and expressed their intention to submit to the Court of Revision.—Further, that the arbitrators should have allowed the appeal against the assessment, and their award should have been set aside on the merits, because the evidence failed to shew any benefit to the lots or roads in Dover which were assessed, but actually shewed that the surveyor did not assess them for benefit from the works, but for reasons which were not sufficient under the statute, and did not warrant the assessment. Township of Chatham and North Gore v. Township of Dover East and West, xii., 321.

2. Negligence—Injuring liability—Arbitration—Right of action—Notice of action—Mandamus—Discretion of council—Maintenance and repair.—By s. 483 of R. S. O. (1887) c. 184, owners of private lands injured by drainage works are to be indemnified, contested claims to be determined by arbitration. Held, that it is only when the act causing the injury can be justified as the exercise of a statutory power, that the party injured must seek his redress in the mode provided by the statute; the right of action at common law in other cases has not been taken away by the statute.—Held, also, that under s. 569 of the same Act, the municipal council, on a petition for drainage, has a discretion to exercise in regard to the adoption, rejection, or modification of any scheme proposed by the engineer or surveyor; and, if adopted, it is not relieved from liability for injuries caused by any defect therein or in the construction of the work or from the necessity to provide a proper outlet for the drain when made thereunder.—In pursuance of a petition and surveyor's report, a municipality constructed drains which flowed into others formerly in use and, which not having the capacity to carry off the additional volume of water, became overcharged and flooded the lands adjoining. Held, that the municipality was guilty of neglect of the duty imposed by the Act to preserve, maintain, and keep the drains in repair, and were liable in an action for damages so caused to the lands. Held, per Strong and Gwynne, JJ. (Ritchie and Patterson, JJ., contra), that the drains causing the injury being wholly within the limits of the initiating municipality, and not benefiting the lands in an adjoining municipality, did not come under the provisions of s. 583 of the Act, and an owner of injured lands was not entitled to a mandamus under that section.—Per Ritchie, C.J., and Patterson, J., s. 583 applied to said drains, but a mandamus could not issue for want of the notice required thereby.—Per Strong and Gwynne, JJ., that though the owner was not entitled to the statutory mandamus it could be granted under the Ontario Judicature Act. Williams v. Township of Raleigh, xxi., 103.

NOTE.—The judgment appealed from was reversed and set aside, the judgment of the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice varied by striking out directions that defendants should repair and maintain the embankment of "Drain No. 1." remove the embankment of the "Bell Drain," stop the overcharging of "Drain No. 1." make a sufficient outlet for waters brought into it by subsequently constructed drains to avoid the overflowing of plaintiff's lands and postponing the issue of mandamus till defendants could make the necessary improvements. As so varied the Divisional Court judgment was restored.

3. Ontario Municipal Act—R. S. O. (1887) c. 184, s. 583—Non-completion—Mandamus—

Maintenance and repair — Flooding lands—Damages — Restoring roads.] — Under the drainage provisions of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. (1887) c. 184, respondent undertook the construction of a drain along the town line between Chatham and Sombra, but the work was not fully completed according to the plans and specifications, and owing to its imperfect condition the drain overflowed and flooded the adjoining lands of M. who joined in an action against the township, alleging that the effect of the work on the drain was to stop up the outlets to other drains in Sombra, back the waters thereof and flood roads and lands in the township, and they asked an injunction to restrain Chatham from so interfering with existing drains and mandamus to compel the completion of the drain so undertaken as well as damages for the injury to M.'s land and other land in Sombra. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (18 Ont. App. R. 252), that M. was entitled to damages, and reversing it, Taschereau, J., dissenting, and Patterson, J., hesitating, that the Township of Sombra was entitled to a mandamus, but the original decree should be varied by striking out the direction that the work should be done at the cost of the Township of Chatham, it not being proved that the original assessment was sufficient. Held, per Ritchie, C.J., Strong and Gwynne, JJ., that s. 583 of the Municipal Act providing for mandamus to compel the making of repairs to preserve and maintain a drain does not apply to this case in which the drain was never fully made and completed, but that the Township of Sombra was entitled to a mandamus under Ont. Jud. Act, R. S. O. (1887) c. 44. Held, further, that the flooding of lands was not an injury for which the Township of Sombra could obtain damages, even though a general nuisance was occasioned. The only pecuniary compensation to which Sombra was entitled was the cost of repairing and restoring roads washed away.—Per Patterson, J. It might be preferable to leave the judgment appealed from undisturbed and allow the appellant to work out its remedy under s. 583 of the Municipal Act. Township of Sombra v. Township of Chatham, xxi., 305.

4. By-laws—Drainage Act — Petition for drain—Withdrawal of name from—Improper construction.]—The action was brought by Gibson to have a by-law of the corporation quashed, or, in the alternative, for damages for injury to his property, resulting from improper construction and want of repair of a drain made under said by-law. The ground upon which said by-law was attacked was that the plaintiff had withdrawn from the petition and there were not sufficient names on it without him.—The trial judge held that plaintiff had not withdrawn from the petition, and refused to quash the by-law. He also held that plaintiff had failed to prove his allegations in the statement of claim on which his right to damages was founded. The Divisional Court reversed this decision on the first ground, and held the by-law invalid. The Court of Appeal for Ontario (21 Ont. App. R. 504) restored the original judgment.—The Supreme Court of Canada affirmed the judgment appealed from and dismissed the appeal with costs. Gibson v. Township of North Easthope, xxiv., 707.

tario Drainage Act, 1873—36 Vict. c. 38 (O.)—36 Vict. c. 39 (O.)—R. S. O. (1887) c. 184—Ont. Mun. Act, 1892—55 Vict. c. 42 (O.)—The provisions of the Ontario Municipal Act (55 Vict. c. 42, s. 590), that if a drain constructed in one municipality is used as an outlet, or will provide an outlet for the water of lands of another, the lands in the latter so benefited may be assessed for their proportion of the cost, applies only to drains properly so called, and does not include original watercourses which have been deepened or enlarged. — If a municipality constructing such a drain has passed a by-law purporting to assess lands in an adjoining municipality for contribution to the cost, a person whose lands might appear to be affected thereby, or by any by-law of the adjoining municipality proposing to levy contributions toward the cost of such works, would be entitled to have such other municipality restrained from passing a contributory by-law, or taking any steps towards that end, by an action brought before the passing of such contributory by-law. Broughton v. Grey and Elma, xxvii., 495.

6. Ditches and Watercourses Act, 1894 (Ont.)—Owner of land—Declaration of ownership—Award—Defects — Validating award—57 Vict. c. 55—58 Vict. c. 54 (Ont.)—A lessee of land with an option to purchase the fee is not an owner who can initiate proceedings for construction of a ditch under The Ditches and Watercourses Act, 1894, of Ontario. Township of Osgoode v. York (24 Can. S. C. R. 282) followed.—If the initiating party is not really an owner the filing of a declaration of ownership under the Act will not confer jurisdiction.—Section 24 of the Act, which provides that an award thereunder, after expiration of the time for appealing to the judge, or after it is affirmed on appeal, shall be binding notwithstanding any defects in form or substance either in the award or any of the proceedings, does not validate an award or proceedings where the party initiating the latter is not an owner. Township of McKillop v. Township of Logan, xxix., 702.

7. Improvement of natural watercourses — Artificial watercourses — Embankments — Dykes—“The Drainage Act, 1894”—57 Vict. c. 56 (Ont.)—“The Ontario Drainage Act, 1873”—“The Municipal Drainage Aid Act”—36 Vict. c. 39 — 36 Vict. c. 48 (Ont.)—“Benefit” assessment—“Injuring liability”—“Outlet liability” — Assessment of wild lands—Construction of statute.] — The Ontario Act, 57 Vict. c. 56, has not abrogated the fundamental principle underlying the provisions of the previous Acts of the legislature respecting the powers of municipal institutions as to assessments for the improvement of particular lands at the cost of the owners which rests on the maxim qui sentit commodum sentire debet et onus—Lands from which no water is caused to flow by artificial means into a drain having its outlet in another municipality than that in which it was initiated cannot be assessed for “outlet liability” under said Act.—Where a drainage work initiated in a higher municipality, obtains an outlet in a lower municipality, the assessment for “outlet liability” therein is limited to the cost of the work at such outlet.—Every assessment, whether for “injuring liability” or for “outlet liability” must be made upon consideration of the special circumstances of each particular case and restricted to the mode prescribed by the Act. In every case there must be apparent water which is caused to flow by an artificial channel from the lands to be assessed into the drainage work or upon other lands to their injury, which water is to be carried off by the proposed drainage work.—Assessment for “benefit” under the Act must have reference to the additional facilities afforded by the proposed drainage work for the drainage of all lands within the area of the proposed work, and may vary according to difference of elevation of the respective lots, the quantity of water to be drained from each, their distances from the work and other like circumstances.—Section 75 of that Act only authorizes an assessment for repair and maintenance of an artificially constructed drain. The cost of widening and deepening a natural watercourse for the purpose of draining lands is not assessable upon particular lands under said s. 75, but must constitute a charge upon the general funds of the municipality.—In the present case, the scheme proposed was mainly for the reclamation of drowned lands in a township on a lower level than that of the initiating municipality, and such works are not drainage works within the meaning of said s. 75 for which assessments can be levied thereunder, nor are they works by which the lands in the higher township are to be said to have been benefited. Sutherland-Innes Co. v. Township of Romney, xxx., 95.

8. Contract — Drainage — Intermunicipal works—Damages — Guarantee — Continuing liability.—The City of Montreal, having a sewer sufficient for all its purposes within its limits and through lands lying on a lower level than those of the adjoining municipalities of Ste. Cunégonde, St. Henri, and Westmount, entered into an agreement in writing with Ste. Cunégonde by which the last named city was permitted to connect its sewers with the Montreal sewer in question for drainage purposes, and by the same agreement, the City of Montreal consented that the City of Ste. Cunégonde should allow the two other municipalities to make connections with its sewers, so connected, in such a manner that waters coming from such three higher municipalities should be drained through the Montreal sewer. The privilege was granted on condition that the connection with the Montreal sewer should be made by Ste. Cunégonde at its own cost and to the entire satisfaction of the Montreal engineers; that Ste. Cunégonde should guarantee Montreal against all damages which might result whether from the connection of said sewers or works necessary in connection therewith, as well to the City of Montreal as to other persons or corporations, and Ste. Cunégonde bound itself to pay and reimburse to the said City of Montreal all sums of money that the latter might be “called upon and condemned to pay in account of such damages and the costs resulting therefrom.” In case of the Montreal sewer becoming insufficient, and its capacity equiring to be increased, or a new sewer constructed, it was provided that Ste. Cunégonde should contribute proportionately to the cost of constructing the new works. The Ste. Cunégonde sewer was accordingly connected, and the other municipalities, upon entering into similar agreements with the city of Ste. Cunégonde, were permitted by Ste. Cunégonde to make connections with its sewers whereby their lands were also drained through the Montreal sewer. the agreements of the two last municipalities binding them as the arrière-garants, respectively, of the City of Ste. Cunégonde. In an action by the City of Montreal to recover from Ste. Cunégonde damages which it had been compelled to pay for the flooding of cellars by waters from the sewer in question, the arrière-garants were made parties by the principal defendant on demands in warranty:—Held, that the guarantee in question bound the several higher municipalities for all damages resulting not only from the act of making the actual connection of the sewers, but also for damages that might be subsequently occasioned from time to time on account of the user by them of the Montreal sewer for drainage purposes. Held, also, that, as the City of Montreal had not obliged itself to construct additional or new works within any fixed time in case of insufficiency, the adjoining municipalities were not relieved from any of their liabilities on account of postponement of construction of such works by the City of Montreal. Held, further, that the judgment awarding damages against the City of Montreal being a matter between third parties and not res judicata against the other municipal corporations interested, the said City of Montreal was only entitled to recover by its suit against Ste. Cunégonde, such damages as might be shewn to have resulted from the connection and user of the sewers under the agreement; that the City of Montreal, when sued, was not obliged to summon its warrantor into the action for damages, but could, after condemnation, recover such damages by separate action under the contract; that it was not, by the terms of the contract, a condition precedent to action by the City of Montreal, that it should first submit to a judicial condemnation in liquidation of such damages; and that, as between the City of Ste. Cunégonde and the arrière-garants, their contracts bound them, respectively, to pay such damages, with interest and costs in proportion to the areas drained by them respectively into the Montreal sewer. City of Montreal v. City of Ste. Cunégonde; City of Ste. Cunégonde v. City of St. Henri; City of Ste. Cunégonde v. Town of Westmount, xxxii., 135.

9. Intermunicipal works—Removal of obstruction—Municipal Act, 1883, s. 570 (Ont.) Municipal Amendment Act, 1886, s. 22—Report of engineer.—In 1884 a petition was presented to the council of Elizabethtown asking for the removal of a dam and other obstructions to Mud Creek into which the drainage of the township and of Augusta adjoining emptied. The council had the creek examined by an engineer who presented a report with plans and estimates of the work to be done and an estimate of the cost and proportion of benefit to the respective lots in each township. The council then passed a by-law authorizing the work to be done which was afterwards set aside on the ground that the removal of an artificial obstruction was not contemplated by the law then in force, s. 570 of the Municipal Act, 1883. In 1886 the Act was amended and a fresh petition was presented to the council of Elizabethtown which again instructed the engineer to examine the creek and report. The engineer did not again examine it (its condition had not changed in the interval) but presented to the council his former report, plans, specifications and assessments, and another by-law was passed by which the work was done. In an action to recover from Augusta its proportion of the assessment:—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal (2 Ont. L. R. 4) Strong, C.J., dissenting, that the amendment in 1886 to s. 570 of the Municipal Act, 1883, authorized the council of Elizabethtown to cause the work to be done and claim from Augusta its proportion of the cost.—Held, further, reversing said judgment, that the report of the engineer was sufficient without a fresh examination of the creek and preparation of new plans and a new assessment. Township of Elizabethtown v. Township of Augusta, xxxii., 295.

1. Assignment for benefit of creditors — Pressure—Criminal process—Stifling criminal charge — Extortion.]—S., a trader in Yarmouth, N.S., had a number of creditors in Montreal. J., one of such creditors, preferred a criminal charge against S., sent a detective to Yarmouth with a warrant, caused such warrant to be indorsed by a local magistrate and had S. brought to Montreal, when the other creditors there issued writs of caapias for their respective claims. The father of S. came to Montreal, and in consideration of the release of S. on both the civil and criminal charges, transferred all his property for the benefit of the Montreal creditors, and S. was released from gaol, having given his own recognizance to appear on the criminal charge. In the settlement, to the claims of the creditors was added the costs of both the civil and criminal suits. In a suit to set aside the transfer as being obtained by duress and to stifle the criminal prosecution, the evidence shewed that the creditors, in taking the proceedings they did, expected to obtain the security of the friends of S.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (20 N. S. Rep. 378), that the nature of the proceedings and the evidence clearly shewed that the criminal process was only used for the purpose of getting S. to Montreal to enable the creditors to put pressure on him, in order to get their claims paid or secured, and the transfer made by the father under such circumstances was void. Shorey v. Jones, xv., 398.

2. Conveyance—Duress—Undue pressure—Trust property.]—The owner of land having died intestate leaving several children, W. R. received from the others a deed conveying to him the entire title in the land in consideration of his paying all debts against the intestate estate and those of a deceased brother. Subsequently W. R. borrowed money from his sister and gave her a deed of the land, on learning which B., a creditor of W. R., accused the latter of fraud and threatened him with criminal prosecution, whereupon he induced his sister to execute a re-conveyance of the land to him and then give a mortgage to B. The re-conveyance not having been properly acknowledged for registry purposes, was returned to the sister to have the defect remedied, but she had taken legal advice in the meantime and destroyed the deed. B. then brought an action against W. R. and his sister to have the deed to the latter set aside and his mortgage declared a lien on the land. Held, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia (30 N. S. Rep. 405), that the sister of W. R. was entitled to a first lien on the land for the money lent to her brother; that the deed of re-conveyance to W. R. had been obtained by undue influence and pressure and should be set aside, and B. should not be allowed to set it up. Burris v. Rhind, xxix., 498.

3. Will—Capacity of testator—Undue influence.]—A codicil to a will executed shortly before the testator's death, increasing the provision made by a former codicil for a niece of his wife who had lived with him for nearly thirty years, for a considerable portion of which she was his housekeeper, was attacked as having been executed on account of undue influence by the niece. Held, reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, Taschereau and Sedgewick, JJ., dissenting, that as the testator was shewn to be capable of executing a will at the time he made the codicil, considering the relations between him and his niece even if it had been proved that she urged him to make better provision for her than he had previously done such would not have amounted to undue influence. Held, also, following Perera v. Perera [1901] A. C. 354, that even if there was room for saying that the testator was not at the time of execution capable of making a will, he were when he gave the instructions the codicil would still have been valid. Kaulbach v. Archbold; In re Archbold, xxxi., 387.

4. Promissory note—Duress—Verdict of jury.—In an action against the maker of a promissory note, the local manager of the plaintiff bank, the defence was that he had been coerced by the head manager, under threats of dismissal and criminal prosecution, into signing the note to cover up deficits in customers' accounts in which he had no personal interest. His evidence at the trial to the same effect was denied by the head manager. Held, that the jury having believed the defendant's account and given him a verdict which the evidence justified, such verdict ought to stand. Western Bank of Canada v. McGill, xxii., 581.

This direction was carried out after his death, and the attorney-general claimed succession duty on the whole estate. Held, affirming the judgment appealed against (35 N. S. Rep. 223), Sedgewick and Mills, JJ., dissenting, that although the debentures themselves were not due to the duty either in the hands of the executors or of the purchasers, the proceeds of their sale when passing to legatees were—trusts will be given for or against the Crown in other cases. *Lovitt v. "DYING WITHOUT ISSUE."

1. Will, construction of—Executory devise over—Conditional fee—Life estate—Estate tail.—A testator died in 1856, having previously made his last will, divided into numbered paragraphs by which he devised his property amongst certain of his children. By the third clause he devised lands to his son F. on attaining the age of 21 years—"giving the executors power to lift the rent and to rent, said executors paying F. all former rents due after my decease up to his attaining the age of 21 years, and by a subsequent clause be provided that "at the death of any one of my sons or daughters having no issue, their property to be divided equally among the survivors." F. attained the age of 21 years and died in 1893, unmarried and without issue. Held, that neither the form nor the language used in the will would authorize a departure from the general rule as to construction according to the ordinary grammatical meaning of the words used by the testator, and that, as there would be no absurdity, repugnance, or inconsistency in such a construction of the will in question, the subsequent clause limiting the estates bequeathed by an executory devise over must be interpreted as referring to all the property devised to the testator's sons and daughters by the preceding clauses of the will. Held, further, that the gift over should be construed as having reference to failure of issue at the death of the first devisee, who thus took an estate in fee subject to the executory devise over. *Crawford v. 1. Aggravation of natural servitude—Damages—Drainage—Art. 501 C. C.]—The proprietor of a superior tenement, who has increased and aggravated the servitude appurtenant thereto, over adjoining lands of a lower level, remains liable for damages resulting therefrom, notwithstanding that he has complied with the directions of the judgment declaring the aggravation by the re-construction in a proper manner of the drain by which the natural servitude had been increased. (See 15 R. L. 391; 19 R. L. 620; 21 R. L. 59.) Vineberg et vir v. Hampson, 27th February, 1896.

2. Adjoining proprietors of land—Different levels—Injury by surface water—Watercourse.]—O. and S. were adjoining proprietors of land in the Village of Frankford, Ont., that of O. being situate on a higher level than the other. In 1875 improvements were made to a drain discharging upon the premises of S., and a culvert was made connecting with it. In 1887, S. erected a building on his land and cut off the wall of the culvert, which projected over the line of the street, which resulted in the flow of water through it being stopped and backed up on the land of O., who brought an action against S. for the damage caused thereby. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (24 Ont. App. R. 526), that S. having a right to cut off the part of the culvert which projected over his land was not liable to O. for the damage so caused, the remedy of the latter, if he had any, being against the municipality for not properly maintaining the drain. *Ostrom v. 2. LIGHT AND AIR.

4. Light and air—Twenty years' use—Prescription—Misdirection—Measure of damages—New trial.]—Action on the case for obstructing plaintiff's lights. Plaintiff and defendant were owners of contiguous houses. Defendant's house was built prior to 1853 for B., who in that year conveyed it to S., who deeded to H., from whom plaintiff purchased under registered deed. In 1853, whilst defendant's house was occupied by R. a tenant of S., the house owned by plaintiff was built for A. from whom, through several mesne conveyances, plaintiff derived title. Whilst plaintiff's house was in course of erection, two windows were placed in the gable end of it to afford light and air to attic bedrooms. These windows overlooked the house which B. had erected. A. began to live in the house about December, 1854. The windows remained unobstructed until August, 1874, when defendant, by raising his house and putting a mansard roof upon it, caused the obstruction complained of, by closing up the lower half of the windows.—There was no evidence of express grant of an easement, plaintiff relying upon 20 years' uninterrupted enjoyment. For defendant it was shewn by S. that he never gave A. permission to place the windows, and that he did not notice them till after he had sold in 1857. S. saw A.'s house built. Defendant had examined the records, and there was no grant of an easement in the lights in question; he was ignorant of the windows when he bought, in 1874, and did not know of them till the obstruction was made. The evidence was not certain as to when R.'s tenancy terminated. No question appears to have been raised at the trial as to the time her lease terminated, nor was this point left to the jury, the contention of plaintiff's counsel being that time began to run from the period when the windows were put in, and that the tenancy had nothing to do with the question. The trial judge directed the jury that "if S., the owner of the land, did not occupy the land himself, but it was occupied by his tenants, then he would not be bound by the user, unless he knew of the windows being there; if he knew of the windows being there, and did not obstruct them within twenty years, he would be bound, and the tenancy had nothing to do with the question;" and as to measure of damages: "The fair measure would be what it would cost the plaintiff to make such alterations in his house as would admit the same quantity of light and air as he had before the defendant raised his roof."—The jury found for plaintiff for $400.—A rule nisi for a new trial was discharged. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (2 Pugs. & Bur. 503), 1. that the duration of R.'s tenancy was a proper question for the jury, and it should have been left to them without the qualification that it made no difference if S. had knowledge of the existence of the windows; for if the tenancy continued after August, 1854, there was manifestly no user for 20 years with the consent or acquiescence of defendant and those through whom he claimed, for

S., then owner of the fee, would have had no right to enter upon the possession of his tenant for the purpose of obstructing the lights. Angus v. Dalton (6 App. Cas. 740) referred to. 2. There was misdirection as to measure of damages; the plaintiff should have been limited to recovery in respect of loss and inconvenience caused by darkening his windows up to the time action was brought, and for future damages he could bring successive actions from time to time as long as the nuisance continued. Pugsley v. Ring, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 241.

3. MERGER.

6. Unity of ownership—Easements apparent and non-apparent—Quasi-easement—Subsequent grants—Implied reservation—Implied grant.]—One piece of land cannot be said to be burdened by an easement in favour of another when both belong absolutely to the same owner, who has, in the exercise of his own unrestricted right of enjoyment, the power of using both as he thinks fit and of making the use of one parcel subservient to that of the other, if he chooses so to do,—and if the title to different parcels comes to be vested in the same owner, there is an extinguishment of any easements which may previously have existed, a species of merger by which what may have been, whilst the different parcels were in separate hands, legal easements, cease to be so, and become mere easements in fact—quasi easements.—If the quasi servient tenement is subsequently first conveyed without expressly providing for the continuance of the easements, there is no implied reservation for the benefit of the land retained by the grantor, except of easements of necessity, and no distinction is to be made for this purpose between easements which are apparent and those which are non-apparent.—If the dominant tenement is first granted, all quasi easements which have been enjoyed as appendant to it over a quasi servient tenement retained by the grantor pass by implication. *Attrill v. App. 416), that the purchaser was, by such acceptance, estopped from claiming a right of way over the land shewn as a lane in the sale plan.—Per Gwynne, J. Though the advertisement of the public sale stated "lanes run in rear of the several lots," the contract evidenced thereby and by the public sale gave the purchaser no right to use the lane afterwards closed. Carey v. City of Toronto, xiv., 172.

7. RIGHT OF WAY.

11. User—Adjoining lands—Way of necessity—License—Prescription—Agreement for right of way.]—In an action for obstructing a right of way plaintiff claimed use both by prescription and agreement, and also that by the agreement the way was wholly over defendant's land. Plaintiff acquired the land from his father who retained the adjoining land which was eventually conveyed to defendant, and after so acquiring it continued to use a track over the adjoining land, mostly through bush land, to reach the concession line, and his claim to the use of the way by prescription depended on whether or not his user was of a well-defined road, or merely of an irregular track and by license and courtesy of the adjoining owner. Finally an agreement was entered into between the plaintiff and his brother, who had acquired the adjoining lot which he afterwards conveyed to defendant, by which, in consideration of privileges granted to him, the brother covenanted to permit plaintiff to have a right of way along a lane to which the way formerly used led, and extending forty rods east from the centre of the lot, so as to allow plaintiff free communication from defendant's lot along said lane to the concession line. The issue raised on the construction of this agreement was, whether the right of way granted thereby should be wholly or in part on plaintiff's land, or wholly on that of the defendant. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (16 Ont. App. R. 3, and restoring 15 O. R. 699), Ritchie, C.J., dissenting, that plaintiff had no title to the right of way by prescription, the evidence clearly shewing that the user was not of a well-defined road but only of a path through bush land and that he only enjoyed it by license from his father, the adjoining owner, which license was revoked by his father's death: but,—affirming the judgment appealed from, that under the agreement the right of way granted to plaintiff was wholly over defendant's land, the agreement not being explicit as to the direction of such right of way, requiring a construction in favour of the plaintiff and against the grantor. Rogers v. Duncan, xviii., 710.

12. Necessary way—Implied grant—User—Obstruction of way—Interruption of prescription—Acquiescence—Limitation of actions—R. S. N. S. (5 ser.) c. 112—R. S. N. S. (4 ser.) c. 100—2 & 3 Wm. IV. (Imp.), c. 71, ss. 2 and 4.]—K. owned lands in the County of Lunenburg, N. S., over which he had for years utilized a roadway for convenient purposes. After his death the defendant became owner of the middle portion, the parcels at either end passing to the plaintiff, who continued to use the old roadway, as a winter road, for hauling fuel from his wood-lot to his residence, at the other end of the property. It appeared that though the three parcels fronted upon a public highway, this was the only practical means plaintiff had for the hauling of his winter fuel, owing to a dangerous hill that prevented him getting it off the wood-lot to the highway. There was not any formed road across the lands, but merely a track upon the snow during the winter months, and the way was not used at any other season of the year. This user was enjoyed for over twenty years prior to 1891, when it appeared to have been first disputed, but from that time the way was obstructed from time to time up to March, 1894, when the defendant built a fence across it that was allowed to remain undisturbed, and caused a cessation of the actual enjoyment of the way, during the fifteen months immediately preceding the commencement of the action in assertion of the right to the easement by the plaintiff. The statute (R. S. N. S. 5 ser. c. 112) provides a limitation of twenty years for the acquisition of easements, and declares that no act shall be deemed an interruption of actual enjoyment, unless submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after notice thereof and of the person making the same. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (29 N. S. Rep. 267), that notwithstanding the customary use of the way as a winter road only, the cessation of user for the year immediately preceding the commencement of the action was a bar to the plaintiff's claim under the statute. Held, also, that the circumstances under which the roadway had been used did not supply sufficient reason to infer that the way was an easement of necessity appurtenant or appendant to the lands formerly held in unity of possession, which would without special grant pass by implication, upon the severance of the tenements. Knock v. Knock, xxvii., 664.

13. Construction of deed—Servitude—Roadway—User—Art. 549 C. C.—In 1831 the owners of several contiguous farms purchased a roadway over adjacent lands to reach their cultivated fields beyond a steep mountain which crossed their properties, and by a clause inserted in the deed to which they all were parties they respectively agreed "to furnish roads upon their respective lands to go and come by the above purchased road for the cultivation of their lands, and that they would maintain these roads and make all necessary fences and gates at the common expense of themselves, their heirs and assigns." Prior to this deed and for some time afterwards the use of a road from the river front to a public highway at some distance farther back, had been tolerated by the plaintiff and his auteurs, across a portion of his farm which did not lie between the road so purchased over the spur of the mountain, and the nearest point on the boundary of the defendant's land, but the latter claimed the right to continue to use the way. In an action (négoce) to prohibit further use of way: Held, affirming the decision appealed from (Q. R. 5 Q. B. 572), that there was no title in writing sufficient to establish a servitude across the plaintiff's land over the roadway so permitted by mere tolerance; that the effect of the agreement between the purchasers was merely to establish servitudes across their respective lands so far as might be necessary to give each of the owners access to the road so purchased from the nearest practicable point of their respective lands across intervening properties of the others for the purpose of the cultivation of their lands beyond the mountain. Riou v. Riou, xviii., 53.

14. Right of way—Easement—User.—A right of way granted as an easement incidental to specified property cannot be used by the grantee for the same purposes in respect to any other property. Judgment appealed from (26 Ont. App. R. 95) affirmed. Purdom v. Robinson, xxx., 64.

App. R. 327), that such lease gave to W. a right to build as he chose on the lots, subject to any regulations which the city had power to impose, and in doing so to interfere with the right of the public to navigate the water. Held, also, that the waters being navigable parts of the Bay of Toronto, no private easement by prescription could be acquired therein while they remained open for navigation. *London and Canadian Loan and Agency Co. v. 9. USER.

19. Sale of land—Unity of possession—Severance—Continuous user.—When two properties belonging to the same owner are sold at the same time, and each purchaser has notice of sale to the other, the right to any continuous easement passes with the sale as an absolute legal right. But the easement must have been enjoyed by the former owner at the time of the sale. Therefore, one purchaser could not claim the right to use a dam on his land in such a way as to cause the water to flow back on the other property, where such right, if it had ever been enjoyed by the former owner, had been abandoned years before the sale. Judgment appealed from (32 N. S. Rep. 340) affirmed. Hart v. McMullen, xxx., 245.

EJECTMENT.

1. Recovery of land—Fraudulent conveyance by husband to wife—Pleadings—Possession in wife—Sale by sheriff—Trial after demurrer.—Action of ejectment against K., and her husband, J. K., to recover possession of land. Ferguson, J., gave judgment in favour of the plaintiff against the defendants (14 O. R. 226), and Court of Appeal affirmed the judgment for reasons stated by Burton, J., who held that K. having been treated as having possession, had the same right to defend the possession thus attributed to her as if a stranger to the plaintiff and not his wife. Rule 144 made it sufficient for her to state by way of defence that she was in possession, and dispensed with a plea of title on her part, unless her defence depended upon an equitable estate or right, or unless she claimed relief upon any equitable ground. Her defence was partly of the character which had to be specially set out, alleging irregularities, or faults of omission and commission by the sheriff, in the conduct of the sale under fi. fa. against K.; but without doubting the correctness of the view taken of the alleged acts and omissions, K. could not be heard to criticise those proceedings; as far as she was concerned the plaintiff owned the interest professed to be conveyed by the sheriff, and that included whatever right her husband had to possession of the property. The contest, therefore, turned on the sufficiency of evidence concerning the title of J. K. There was no direct evidence, but sufficient was shewn to enable plaintiff to recover, in the absence of any title in K., in the proceedings and adjudication in the former action between plaintiff and K., in which the conveyance from J. K. to his wife was declared fraudulent and void under 13 Eliz. c. 5. The plaintiff's position at the trial after production of these proceedings was the same as if he had put in evidence the patent from the Crown to J. K. and then proved, as he did, his acquisition of J. K.'s interest in the land. Plaintiff did not, on the evidence, require to resort to the judgment on the demurrer, but Mr. Justice Burton did not wish to be understood as intimating any doubt of the correctness of that judgment. The gravamen of the demurrer was that the statement did not allege title in J. K. It did allege the former action and judgment, but their bearing on the admission of title in J. K. was not so apparent as it might have been. An application such as that in Phillips v. Phillips (4 Q. B. D. 127), might have led, as in that case, to a better statement being ordered, but that is a very different thing from holding the pleading bad on demurrer.—In his view of the evidence, it became unnecessary to express any opinion on the application of decisions like Johnsson v. Bonhote (2 Ch. D. 298).—The Supreme Court, Held, that although K. might set up the irregularities and defects in the sheriff's sale her allegations were such that she could not do so without making the sheriff a party; but the findings of the trial judge on the question of irregularity and of value were correct. The proof of title also was sufficient; and the appeal should therefore be dismissed. Kane v. Magee, 4th Dec., 1889; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 247.

2. Parties—Non-joinder of tenants in common—Action for use and occupation—Mesne profits—Trespas.—C. H. and J. H. were tenants in common of lands under will of T. H. and each occupied a portion. On 30th Dec., 1868, L. purchased the interest of C. H. at sheriff's sale. C. H. died 7th March, 1870, and his widow, the defendant, with the assent of J. H., remained in possession of the portion of which C. H. had been in possession. In proceedings for partition against the heirs of T. H., to which defendant was no party, the portion she occupied was, on 12th Aug., 1873, allotted to L. as sole owner. He thereupon brought action for use and occupation, adding a count in trespass for the mesne profits since the death of C. H.—A rule nisi to enter a nonsuit was made absolute (2 Russ. & Ches. 229), and it was held that no action would lie for use and occupation, the widow occupying adversely; that no action would lie for mesne profits as there had been no previous recovery in ejectment by plaintiff, and that even if a contract had been proved to sustain use and occupation, the non-joinder of J. H. as a plaintiff, was fatal. On appeal, Held, 1. An action of trespass for mesne profits is consequential to recovery in ejectment.—2. Even if such action would lie under some circumstances without ejectment brought, plaintiff could not recover without entry and possession.—3. After entry there is a relation back to the actual title as against a wrong-doer, and an action may be maintained for trespass prior to such entry. But besides deficient evidence of entry, there was evidence that defendant remained in possession subsequent to 12th Aug., 1873, when plaintiff's title accrued, with his assent. Strong, J., dubitante.—4. In any event the action for mesne profits would not lie, defendant having been, previous to the 12th Aug., 1873, in possession with the consent of J. H., the co-tenant in common, and being, therefore, entitled to notice to quit, or demand of possession, before her possession could be considered tortious. *Lecain v. 1. Contract — Duration—Right to cancel—Repugnant clauses.—A contract for supplying light to a hotel contained the following provisions. "This contract is to continue in force for not less than 36 consecutive calendar months from date of first burning, and thereafter until cancelled in writing by one of the parties hereto. . . . Special conditions if any. This contract to remain in force after the expiration of the said 36 months for the term that the party of the second part renews his lease for the Russell House." After the expiration of the 36 months the lease was renewed for five years longer. Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal (1 Ont. L. R. 73), that neither of the parties to the contract had a right to cancel it against the will of the other during the renewed term. Ottawa Electric Co. v. St. Jacques, xxxi., 636.

2. Negligence—Operations of a dangerous nature—Supplying electric light—Insulation of electric wires.—The defendants are a company engaged in supplying electric light to consumers in the City of Montreal under special charter for that purpose. They placed a secondary wire, by which electric light was supplied to G.'s premises in close proximity to a guy-wire used to brace primary wires of another electric company which, although ordinarily a dead wire, might become dangerously charged with electricity in wet weather. The defendants' secondary wire was allowed to remain in a defective condition for several months immediately preceding the time when the injury complained of was sustained, and it was at that time insufficiently insulated at a point in close proximity to the guy-wire. While attempting to turn on the light of an incandescent electric lamp on his premises, on a wet and stormy day, G. was struck with insensibility and died almost immediately. In an action to recover damages against the company for negligently causing the injury, Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the defendants were liable for actionable negligence as they had failed to exercise the high degree of skill, care and foresight, required of persons engaging in operations of a dangerous nature. Royal Electric Co. v. Hévé, xxxii., 462.

1. AGENCY.

1. Limited powers of agent — Acts beyond scope of his authority.—An agent who is not a general agent, but one with powers expressly limited, cannot bind the candidate by acts done beyond the scope of his authority. Judgment appealed from affirmed. Berthier Election Case; Genereux v. Cuthbert, ix., 102.

2. Implied agency — Surrounding circumstances — Corrupt practices — Treating — Bribery.—H., a Conservative, prior to the election, canvassed B., in company with the respondent. On election day H. was selected by the assistant-secretary of the association (an acknowledged agent of the respondent) to represent respondent at Burnley poll, and obtained a certificate under s. 42 of the Act, entitling him to vote at that poll. H. there met B. and treated him by giving him a glass of whiskey and after B. had voted he gave him $2, and subsequently sent him $50. The treating, according to B.'s evidence, was nothing more than an act of good fellowship; and according to H.'s account, B. was not feeling well, and the whiskey was given in consequence. B. negatived that the $2 were paid him for his vote, and H. said that he supposed it was a dollar bill and told B. to go and treat the boys with it, and that it was not given on account of any previous promise, or for his having voted. The court below held that none of these acts constituted corrupt acts so as to avoid the election.—Held, per Ritchie, C.J., and Henry and Taschereau, J.J. — There was sufficient evidence of H.'s agency, but it was not necessary to decide this point.—Per Strong, J. There was no proof of H.'s agency. Agency is not to be presumed from the fact that the respondent permitted H. to canvass B. in his presence, and there is an entire absence of proof of any sufficient authority to H. to bind the respondent by his acts at the polling place in the matters of treating and the payment of the $2.—Per Fournier, J. The treating of B.

on polling day, both before and after he had voted, by H., an agent, and the giving of the sum of $2 immediately after he had voted, were corrupt acts sufficient to avoid the election. West Northumberland Election Case; Henderson v. Guillet, x., 635.

3. Organization of political party—Inferences from combined elements—Proof of agency.—There was no formal organization of the party supporting appellant; the county reform association had been disbanded and the minutes, regularly kept since 1882, destroyed, as were the rough minutes of every meeting of a convention of the party held since that date. In lieu of local committees vice-presidents were appointed for the respective townships, and on the approach of a contest the vice-presidents called a meeting of the county association, composed of all reformers in the riding, to go over the lists and do all the necessary work of the election. The evidence of H.'s agency relied on was, that he had always been a reformer, had been active for two elections, had attended one important committee meeting and been recognized by the vice-president of his township as an active supporter of the appellant, and that he acted as scrutineer at the polls in the election in question. The trial judge held that all these elements combined, in view of the state of affairs regarding organization, were sufficient to constitute H. an agent of the appellant.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, Ritchie, C.J., dissenting, and Taschereau, J., hesitating, that the circumstances justified the trial judge in holding the agency of H. established. Haldimand Election Case; Colter v. Glenn, xvii., 170.

4. Political association—Agency of members.—If a political association is formed for a place within the electoral district, and it is not shewn that there was any restriction on the members to work for their candidate within the limits of that place only, they are his agents throughout the whole district. West Prince Election Case, xxvii., 241.

6. Supreme Court Act, 1879, s. 10—38 Vict. c. 11, s. 48—Appeal—Election petition—Preliminary objections—Procedure.—On 21st April, 1877, an election petition was deposited against the respondent, who filed preliminary objections that the petition, notice of presentation and copy of receipt of the deposit had been served upon him. Judgment maintained the preliminary objections and dismissed the petition with costs. On appeal to the Supreme Court under 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 48—Held, (Taschereau and Fournier, JJ., dissenting), that there was no appeal, and that, under that section, an appeal lay only from the decision of a judge who tried the merits of an election petition.—Per Richards, C.J., and Strong, J., that the hearing of the preliminary objections and the trial of the merits of the election petition are distinct acts of procedure. Charlevoix Election Case; Brassard v. Langevin, ii., 319.

(NOTE.—The statute has been amended.)

7. Appeal—Notice—Setting down for hearing—Extension of time—Supreme Court Rules, 56, 69—Jurisdiction—Discretion of judge.—On motion to quash appeal where appellant had not, within three days after setting down the petition for hearing, given notice thereof in writing, nor obtained from the judge who tried the petition further time for giving such notice.—Held, that the provision in s. 48 of the Sup. & Ex. Courts Act was imperative; that such notice was a condition precedent to jurisdiction to hear the appeal; that as the appellant had failed to comply with the statute, the court could not grant relief under rules 56 or 69; and that therefore the appeal could not be then heard, but must be struck off the list of appeals, with costs of the motion.—Held, also, that the judge who tried the petition had exclusive power to extend the time for giving such notice to be exercised according to sound discretion, and that judge having subsequently made such an order, the appeal was heard as having come properly before the court. Taschereau, J., dissented. North Ontario Election Case; Wheeler v. Gibbs, iii., 374.

8. Reversal of question as to jurisdiction of trial court—Re-hearing on merits—Sending back record for further adjudication—Second appeal.—The original petition was tried on the merits, subject to objection to jurisdiction. The objection was maintained and in consequence the petition was dismissed. This judgment was appealed from by the present respondent under s. 48, Sup. Court Act, who limited his appeal to the question of jurisdiction, and it was held that McCord, J., had jurisdiction, and ordered that the cause should be proceeded with. The record was accordingly sent to the court below, and McCord, J., after suggesting a re-hearing rendered his judgment on the merits declaring the election void. On appeal it was contended that McCord, J., had no jurisdiction so to proceed with and finally decide on the merits of the case a second time.—Held, that the Supreme Court, on the first appeal, even if the appeal had not been limited to the question of jurisdiction, could not have given a decision on the merits, and that the order of this court remitting the record to the proper officer of the court below to be proceeded with according to law, gave jurisdiction to McCord, J., to proceed with the case on the merits, and to pronounce a judgment on such merits, which latter judgment was properly appealable under section 48, Supreme Court Act. (Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting.) (See 6 Q. L. R. 100.) Bellechasse Election Case; Larue v. Deslauriers, v., 91.

9. Controverted election—Service of petition—Preliminary objection—Rule extending time for service—42 Vict. c. 39, s. 10.—The petitioner, on ex parte application to a judge, obtained extension of time for service of petition, but subsequently, on cause shewn, the judge rescinded the order as made improvidently. On a second ex parte application, supported by affidavits, the judge made another order extending the time. Respondent then obtained a rule nisi to set aside the second order, and the rule was made absolute by the full court, on the ground that all the facts on which the second application was based were in the knowledge of the petitioner when the first application was made.—Held, Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting, that the matter at issue was not in the nature of a preliminary objection, and that the rule was not a judgment, order or decision on a preliminary objection from which an appeal would lie to the Supreme Court. Kings Election Case; Dickie v. Woodworth, viii., 192.

[Approved of and followed in the Gloucester Election Case, 8 Can. S. C. R. 204.]

10. Appeal—42 Vict. c. 39, s. 10—Rule absolute in banc to rescind order of a judge—Preliminary objection.—A petition was filed by appellant under the "Dominion Controverted Elections Act, 1874," against the return of respondent. Preliminary objections were filed, and before hearing by consent of the attorney of the appellant, respondent obtained an order for withdrawal of the deposit and removal of petition off the files. The money was withdrawn, but not the petition, and shortly afterwards, the appellant, alleging that the proceedings by his attorney were without his knowledge or consent, a second order rescinding the order so made, and directing that, upon re-payment of the security, the petition be restored, and the appellant should be at liberty to proceed. On appeal from an order of the Supreme Court (N.B.), rescinding the order for restoration, Held, that the judgment appealed from is not a judgment on preliminary objections within the meaning of 42 Vict. c. 39, s. 10, and therefore not appealable. Kings Election Case (8 Can. S. C. R. 192) followed. Gloucester Election Case; Commeau v. Burns, viii., 204.

11. Dominion Controverted Elections Act—R. S. C. c. 9, ss. 32, 33 & 50—Petition—Extension of time—Appeal—Jurisdiction.—An order in a controverted election case made by the court below or a judge thereof not sitting at the time for the trial of the petition, and granting or rejecting an application to dismiss the petition on the ground that the trial had not been commenced within six months from the time of its presentation, is not an order from which an appeal will lie to the Supreme Court of Canada under s. 50 of the Dominion Controverted Elections Act. Fournier and Henry, J.J., dissenting. L'Assomption Case; Gauthier v. Normandeau; Quebec County Case; O'Brien v. Caron, xiv., 429.

12. Order dismissing objection to jurisdiction—Proceeding with trial after lapse of time limit—Appeal.—An order, at the trial of an election petition, overruling an objection to the jurisdiction to proceed with trial as more than six months had elapsed from the presentation of the petition, is appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada. (Gwynne, J. dissented.) Glengarry Election Case; Purcell v. Kennedy, xiv., 453.

13. Controverted election—Discontinuance—Dismissing appeal.—A motion to dismiss an appeal by either party ought properly to be made to the court. Soulanges Election Case, Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 120; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 682.

14. Practice in election cases—Quashing appeal—Motion in chambers.—A motion to quash an election appeal was directed to stand over till hearing of the appeal, as too important a matter to be disposed of on summary application. Charlevoix Election Case, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 695.

15. Appeal from ruling on preliminary objection at trial—Jurisdiction.—Before proceeding with the trial of an election petition the judges overruled an objection that they could not then proceed with the trial of one of two petitions against the appellant because the petitions had not been bracketed as directed by R. S. C. c. 9, s. 30, was not a judgment or decision appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada. Vaudreuil Election Case, xxii., 1.

16. Appeal—Election petition—Preliminary objection—Delay in filing—Objections struck out—Order in chambers—R. S. C. c. 8, s. 50.—The Supreme Court refused to entertain an appeal from the decision of a judge in chambers granting a motion to have preliminary objections to an election petition struck out for not being filed in time. Such decision was not one on preliminary objections within s. 50 of the Controverted Election Act, and if it were, no judgment on the motion could put an end to the petition. West Assiniboia Case, xxvii., 215.

17. Appeal—Preliminary objections—R. S. C. c. 9, ss. 12 and 50—Order dismissing petition—Affidavit of petitioner.—The appeal given to the Supreme Court of Canada by the Controverted Elections Act (R. S. C. c. 9, s. 50), from a decision on preliminary objections to an election petition can only be taken in respect to objections filed under s. 12 of the Act. No appeal lies from a judgment granting a motion to dismiss a petition on the ground that the affidavit of the petitioner was untrue. Marquette Election Case, xxvii., 219.

18. Controverted election—Lost record—Substituted copy—Judgment on preliminary objections—Discretion of court below—Jurisdiction.—The record in the case of a controverted election was produced in the Supreme Court of Canada on appeal against the judgment on preliminary objections and, in retransmission to the court below, the record was lost. Under the procedure in similar cases in the province where the petition was pending, a record was reconstructed in substitution of the lost record, and upon verification as to its correctness, the court below ordered the substituted record to be filed. Thereupon, the respondent in the court below raised preliminary objections traversing the correctness of a clause in the substituted petition which was dismissed by the judgment appealed from.—Held, that, as the judgment appealed from was not one upon a question raised by preliminary objections, nor a judgment upon the merits at the trial, the Supreme Court of Canada had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal, nor to revise the discretion of the court below in ordering the substituted record to be filed. Two Mountains Election Case, xxxiii., 55.

19. Controverted election—Trial of petition—Extension of time—Appeal—Jurisdiction.—On 25th May, 1901, an order was made by Mr. Justice Belanger for the trial of the petition against the appellant's return as a member of the House of Commons for Beauharnois thirty days after judgment should be given by the Supreme Court on an appeal then pending from the decision on preliminary objections to the petition. Such judgment was given on 29th October and on 19th November, on application of the petitioner for instructions, another order was made by the said judge which decided that juridical days only should be counted in computing the said thirty days, stating that such was the meaning of the order of 25th May, and that 6th December would be the date of trial. On the petition coming on for trial on 6th December appellant moved for peremption on the ground that the six months' limit for hearing had expired. The motion was refused and on the merits the election was declared void. On appeal to the Supreme Court.—Held, Davies, J., dissenting, that an appeal would not lie from the order of 19th November; that the judge had power to make such order and its effect was to extend the time for trial to 6th December, and the order for peremption was, therefore, rightly refused. Beauharnois Election Case, xxxii., 111.

20. Appeal — Controverted election—Judgment dismissing petition.] — An appeal does not lie to the Supreme Court of Canada from a judgment dismissing an election petition for want of prosecution within the six months prescribed by s. 32 of the Dominion Controverted Elections Act (R. S. C. c. 9). Richelieu Election Case, xxxii., 118.

3. BALLOTS.

26. Dominion controverted election — Scrutiny—Recount—Rejected ballots—37 Vict. c. 9 ss. 43, 45, 55, 80—41 Vict. c. 6, ss. 5, 6, 10—Neglect by deputy returning officer — Initials on ballots — Objections by county judge.] — In ballot papers containing the names of four candidates, the following ballots were held valid: 1. Ballots containing two crosses, one on the line above the first name, and one on the line above the second name, valid for the two first named candidates; 2. Ballots containing two crosses, one on the line above the first name and one on the line dividing the second and third compartments, valid for the first named candidate; 3. Ballots containing properly made crosses in two of the compartments of the ballot paper, with a slight lead pencil stroke in another compartment; 4. Ballots marked in the proper compartments thus X. The following ballots were held invalid: 1. Ballots with a cross in the right place on the back of the ballot paper, instead of on the printed side; 2. Ballots marked with an x instead of a cross. —On a recount, the appellant, who had a minority of votes according to the return of the returning officer, was declared elected, all the ballots cast at three polling districts, in which the appellant had polled only 331 votes and the respondent 345, having been struck out on the ground that the deputy returning officer had neglected to place his initials upon the backs of the ballots.—On appeal to the Supreme Court (P. E. I.), it was proved that the deputy returning officer had placed his initials on the counterfoil before giving the ballot paper to the voter, and afterwards, previous to his putting the ballot in the ballot box, had detached and destroyed the counterfoil, and that the ballots used were the same as those he had supplied to the voters, and Peters, J., held that the ballots of the three polls ought to be counted, and did count them.—On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, Held, affirming the judgment of Peters, J., that in the present case, the deputy returning officers having had the means of identifying the ballot papers as those supplied to the voters the neglect to put their initials on the backs of these ballot papers not having affected the result of the election, or caused substantial injustice, did not invalidate the election. Monk Election Case [Hodgins' Elec. Cas. 725] approved. Quere, Whether the county judge can object to the validity of a ballot paper when no objection has been made to it by the candidate or his agent, or an elector, in accordance with the provisions of 37 Vict. c. 10, s. 56, at the time of the counting of the votes by the deputy returning officer. Queen's (P. E. I.) Election Case; Jenkins v. Brecken, vii., 247.

27. Voting—Marking of ballots—Scrutiny—Irregularities—Numbering and initialing ballots—Dominion Election Act, 1874, c. 80—Saving clause.] — In a polling division, no statement of votes either signed or unsigned was in the ballot box, and the deputy returning officer had indorsed on each ballot paper the number of the voter on the voter's list. These votes were not included either in the count before the returning officer, the recount by the county judge nor before the judge who tried the election petition. Held, affirming the court below, that the ballots were properly rejected.—Certain ballot papers were objected to as having been imperfectly marked with a cross, or having more than one cross, or having an inverted V, or because the cross was not directly opposite the name of the candidate, there being only two names on the ballot paper and a line drawn dividing the paper in the middle. Held, affirming the ruling at the trial that these ballots were valid.—Per Ritchie, C.J. Whenever the mark evidences an attempt or intention to make a cross, though the cross may be in some respects imperfect, the ballot should be counted, unless from the peculiarity of the mark made it can be reasonably inferred that there was not an honest design simply to make a cross, but that there was also an intention so to mark the paper that it could be identified, in which case the ballot should be rejected. But if the mark made indicates no design of complying with the law, but on the contrary a clear intent not to mark with a cross as the law directs, as, for instance, by making a straight line or round O, then such non-compliance with the law renders the ballot null. The Stepney Case, remarks by Denman, J. (4 O. M. & H. 37) referred to.—During the voting, at the request of one of the agents, who thought the ballot papers were not being properly marked, a deputy returning officer, who had been putting his initials and the numbers on the counterfoil, not on the ballot papers, initialled and numbered about twelve of the ballot papers, but finding he was wrong, at the close of the poll, he, in good faith and with an anxious desire to do his duty, and in such a way as not to allow any person to see the front of the ballot paper, and with the assent of the agents of both parties, took these ballots out of the box and obliterated the marks he had put upon them. Held, Gwynne and Henry, JJ., dissenting, that the irregularities complained of not having infringed upon the secrecy of the ballot, and the ballots being unquestionably those given by the deputy returning officer to the voters, these ballots should be held good, and that said irregularities came within the saving provisions of s. 80 of the Dominion Elections Act, 1874.—Per Henry, J. Although the ballots should be considered bad, the present appellant having acted upon the return and taken his seat, was not in a position to claim that the election was void. Bothwell Election Case; Hawkins v. Smith, viii., 676.

28. Marking ballots—Secrecy of balloting—Public policy—Findings of fact.—Secrecy of the ballot is an absolute rule of public policy, and it cannot be waived.—It will require a clear case to reverse the decision of the trial judge who has found as a question of fact whether there was or was not evidence that the slight pencil marks or dots objected to had been made designedly by the voter.—Also, that where the X is not unmistakably above or below the line separating the names of the candidates the ballot is bad. Haldimand Election Case; Walsh v. Montague, xv., 495.

(a) Betting.

29. The Dominion Elections Act, 1874—Wager by agent with voter—Bribery—Corrupt practice.—An agent of the respondent, (the president of the Conservative Association), made a bet of $5 with one Parker, a Liberal, that he would vote against the Conservative party, and deposited the $5 with a stakeholder, which, after the election, was paid over to Parker. At the trial, the agent denied that he was actuated by any intention to influence the voter, and alleged that the bet was made as a sporting bet on the spur of the moment, and with the expectation that, as he said, Parker would warm up and vote; he admitted that it passed through his mind that some one on the voter's side would make the money good if he voted. Parker said he had formed the resolution not to vote before he made his bet, but the evidence shewed that he did not think lightly of the sum which he was to receive for not voting, his answer being: "Oh! I don't know that $5 would be an insult to any one not to vote." Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (4 Ont. Elec. Cas. 32), that the bet in question was colourable bribery within the enactments of s.s. 1 of s. 92 of the Dominion Elections Act, 1874, and a corrupt practice which avoided the election. West Northumberland Election Case; Henderson v. Guillet, x., 635.

(b) Bribery.

30. Undue influence—Agency—Treating—Statement in speech—Corrupt practices—Promising appointments—Bribery.—Drinking on nomination or polling day is not a corrupt practice sufficient to avoid an election, unless the drink is given by an agent on account of the voter having voted or being about to vote: [39 Vict. c. 9, s. 94 (D.), compared with 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, ss. 4, 23 & 36 (Imp.)]—A candidate, charged by his opponent with having no influence, is not guilty of a corrupt practice, if, in a public speech, in reply to the attack, he states "that he had had influence to procure more appointments for the electors of the county than any member."—Long before the election, R. with members of his family (the P. family), strongly desired to obtain employment for O., his brother-in-law. R., being a political supporter, client and personal friend of L., asked him on different occasions to procure O. a place. The first time he spoke to him with reference to it was about a year previous to the election; but he said nothing on that occasion about his father-in-law (P.). R.'s evidence then went on as follows: "Q. On what occasion did you speak to him (L.) about it? A. It was when the question of an election arose that I spoke to him about it. Q. Last fall? A. Yes. Q. What was the date at which you spoke to him regarding the P. family? A. I cannot positively say, but it was 4 or 5 weeks before there was question of the election. It was then spoken of in the county and out of the county. Q. That was during the election? A. Yes. Q. At all events, it was at the time the election was spoken of? A. Yes. Q. What did you say to him regarding your brother-in-law and your father-in-law? A. I went to see Mr. L. on different occasions, when I had some accounts to give him to collect, and I said to him: 'It would greatly please the P. family if you could procure a place for my brother-in-law.' Q. Did you say to Mr. L. in what way it would please the P. family? A. I said this to him: 'It might, perhaps, prevent them from voting at the coming election.' Q. When you told Mr. L. that the P. family could be useful to him by not voting, what did Mr. L. say? A. He simply told me 'that he would think of me, and that if a vacancy occurred, he would do his best for me.' Mr. L., on the other hand, states: 'He (R.) had asked me, not during the election but many months before, I believe, so far as my memory goes, a year before there was any talk of an election, to try and secure some office or occupation, with a slight remuneration, for his brother-in-law. I told him that I would consider his claims; that he was one of my best supporters; and, if I saw any occasion where it would be possible for me to support his claim, I would do so. The thing remained in that way; and previous to the election particularly, there was never one word said or breathed on that subject between R. and myself. I never asked him to use this promise, and never intended to do so; it was merely because he was a personal friend of mine and a man of respectability and importance that I promised to consider his claim, as I was justified as the representative of the county in doing." R. attended 3 or 4 meetings of respondent's committee, checked lists and reported his acts to members of the committee. Before the election, R. repeated to the P. family what had taken place between him and L. At the time of the election, R., while conversing in the family circle, was informed by one of them "they would vote for the defeated candidate, but would not use their influence." He said "Do as you please; they will use your votes as an objection to giving O. a place." This conversation was not reported by R. to respondent's committee. Held, 1. that the respondent, having a perfectly legitimate motive in promising R. to try and get an office for his brother-in-law—his desire to please a political friend and supporter—was not guilty of a corrupt act in making such promise; and further, that the act of R., in relation to the votes of the P. family, even if a corrupt one, was not committed with the knowledge and consent of the respondent.—2. That whether R. was respondent's agent or not, the conversations which took place between him and the P. family do not sufficiently shew a corrupt intent on his part to influence their vote, and that he is not guilty of bribery or undue influence within the meaning of the statute.—Per Richards, C.J., and Strong, J. (dissenting). There was sufficient evidence to declare R. respondent's agent. Jacques-Cartier Election Case; Somerville v. Laflamme, ii., 216.

31. Controverted Elections Act, 1874 — Gifts for charitable purposes—Payment of debt — Bribery.—Gifts and subscriptions for charitable purposes made by a candidate, in the habit of subscribing liberally to charitable purposes, not proved to have been offered or made as an inducement to, or on any condition that, any body of men, or any individual, should vote or act in any way at an election, or on any express or implied promise or undertaking that such body of men, or individual would, in consequence of such gift or subscription, vote or act in respect to any future election, are not corrupt practices within the meaning of that expression as defined by the Election and Controverted Elections Acts, 1874.—2. That the settlement by payment of a just debt by a candidate to an elector without any reference to the election, is not a corrupt act of bribery, and especially so when the candidate did not ask the elector's support, and the elector neither promised nor gave it. Taschereau and Gwynne, J.J., doubted whether or not the transactions were within the prohibitory provisions of the Act. (See Hodg. Elec. Cas. 751.) South Ontario Election Case; McKay v. Glen, iii., 641.

32. Professional speakers — Voter acting as canvasser — Legal expenses.—Per Fournier, J. Candidates may lawfully employ and pay for the services and expenses of speakers and canvassers, although they may be voters, provided there be no colourable device in the engagement in order to evade the bribery clauses of the Dominion Elections Act, 1874. Per Taschereau and Gwynne, J.J. such payments would be illegal. North Ontario Election Case; Wheeler v. Gibbs, iv., 430.

(NOTE.—See Hodg. Elec. Cas. 785.)

33. The Dominion Elections Act, 1874, ss. 96 & 98—Hiring team — Corrupt practice—“Wilful” offence—Advance of money when not corrupt—Bribery—Constitution of statute.—A charge was that S. bribed G. by payment of a note. The evidence shewed G. had been canvassing for S. a long time before the note fell due, and had always supported him. He was on his way to retire his note when S. asked him to canvass that day, and promised to have the note arranged for. At the same time G. was negotiating with S. for a loan on mortgage, and it was at first stipulated that the amount of this note should be taken out of the mortgage money. S.'s agent, after the election, at the request of G., paid the mortgage money in full and allowed the matter of the note to stand until G. could see S. G. stated that neither the note nor the mortgage transaction influenced him in any way, and that he had to pay the note and did not expect respondent to make him a present of it.—Held, that the evidence did not shew that the advance of money was made in order to induce G. to procure, or to endeavour to procure, the return of the respondent, and was not, therefore, bribery within the meaning of s-s. 3 of s. 62 of the Dominion Elections Act, 1874. Selkirk Election Case; Young v. Smith, iv., 494.

34. Bribery — Clandestine payment—Personal expenses.—Evidence that the candidate clandestinely slipped $5 into a voter's pocket for a pretended service not mentioned to the voter nor included in the statement of personal expenses is sufficient to warrant a finding of personal bribery. Judgment appealed from (6 Q. L. K. 100) affirmed. Bellechasse Election Case; Larue v. Deslauriers, v., 91.

35. The Dominion Elections Act, 1874, ss. 82, 83 & 84—Unauthorized employment of policemen—Colourable device — Liability for acts of sub-agent—Bribery.—On a charge of bribery against T. and A., the trial judge found that A. had been directed by T., an agent of P. to employ persons to act as policemen at a polling place on polling day, and that with money given to him for this purpose A. had bribed four voters, previously supporters of C., but held that A. was not an agent of P., and therefore his acts could not void the election. On appeal, Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (10 R. L. 651), that as there was no excuse or justification for employing the voters as policemen; that their employment was merely colourable, and, having changed their votes in consequence of the moneys so paid to them, and P., the sitting member, being responsible alike for the acts of A., the sub-agent, as for the acts of T., the agent, and they having been guilty of corrupt practices, the election was void. Taschereau and Gwynne, J.J., held that A., the sub-agent alone, had been guilty of bribery. Charlevoix Election Case; Cimon v. Perrault, v., 133.

36. Corrupt practices—Gift towards building town hall — Charity or liberality —

Bribery — Candidate's knowledge.]—Before setting out on a canvassing tour F. placed in the hands of B., who was not his financial agent, $100 to be used for the purpose of the election. While visiting a part of the county with which he was not much acquainted, but with which B. was well acquainted, they paid an electioneering visit to K., a leading man in that locality, who indicated to B. his dissatisfaction with F. and stated that, although he would vote for the Liberal party, he would not exert himself as much as in former elections. F. then went out, and B. asked his host, "Do you want any money for your church?" received a negative reply, and added, "Do you want any money for anything?" K. then answered, "If you have any money to spare there are plenty of things we want it for. We are building a town hall and we are scarce of money." B. said, "Will $25 do?" K. answered, "Whatever you like, it is nothing to me." The money was left on the table. Then, when bidding the appellant and B. good-bye, K. said, "Gentlemen, remember that this money has no influence as far as I am concerned with regard to the election." F. did not repudiate the act of B.. This $25 was not included in any account by F. or his financial agent, and large sums were corruptly expended in the election by the agent of F. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the giving of the $25 by B. to K. was not an act of liberality or charity, but a gift out of F.'s money, with a view to influence a voter favourably to his candidature, and that, although the money was not given in F.'s presence, yet it was given with his knowledge, and therefore that he had been personally guilty of a corrupt practice. Megantic Election Case; Frechette v. Goulet, ix., 279.

37. Election expenses — Corrupt practice — Promise to pay bills of previous election.]—The payment by an agent of $147 to a voter claiming the same to be due for expenses at a previous election and refusing to vote until the amount was paid, is a corrupt practice. Judgment appealed from (10 Q. L. R. 247) affirmed. Selkirk Election Case (4 Can. S. C. R. 494) followed. Levis Election Case; Belleau v. Dessault, xi., 133.

38. Bribery — Inducing elector to abstain from voting—Corrupt loan by agent.]—Petitioner charged that H., an agent of the candidate elected, corruptly offered and paid $5 to induce a voter to refrain from voting. H. was in the habit of assisting this voter, and being told by him that he contemplated going on a visit a few days before the election, and being away on election day, H. promised him $5 towards his expenses. Shortly after the voter went to H.'s house to borrow a coat for his journey, and H.'s brother gave him $5. He went away and was absent on election day. Held, that the offer and payment of the $5 formed one transaction and constituted a corrupt practice under the Election Act. Haldimand Election Case; Colter v. Glenn, xvii., 170.

39. Corrupt practices — Provincial election fund—Promissory note—Nullity.]—In an action on a promissory note the evidence shewed that its proceeds were given to an election agent to be used as a portion of an election fund controlled by the maker. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 5 Q. B. 332), that the transaction was illegal under 38 Vict. c. 7 (now R. S. Q., art 425), which makes void any contract, promise or understanding in any way relating to an election under that Act, and the plaintiff could not recover. Dansereau v. St. Louis xviii., 587.

(d) Conveyance to Polls.

49. Hiring teams — Construction of Dominion Elections Act, 1874, s. 98.]—Evidence shewed that a team was hired some days before the opening of the poll by an agent of S. for the purpose of bringing voters to the polls. It went for the voters, but returned the day before polling day without the voters and was paid for. Held, that the term "six preceding sections" in s. 98 "Dominion Elections Act, 1874," means the six sections immediately preceding the 98th, and, therefore, the hiring of a team to convey voters to the polls, prohibited by s. 96, was a corrupt practice within the meaning of s. 98. (Henry, J., dissenting.) (Followed in Levis Election Case, xi., 133.) Selkirk Election Case; Young v. Smith, iv., 494.

50. Conveying voters to poll—Railway pass—37 Vict. c. 9, ss. 92, 96, 98 & 100—Powers of limited agent.]—Four charges of bribery were relied upon, three of which were dismissed for insufficient evidence as to agency. As to the fourth, the facts were: L., agent of C., gave electors employed on steamboats free transportation tickets over the N. S. Railway from Montreal to vote at the election, without any promise exacted from or given by them. The tickets shewed on their face that they had been paid for, but L. had received them gratuitously. The trial judge found that the tickets had not been paid for, and were given unconditionally, and therefore held it was not a corrupt act.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, Fournier and Henry, JJ., dissenting, that taking unconditionally and gratuitously of a voter to the poll by a railway company, or an individual, whatever his occupation may be, or giving a voter a free pass over a railway, or by boat, or other conveyance, if unaccompanied by any conditions or stipulations that might affect the voter's action in reference to the vote to be given, is not prohibited by 37 Vict. c. 9 (D.).—2. That if a ticket, although given unconditionally to a voter by an agent of the candidate, has been paid for, then such a practice would be unlawful under s. 96, and by virtue of s. 98 a corrupt practice, and would avoid the election.—3. That an agent who is not a general agent, but an agent with powers expressly limited, cannot bind the candidate by anything done beyond the scope of his authority. Berthier Election Case; Genereux v. Cuthbert, ix., 102.

51. Dominion Elections Act, 1874, ss. 96, 98—Promise to pay debts for a previous election—Hiring carters—Conveying voters to poll—Corrupt practices.]—Hiring and paying of carters by an agent to convey to polls voters who are known to be supporters of the agent's candidate is a corrupt practice. Selkirk Election Case; Young v. Smith (4 Can. S. C. R. 494) followed.—Judgment appealed from (10 Q. L. R. 247) affirmed. Levis Election Case; Belleau v. Dussault, xi., 133.

(e) Intimidation.

52. Dominion Elections Act, 1874, s. 95—Acts of agents—Clergymen using threats—Undue influence.]—When clergymen, agents for a candidate, have been guilty of undue influence the election is void.—Sermons and threats by parish priests may constitute acts of undue influence, and a contravention of the Dominion Elections Act, 1874, s. 95.—Per Ritchie, J. A clergyman has no right, in the pulpit or out of it, by threatening any damage, temporal or spiritual, to restrain the liberty of a voter so as to compel him into voting or abstaining from voting otherwise than as he freely wills. Charlevoix Election Case; Brassard v. Langevin, i., 145.

53. Dominion Elections Act, 1874, s. 95—Intimidation—Undue influence—Conspiracy—Corrupt practices—Marking ballots—Identification.]—It was charged that the respondent personally, as well as acting by his agents, did undertake and conspire to impede, prevent, and otherwise interfere with the free exercise of the franchise by voters, and that, in furtherance of a scheme which they knew to be illegal, they did, in fact, so impede, prevent, and interfere with the franchise of certain voters, by getting their ballots marked, rendered identifiable, and consequently void, whereby the franchise of these voters s. c. d.—17.

was unjustifiably interfered with.—At a previous election the respondent had been defeated by a majority of three votes, and the election having been contested was set aside, and certain voters were reported by the judge as having been guilty of corrupt practices, under s. 104 of the Dominion Elections Act. At a public meeting before the election C., the respondent's agent, to intimidate these persons and prevent them from voting, in a speech, threatened them with punishment if they voted; and subsequently printed notices to the same effect were sent to these voters. On the polling day P., who had been appointed deputy returning officer, on the distinct understanding with, and promise made to, the returning officer that he would not mark the ballots of these voters, consulted with C., and on his advice and in collusion with him marked the ballots of certain of these voters.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (7 Legal News, 220) that the election was void by reason of the attempted intimidation practiced by C., the respondent's agent; and by reason also of the conspiracy between the said agent and the deputy returning officer to interfere with the free exercise of the franchise of voters, violations of s. 98 of the Dominion Elections Act, 1874, and corrupt practices under s. 98 of the said Act. *Soulanges Election Case; Cholette v. (f) Subornation.

55. Agent—Authority of scrutineer—Wilfully inducing voter to take false oath—Corrupt practice—Farmers' sons—Oath T.]—A scrutineer appointed for a polling place at an election under the written authority of a candidate is an agent for whose illegal acts at the polling place the candidate will be answerable.—The insisting by such scrutineer of the taking of the farmers' sons' oath T by a hesitating voter whose vote is objected to and who is registered on the list as a farmer's son and not as an owner, when, as a matter of fact, the voter's father had died previous to the final revision of the list leaving the son owner of the property, is a wilful inducing or endeavouring to induce the voter to take a false oath, so as to amount to a corrupt practice within R. S. C. c. 8, ss. 90, 91, and such corrupt practice will avoid the election under s. 93. Strong and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting.—Per Strong, J. That reading s. 41 in conjunction with s. 45, s.-s. 2, and the oath T in schedule A. of R. S. C. c. 8, an inquiry on a scrutiny as to the qualification of a farmer's son at the time of voting is admissible, and if it is shewn that a number of unqualified farmers' sons' votes larger than the majority were admitted the election will be void. (g) Treating.

56. Corrupt treating—Trivial act.]—During an election liquor was given to an elector, who at the same time was asked to vote for a particular candidate.—Held, that this was corrupt treating under R. S. C. c. 8, s. 86. West Prince Election Case, xxvii., 241.

(h) Trivial Acts.

59. Corrupt practices — Trivial or unimportant acts — Benefit of statute.—Though the only corrupt act proved against a sitting member was of a trivial and unimportant character, and he had at public meetings warned his supporters against the commission of illegal acts, yet as such act was committed by an agent whom he had taken with him to canvass a certain locality, and there were circumstances which should have aroused his suspicion, he should have given a like warning to this agent, and not having done so he was not entitled to the benefit of the amendment to The Controverted Elections Act in 54 & 55 Vict. c. 20, s. 19. West Prince Election Case, xxvii., 241.

5. DEPOSIT.

60. Controverted election — Appeal — Dissolution of Parliament—Petition lapsing—Return of deposit.—Between the appeal from a decision on 8th November, 1890, in a controverted election case and the sittings of the court Parliament was dissolved, and by effect of dissolution the petition dropped. Respondent, in order to have costs out of the deposit in court moved before a judge of the Supreme Court in chambers (on reference from the full court) to dismiss the appeal for want of prosecution, or to have the record remitted to the court below. The petitioner claimed the deposit should be returned to him.—Patterson, J., held that the final determination of the right to costs being kept in suspense by the appeal, the motion should be refused; but inasmuch as the deposit in the court below ought to be disposed of by an order of that court, the registrar of the Supreme Court should certify to the court below that the appeal was not heard, and that the petition dropped by reason of dissolution of Parliament on 2nd February, 1891. [NOTE.—The court below refused to pay out the deposit, and on motion by petitioner the Supreme Court (being shewn that the order by Patterson, J., had not been appealed from) ordered on 15th March, 1893, (see No. 63, infra), a certificate to issue reciting the proceedings that took place and declaring that petitioner was entitled to the repayment to him of the deposit, both as security for costs of petition and as security for costs of appeal.] Halton Election Case; Lush v. Waldie, xix., 557.

61. Preliminary objections — Service—Security — Receipt — R. S. C. c. 9, ss. 8 &

9, s.-ss. e & g and s. 10.—Two members are returned for an electoral district in P. E. Island. With a petition against the return of the two sitting members, petitioner deposited $2,000 with the deputy prothonotary, and in the notice of presentation of petition and deposit of security stated that he had given security of $1,000 for each respondent "in all $2,000" duly deposited with the prothonotary as required by statute. The receipt was signed by the deputy prothonotary appointed by the judges, and acknowledged receipt of $2,000, without stating that $1,000 was deposited as security for each respondent. The petition was served personally on the respondents at Ottawa.—Held, 1. That personal service of the petition at Ottawa, without an order of the court, is a good service under s. 10 of the Controverted Elections Act.—2. That there being at the time of the presentation of the petition security of $1,000 for the costs of each respondent the security given was sufficient.—3. That payment to the deputy prothonotary was a valid payment. Queen's and Prince (P. E. I.) Election Cases, xx., 26.

62. Controverted election — Preliminary objections — Deposit of security — Legal tender — R. S. C. c. 9, s. 9 (f.).—The preliminary objection was that the security and deposit receipt were illegal, null and void, the receipt being:—"The security required by law had been given on behalf of the petitioners by a sum of $1,000 in a Dominion note, to wit, a bank note of $1,000 (Dominion of Canada) bearing the number 2914, deposited in our hands by the said petitioners, constituting a legal tender under the statute of the Dominion of Canada now in force." The deposit was in fact a Dominion note of $1,000. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the deposit and receipt complied sufficiently with s. 9 (f) of the Dominion Controverted Elections Act. Argenteuil Election Case—Christie v. Morrison, xx., 194.

63. Dissolution of Parliament—Abatement of proceedings — Return of deposits — Payment out of court below—Practice.—In the interval between the taking of an appeal from the decision in the matter of a controverted election, and the sittings of the Supreme Court of Canada, when the appeal was to have been heard, Parliament was dissolved, and the petition was dropped and declared to have abated in consequence, by the judgment of His Lordship Mr. Justice Patterson, sitting as a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada in chambers (19 Can. S. C. R. 557). During a subsequent session of the Supreme Court, a motion was made on behalf of the petitioner for an order directing payment out of the court below of the deposit made in that court as security for the costs of the petition, and also of the further deposit made in said court below as security for the costs of the appeal to the Supreme Court. Held, that the petitioner was entitled to a special order declaring and ordering that the moneys so deposited should be paid to the petitioner out of the said court below. Halton Election Case; Lush v. Waldie, 15th March, 1893.

64. Deposit of security—Payment to acting officer.

6. DISCRETIONARY ORDER.

65. Service of petition—Extension of time—Discretion of judge—R. S. C. c. 9, s. 10—Practice—Preliminary objections.—An order extending time for service of an election petition filed at Halifax from five days to fifteen days, on the ground that the respondent was at Ottawa, is a proper order for the judge to make in the exercise of his discretion under s. 10 of c. 9, R. S. C.—Semble, per Ritchie, C.J., and Henry, J., that the court below had power to make rules for the service of an election petition out of the jurisdiction.—Per Strong, J. An extremely strong case should be shewn to induce the court to allow an appeal from the judgment of the court below on preliminary objections. Shelburne Election Case; Robertson v. Laurie, xiv., 258.

7. DISCONTINUANCE.

66. Election appeal — Discontinuance — Practice — Certificate of registrar — New writ.—Appellant was unseated for corrupt practices by agents, and upon appeal the case was inscribed for the May session, 1892. When the appeal was called, no one appearing for appellant, counsel for respondent stated that he had been served by appellant's solicitor when a notice of discontinuance, and the appeal was struck off the list.—The notice of discontinuance having been filed in the registrar's office, he certified to the Speaker of the House of Commons that by reason of such discontinuance, the decision of the trial judges and their report, were left unaffected by proceedings taken in the Supreme Court. The Speaker subsequently issued a new writ. L'Assomption Election Case; Gauthier v. Brien, xxi., 29.

67. Controverted election—Change of solicitors—Payment of costs—Abandonment of appeal—Stay of proceedings on appeal—Peremptory order for hearing.—While an appeal was pending, on 1st October, 1901, motion was made for change of solicitors of record and was granted on deposit being made of $400 to secure former solicitor's costs. Thereupon counsel for appellant stated that an agreement for postponement of the hearing had been come to and the order for postponement was made accordingly. Beaudin, K.C., then asked leave to present a petition to have a new petitioner appointed on the ground that the postponement was the result of fraudulent collusion between the new solicitors and the former petitioner who have been paid to abandon proceedings. Leave for the application was granted after notice in order that, if collusion was proved, the order to postpone might be rescinded. On 22nd November, another motion to change solicitors was made and granted, on consent of parties, the hearing being ordered to be peremptorily fixed for the term then in session and not later than 29th November. This date for hearing was fixed by the court suo motu. On 29th November appellant's counsel applied to stay proceedings till costs of the solicitor on the record from 1st October to 22nd November had been paid. The order was refused and the hearing ordered to proceed forthwith. Upon appellant's counsel stating that the case could not be distinguished from the Two Mountains Election Case (31 Can. S. C. R. 437), the appeal was dismissed with costs. Terrebonne Election Case, 29th November, 1901.

8. DISQUALIFICATION.

70. House of Commons—Eligible candidate—Legislative assembly — Disqualification — Contract with the Crown—39 Vict. c. 3, ss. 4 & 8 (P. E. I.).—By instrument under the hand and seal of the Lieutenant-Governor of P. E. I., C. was appointed ferryman for the term of 3 years, pursuant to the Acts relating to ferries, and the commission provided that C. should be paid a subsidy of $95 for each year of said term. C. had given to the Government a bond with two sureties for the performance of his contract. C. assigned to P. one-fourth interest in the ferry contract, and it was agreed that one-fourth of the profits should be paid over by C. to P. At the time of the agreement P. was a member of the House of Assembly of P. E. I. Subsequently P. was returned as a member elect for the House of Commons for Prince County, P. E. I., and upon his return being contested, Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that, by the agreement with C., P. became a person holding and enjoying a contract or agreement with Her Majesty within the meaning of 39 Vict. c. 3, s. 4 (P. E. I.), which disqualified him and rendered him ineligible for election to the House of Assembly or to sit or vote in the same, by s. 8, to be read with s. 4, his seat in the Assembly became vacated, and he was therefore eligible for election as a member of the House of Commons. Prince Election Case; Hackett v. Perry, xiv., 265.

71. Corrupt practices — Conviction of respondent — Equal division of opinion on appeal.

See No. 128, infra.

9. EVIDENCE.

72. Candidate's evidence — Multiplicity of charges—Weight of evidence.—The petition in the usual form, charged bribery and corruption on behalf of respondent and his agents; and treating by agents on nomination and polling days. The bill of particulars formulated 98 charges, but, in appeal, they only insisted upon 17, of which 7 attached personally to the respondent, and 10 to his agents. Respondent was examined on his own behalf, and, in all, 280 witnesses were heard.—The petition was dismissed on all the charges and on appeal to the Supreme Court against this judgment it was unanimously affirmed, except as to the charge of bribery and undue influence by one Robert, and — Held, 1. That the evidence of a candidate on his own behalf, is admissible in the Province of Quebec. — 2. That when there are a multiplicity of charges each charge should be treated as a separate charge, and, if proved by one witness only, and rebutted by another, the united weight of the testimony, without accompanying or collateral circumstances to aid the court in its appreciation of the contradictory statements, cannot overcome the effect of the evidence in rebuttal, and that, in such a case, the candidate is entitled to the presumption of innocence to turn the scale in his favour. Jacques-Cartier Election Case; Somerville v. Laflamme, ii., 216.

73. Dominion controverted election—Preliminary objections—Onus probandi—Costs.—The petition complained of the return of G. for the House of Commons and was met by preliminary objections, that the petitioners were not electors, nor qualified to vote at the election. A day was fixed for hearing preliminary objections, no evidence was given upon them, and they were dismissed, following Duval v. Casgrain (19 L. C. Jur. 16), on the ground that the onus probandi was on the respondent to support such objections.—On appeal, Fournier, Henry, and Gwynne, JJ., were of opinion that the onus probandi was on the appellant, who by his preliminary objections had affirmed the disqualification of the petitioner. Contra, Ritchie, C.J., and Strong and Taschereau, JJ. The court being equally divided, the judgment of the court below stood affirmed without costs. Megantic Election Case; Frechette v. Goulet, viii., 169.

74. Shorthand notes of evidence—Extension of stenographic notes.—The shorthand notes of the stenographer employed by the court to take down the evidence were not extended in his handwriting, but were signed by him. Held, that the notes of evidence could not be objected to. Megantic Election Case; Frechette v. Goulet, ix., 279.

75. Election expenses—Accounting for expenditure—Presumption.—When an agent of a candidate receives and spends for election purposes large sums of money, and does not render an account of such expenditure, it will create a presumption that corrupt practices have been resorted to. Judgment appealed from (10 Q. L. R. 247) affirmed. Levis Election Case; Belleau v. Dessault, xi., 133.

10. EXPENSES.

81. Canvassers—Promise to pay legal expenses—Voter acting as professional speaker—Dominion Elections Act, 1874, s. 3 s. 92.—A promise by a candidate to pay the travelling expenses of a voter who acted as professional speaker on his behalf provided it were legal to do so, is not a breach of s. 3 s. 92 of The Dominion Elections Act 1874. Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting.—Per Fournier, J. Candidates may legally employ and pay for the expenses and services of canvassers and speakers, although they may be voters, provided the agreement be not a colourable one intended to evade the bribery clauses of the Dominion Elections Act, 1874.—Per Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ. Such a payment would be illegal. (See Hodg. Elec. Case, 785.) North Ontario Election Case; Wheeler v. Gibbs, iv., 430.

82. Personal expenses of candidate—Statement under 37 Vict. c. 9, s. 123.—Per Taschereau, J. The personal expenses of candidates should be included in the statement of election expenses required to be furnished to the returning officer under 37 Vict. c. 9, s. 123. (Fournier and Henry, JJ., expressed no opinion on the merits. Judgment appealed from (6 O. L. R. 100) affirmed.)—Bellechase Election Case; Larue v. Deslauriers, v., 91.

11. FINDINGS IN TRIAL COURT.

83. Bribery—Personal expenses—Clandestine payment to voter.—The main charge was bribery of one A., and the trial judge found that the appellant had underhandedly slipped into a voter's pocket $5 for a pretended purpose, not mentioned to the recipient; that this amount was not included in the published return of expenses required by the Election Act, and was bribery. Held, that an appellate court ought not to reverse the findings of fact of the trial judge unless the court is convinced beyond doubt that his conclusions are erroneous, and that the evidence in this case warranted the finding that appellant had been guilty of personal bribery. Judgment appealed from (6 Q. L. R. 100) affirmed. Bellechase Election Case; Larue v. Deslauriers, v., 91.

84. Appeal on matters of fact—Bribery—Corrupt intent.—Among charges of bribery and treating decided was the following:—One M., a blacksmith, who was a neighbour of D., had in his possession for two years several pieces of broken saws which D. had left with him for the purpose of making scrapers out of them on shares. A few days prior to nomination D. went into M.'s shop, and for sharpening a scraper told M. to keep the old pieces of saws which he might still have. M. in his evidence answered: "Q. He did not speak of your vote? A. No. Q. What has he said? A. He said that Magnan was coming like mustard after dinner. Q. Dugas did not ask you for whom you were? A. No. Q. Do you swear on the oath D. left with you these two pieces of saws in question with the intent to buy (bribe) you? A. I think so, I cannot say that it is sure, I don't know his mind (son idée). It is all I can swear. Q. It has not changed your opinion? A. No. Q. For whom were you in the last election?"

A. For Magnan." The scrapers were worth about $2, and of no use to D., and no other conversation took place afterwards between the parties. The trial judge found no intention to corrupt M. Held, that the Supreme Court on appeal will not, on mere matters of fact, reverse the findings of the judge who tries an election petition, unless the evidence is of a nature to convey an irresistible conviction that the judgment is not only wrong, but erroneous; that the evidence in support of the charge of bribing M., as well as of the other charges of bribery and treating, was not such as would justify an appellate court in drawing inferences that D. intended to corrupt the voters. Montcalm Election Case; Magnan v. Dugas, ix., 93.

85. Appeal — Findings of fact.] — As to three charges, the court was of opinion that on the facts the judgment of the court below was not clearly wrong and should therefore not be reversed. Berthier Election Case; Genereux v. Cuthbert, ix., 102.

86. Secrecy of ballot — Marking ballot — Reversal on questions of fact—Findings of trial judge.]—A case must be clear in order to obtain reversal of findings of the trial judge on facts as to marks on ballots. Hal-dimand Election Case, xv., 495.

87. Controverted election. — Reviewing inferences on appeal — Evidence — Loan for travelling expenses—Corrupt intent—R. S. C. c. 8, ss. 88, 91; s. 84 (a) (c)—Free railway tickets—Bribery.]—G., a voter and supporter of respondent, holding a free railway ticket to go to Listowel to vote and wanting $2 for his expenses while away from home, asked for the loan of the money from W., a bartender and friend. W. not having the money at the time applied to S., an agent of respondent, who was present in the room, for the money, telling him he wanted it to lend to G., to enable him to go to Listowel to vote. S., the agent, lent the money to W., who handed it over to G. W. returned the $2 to S. the day before the trial. The judges at the trial held it a bona fide loan by S. to W. Held, Strong and Patterson, JJ., dissenting, reversing the judgment appealed from, that as the decision of the trial judges depended on the inference drawn from the evidence their decision could be reviewed in appeal, and that the proper inference to be drawn from the undisputed facts in the present case was that the loan by S. to W. was a mere colourable transaction by S. to pay the travelling expenses of G. within the provisions of s. 88 of The Dominion Elections Act and a corrupt practice sufficient to avoid the election under s. 91 of the Act.—Strong, J., dissenting, was of opinion that there was no evidence that the loan was made to G. with the corrupt intent of inducing him to vote for respondent.—Patterson, J., dissenting on the ground that as the decision of the court below depended on the credibility of the witnesses it ought not to be interfered with.—Per Strong and Patterson, JJ., affirming the judgment appealed from, that upon the evidence, which is reviewed in the judgments, the G. T. R. tickets issued at Toronto and Stratford for transportation of voters by rail to the polls in this case were free tickets, and that as the free tickets had been given to voters who were well known supporters of respondent, prepared to vote for him and for him alone, if they voted at all, it did not amount to paying the travelling expenses of voters within the meaning of s. 88 of The Dominion Elections Act. Berthier Election Case (9 Can. S. C. R. 102) followed. North Perth Election Case; Campbell v. Grieve, xx., 331.

88. Bribery — Promise to procure employment by candidate—Corrupt practice—Finding of the trial judges—Interference on appeal—R. S. C. c. 8, s. 94 (b).]—On a charge that appellant had been guilty personally of a corrupt practice by promising to W. to endeavour to procure him a situation in order to induce him to vote, and that such promise was subsequently carried into effect, the trial judges held on the evidence that the charge had been proved. The promise was charged as having been made in Thorold on 28th February, 1891. It was proved that W. some time before the trial made a declaration upon which the charge was based, at the instance of the solicitor for petitioner, and had got for such declaration employment in Montreal from the C. P. R. Co. until the trial took place, and W. swore that the promise had been made on 17th February. G. (appellant), although denying the charge, admitted in his examination that he intimated to W. that he would assist him, and there was evidence that after the election G. wrote to W. and did endeavour to procure him the situation, but the letters were not put in evidence, having been destroyed by W. at the request of appellant. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that as the evidence of W. was in part corroborated by the evidence of appellant, the conclusion by the trial judges was not wrong, still less so entirely erroneous as to justify the court as an appellate tribunal in reversing the decision of the court below on the questions of fact involved. Welland Election Case; German v. Rothery, xx., 376.

89. Findings in judgment appealed from—Vague general terms.] — The judgment appealed from did not contain any special findings of fact nor any statement that any of the charges mentioned in the particulars were found proved, but stated generally that corrupt acts had been committed by respondent's agents without his knowledge, and declared that he had not been duly elected and that the election was void. On an appeal on the ground that the judgment was too general and vague, Held, that the general finding that corrupt acts had been proved was a sufficient compliance with the terms of the statute R. S. C. c. 9, s. 43. Pontiac Election Case; Murray v. Lyon, xx., 626.

12. LIBEL AND SLANDER.

90. Libel—Slander—Privileged statements — Public interest — Charging corruption against political candidate — Challenging to sue—Costs.]—Both parties were candidates for election and present at a public meeting when defendant stated that he had bribed the plaintiff at a former election to retire for money paid him. He afterwards printed the statement in a newspaper and on "doggers" circulated through the constituency with a printed challenge to the plaintiff and others implicated to justify their innocence of the charges by a suit for damages, offering to deposit costs of suit. Curran, J., gave a verdict for plaintiff which was reversed on appeal. The reversal of the trial court judgment was affirmed by the Supreme Court, without costs, the Chief Justice dissenting. Gauthier v. Jeannotte, xxviii., 590.

13. PETITION, 91-122.

- (a) Status of Petitioner, 91-99.
- (b) Filing of Petition, 100-104.
- (c) Form of Petition, 105-111.
- (d) Service of Petition, 112-122.

(a) Status of Petitioner.

91. Controverted election—Status of petitioner—Evidence—Filing list of electors.—At the trial the returning officer, who was also the registrar of the county, and secretary of Inverness, was called as witness, and produced, in his official capacity, the original list of electors for the Township of Inverness, and proved that the name of one of the petitioners, whom he personally knew, was on the list. The original document was retained by the witness, and, as neither of the parties requested that the list should be filed, the judge made no order to that effect. The status of the other petitioners was proved in the same way. Held, that there was sufficient evidence that the petitioners were persons who had a right to vote at the election to which the petition related under 37 Vict. c. 10, s. 7 (D.) Megantic Election Case; Frechette v. Goulet, ix., 279.

92. Status of petitioner—Onus probandi—Costs.—By preliminary objections respondent claimed the petition should be dismissed because the petitioner had no right to vote at the election. On the day fixed for proof and hearing of the preliminary objections the petitioner adduced no proof and the respondent declared that he had no evidence and the preliminary objections were dismissed. Held, per Sir W. J. Ritchie, C.J., and Taschereau and Patterson, J.J., that the onus probandi was upon the petitioner to establish his status, and that the appeal should be allowed and the election petition dismissed.—Per Strong, J., that the onus probandi was upon the petitioner, but in view of the established jurisprudence the appeal should be allowed without costs.—Fournier and Gwynne, J.J., contra, were of opinion that the onus probandi was on the respondent. Megantic Election Case (8 Can. S. C. R. 169) discussed. Stanstead Election Case; Rider v. Snow, xx., 12.

See No. 94, infra.

93. Description of petitioner—Additions—Redundancy of nomenclature.—A petition simply stated that it was the petition of "A. C." of Lochiel, County of Glengarry, without describing his occupation, and it was shewn by affidavit that there are two or three other persons of that name on the voters' list for that township. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the petition should not be dismissed for the want of a more particular description of the petitioner. Glengarry Election Case; McLennan v. Chisholm, xx., 38.

See No. 105, infra.

94. Election petition—Status of petitioner—Onus probandi.—The appellant filed preliminary objections as to the status of the petitioners. When the parties were heard upon the merits of the preliminary objections no evidence was given as to the status of the petitioners and the court dismissed the objections. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the onus was on the petitioners to prove their status as voters. Stanstead Election Case (20 Can. S. C. R. 12) followed. Bellechase Election Case; Amyot v. Labrecque, xx., 181.

95. Preliminary objections—Reservation of question in judgment—Res judicata—Failure to appeal—Status of petitioner—Practice—R. S. C. c. 9, ss. 12 & 13—Evidence.—The preliminary objection was to the status of petitioner, and copies of the voters' lists were filed but no other evidence offered. The court set aside the objection "without prejudice to the right of the respondent if so advised to raise the same objection at the trial of the petition." No appeal was taken from this decision and the case went to trial, where the objection was renewed but was overruled by the trial judges who held that they had no right to entertain it, and on the merits they allowed the petition and voided the election. The appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada was on the ground that the onus was on petitioner to prove status, which had been done. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the objection raising the question of the qualification of the petitioner was properly raised by preliminary objection and disposed of, and the judges at the trial had no jurisdiction to entertain such objection. Prescott Election Case; Proulx v. Fraser, xx., 196.

96. Controverted election—Evidence—Status of petitioner—Preliminary objection—Dominion Elections Act, R. S. C. c. 8, ss. 30 (b), 31, 33, 41, 54, 58 & 65—Electoral Franchise Act, R. S. C. c. 5, s. 32.—Held, affirming the decision of Gill, J., Gwynne and Patterson, J.J., dissenting, that where the petitioner's status in a controverted election is objected to by preliminary objection, such status should be established by the production of the voters' list actually used at the election, or a copy thereof certified by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, and the production at enquête of a copy certified by the revising officer of the list of voters upon which petitioner's name appears, but which has not been compared with the voters' list actually used at said election is insufficient proof. Richelieu Election Case; Paradis v. Bruneau, xxi., 168.

See No. 97, infra.

97. Election petition—Copy of voters' list—Status of petitioner—Certificate.—On the hearing of preliminary objections to an election petition to prove the status of the petitioner a list of voters was offered with a certificate of the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, which, after stating that said list was a true copy of that finally revised for the district, proceeded as follows: "And is also a true copy of a list of voters which was used at said polling division at and in relation to an election of a member of the House of Commons of Canada for the said electoral district . . . which original list of voters was returned to me by the returning officer for said electoral district in the same plight and condition as it now appears, and said original list of voters is now on record in my office." Held, that this was, in effect, a certificate that the list offered in evidence was a true copy of a paper returned to the Clerk of the Crown by the returning officer as the very list used by the deputy returning officer at the polling district in question, and that such list remained of record in possession of said clerk. It was then a sufficient certificate of the paper offered being a true copy of the list actually used at the election. Richelieu Election Case (21 Can. S. C. R. 168) followed. Winnipeg Election Case; Macdonald Election Case, xxvii., 201.

98. Controverted election—Preliminary objections—Status of petitioner—61 Vict. c. 14; 63 & 64 Vict. c. 12 (D.)—59 Vict. c. 9, s. 272 (Que.)—Dominion franchise—Construction of statute.—The principal contention on preliminary objections to a controverted election petition was that the petitioner had been guilty of corrupt practices before and during the election, and that, by the effect of the statutes 61 Vict. c. 14 and 63 & 64 Vict. c. 12, the Dominion Franchise Act was repealed, and the provisions of the "Quebec Elections Act" regulating the franchise in the Province of Quebec substituted therefor so as, thereby, to deprive the petitioner of a right to vote under 59 Vict. c. 9, s. 272, and being so deprived of a vote that he had no status as petitioner. In the Election Court, evidence was taken on issues joined and the judge, holding that no corrupt practice upon the part of the petitioner had been proved, dismissed the preliminary objections. On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada: Held, that, as corrupt practices had not been proved, the question as to the effect of the statutes did not arise.—Per Gwynne, J. The amendment to the Dominion Franchise Act by 61 Vict. c. 14 (D.) and 63 & 64 Vict. c. 12 (D.) has not introduced into the Act the provisions of s. 272 of "The Quebec Elections Act" so as to deprive a person properly on the list of voters for a Dominion election of his right to vote at such election. Beauharnois Election Case; Loy v. Poirier, xxxi., 447.

(b) Filing of Petition.

100. Dominion Controverted Elections Act, 1874, s. 8, s.s. 2—Cross petition—Time for filing.—V. the sitting member, against whom a petition had been filed by L., presented a cross-petition under s. 8, s.s. 2, of the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, 1874, which was not filed within thirty days after the publication of the return by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, but within the fifteen days after the service of the petition. A preliminary objection, that the cross-petition was filed too late, was maintained by Meredith, C.J. Held, on appeal, that the sitting member could not file a cross-petition, within the fifteen days mentioned in the last part of s.s. 2 of s. 8, against a person who was an unsuccessful candidate and is a petitioner.—Per Fournier, Taschereau and Gwynne, J.J. The extra fifteen days is given only when a petition has been filed against the sitting member, alleging corrupt practices after the return. (Henry, J., dissenting.) Montmorency Election Case; Vulin v. Langlois, iii., 90.

101. Dominion controverted election—Ontario Judicature Act, 1881—Presentation of petition—Court.—The election petition against the election and return of the respondent was intitled in the High Court of Justice, Queen's Bench Division, presented to the official in charge, filed and entered in the books of that office. A preliminary objection was taken that the High Court of Justice had no jurisdiction. Held, Henry and Taschereau, J.J., dissenting, reversing the judgment of Cameron, J., (1 O. R. 43), that the Ontario Judicature Act, 1881, makes the High Court of Justice and its divisions a continuation of the former courts merged in it, and that those courts still exist under new names; and that the petition had not been irregularly intitled and filed. West Huron Election Case; Mitchell v. Cameron, viii., 126.

102. Controverted election—Preliminary objections—English general rules—Copy of petition—R. S. C. c. 9, ss. 9 (h), 63.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (7 Man. L. R. 581), Strong and Gwynne, J.J., dissenting, that the judges of the court in Manitoba not having made rules for practice and procedure in controverted elections the English rules of Michaelmas Term, 1868, were in force, and that (under rule 1) the petitioner, when filing an election petition, is bound to leave a copy with the clerk of the court to be sent to the returning officer, and his failure to do so is the subject of a substantial preliminary objection and fatal to the petition. Lisgar Election Case; Collins v. Ross, xx., 1.

See No. 104, infra.

103. Preliminary objections—Filing of petition—Construction of statute—Interpretation of words and terms—Legal holiday.—When the time limited for presenting a petition against the return of a member of the House of Commons of Canada expires or falls upon a holiday, such petition may be effectively filed upon the day next following which is not a holiday. This decision was followed in The Burrard Election Case (31 Can. S. C. R. 459). Nicolet Election Case, xxix., 178.

(Leave to appeal to Privy Council refused, 32 Can. Gaz. 293.)

104. Election petition—Deposit of copy—Time limit—Preliminary objections.—Where a copy of an election petition was not left with the prothonotary when the petition was filed, and, when deposited later, the forty days within which the petition had to be filed had expired: Held, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the petition was properly dismissed on preliminary objections (8 B. C. Rep. 65). Lisgar Election Case (20 Can. S. C. R. 1) followed.—Per Gwynne, J. The Supreme Court is competent to overrule a judgment of the court differently constituted if it clearly appears to be erroneous. Burrard Election Case; Duval v. Maxwell, xxxi., 459.

(c) Form of Petition.

105. Form of petition—Description of petitioner—Amendment.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (7 Man. L. R. 581), that the omission to set out in the petition the residence, address and occupation of the petitioner is a mere objection to the form which can be remedied by amendment, and is therefore not fatal. Lisgar Election Case; Collins v. Ross, xx., 1.

See No. 93, ante.

106. Election petition—Preliminary objections—Affidavit of petitioner—Bona fides—Examination of deponent—Form of petition—R. S. C. c. 9—54 & 55 Vict. c. 20, s. 3 (D.)—By 54 & 55 Vict. c. 20, s. 3, amending The Controverted Elections Act (R. S. C. c. 9), an election petition must be accompanied by an affidavit of the petitioner "that he has good reason to believe and verily does believe that the several allegations contained in the said petition are true." The petitioner in this case used the exact words of the Act in his affidavit. Held, that the respondent to the petition was not entitled on the hearing on preliminary objections to examine him as to the grounds of his belief. Held, further, that it was not necessary that the petition should be annexed to or otherwise identified by the affidavit, as in case of an exhibit, the references in the affidavit being sufficient to shew what petition was referred to.—It is no objection to an election petition that it is too general (as by the Act it may be in any prescribed form) if it follows the form that has always been in use in the province. Moreover, any inconvenience from generality may be obviated by particulars. Lunenburg Election Case, xxvii., 226.

107. Controverted election—R. S. C. c. 9—No return of member—Illegal deposit—Parties to petition.—A petition under The Dominion Controverted Elections Act (R. S. C. c. 9) alleged that T., a respondent, who had obtained a majority of the votes at the election was not properly nominated, and claimed the seat for his opponent, and that if it should be held that T. was duly elected his election should be set aside for corrupt acts by himself and agents. Held, that the petition as framed came within the provisions of s. 5 of the Act and that T. was properly made a respondent. West Durham Election Case, xxxi., 314.

108. Controverted election—Status of petitioner—Evidence—Certified copy of voters' list—Imprint of Queen's Printer—Form of petition—Jurat—61 Vict. c. 14, s. 10 (D.)—On the hearing of preliminary objections to a controverted election petition the production of a list appearing on its face to be an imprint emanating from the Queen's Printer, certified by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to be a copy of the voters' list used at the election, and upon which the name of the petitioner appeared as a person having a right to vote at such election, is sufficient proof of the status of the petitioner. A copy of the list of electors bearing upon its face a statement that it is issued by the Queen's Printer makes proof of its contents without further verification.—The jurat of the affidavit accompanying the petition was subscribed "Grignon & Fortier, Protonotaire de la Cour Supérieure dans et pour le District de Terrebonne." Per Gwynne, J. An objection to the regularity of the subscription to the jurat does not constitute proper matter to be inquired into by way of preliminary objection to the petition. Two Mountains Election Case; Ethier v. Legault, xxxi., 437.

(d) Service of Petition.

112. Service of petition—R. S. C. c. 9, s. 11—Art. 57, C. C. P.—Preliminary objections.—The service of an election petition made in Quebec, at defendant's law office, on the ground floor of his residence and having a separate entrance, by delivering a copy to defendant's law partner who was not a member of, nor resident with, defendant's family, is not a service within R. S. C. c. 9, s. 11, and art. 57, C. C. P., and a preliminary objection setting up defective service was maintained and the election petition dismissed. Gwynne, J., dissenting. Montmagny Election Case; Choquette v. Laberge, xv., 1.

113. Controverted election—Preliminary objections—Service at domicile—R. S. C. c. 9, s. 10.—Leaving a copy of an election petition and accompanying documents at the residence of the respondent with an adult member of his household during the five days after the presentation of the same is a sufficient service under s. 10 of the Dominion Controverted Elections Act even though the papers served do not come into the possession or within the knowledge of the respondent. King's (N.S.) Election Case; Borden v. Berteaux, xix., 526.

See No. 116, infra.

114. Service of petition—Personal service outside territorial jurisdiction—Necessity for order.—Personal service of an election petition outside the territorial jurisdiction of an Election Court is good service under R. S. C. c. 9, s. 10, although no order for such service has been obtained from the judge. Queen's and Prince Election Cases, xx., 26.

See No. 116, infra.

115. Controverted election—Re-service of petition—Order extending time—Preliminary objections—R. S. C. c. 9, s. 10.—Petitioner omitted to serve on appellant with the petition a copy of the deposit receipt, but applied to a judge to extend the time for service that he might cure the omission. An order extending the time (subsequently affirmed by the Court of Appeal) was made and the petition was re-served. Before the order extending the time had been drawn up respondent filed preliminary objections and by leave contained in the order he filed further preliminary objections after re-service. The new list of objections included those made in the first instance, and also an objection to the power or jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal, or a judge thereof, to extend the time for service of the petition beyond the five days prescribed by the Act.

Held, that the order was valid and the re-service made thereunder was proper and regular service. Glengarry Electric Case; McLennan v. Chisholm, xx., 38.

116. Preliminary objections—Service of petitions—Security—Payment to acting officer—R. S. C. c. 9, s. 10, and s. 9 (e) and (g).—Appeals from decisions dismissing preliminary objections to the election petitions.—The questions raised were: 1st. whether a personal service on the respondent at Ottawa without or with an order of the court at Halifax, or at his domicile is a good service. 2ndly, whether the payment of the security required by R. S. C. c. 9, s. 9 (e), into the hands of a person who was discharging the duties of and acting for the prothonotary at Halifax, and a receipt signed by said person in the prothonotary's name, [s. 9 (g).] were valid.—The court, following King's County (N.S.) Case, (19 Can. S. C. R. 526), and Queen's County (P. E. I.) Case, (20 Can. S. C. R. 26), held the service and payment valid and a substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute. Election Cases of Shelburne (N. S.), White v. Greenwood; Annapolis (N. S.), Mills v. Ray; Lunenburg (N. S.), Kaulbach v. Eisenhauer; Antigonish (N. S.), Thompson v. McGilivray; Pictou (N. S.), Tupper v. McColl; and Inverness (N. S.), McDonald v. Cameron, xx., 169.

117. Election petition—Preliminary objections—Service of petition—Bailiff's return—Cross-examination—Production of copy.—A return by a bailiff that he had served an election petition by leaving true copies, "duly certified," with the sitting member is a sufficient return. It need not state by whom the copies were certified. (Articles 56 and 78 C. C. P.).—Counsel for the person served will not be allowed to cross-examine the bailiff as to the contents of the copies served without producing them or laying a foundation for secondary evidence. Beauharnois Election Case, xxvii., 232.

118. Stamps on petition—Technical objections to form—Prête-nom—Preliminary objections—Abandonment of proceedings—Re-instatement—Costs—Matter of procedure.—The Supreme Court, in dismissing the appeal with costs, held, (1) that objection to the stamping of the petition was not open on appeal, (2) that the affidavit would be deemed sufficient as the objections thereto were purely technical, (3) that an objection that the petitioner was merely a prête-nom for an interested person who made the deposit and guaranteed costs was not proper subject for preliminary objection, and (4) that the service anew of the petition, after abandonment of original proceedings and extension of time, without payment of costs of the former proceedings, was only matter of procedure and should not be interfered with on appeal. *Laval Election Case; Leonard v. 15. PROCEDURE.

126. Commencement of trial—Staying proceedings—Session of Parliament—Adjournments—Recriminatory charges—R. S. C. c. 9, s. 31, s.-s. 4, ss. 32, 33, s.-s. 2, and ss. 35, 24—Withdrawal of claim to seat—Order voiding election.—After the trial of an election petition has been commenced, the trial judge may adjourn the case from time to time, as to him seems convenient.—Where the proceedings for the commencement of the trial have been stayed during a session of Parliament by an order of a judge, and a day has been fixed for the trial within the statutory period of six months as so extended, on which day the petitioners proceeded with their enquête and examined two witnesses after which the hearing was adjourned to a day beyond the statutory period as so extended to allow the petitioners to file another bill of particulars, those already filed having been declared insufficient.—Held, there was sufficient commencement of the trial within the proper time and the future proceedings were valid under the Controverted Elections Act, R. S. C. c. 9, s. 32.—In an election petition claiming the seat for the defeated candidate, recriminatory charges were brought against the defeated candidate and the trial judge, after having found that the election of the sitting member should be set aside for corrupt practices, fixed a day for the evidence upon the recriminatory charges. Thereupon the petitioners withdrew the claim to the seat, and the judge gave judgment avoiding the election.—Held, that s. 42 of c. 9, R. S. C., no longer applied, and the judge was right in refusing to proceed upon the recriminatory charges.—Per Gwynne, J., that it would have been competent for the trial judge to have received evidence on the recriminatory charges, but his refusal to do so was not a sufficient ground for reversing the judgment avoiding the election. Joliette Election Case; Guilbault v. Dessert, xv., 458.

127. Factum filed too late—Irregular inscription—Refusal to hear ex parte.—Where the appellant's factum was filed only on the morning the appeal was called for hearing, and no one appeared for the respondent, the court refused to hear the appeal ex parte.

Levis Election Case, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 686.

128. Controverted election — Stay of proceedings pending appeal on preliminary objections—Trial within six months—Extension of time—Disqualification.—Preliminary objections to an election petition filed on 22nd Feb., 1902, were dismissed by Loranger, J., on April 24th, and an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court of Canada. On 31st May Mr. Justice Loranger ordered that the trial of the petition be adjourned to the thirtieth juridical day after the judgment of the Supreme Court was given, and the same was given dismissing the appeal on Oct. 10th, making Nov. 17th the day fixed for the trial under the order of 31st May. On Nov. 14th a motion was made before Loranger, J., on behalf of the member elect to have the petition declared lapsed for non-commencement of the trial within six months from the time it was filed. This was refused on 17th Nov., but the judge held that the trial could not proceed on that day as the order for adjournment had not fixed a certain time and place, and on motion by the petitioner he ordered that it be commenced on Dec. 4th. The trial was begun on that day and resulted in the member elect being unseated and disqualified. On appeal from such judgment the objection to the jurisdiction of the trial judges was renewed.—Held, that the effect of the order of May 31st was to fix Nov. 17th as the date of commencement of the trial; that the time between May 31st and Oct. 10th when the judgment of the Supreme Court on the preliminary objections was given, should not be counted as part of the six months within which the trial was to be begun, and that Dec. 4th on which it was begun was therefore within the said six months.—Held, also, that if the order of 31st May could not be considered as fixing a day for the trial it operated as a stay of proceedings and the order of Mr. Justice Lavergne on Nov. 17th was proper.—As to the disqualification of the member elect by the judgment appealed from the members of the court were equally divided and the judgment stood affirmed. St. James Election Case, xxxiii., 137.

129. Controverted election — Prompt procedure necessary.—On a motion to postpone the hearing of an election appeal, the court (Taschereau, C.J., presiding), stated that, henceforth it would insist upon election appeals being prosecuted diligently. Tro Moutains Election Case, 24th Nov., 1902.

16. RECRIMINATORY CHARGES.

133. Recriminatory charges — Counter-petition—37 Vict. c. 10, s. 66.]—The appellant claimed under 37 Vict. c. 10, s. 66, that if he was not entitled to the seat the election should be declared void, on the ground of irregularities in the conduct of the election generally, but filed no counter petition and did not otherwise comply with the provisions of 37 Vict. c. 10. Held, that s. 66 of 37 Vict. c. 10 applies only to cases of recriminatory charges, and not to a case where neither of the parties or their agents are charged with doing a wrongful act. Queen's (P. E. I.) Election Case; Jenkins v. Brecken, vii., 247.

17. TRIAL.

136. Controverted elections—Want of prosecution—Ruling at trial—Appeal—R. S. C. c. 9, ss. 32, 33 & 50—Extension of time—Jurisdiction.—The decision of a judge at the trial of an election petition overruling an objection to the jurisdiction of the judge to go on with the trial on the ground that more than six months had elapsed since the date of the presentation of the petition is appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada under s. 50 (b), c. 9, R. S. C. Gwynne, J., dissenting.—In computing the time within which the trial of an election petition shall be commenced the term of a session of Parliament shall not be excluded unless the court or judge has ordered that the respondent's presence at the trial is necessary. Gwynne, J., dissenting.—The time within which the trial of an election petition must be commenced cannot be enlarged beyond the six months from the presentation of the petition, unless an order had been obtained on application made within said six months; an order granted on an application made after expiration of the said six months is an invalid order and can give no jurisdiction to try the merits of the petition, which is then out of court. Ritchie, C.J., and Gwynne, J., dissenting. Glengarry Election case; Purcell v. Kennedy, xiv., 453.

137. Preliminary examination of respondent — Postponement till after session — Enlargement of time for prosecution — Six months' limit—R. S. C. c. 9, ss. 14 & 32.]—On 23rd April, 1891, after the petition was at issue, petitioner moved to have respondent examined prior to the trial so that he might use the deposition upon the trial. Respondent moved to postpone such examination until after the session, on the ground that being attorney in his own case it would not "be possible for him to appear, answer the interrogatories and attend to the case in which his presence was necessary before the closing of the session." This motion was supported by affidavit of respondent stating that it would be "absolutely necessary for him to be constantly in court to attend to the present election trial" and that it was not possible "for him to attend to the present case for which his presence is necessary before the closing of the session." The court ordered respondent not to appear until after the session of Parliament. Immediately after the session was over, on 1st Oct., 1891, application was made to fix a day for trial, and it was fixed for 10th Dec., 1891. Respondent was examined in the interval. On 10th Dec., respondent objected to the jurisdiction of the court on the ground that the trial had not commenced within six months following the filing of the petition and the objection was maintained.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that the order was in effect an enlargement of the time for the commencement of the trial until after the session of Parliament and, therefore, in the computation of time for the commencement of the trial the time occupied by the session of Parliament should not be included. Laprairie Election Case; Gibeault v. Pelletier, xx., 185.

138. Procedure—Enlargement of time for commencement of trial—Jurisdiction—R. S. C. c. 9, ss. 31, 33, 43, 50 (b)—Notice of trial—Shorthand notes—Appeal.—On 10th Oct., 1891, the judge, within 6 months after filing of election petition, enlarged the time for the commencement of trial to 4th Nov., the 6 months expiring 18th Oct. On 19th Oct., another order was made by the judge fixing the trial for 4th Nov., and 14 clear days' notice of trial was given. Respondent objected to the jurisdiction of the court.—Held, that the orders made were valid.—That the objection to sufficiency of notice of trial given under R. S. C. c. 9, s. 31, was not an objection which could be relied on in an appeal under s. 50 (b) of that Act.—That evidence taken by a shorthand writer, not an official stenographer of the court, who has been appointed by the judge, need not be read over to witnesses when extended. Pontiac Election Case; Murray v. Lyon, xx., 626.

139. Trial after lapse of time limit—Consent judgment—R. S. C. c. 8, s. 32; c. 135, s. 52—Reserve of objection.—The trials were commenced on 22nd Dec., 1892, more than 6 months after filing petition, and subject to objection that the court consequently had no jurisdiction. No order was made enlarging the time for commencement of trial. Respondents consented that the elections be voided by reason of corrupt acts committed by agents without their knowledge.—On appeal to the Supreme Court petitioner's counsel signed and filed a consent to reversal of the judgments appealed from without costs, admitting that the objection upon the question of jurisdiction was well taken.—Upon the filing of an affidavit as to the facts stated in respondent's consent, the appeal was allowed and the petitions dismissed without costs. Bagot Election Case; Dupont v. Morin; Rouville Election Case; Brodeur v. Charbonneau, xxi., 28.

140. Bracketing petitions—Separate trials—R. S. C. c. 9, ss. 30 and 50—Appeal—Jurisdiction.—Two election petitions were filed against the appellant, one by A. C., on 4th April, 1892, and the other by A. V., the respondent, on 6th April, 1892. The trial of the A. V. petition was by order in chambers, dated 22nd Sept., 1892, fixed for 26th Oct. 1892.

On 24th Oct., appellant petitioned in chambers to join the two petitions and have another date fixed for the trial of both petitions. This motion was referred to the trial judges, who, on 26th Oct., before proceeding with the trial, dismissed the motion to have both petitions joined and proceeded to try the A. V. petition. Thereupon appellant objected to the petition being tried then as no notice had been given that the A. C. petition had been fixed for trial, and, subject to such objection, filed an admission that sufficient bribery by appellant's agent without his knowledge had been committed to avoid the election. The trial judges then delivered judgment setting aside the election.—On an appeal to the Supreme Court, Held, 1. That under s. 30 of c. 9, R. S. C., the trial judge could try the A. V. petition separately.—2. That the ruling of the court below on the objection relied on in the present appeal, viz.: That the trial judges could not proceed with the petition in this case, because the two petitions filed had not been bracketed by the prothonotary as directed by R. S. C. c. 9, s. 30, was not a judgment or decision appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada. Sedgewick, J., doubting. Vaudreuil Election Case, xxii., 1.

1. Appeal—Jurisdiction—Title to lands—Municipal by-law—Widening streets—Expropriation.—In an action to quash a by-law passed for the expropriation of land, the controversy relates to a title to lands, and an appeal lies to the Supreme Court of Canada, although the amount in controversy is less than $2,000.—The judgment on the merits in the court below (Q. R. 6 Q. B. 345) held, on the annulment of a by-law for widening a street, that the arrangement with the Turnpike Road Trustees by which they handed over the care of the roads to the municipality, within its limits, in consideration of the assumption of obligations, was authorized by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 43 (Q.) That the corporation in passing the by-law was acting within the powers of its charter, and that the right of the trustees over municipal streets was limited to the road-bed, and so long as repairs and toll collection was not interfered with, they could not prevent widening of the streets, laying sewers, etc.—This decision was affirmed for the reasons stated in the judgment appealed from. *Murray v. EMPHYTEUSIS.

1. Railway lands and permanent way — Adverse occupation — Petitory action — Lease for 999 years — Injuries to road-bed — Right of action for damages — Ownership. — The plaintiffs had leased a railway constructed by them to operating companies for 999 years, reserving a rental payable at stated times and upon terms as to maintaining the railway and its proper operation by the lessees. In the action brought au pétitoire for the recovery of part of the leased lands from an adverse occupant and for damages caused to the line of railway by the defendant, the pleas raised questions that the lease was actually an alienation of all plaintiffs' interests in the lands occupied by the railway and left them without any right of action either to recover the possession or to obtain damages for injuries sustained by the lands. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the lease amounted to an emphyteutic lease assigning the domaine utile of the railway and all the plaintiffs' rights in respect thereof, reserving, however, the domaine direct, and, consequently, the plaintiffs had the right of bringing the action au pétitoire which lies in the party having the legal estate, and that the lessees might, on an application for an amendment, be added as parties plaintiffs in the action for the purposes of recovering any damages shewn to have been sustained upon the leased lands, the action for which would lie only in the holder of the beneficial estate therein. *Massawippi Valley Ry. 2. ESTOPPEL BY DEED, 39-61.

3. ESTOPPEL BY RECORD, 62-76.

1. ESTOPPEL BY CONDUCT.

1. Sufferance—Trespass—Nuisance—Damages—Long possession—Constructions on public property—Right of action.—C. built a wharf in the bed of the St. Lawrence River, which communicated with the shore by means of a gangway, and had enjoyed the possession of this wharf and its approaches for many years, when R. claimed that it was a public nuisance, and destroyed the means of communication from the wharf to the shore. C. sued for damages, and to have the works restored. After issue joined, R. filed a supplementary plea, alleging, that since the institution of the action, the person on whose land C.'s bridge rested had erected buildings which prevented the restoration of the bridge and wharf, and further that the wharf had been destroyed by natural causes and abandoned, and that its re-establishment would be a public nuisance without utility. On appeal from the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench affirming the dismissal of the action, Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that as it appeared C. had been openly, and with implied consent of public authority, allowed to erect the bridge and wharf on public property and remain in possession of it for over 16 years, the defendant, who had full knowledge of the fact, was estopped and debarred of any right to remove what might have been originally a nuisance to him, and that, notwithstanding any subsequent abandonment of this wharf and bridge, C. was entitled to substantial damages. Caverhill v. Robillard, ii., 575.

2. Survey—Standing by—Conventional boundary line.—A neighbouring proprietor who stands by without objecting to a boundary line while it was being located by a surveyor, the line being staked and a building up to that line partly erected by the adjacent proprietor was held to be estopped from disputing that the line located by the surveyor was the true boundary line. Grassett v. Carter, x., 105.

3. Action by ratepayer—Improper construction of municipal work—Contractor bringing suit—Accentance of surplus money.—A ratepayer of a municipality cannot maintain an action, on behalf of himself and the other ratepayers, against the municipality for the improper construction of a drain authorized by by-law when such ratepayer has himself been a contractor for a portion of the work and has received his share of the money voted for the work in excess of the amount expended. Judgment appealed from (13 Ont. App. R. 53) affirmed. Dillon v. Township of Raleigh, xiv., 739.

4. Lease of mining rights—Option of locating—Adoption of boundary.—McA. leased a portion of a lot of land for mining purposes described by metes and bounds with the option: "Pourra le dit acquéreur changer la course des lignes et bornes du dit lopin de terre sans en augmenter les bornes, l'étendue ou superficie en suivant dans ce cas la course ou ligne de la dite veine de quartz qu'il peut y avoir et se rencontrer en cet endroit, après que lui, le dit bailleur, aura prospecté le dit lopin de terre susbaillé," adopted lines of survey made by P, as containing the vein. B. leased another portion of the same lot. In an action en bornage the court appointed three surveyors to fix the boundaries. Each surveyor made a separate report, and the report and plan of the surveyor L., adopting P's lines, was adopted and homologated by the court.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (13 Q. L. R. 168), Gwynne, J., dissenting, that McA. having located the claim in accordance with the terms of the deed was estopped from claiming that the property should be bounded according to the true course of the vein of quartz, and that the judgment homologating the survey adopting P's lines and survey was right and should be affirmed. McArthur v. Brown, xvii., 61.

5. Solicitor—Practising without certificate—Name appearing as member of firm—Estoppel.—M., a solicitor, who had not taken out his certificate, allowed his name to appear as a member of a firm in active practice. He was not in fact a member, received no profits and paid none of the expenses and the firm did not appear as solicitors of record in any proceedings. The Law Society sued for the penalty, and shewed that the name of the firm was indorsed on certain papers filed of record in suits carried on by the firm. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (15 Ont. App. R. 150), that M. did not "practice as a solicitor" within the meaning of the Act imposing the penalties (R. S. O. (1877) c. 140), and that he was not estopped by permitting his name to appear as a member of the firm, from shewing that he was not in fact a member. Macdougall v. Law Society of Upper Canada, xviii., 203.

6. Conduct—Contract—Free boomage—Repairs—36 Vict. c. 81, (Que.)—M. sued B. for charges authorized under 36 Vict. c. 81 (Que.) for the use of booms in the Nicolet River during 1887-1888. B. pleaded that under contracts between M. and B. and his auteurs, and the interpretation put upon them by M. the repairs to the booms were to be and were, in fact, made by him, and in consideration thereof he was to be allowed to pass his logs free; and, also, pleaded compensation for use by M. of other booms, and repairs made by B. on M.'s booms, and which by law he was bound to make.—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, that there was evidence that M. had led B. to believe that under the contracts he was to have the use of the booms free in consideration of the repairs made by him to piers, &c., and that M. was estopped by conduct from claiming the dues he might otherwise have been authorized to collect.—Held, further, that even if M.'s right of action was authorized by the statute the amount claimed was fully compensated for by the amount expended in repairs for him by B. Ball v. McCaffrey, xx., 319.

See No. 7, infra.

7. Conduct of parties—Possession—Contract—Booms—Proprietary rights—Replevin—Revendication—36 Vict. c. 81.—O'S. claiming to be the legal depositary, and T. McG. claiming to be usufructuary under 36 Vict. c. 81 (Q.), of certain booms, chains, and anchors in the Nicolet River, of which G. B. had possession for several years under deeds and agreements from T. McG. and had stored in a shed for the winter, brought an action en revendication and for $5,000 damages.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that O'S. and T. McG. were not entitled to the possession as alleged, and that they were precluded by their conduct and acquiescence from disturbing G. B.'s possession. Ball v. McCaffrey (20 Can. S. C. R. 319) approved. O'Shaughnessy v. Ball, xxi., 415.

8. Representation of indebtedness—Equitable assignment—Garnishee process.—Plaintiff held a judgment against C. and was about to sue R. and M., whom he understood to be C.'s partners. Before doing so he consulted one of the defendants, by whom he was informed that there was a balance due from defendants to C., for work performed for defendants on the W. C. Ry. under a contract, and defendants suggested that this amount might be made available to satisfy plaintiff's claim. On the strength of this representation garnishee process issued, when defendants denied that there was any debt due. Previous to the garnishment, C. had drawn an order requesting defendants to pay all sums coming due to him under the engineer's monthly certificate to K., but there was no evidence of any indebtedness of C. to K.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (2 R. & G., 199), Strong and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting, that defendants were estopped by their representation from denying indebtedness to C., and that there was not evidence of such an assignment as would prevent the attachment from operating on the fund. Shanly v. Fitzrandolph, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 279.

9. Signal posts—Running of railway trains—"Stop" notice—Res ipsa loquitur—Negligence.—The act of a railway company in placing signal posts along the line of railway indicating rules for the running of trains amounts to a declaration that the omission to obey the instructions so given would be negligence. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. v. Lawson, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 729.

10. Fire insurance—Contract—Termination—Notice—Statutory conditions—Premium note—Waiver—Estoppel.—Where an insurer has demanded and received payment of a note given for the premium of insurance he is estopped from denying that an applicant is insured.—Judgment appealed from (22 Ont. App. R. 68) affirmed, Gwynne, J. dissenting. Dominion Grange Mutual Assurance Co. v. Bradt, xxv., 154.

11. Fraudulent conversion—Past due bonds—Debentures transferable by delivery—Implied notice—Innocent holder for value.—Debentures transferable by delivery used and marked as exhibits in court were afterwards lost and advertised for in newspapers.

Ten years later the owners' agent pledged them to a broker for advances on his own account, the bonds being then long past due, but payment provided for by special statutes.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (Q. R. 3 Q. B. 539), Fournier and Tasche-reau J.J., dissenting, that neither the advertisement, nor marks on the bonds, nor the broker's knowledge of the agent's insolvency were notice to the pledgee of defects in the pledgor's title and that the owners, having by their act enabled their agent to transfer the bonds by delivery, were estopped from asserting title thereto, to the detriment of a bonâ fide holder. Young v. MacNider, xxv., 272.

12. Nova Scotia Probate Act—Executors and administrators—License to sell lands—Res judicata.]—An executrix obtained a license to sell real estate of a deceased testator for payment of his debts. Judgment creditors of devisees moved to set aside the license but failed on the motion and in appeal. The lands were sold under the license and executrix paid part of the price to the judgment creditors, who received the same knowing the moneys to be proceeds of the sale. Afterwards the judgment creditors, still claiming the license to be null, issued execution against the lands, and the purchaser brought action for a declaration that the judgments were not a charge thereon. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (27 N. S. Rep. 384), that the judgment upon the motion to set aside the license was conclusive against the judgment creditors and they were precluded thereby from taking collateral proceedings to charge the lands affected upon the grounds invoked or which might have been invoked upon the motion and that the judgment creditors, by receiving payment out of the proceeds of the sale, had elected to treat the license as having been regularly issued, and were estopped from attacking its validity in answer to the action. Clark v. Phinney, xxv., 633.

13. Transshipment in transit—Custom of trade—Continuing bills of lading—Delivery—Payment of freight—Transfer by indorsement—"Bank Act"—Estoppel.]—Grain was shipped from Chicago to Montreal, the bills of lading being made only from Chicago to Kingston, where it was, according to the usual custom of trade, transhipped into barges belonging to the defendants, and thence conveyed by them to Montreal, without the issue of new bills of lading. It appeared, however, to have been the custom that such bills of lading were, in cases of the kind, treated as continuing. The bills had been transferred by indorsement and delivery to the plaintiff, upon whose order the defendant had delivered the greater part of the cargo, after exacting payment of full freight upon the shipment. The defendant had also recognized the custom of the grain trade as to the bills of lading continuing.—In an action to recover an undelivered balance of the grain so shipped. Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Review, at Montreal, that, under the circumstances, the defendant was estopped from questioning the validity of the transfer of the bills of lading under the provisions of "The Bank Act," or objecting that they had become extinct upon delivery of the cargoes at Kingston. St. Lawrence and Chicago Forwarding Co. v. Molsons Bank (28 L. C. Jur. 127) referred to. Kingston Forwarding Co. v. Union Bank of Canada, 9th December, 1895.

14. Loss of right to appeal—Acceptance of costs awarded appellant—Acquiescence in judgment appealed from.]—The judgment appealed from decided against appellant upon the construction of a will but gave him certain costs which were taxed and paid to him out of moneys in court to the credit of the cause. Held, that the reception of these costs was not inconsistent with an appeal against the judgment upon the construction of the will. In re Ferguson; Turner v. Bennett; Turner v. Carson, xxviii., 38.

15. Incorporated company—Action against—Forfeiture of charter—Estoppel—Compliance with statute—Res judicata.]—In an action for re-payment of tolls alleged to have been unlawfully collected by a River Improvement Company, it appeared that the plaintiff had treated the company as a corporation, used its works and paid tolls fixed by the commissioner, and the company had also been sued as a corporation. Held, that the plaintiff was precluded from impugning the legal existence of the company by claiming that its corporate powers were forfeited. Hardy Lumber Co. v. Pickers River Improvement Co., xxix., 211.

16. Sale of land—Misrepresentation by vendor.]—A vendor of land who wilfully misstates the position of the boundary line and thereby leads the purchaser to believe that he is acquiring a strip not included in the deed, is estopped from afterwards claiming such strip as his own property. 2. ESTOPPEL BY DEED.

39. Grant of provincial lands—Foreshore of harbour — Conveyance by grantee—Dower—Claim by widow—Estoppel by deed.]—After the B. N. A. Act came into force the Government of Nova Scotia granted to S. part of the foreshore of the harbour of Sidney. § conveyed through another party to the appellant, defendant, which, in an action by his widow for dower in the lands, pleaded that the grant to S. was void as the lands were vested in the Dominion of Canada. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (23 N. S. Rep. 214), Strong and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting, that as the defendant had obtained title from S. he was estopped from saying that his title was defective.—Per Strong and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting. The conveyance by S. to the defendant's vendor was an innocent conveyance by which S. himself would not have been estopped and, as estoppel must be mutual, his grantee would not be estopped. There were no recitals in the deed that would estop them and estoppel could not be created by the covenants. Sydney and Louisburg Ry. Co. v. Sword, xxi., 152.

40. *Conveyance to married woman—Execution by husband—Assent.]—Where a husband assented to a conveyance by his wife and performed subsequent Acts consistent with such assent it was held that he was estopped from denying the title of his wife's grantor. Webb v. Marsh, xxii., 457.*

40a. *Life insurance—Wagering policy—Nullity—Waiver of illegality—Insurable interest—Estoppel—14 Geo. III., c. 48 (Imp.)—Arts. 2474, 2480, 2590 C. C.]—A condition in a policy of life insurance by which the policy is declared to become incontestable upon any ground whatever after the lapse of a limited period, does not make the contract binding upon the insurer in the case of a wagering policy.—Judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench reversed, Sedgewick, J., dissenting. Manufacturers Life Ins. Co. v. Anctil, xxviii., 103.*

(Affirmed on appeal [1899] A. C. 604).

41. *Bona fides — Conveyance by married woman—Agreement—Recital.]—B., a married woman, in order to carry out an agreement between her husband and his creditors consented to convey to the creditor a farm, her separate property, in consideration of the transfer by her husband to her of the stock and other personal property on it, and of indemnity against her personal liability on a mortgage against said farm. The conveyance, agreement and bill of sale of the chattels were all executed on the same day, the agreement, to which B. was not a party, containing a recital that the husband was owner of the said chattels but giving the creditor no security upon them. The chattels having subsequently been seized under execution against the husband it was claimed, on interpleader proceedings, that the bill of sale was in fraud of the creditor. Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, that the recital in the agreement worked no estoppel as against B.; that as it appeared that the husband expressly refused to assign the chattels to his creditor there was nothing to prevent him from transferring them to his wife, and that the Court of Appeal rightly held the transaction an honest one, and B. entitled to the goods and to indemnity against the mortgage. Boulton v. Boulton, xxviii., 592.*

42. Acquiescence — Floatable waters — Water power — River improvements—Joint user—Servitude—Arts. 400, 549, 550, 551 and 1213 C. C.]—Where a riparian owner of lands on a lower level had been permitted by the plaintiffs, for a number of years, to take water power necessary to operate his mill through a flume he had constructed along the river bank partly upon the plaintiffs' land connecting with the plaintiffs' mill-race, subject to the contribution of half the expense of keeping their mill-race and dam in repair, and these facts had been recognized in deeds and written agreements to which the plaintiffs and their auteurs had been parties, the plaintiffs could no longer claim exclusive rights to the enjoyment of such river improvements nor require the demolition of the flume notwithstanding that they were absolute owners of the strip of land upon which the mill-race and a portion of the flume had been constructed. City of Quebec v. North Shore Ry. Co. (27 Can. S. C. R. 102) and La Commune de Berthier v. Denis (27 Can. S. C. R. 147) referred to. Lafrance v. Lafontaine, xxx., 20.

43. Quashing appeal — Practice — Acquiescement — Voluntary execution — Question of costs.] — Defendants filed judicial abandonments as ordered by the judgments appealed from, declaring, however, in the deeds, that exception was taken thereto, and that they intended to appeal, but made the abandonment to avoid capias, &c.—Held, per Strong, C.J., and Taschereau and Girouard, J.J. That appellants had acquiesced in the judgments, executed the order against them and left matters in a position where it was impossible to obtain relief. Gwynne, J., concurred on the understanding that there should not be res judicata in respect to an alleged partnership. Sedgewick, J., assented doubtfully, as he did not feel satisfied that the abandonment had not been made under stress. Schlomann v. Doucker, xxx., 323.

3. ESTOPPEL BY RECORD.

62. Res judicata — Judgment in litation — Binding effect — Constitutional law — Incorporation of company — Vendor to company — Validity of incorporating Act.]—The Island of Anticosti, held in joint ownership by a number of people, was sold by litation. The report of distribution allotted to plaintiff his share, as owner of one-sixth of the island acquired from the Island of Anticosti Co., which had previously acquired one-sixth from the widow of H. G. Forsyth. The respondent's claim was disputed by appellant, the daughter and legal representative of the widow, alleging that the sale by her through her attorney, F., of the one-sixth to the Anticosti Co. was a nullity, because the Act incorporating the company was ultra vires of the Dominion Government, and that the sale by F., as attorney for his mother, to him, as representing the Anticosti Co., was not valid. The Anticosti Co. was one of the defendants in the action for litation and appellant an intervening party; no proceedings were taken by appellant, prior to judgment, attacking either the constitutionality of the Island of Anticosti Co.'s charter or the status of plaintiff.—Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, Ritchie, C.J., and Gwynne, J., dissenting, that as the widow had herself recognized the existence of the company, and as appellant, her legal representative, was a party to the suit ordering the licitation of the property, the appellant could not now, on a report of distribution, raise the constitutional question as to the validity of the Act of Dominion Parliament constituting the company, and was now estopped from claiming the right of setting aside the deed of sale, for which her mother had received good and valuable consideration. Forsyth v. Bury, xv., 543.

[Leave to appeal refused by the Privy Council, (11 Can. Gaz. 418.)]

63. Seizure of dividends—Holder of shares—Judgment setting aside intervention—Different title.—A final judgment setting aside an intervention to a seizure of dividends of bank shares, founded upon an allegation that such dividends formed part of a substitution, is not res judicata as to the corpus of the shares nor as to the dividends of other shares claimed under a different title. Muir v. Carter; Holmes v. Carter, xvi., 473.

64. Carriers—Partial loss of goods—Notice of claim—Limitation of time—Demurrer—Acquiescence in judgment—Res judicata—Joint tort-feasors—Release of one.—A shipping bill provided that no claim for damage, loss, or detention of goods should be allowed unless notice in writing, with particulars, was given to the station agent at or nearest to the place of delivery within 36 hours after delivery of the goods in respect to which the claim was made.—Held, per Strong, J., that a plea setting up non-compliance with this condition having been demurred to, and plaintiff not having appealed against a judgment overruling the demurrer, the question as to the sufficiency in law of the defence was res judicata.—Per Strong, J., (Gwynne, J., contra) that part of the consignment having been lost such notice should have been given in respect to the same within 36 hours after delivery of the goods which arrived safely.—Quere, In the present state of the law is a release to, or satisfaction from one of several joint tort-feasors a bar to an action against the others? The judgment appealed from (15 Ont. App. R. 14) reversed. G. T. R. Co. v. McMillan, xvi., 543.

65. Search warrant—Magistrate's jurisdiction—Justification of ministerial officer—Goods in custodia legis—Replevin—Res judicata—Judgment inter partes.—A judgment on certiorari quashing a warrant will not estop a constable from justifying under it in an action to replevy goods seized where he was not a party to the proceedings to set aside the warrant and the judgment quashing it was inter partes only. Sleeth v. Hurlbert, xxv., 620.

66. Nova Scotia Probate Act—Executors and administrators—Contesting license to sell lands—Res judicata.—An executrix obtained a license to sell real estate of a deceased testator for payment of his debts. Judgment creditors of devisees moved to set aside the license but failed on the motion and in appeal. The lands were sold under the license and executrix paid part of the price to the judgment creditors, who received the same knowing the moneys to be proceeds of the sale. Afterwards the judgment creditors, still claiming the license to be null, issued execution against the lands and the purchaser brought action for a declaration that the judgments were not a charge thereon. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (27 N. S. Rep. 384) that the judgment upon the motion to set aside the license was conclusive against the judgment creditors and they were precluded thereby from taking collateral proceedings to charge the lands affected upon grounds invoked or which might have been invoked upon the motion. Clark v. Phinney, xxv., 633.

67. Title to land—Entail—Life estate—Fiduciary substitution—Privileges and hypothecs—Mortgage by institute—Preferred claim—Prior incumbrancer—Vis major—Chose jugée—Parties—Grosses réparations.—An institute grevé de substitution may validly affect and bind the interest of the substitute in real estate subject to fiduciary substitution where the bulk has been destroyed by vis major in order to make grosses réparations, upon judicial authorization, and the property is then charged and the authorization operates as res judicata estopping the substitute from contesting the necessity and extent of the repairs. Chef dit Vadeboncœur v. City of Montreal, xxix., 9.

68. Admissions in pleadings—Agreement as to evidence—Estoppel.—In one count of his declaration plaintiff admitted a breach of a condition but alleged that it was waived. On the trial counsel agreed that the facts proved in a similar case against another insurance company should be taken as proved in the present case. These facts shewed, as held by the decision in the previous case, that there was no breach.—Held, that the agreement at the trial prevented the appellant company from claiming that respondent was estopped from denying that there had been a violation of the condition. *Western Assurance Co. v. 1. ADMISSIBILITY; PAROL TESTIMONY.

1. Cross-examination — Objection by counsel—Question disallowed—32 & 33 Vict. c. 20, s. 80—32 & 33 Vict. c. 36—New trial.]—The prosecutrix, in an indictment for rape, after she had declared she had not previously had connection with a man other than the prisoner, was asked in cross-examination whether she remembered having been in the milkhouse of G. with two persons named M., one after the other. Held, that the witness might have objected, or the judge might, in his discretion, have told the witness that she was not bound to answer the question; but the court ought not to have refused to allow the question to be put because counsel for the prosecution objected to the question. Held, also, that since the passing of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 20, s. 80, repealing so much of C. S. L. C. c. 77, as would authorize any court in Quebec to order a new trial in a criminal case; and of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 36, repealing C. S. L. C. c. 77, s. 63, the Court of Queen's Bench (Que.) has no power to grant a new trial. Larliberté v. The Queen, i., 117.

2. Sale of goods — Breach of warranty—Recovery of special damages—Subsequent action for price—Evidence as to inferiority of goods delivered — Consequential damages.]—C. wished to procure a wheel which, with existing water power, would be sufficient to drive the machinery in his mill. A. undertook to put in a "Four-foot Sampson Turbine Wheel," which he warranted would be sufficient for the purpose. The wheel was put in, but proved insufficient for the purpose warranted. The time for payment of the price having elapsed, C. sued A. for breach of the warranty and recovered $438 damages. A. subsequently sued C. for the price, and on his defence, C. offered evidence that the wheel was worthless and of no value to him. Objection was taken that it was not competent to C. to give any evidence in reduction of damages by reason of the breach of warranty, or on the ground of the wheel not answering the purpose for which it was intended. The trial judge declared the evidence inadmissible, and verdict was entered for the amount sued for in the action. A new trial was ordered by the Court of Common Pleas but on appeal the rule was set aside by the Court of Appeal for Ontario, and judgment entered on the verdict for a reduced amount. (26 U. C. C. P. 338.) Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario and restoring the order for a new trial (Strong, J., dissenting), that, as the time for payment of the price had elapsed when the first action was brought, and only special damages for breach of warranty had been recovered therein, the evidence tendered by C. in the subsequent action as to the worthlessness or inferiority of the article ought to have been admitted. Church v. Abell, i., 442.

3. R. S. N. S. (4 ser.) c. 96, s. 41—Testimony by surviving party as to transactions with deceased party to suit—Administrators joined in suit before trial.]—C. sued M. & R. and M. accepted service and admitted debt, but R. pleaded to the action. Before trial both defendants died. Then C. R. & R. R., as administrators of R., were, before trial, made parties to the action. At the trial C. was examined as a witness in support of his own case, and when asked what had taken place between him and the deceased M. & R., the learned judge ruled that the evidence was inadmissible under s. 41, c. 96, R. S. N. S. (4 ser.) Held, affirming the judgment of the court below, Henry, J., dissenting, that under the provisions of said section prohibiting a surviving party to an action testifying therein as to dealings, transactions or agreements with deceased parties thereto, the surviving plaintiff could not be allowed to give evidence in his own behalf in respect to dealings with a deceased defendant, notwithstanding that his administrators were made parties after issue joined, but before trial. (See 10 N. S. Rep. 112.) Chesley v. Murdock, ii, 48.

4. Cross-examination—Question as to letter annexed to affidavit filed — Rejection—Non-direction.—Plaintiff sued upon notes signed by one E. and W. dated at Halifax and made payable to plaintiff's order in Boston, Mass. The notes were stamped, but before action double stamps were affixed and no contract as to interest appeared on the face of them. W. pleaded that he had signed upon agreement that he should be liable thereon as surety only for E., and the plaintiffs, without the knowledge or consent, gave time to E., and forbore to enforce payment when they might have been paid. W. sought to cross-examine plaintiff on an affidavit made by the witness, to which was annexed a letter to plaintiff from E. This evidence was rejected by the judge, and verdict given for plaintiffs with interest. A rule to set aside verdict was discharged by the Supreme Court (N.S.), but a reference to the master made as to the rate of interest. Held, reversing the court below, that there was an improper rejection of evidence, and that the jury should have been directed as to interest. Wallace v. Souther, ii, 598.

5. Witness refusing to answer—Incriminating testimony—Oath as to belief that reply would criminate.—E., alleged to have been a teller in a bank in New York, and to have absconded with funds, was arrested at St. John, N. B., by a detective and imprisoned for several hours, when, no charge having been made against him, he was released. While a prisoner at the police station, the detective demanded and obtained from E.'s wife, money she had in her possession telling her that it belonged to the bank, and that her husband was in custody. In an action by E. for assault and false imprisonment and for money had and received, the defendant pleaded, inter alia, that the money had been stolen by the plaintiff at the City of New York, from the bank, and was not the money of the plaintiff; that defendant, as agent of the bank, received the money to and for the use of and paid the same over to the bank. Plaintiff being examined as a witness on his own behalf, on cross-examination, refused by advice of counsel to answer certain questions, and on being interrogated as to his belief that his so doing would tend to criminate him, he remained silent, and refused to say whether or not he apprehended serious consequences if he answered the questions proposed. The trial judge decided that he was not bound to answer and, on the finding of the jury entered a verdict for the plaintiff which was affirmed by the full court. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (20 N. B. Rep. 40), Henry, J., dissenting, that the defendant was entitled to a statement on oath by the witness that he objected to answer because he believed his answering would tend to criminate him, and that the ruling of the trial judge was wrong. Power v. Ellis, vi, 1.

6. Commercial contract — Rejection of evidence—Acceptance — Parol testimony—Art. 1235 C. C.—New trial.—In an action upon an unwritten commercial contract for the sale of goods exceeding $50, oral evidence of earnest given or acceptance, or receipt, of the whole, or any part of the goods, is admissible, under art. 1235 of the Civil Code. (The judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, affirming the Superior Court at Montreal (4 Legal News 218; 6 Legal News 363; 27 L. C. Jur. 349) was reversed and a new trial ordered.) Munn v. Berger, x, 512.

7. Commission — Defective return—Direction provisions—Failure to administer interrogatories.—A commission issued to two commissioners, one named by each of the parties—to take evidence at St. Thomas, W.I., with liberty to plaintiff's commissioner to proceed ex parte if the other neglected or refused to attend. Both commissioners attended and defendant's nominee cross-examined the witness, but the return was signed by one commissioner only. Some of the interrogatories and cross-interrogatories were not put to witnesses by the commissioners. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (23 N. B. Rep. 160), that the failure to administer the interrogatories according to the terms of the commission was a substantial objection, and rendered the evidence incapable of being received. —Per Ritchie, C.J., and Strong, Fournier and Henry, J.J., that the refusal of one commissioner to sign the return, did not vitiate it.—Per Gwynne, J., that the return should have been signed by both commissioners, and not having been so signed, was void, and the evidence under it should not have been read. Millville Mutual Marine and Fire Ins. Co. v. Driscoll, xi, 183.

8. Negligence—Running of railway trains—Examination of company's officers—R. S. O. (1877) c. 50, s. 136—Company's books.—The locomotive superintendent and locomotive foreman of a railway company are "officers of the corporation" who may be examined under the provisions of R. S. O. (1877) c. 50, s. 136, as to matters under their control or supervision and entries in the company's books may properly be admitted as evidence without the testimony of the persons by whom such entries were made. Judgment appealed from (14 Ont. App. R. 309) affirmed. Canada Atlantic Ry. Co. v. Mowley, xv, 145.

9. Canada Temperance Act — Service of summons—Assault on constable—Indictable offence—Competency of wife as witness.—On the trial of an indictment for assault upon a constable attempting to serve a summons under the Canada Temperance Act, the defendant's wife is not a competent witness on his behalf. McFarlane v. The Queen, xvi, 393.

10. Partnership — Cross-examination—Entries in books of third party—Verdict against evidence—New trial.—McK. was a member of two firms, C. McK. & Co. and McK. & M. In an action against McK. & M. for goods sold and delivered it appeared that the goods were ordered by McK. and shipped to the place of business of McK. & M., but were charged in plaintiff's books to C. McK. & Co., which he said was done at McK.'s request. McK., as a witness for plaintiff, corroborated this, and on cross-examination produced, subject to objection, the books of C. McK. & Co., in which these goods were credited to that firm. A verdict for defendant, M. was set aside and a new trial ordered.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (27 N. B. Rep. 143) that the books of C. McK. & Co. were properly in evidence on the cross-examination of McK., and the rule for a new trial should be discharged. Miller v. White, xvi., 445.

11. Lost writing—Proof of handwriting—Subsequently acquired knowledge—Change of signature. — A document not in existence written by a particular individual may be proved by a person who has had possession of and destroyed it, though he only acquired knowledge of the handwriting of the alleged writer some weeks after the document was destroyed and could only say that from his recollection of the document it was written by the same person. Gwynne, J., dissenting. — In an action for a written libel defendant was asked on cross-examination, if he had not changed his signature since the action began, which he denied. Held, Gwynne and Patterson, JJ., dissenting, that documentary evidence was admissible to shew that the signature had been changed.—Per Patterson, J. The witness could properly be asked, on cross-examination, if he had not changed his signature, but the opposing party must be satisfied with his answer, and could not go further and give affirmative evidence of the fact. (See 28 N. B. Rep. 89.) Alexander v. Vye, xvi., 501.

[Leave to appeal refused by Privy Council.]

12. New trial—Improper admission—Cross-examination—Conversation partly given on examination in chief—Belief as to signature on note — Evidence of counsel. — To an action on a bond defendants pleaded that it was given in settlement of promissory notes made by a brother of defendants the indorsements to which were forged to the knowledge of the bank, which settlement was the only consideration for the execution of the bond. Verdict for plaintiff was set aside by the full court and a new trial ordered on the ground of improper admission of evidence: 1st, evidence by a solicitor of what one of the officers of the bank had told him relative to an admission by the alleged forger that the notes were genuine; part of this conversation, which related to a different matter, had been given in evidence by the same witness on direct examination, but the court below held that the balance could not be given on cross-examination as it was not connected with what had already been proved. 2nd, evidence by counsel for plaintiff in the proceedings on the notes which had led to the making of the bond of his belief in their genuineness, which the court below held was not good evidence. Held, reversing the Supreme Court (N. B.), that the evidence objected to was properly admitted. Halifax Banking Co. v. Smith, xviii., 710.

13. New trial—Improper rejection — Excessive damages — Pleading — New grounds taken on appeal. — Action on policy of fire insurance on a stock of goods, verdict for the plaintiff moved against as against weight of evidence and for improper exclusion of evidence. The first ground was mainly urged in regard to amount of damages. As to the second ground the evidence tendered related to the fact that a quantity of unburnt matches and shavings had been found near the part of the premises in which the fire occurred where the bulk of the goods were alleged to have been burnt. The evidence was rejected by the trial judge for the reason that there was no defence pleaded that the fire was incendiary, and on appeal to the full court it was for the first time urged that it was admissible as shewing the nature and extent of the fire in the vicinity. The verdict for the plaintiffs was sustained by the full court. Held, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the decision of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia should be affirmed.—Per Ritchie, C.J., though the amount of damages found was not satisfactory and might well have been submitted to a jury of business men as a question proper for their determination he would not dissent from the judgment dismissing the appeal. As to the other ground the evidence was rightly rejected. When evidence is tendered the judge and opposing counsel are entitled to know the ground on which it is offered and none can be urged on appeal that has not been put forward at the trial. Royal Ins. Co. v. Dufus, xviii., 711.

14. Sale of goods — Partnership — To whom credit given—Entries on previous dealings—New trial—Reduction of verdict. — The plaintiffs, P. J. and T. were partners in lumbering transactions and as such, under the name of P. O'B. & Bros. had dealings with defendant from 1879 to the fall of 1882. At the end of 1880, 1881 and 1882 the parties had settlements of accounts, shewing a balance due on each settlement from defendants to plaintiffs, the total of the three balances being $3,427.05, for which plaintiffs brought action. Defendant set off a larger claim for goods supplied to the partnership in 1883 and 1884, but plaintiffs contended that the partnership, to the knowledge of defendant, had been dissolved in 1882 and that the goods had been supplied by the defendant to P. O'B. alone. Defendant denied knowledge of the dissolution. Between the fall of 1882 and 1884, while some entries in defendant's books shewed the charges to have been made against P. O'B. & Bros., greater numbers of entries were against P. O'B. alone. Defendant's counsel, to meet inferences from such entries, established by evidence of defendant, by reference to his books, that from 1879 to the fall of 1882 (when plaintiffs were partners) defendant kept his books in the same manner, making the charges sometimes against P. O'B., and at other times against P. O'B. & Bros.—The judgment appealed from (27 N. B. Rep. 145) decided, Wetmore, J., dissenting, that this evidence was rightly admitted; and also, that it was not misdirection to tell the jury that in considering the question of partnership since 1882 they might, in connection with the other facts of the case, consider the way in which defendant kept his accounts both before and after that date and whether he was dealing differently with plaintiffs after 1882, from his mode of dealing with them before that.—It was held further that in the amount awarded to defendant was included a sum of $1,209.50 for goods, of the delivery of which the proof was insufficient, and that unless defendant consented to a reduction of his balance by that amount there should be a new trial. Held, affirming judgment appealed from, per Ritchie, C.J., and Taschereau and Patterson, J.J., that the evidence objected to was properly admitted; that, taking the charge of the learned judge at the trial as a whole, there was no misdirection, and that the condition as to avoidance of a new trial had been properly imposed. Strong and Gwynne, J.J., dissented. —Patterson, J., delivered notes of reasons for judgment which appear in Cassels' Digest. —Per Gwynne, J. The evidence failed to establish a partnership between plaintiffs, or any joint liability by them to defendant in respect of the goods charged for in his set-off.—Further, the practice of refusing a new trial upon condition of the party in whose favour a verdict has been rendered agreeing to a reduction named by the court, has been confined to cases of objection for excessive damages only. O'Brien v. O'Brien, Cass. Dig. (2nd ed.) 297.

(444.) 15. Life insurance — Delivery of policy — Rejection of evidence — New trial — R. S. N. S. (Ser.) c. 96, s. 41—In an action on a policy of life assurance, the defendants pleaded that the policy was never delivered. The evidence of the agent of the company, as to conversations between himself and the assured, was objected to, and rejected by the judge as inadmissible under the R. S. N. S., c. 96, s. 41. A rule to set aside the verdict for plaintiff was discharged by the Supreme Court (N. S.) Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (2 Russ. & Ches. 570), that the evidence was not inadmissible under the statute and should not have been withheld from the jury. Appeal allowed with costs, and new trial ordered. Confederation Life Ass'n of Canada v. O'Donnell, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 370.

16. Contract — Collateral agreement — Question for jury — Verdict — New trial ordered by court below.]—Whether a memorandum in writing set up by the defendant was or was not intended to settle a contract in whole or in part is a question for the jury, and the onus to shew that it settled the whole contract being upon the defendant and oral testimony admissible on behalf of both parties, a verdict based on the appreciation of the credulity of the respective witnesses ought not to be interfered with. Peters v. Hamilton, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 763.

17. Parol testimony — Variation of written agreement — New trial.]—The defendant agreed in writing to accept a quantity of goods in payment of two acceptances by the plaintiff. The agreement was carried out by the plaintiff, but he was subsequently sued by an indorsee of one of the acceptances, and obliged to pay the same. An action was brought by him to recover the amount thus paid from the defendant. At the trial evidence was offered by defendant, and admitted by the trial judge, of an oral agreement between him and the plaintiff at the time the written agreement was made, to the effect that the goods were not to be accepted as payment in full of the acceptances but only in part payment thereof. It was held by the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, that there was error in the admission of such evidence. On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, the judgment appealed from (28 N. S. Rep. 210) was affirmed. Cox v. Seeley, 6th May, 1896.

18. Relevancy — Previous transaction — Bona fides — Removal of suspicions — Inferences drawn by jury — Collateral facts.]—It appeared that the defendant for the purpose of supporting his plea of fraud and shewing his bona fides, had offered, in evidence, a transaction between himself and the plaintiff similar to the one in issue, but which had occurred about a year previously, and it had been held in the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, per Hannington, Landry and Van Wart, J.J., Tuck, J., dissenting, Baker, J., dubitante, that such evidence was admissible, as shewing grounds for the removal of defendant's suspicions, and as a fact from which a reasonable inference might be drawn by the jury, bearing upon the question in issue. (33 N. B. Rep. 326).—On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, the appeal was dismissed after hearing upon the merits. Bank of Nova Scotia v. Robinson, 6th June, 1896.

19. Action for personal injuries caused by negligence—Examination of plaintiff de bene esse—Death of plaintiff—Action by widow under Lord Campbell's Act—Admissibility of evidence taken in first action—Rights of third party.]—Though the cause of action given by Lord Campbell's Act for the benefit of the widow and children of a person whose death results from injuries received through negligence is different from that which the deceased had in his lifetime, yet the material issues are substantially the same in both actions, and the widow and children are in effect claiming through the deceased. Therefore where an action is by a person so injured in which his evidence is taken de bene esse and the defendant has a right to cross-examine, such evidence is admissible in a subsequent action taken after his death under the Act. (Taschereau and Gwynne, J.J., dissenting).—The admissibility of such evidence as against the original defendants, a municipal corporation sued for injuries caused by falling into an excavation in a public street, is not affected by the fact that they have caused a third party to be added as defendant, as the person who was really responsible for such excavation, and that such third party was not notified of the examination of the plaintiff in the first action, and had no opportunity to cross-examine him. (Taschereau and Gwynne, J.J., dissenting).—Judgment appealed from (20 Ont. App. R. 444) affirmed. Town of Walkerton v. Erdman, xxiii., 352.

20. Absolute transfer — Commencement of proof by writing — Oral evidence.]—Verbal evidence is inadmissible to contradict an absolute notarial transfer, even where there is a commencement of proof by writing. Bury v. Murray, xxiv., 77.

21. Partnership — Registered declaration—Art. 1835 C. C.—C. S. L. C. c. 65, s. 1—Oral evidence—Life policy.]—Action by W. McL. and F. W. R. to recover amount of an accident policy insuring the members of the firm of McL. Bros. & Co., alleging that J. S. McL., one of the partners, had been accidentally drowned. After the policy was issued the plaintiffs signed and registered a declaration to the effect that the partnership of McL. Bros. & Co. had been dissolved by mutual consent, and they also signed and registered a declaration of a new partnership under the same name, comprising the plaintiffs only. Plaintiffs tendered oral evidence to prove that these declarations were incorrect, and that J.

S. McL. was a member of the partnership at the time of his death.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, which had affirmed the Court of Review (Q. R. 3 S. C. 230), sub nom., McLauchlan v. Accident Ins. Co., that such evidence was inadmissible. Caldwell v. Accident Ins. Co. of North America, xxiv., 263.

22. Promissory note — Consideration — Accommodation—Evidence—New trial.—Appeal was from judgment of the Supreme Court (N. B.) varying the verdict at the trial, pursuant to leave reserved. The action was against respondent on notes indorsed and bills accepted by him. The defence was that the bills and notes were accepted and indorsed for accommodation of the bank, and that defendant had been induced to accept and indorse by fraud and misrepresentation. M., agent of the bank, had represented to defendant that the transactions were in the business and for the interest of the bank, which was engaging in matters forbidden by the Bank Act, and had to adopt the course pursued by the agent. The trial judge rejected evidence of conversation between a third party, who was on some of the paper in suit, and the agent who succeeded M. as to what had taken place between said third party and M. in regard to some of the notes, on the ground that the evidence was irrelevant and only arose out of cross-examination. He admitted other objectionable evidence, ruling that only the answer had been objected to. A verdict was given for plaintiff for the amount of one note and of an overdrawn account, and for defendant in respect of all other claims. The court en banc gave the bank judgment for another and a larger note, and defendant judgment for all the rest, including that on which he failed at the trial. Both appealed.—The Supreme Court of Canada ordered a new trial on the ground that the evidence rejected at the trial should have been admitted, as it related to a matter relevant to the issue, and that the trial judge was wrong in ruling that only the answer to another question was objected to, as there was a general objection to all the evidence at the time. Bank of Nova Scotia v. Fish, 6th May, 1895, xxiv., 709.

23. Negligence — Infant—Servant deviating from employment.—In a case tried without a jury, if evidence has been improperly admitted, a court of appeal may reject it and maintain the verdict provided there is sufficient evidence remaining to warrant it.—Judgment appealed from (33 N. B. Rep. 91) affirmed. Merritt v. Hempinstal, xxv., 150.

24. Disqualification of arbitrator — Probable bias — Rejection of evidence — Discretion — Marshalling evidence.—At the trial the plaintiff tendered evidence to shew that the architect had acted maliciously in the rejection of materials, but the trial judge required proof to be first adduced tending to shew that the materials had been wrongfully rejected, reserving until that fact should be established the consideration of the question whether malice was necessary to be proved, and if necessary, what evidence would be sufficient to establish it. Upon this ruling plaintiff declined to offer any further evidence, and thereupon judgment was entered for the defendants.—Held, that this ruling did not constitute a rejection, but was merely a direction as to the marshalling of evidence within the discretion of the trial judge. Neelon v. City of Toronto, xxv., 579.

25. Rules of evidence — “The Canada Evidence Act, 1893.”—Gambling instruments and moneys were seized in a gambling house under a warrant issued under s. 575, Criminal Code, and confiscated by judgment of a police magistrate in Montreal. Action was brought against the Attorney-General for recovery of the money.—Held, that in an action to revendicate the moneys so seized the rules of evidence in civil matters prevailing in the province would apply, and the plaintiff could not invoke “The Canada Evidence Act, 1893,” so as to be a competent witness in his own behalf: O’Neil v. Attorney-General of Canada, xxvi., 122.

26. Frauds, Statute of — Memorandum in writing—Repudiating contract.—A writing containing a statement of all the terms of a contract for the sale of goods requisite to constitute a memo. under the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds, may be used for that purpose though it repudiates the sale. Martin v. Hawbner, xxvi., 142.

27. Contract — Sale of goods — Evidence to vary written instrument—Admission of evidence.—The Supreme Court of Canada affirmed the judgment appealed from (33 N. S. Rep. 21) which in effect held, under the special circumstances of the case, involving dealings with two companies, connected in business and having almost similar names, that it was not inconsistent with a written agreement with the plaintiff to prove that defendant supposed he was dealing with another party with whom he had made other arrangements in respect to payment for goods purchased. Wilson et al. v. Windsor Foundry Co., xxxi., 381.

28. Life insurance — Condition of policy—Payment of premium — Delivery of policy—Evidence — Art. 1233 C. C.—The production from the custody of representatives of the insured, of a policy of life insurance, raises a prima facie presumption that it was duly delivered and the premium paid, but where the consideration of the policy is therein declared to be the payment of the first premium upon the delivery of the policy, parol testimony may be adduced to shew that, as a matter of fact, the premium was not so paid and that the delivery of the policy to the person therein named as the insured was merely provisional and conditional.—The reception of such proof cannot, under the circumstances, be considered as the admission of oral testimony in contradiction of a written instrument, and in the Province of Quebec, in commercial matters, such evidence is admissible under the provisions of article 1233 of the Civil Code. Mutual Life Assurance Co. of Canada v. Giguère, xxxii., 348.

29. Parol testimony — Commencement of proof in writing — Admissions — Arts. 1233, 1243 C. C.—60 Vict. c. 50, s. 20 (Que.)—Where a contract is admitted to have been entered into, by the party against whom it is set up, no commencement of proof in writing is necessary in order to permit of the adduction of evidence by parol as to the amount of the consideration or as to the conditions of the contract.—In such a case, the rule that admissions cannot be divided against the party making them does not apply. Campbell v. Young, xxxii, 547.

30. Libel — Privilege — Proof of malice—Admissibility of evidence—Misdirection—New trial.—G. local manager for Nova Scotia of the Confederation Life Association, of which M. had been a local agent wrote to Mrs. Freeman, a policy-holder, the following letter: "I think you know that at the time of my recent visit to Bridgetown I relieved Mr. O. S. Miller of our local agency. As you and your husband have evidently taken a kindly interest in Mr. Miller, I might say to you without entering into details as to the causes which compelled me to take this action, an explanation of which would hardly be appropriate here, that we have tried for a considerable time past to get Mr. Miller to attend properly to our business, and that it was only because it was clearly necessary that the change was made. In order to give Mr. Miller an opportunity to get the benefit of commissions on as much outstanding business as I could, I left the attention of certain matters in Mr. Miller's hands on the understanding that he would attend to them and remit to me as our representative. I now find that he has collected money which up to the present time, we have been unable to get him to report, and I am told that he is doing and saying all he can against myself and the company. The receipt for your premium fell due May 30th, days of grace June 30th. If you have made settlement of the premium with Mr. Miller your policy will, of course, be maintained in force, and we shall look to him for the returns in due course; but I have thought that it would be part of the plan Mr. Miller at one time declared he would follow, in order to cease as much of our business as possible, that he would allow your policy to lapse through inattention. As I have thought that you would not like to have it so I am prompted to write you this letter and shall be glad if you will advise us whether or not you have made settlement with Mr. Miller. If not, what is your wish in regard to continuing the policy?" In an action for libel it was shewn that he had not been dismissed from the agency but wanted larger commissions in continuing which were refused and that he was not a defaulter but was dilatory in making his returns. On the trial Mrs. Freeman gave evidence, subject to objection, of her understanding of the letter as imputing to M. a wrongful retention of money.—Held, that such evidence was improperly received and there was a miscarriage of justice by its admission.—The judge at the trial charged the jury that "if the meaning of the first part of the letter is that he dismissed the plaintiff, and you decide that he did not dismiss the plaintiff, and it was not a corrupt statement, that is malice beyond all doubt. The protection which he gets from the privileged occasion is all gone. He loses it entirely. The same way with the second part. If it is not true it is malicious and his protection is taken away." — Held, that this was misdirection, that the question for the jury was not the truth or falsity of the statements but whether or not, if false, the defendant honestly believed them to be true, so that it was misdirection on a vital point.—The majority of the court were of opinion, Girouard and Davies, JJ., contra, that as defendant had asked for a new trial only in the court below this court could not order judgment to be entered for him and a new trial was granted.—Judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia (35 N. S. Rep. 117) reversed. Green v. Miller, xxxiii, 193.

31. Criminal law — Canada Evidence Act, 1893 — Husband and wife — Competency of witness—"Communication"—Construction of statute—Privilege—Directions by legal adviser—Practice—Reference to Hansard debates—Method of interpretation.—Under the provisions of "The Canada Evidence Act, 1893," the husband or wife of a person charged with an indictable offence is not only a competent witness for or against the person accused, but may also be compelled to testify. Mills, J., dissenting.—Evidence by the wife of the person accused of acts performed by her under directions of counsel sent to her by the accused to give the directions, is not a communication from the husband to his wife in respect of which the Canada Evidence Act forbids her to testify. Mills, J., dissenting. — Per Girouard, J., (dissenting). The communications between husband and wife contemplated by the Canada Evidence Act, 1893, may be de verbo, de facto or de corpore. Sexual intercourse is such a communication and in the case under appeal neither the evidence by the accused that blood-stains upon his clothing were caused by having such intercourse at a time when his wife was unwell, nor the testimony of his wife in contradiction of such statement as to her condition, ought to have been received.—Per Mills, J., (dissenting). Under the provisions of the Canada Evidence Act, 1893, and its amendments the husband or wife of an accused person is competent as a witness only on behalf of the accused and may not give testimony on the part of the Crown.—Per Taschereau, C.J. The reports of debates in the House of Commons are not appropriate sources of information to assist in the interpretation of language used in a statute. Gosselin v. The King, xxxiii, 255.

2. ADMISSIONS.

48. Admissions by pleadings—Proof of private writing—Traversing validity of instrument.—H. agreed to invest trust funds of C. with M. in a land speculation, mentioning in the letter notifying M. of the acceptance of his draft the undertaking H. had as to the share he was to get and adding: "I also assume that the lands are properly conveyed, and the full conditions of the prospectus carried out, and if not, that money will be at once refunded." The lands were never properly conveyed and the conditions of the prospectus never carried out. C. transferred sous seing privé this claim to plaintiff who brought action for the draft. Objection was taken that the transfer had not been proved.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 6 Q. B. 354), that as defendant had traversed the validity of the transfer in his pleas, it must be held to have been judicially admitted. Moody v. Jones, xix., 266.

49. Evidence — Judicial admissions—Nullified instruments—Cadastral—Plans and official books of reference—Compromise—"Transaction."—A will, in favour of the husband of the testatrix, was set aside in an action by the heir-at-law, and declared by the judgment to be an acte faux, and therefore to be null and void and of no effect. In a subsequent petitory action between the same parties:—Held, Girouard, J., dissenting, that the judgment declaring the will faux was not evidence of admission of the title of the heir-at-law, by reason of anything the devisee had done in respect of the will, first, because the will having been annulled was for all purposes unavailable, and, secondly, because the declaration of faux, contained in the judgment, did not shew any such admission.—The constructive admission of a fact resulting from a default to answer interrogatories upon articulated facts recorded under C. C. P. art. 225, cannot be invoked as a judicial admission, in a subsequent action of a different nature between the same parties.—Statements entered upon cadastral plans and official books of reference made by public officials and filed in the Lands Registration Offices, in virtue of the provisions of the Civil Code, do not in any way bind persons who were not cognizant thereof, at the time the entries were made.—Where a deed entered into by the parties to a suit, in order to effect a compromise of family disputes and prevent litigation, failed to attain its end and was annulled and set aside by order of the court as being in contravention of art. 311 C. C., no allegation contained in it could subsist even as an admission.—Judgment appealed from (Q. R. 5 Q. B. 458) affirmed. Durocher v. Durocher, xxvii., 363.

3. (ON) APPEALS.

51. Instrument first introduced on appeal—Case in appeal.—A document not proved at the trial cannot be introduced on an appeal nor invoked or made part of the case on an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. (See 16 R. L. 663.) Exchange Bank v. Gilman, xvii., 108.

52. Negligence of servant—Deviation from employment — Resumption — Contributory negligence—Infant.—If in a case tried without a jury evidence has been improperly admitted, a Court of Appeal may reject it and maintain the verdict if the remaining evidence warrants it. Judgment appealed from (33 N. B. Rep. 91) affirmed. Merritt v. Hepenstal, xxv., 150.

53. Railway company—Negligence—Sparks from engine or "hot-box"—Damages by fire—Evidence — Burden of proof — C. C. art. 1053 — Questions of fact.—In an action against a railway company for damages for loss of property by fire, alleged to have been occasioned by sparks from an engine or hot-box of a passing train, in which the court appealed from held that there was sufficient proof that the fire occurred through the fault or negligence of the company, and it was not shewn that such finding was clearly wrong or erroneous, the Supreme Court would not interfere with the finding. Judgment appealed from (Q. R. 9 S. C. 319) affirmed. Sénéac v. Central Vermont Ry. Co., xxvi., 641.

54. Appeal—Evidence by commission—Reversal on questions of fact.—Where the witnesses have not been heard in the presence of the judge but their depositions were taken before a commissioner, a Court of Appeal may deal with the evidence more fully than if the trial judge had heard it or there had been a finding of fact by a jury and may reverse the finding of the trial court if such evidence warrants it. *Matzard v. 4. EXPERTS.

58. Onus of proof—Expert testimony—Concurrent findings.]—Where the burthen of proof to make out a counterclaim for damages depended upon expert testimony of an unsatisfactory character, the judgment appealed from (4 B. 59. 60. Expert testimony—Appreciation of evidence—Reversal on questions of fact.]—In an action by the owner of adjoining property for damages caused by the operation of an electric power house, the evidence was contradictory, and the courts below gave effect to the testimony of scientific witnesses in preference to that of persons acquainted with the locality. Held, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that notwithstanding the concurrent findings of the courts below, as the witnesses were equally credible, the evidence of those who spoke from personal knowledge of the facts ought to have been preferred to that of persons giving opinions based merely upon scientific observations. *Gareau v. 63. Onus of proof—Expert testimony—Concurrent findings.]—Where the burthen of proof to make out a counterclaim for damages depended upon expert testimony of an unsatisfactory character, the judgment appealed from (4 B. C. Rep. 101) was set aside against the concurrent findings of two courts below. William Hamilton Mfg. Co. v. Victoria Lumbering and Mfg. Co., xxvi., 96.

64. Concurrent findings on questions of fact—Reversal on appeal.]—Although there may be concurrent findings on questions of fact in both courts below, the Supreme Court of Canada will, upon appeal, interfere with their decision where it clearly appears that a gross injustice has been occasioned to the appellant, and there is evidence sufficient to justify findings to the contrary. Taschereau, J., dissented, and held that as there had been concurrent findings in both courts below supported by the evidence, an appellate court ought not to interfere. City of Montreal v. Cadieux, xxix., 616.

65. Sale of sample—Evidence of contract—Findings of fact.]—In an action for the price of a tombstone the defence was that it was not of the design ordered. It had been ordered from photographic samples and an order form was filled in which, when produced at the trial, contained the words "E. M. Lewis, Reporter Design" which the defence claimed was not in it when it was signed by the purchaser but which was there two or three hours later when handed to one of the vendors by his foreman who had taken the order and filled in the form. The evidence at the trial was confictory and the chancellor, trying the case without a jury, decided for the defence and dismissed the action. His judgment was reversed by the Court of Appeal. Held, per Taschereau, C.J., that the evidence establishes that the words in dispute were on the order when it was signed and the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. Held, per Sedgewick and Davies, JJ., Mills, J., hesitante, that even if these words were not originally on the order the circumstances disclosed in evidence shew that the design supplied was substantially that ordered and the judgment appealed from should stand. Held, per Girouard, J., that, following Village of Granby v. Ménard (31 Can. S. C. R. 14), findings on contradictory evidence ought not to be reversed by an appellate court. Dempster v. Lewis, xxxiii., 292.

(b) By a Jury.

81. Inferences drawn by jury—Condition of locomotive engine—Negligence.—There is a presumption that damages might have been caused by a locomotive engine shewn to have been in bad order sufficient to justify an inference to that effect drawn by a jury in arriving at their verdict. Judgment appealed from (14 Ont. App. R. 309) affirmed. Canada Atlantic Ry. Co. v. Mowley, xv., 145.

82. Parol evidence — Memo in writing—Question for jury—Statute of Frauds—Damages—Common counts.—Action upon a contract alleged to have been made to deliver to plaintiff at St. John, N. B., 300 cords of good merchantable hemlock bark, suitable for tanning, at $4 per cord, plaintiff paying freight from Shediac; also upon the common money counts.—The contract was wholly verbal that defendants had agreed that the bark should be all good bark; that it was to be delivered at St. John and measured on the cars there; that defendants were to send some one to measure it, and that if they did not plaintiff's son was to measure it; that plaintiff was to pay freight from Shediac, where defendants were to load it on the cars, and as to payment plaintiff gave evidence that $304.84, then due by defendants to plaintiff, was to be applied upon the bark; that defendants were to take leather from plaintiff in payment of balance; that the bark was to be delivered in two or three months, as plaintiff wanted it. In answer to plaintiff's order to forward bark defendants sent forward three car loads, which proved to be utterly worthless. Plaintiff also gave evidence that at the solicitation of defendants he gave them his note for $500 at 4 months on defendants promising that the bark would be all in before the note was due, and that, notwithstanding the giving of the note, defendants would take leather in payment of the bark as agreed; that when plaintiff asked defendant Hamilton for a receipt for the note for $500, the latter wrote out the following paper:—"C. H. Peters, Esq.—To Hamilton & Smith, 1876, April 20, To 200 cords hemlock bark at Shediac, $4, $800; April 20, To . . . cords hemlock bark at Shediac, $4.84 (total), $804.84. Cr.—By note at 4 months, $500; By goods per statement of account, $304.84; total $804.84. The above bark to be measured on the cars in St. John. Settled as above. Hamilton & Smith."—Upon this document being produced defendants insisted that it contained the contract and that plaintiff's evidence of the contract must fall to the ground. Both parties were permitted to give oral testimony to establish what the contract was. The evidence was chiefly that of the plaintiff and defendant Hamilton, and was very contradictory. The jury believed the plaintiff and rendered a verdict for him for $945.80 damages.—The Supreme Court (N. B.) made a rule for a new trial absolute, being of opinion that the contract had been reduced to writing and was contained in the memo. of 20th April, 1876; that the words "at Shediac" in the memo. shewed that the bark was at Shediac at that time, and that the parties were contracting with reference to that particular bark. That being the case, it was unnecessary to make any stipulation about the delivery, because by the sale the property vested in plaintiff without delivery, and the evidence of plaintiff as to delivery should not have been received, for it was either immaterial, or the effect of it was to vary the terms of the written contract, which, being for the sale of goods above the value of £10, was required by the Statute of Frauds to be in writing.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (19 N. B. Rep. 284), that whether the memo. of 20th April, 1876, was or was not drawn up by consent of both parties with intent to be that which should settle and contain their contract in whole or in part was a question for the jury, and the onus of proving that the document was drawn up for that purpose lay upon defendants. That the nature of the case required that both parties should be permitted to give oral testimony to establish what the contract was and, as the jury had wholly disbelieved defendants' evidence, plaintiff was entitled to recover both on common counts and on special counts, and the verdict of the jury should not have been set aside. Peters v. Hamilton, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 763.

83. Negligence—Use of dangerous materials —Proximate cause of accident — Injuries to workman — Employer's liability — Presumptions — Findings of jury sustained by courts below.—As there can be no responsibility on the part of an employer for injuries sustained by an employee in the course of his employment, unless there be positive testimony, or presumptions weighty, precise and consistent, that the employer is chargeable with negligence which was the immediate, necessary and direct cause of the accident which led to the injuries suffered, it is the duty of an appellate court to relieve the employer of liability in a case where there is no evidence as to the immediate cause of an explosion of dangerous material which caused the injuries, notwithstanding that the finding of a jury in favour of the plaintiff, not assented to by the trial judge, have been sustained by two courts below. Taschereau, J., dissented, taking a different view of the evidence, and being of opinion that the findings of the jury, concurred in by both courts below, were based upon reasonable presumptions drawn from the evidence, and that, following The George Matthews Co. v. Bouchard (28 S. C. R. 580,) and The Metropolitan Ry. Co. v. Wright (11 App. Cas. 152) those findings ought not to be reversed on appeal. The Asbestos and Asbestic Co. v. Durand (30 S. C. 103. Slander — Malice — Act of public officer — Suspension of post office clerk — Privileged communication — Onus of proof. — In an action of slander against a public officer in respect of the communication of his decision on the case of a subordinate whom he accused of criminal acts, the onus is upon the plaintiff to shew that the slanderous statement was actuated by motives of personal spite and ill-will in order to sustain a verdict for malicious slander. C. R. 241), that when a British ship is found in the prohibited waters of the Behring Sea, the burthen of proof is upon the owner or master to rebut by positive evidence that the vessel is not there used or employed in contravention of the Seal Fishery (Behring Sea) Act, 1891, 54 and 55 Vict. (Imp.) c. 19, s. 1, s.-s. 5.—Held also, reversing the judgment appealed from, that there was positive and clear evidence that the "Oscar and Hattie" was not used or employed at the time of her seizure in contravention of 54 & 55 Vict. c. 19 s. 1, s.-s. 5. The "Oscar and Hattie" v. C.—Railway subsidies—54 Vict. c. 68 (Que.)—Insolvent company—Construction of railway by new company—Payment of claims by Crown—Transfer by payee.—A company formed for the construction of a subsidized railway having failed, another company undertook to complete it, and the Government of Quebec agreed to pay all the actual debts against the road out of the unearned subsidies. A., the contractor of the former company, presented a claim for $175,000, which was approved of and paid, whereupon he paid over $100,000 of the amount to P. for services performed in organizing the new company and obtaining payment of the claim. The Government afterwards brought an action against P. to recover back the $100,000 on the ground that A.'s claim was fictitious and was paid on false representations. Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, that the action must fail if it could not have been maintained against A.; that the onus was on the Crown of proving A.'s claim to be fictitious; that the Crown not only failed to satisfy such onus, but the evidence clearly established the claim to be a just and reasonable one.—By consent of parties, certain evidence which had been taken before a Parliamentary Royal Commission was filed of record "to avail as evidence" on the trial. Held, that, notwithstanding the consent, such evidence could not be accepted as evidence in the cause. *Pacaud v. 9. SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

146. Foundation for secondary evidence—Execution of agreement—Laches—Right to relief inconsistent with claim.—On the hearing of an equity suit secondary evidence of a document was tendered on proof that its proper custodian was out of the jurisdiction and supposed to be in Scotland; that a letter had been written to him asking for it, and to his sister and other persons connected with him inquiring as to his whereabouts, but information was not obtained. Held, affirming the decision of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, that this was not a sufficient foundation for secondary evidence; that the letters should have stated that this specific paper was wanted; that an independent person should have been employed to make inquiries in Scotland for the custodian of the document, and to ask for it if he had been found; and that a commission might have been issued to the Court of Session in Scotland, and a commissioner appointed by that court to procure the attendance of the custodian and his examination as a witness.—The suit was for a specific performance of an agreement by C., one of the beneficiaries under a will vesting the testator's estate in trustees for division among her children, to sell lands of the estate in New Brunswick to the plaintiff, P.; and the document as to which secondary evidence was offered was an alleged agreement by the trustees and other beneficiaries to convey the said lands to C. The evidence was received, but only established the execution of the alleged agreement by one of the trustees and one of the beneficiaries, and the proof of the contents was not consistent with the documentary evidence, and the case made out by the bill. Held, that if the evidence was admissible it would not establish the plaintiff's case; that the alleged agreement, not being signed by both the trustees, could convey no estate legal or equitable, to C.; and that the proof of its contents was not satisfactory. Porter v. Hale, xxiii., 265.

147. Election petition—Preliminary objections—Service of petition—Bailiff's return—Cross-examination—Production of copy.—A return by a bailiff that he had served an election petition by leaving true copies, "duly certified," with the sitting member is a sufficient return. It need not state by whom the copies were certified. Articles 56 and 78 C. C. P.—Counsel for the person served will not be allowed to cross-examine the bailiff as to the contents of the copies served without producing them or laying a foundation for secondary evidence. Beauharnois Election Case, xxvii., 232.

(See 21 L. C. Jur. 92.) Darling v. Brown, ii., 26.

151. Parol—Determination of suit—Proof of judgment.—In an action of damages for malicious arrest and imprisonment of plaintiff, under a capias, issued by a stipendiary magistrate in Nova Scotia, whose judgment, it was alleged, was reversed in appeal, oral evidence "that the decision of the magistrate was reversed" was held to be inadmissible to prove a final judgment. Judgment appealed from (2 R. & C. 528) reversed. Gunn v. Cox, iii., 296.

152. Onus probandi—Action on bond—Execution of bond—Seal.—Action on a bond against sureties of defaulting clerk. Defence, that the bond was not executed by them as it had no seals attached when the sureties signed. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (19 N. S. Rep. 171), Henry, J., dubitante, that plaintiff had proved a prima facie case of a bond properly executed on its face, and as defendants had not negatived due execution, it being quite consistent with the evidence that it was duly executed, the onus of proving want of execution was not thrown off defendants, and as neither the subscribing witness nor the principal obligor was called at the trial to corroborate the evidence of the defendants, plaintiff was entitled to recover. Marshall v. Municipality of Shelburne, xiv., 737.

153. Instrument signed in blank—Execution of bond—Magistrate's certificate—Weight of evidence—Acceptance of bond—Proximate cause—Estoppel.—Action by the Crown on a bond of suretyship. Defendant pleaded non est factum; swore he signed the bond in blank; that he made no affidavit of justification, and that the magistrate's certificate of execution of the bond, as required by statute, was irregular and unauthorized. The witness to C's execution of the bond, and the magistrate, each swore to the correctness of his own action, and that C. must have properly executed the bond or the affidavit would not have been made or the certificate given. Held, per Ritchie, C.J., Strong, Fournier and Gwynne, JJ., reversing the judgment appealed from (6 R. & G. 313), that the weight of evidence was in favour of the due execution of the bond by C.—Per Patterson, J., that C. was estopped from denying that he had executed the bond. Held, also, per Patterson, J., reversing the judgment appealed from, that the execution of the bond, and not the certificate of the magistrate, was the proximate, or real, cause of its acceptance by the Crown. The Queen v. Chesley, xvi., 306.

154. Representations—Partnership—Names of partners—Letter heads.—The representation of an agent that his principals are a firm in a distant province, and that such firm is composed of A. and B., coupled with the evidence of receipt by the person to whom the representation is made of letters from one of the alleged members of the firm, written on paper on which the names of such members are printed, in answer to letters from such persons, is prima facie evidence that A. and B. constitute said firm. (See 28 N. B. Rep. 102.) McDonald v. Gilbert, xvi., 700.

155. Statute of Frauds—Contract affecting lands—Specific performance—Part performance.—B. in British Columbia wrote several letters to a sister in England asking for some of her children to be sent to him and in one he said, "I want to get some relation here, for what property I have, in case of sudden death, would be eat up by outsiders, and my relations would get nothing."—On hearing of these letters T., a son of B.'s sister and a coal miner in England, came to British Columbia and lived with B. for six years. All that time he worked on B.'s farm and received a share of the profits. After that he went to work in a coal mine in Idaho. While there he received a letter from B. containing the following: "I want you to come at once as I am very bad. I really do not know if I shall get over it or not and you had better hurry up and come to me at once, for I want you and I dare say you will guess the reason why. If anything should happen to me you are the person who should be here." On receipt of this letter, T. immediately started for the farm, but B. had died and was buried before he reached it. After his return he received the following telegram which had not reached him before he left for home: "Come at once if you wish to see me alive, property is yours. Answer immediately. (Sgd.) B." Under these circumstances, T. claimed the farm and stock of B. and brought suit for specific performance of an alleged agreement by B. that the same should belong to him at B.'s death. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that as there was no agreement in writing for the transfer of the property to T., and the facts shewn were not sufficient to constitute a part performance of such agreement, the fourth section of the Statute of Frauds was not complied with, and no performance of the contract could be decreed. Turner v. Prevost, xvii., 283.

156. Injury by vicious dog—Ownership—Scienter—Evidence for jury.—W. brought action for injuries to her daughter committed by a dog owned or harboured by V. Defence was that V. did not own the dog, and had no knowledge that he was vicious. The dog was formerly owned by a man in V.'s employ who lived and kept the dog at V.'s house, and went away leaving the dog behind with V.'s son, to be kept until sent for, and afterwards the dog lived at the house going every day to V.'s place of business with him, or his son who assisted in the business. The savage disposition of the dog on two occasions was sworn to, V. being present at one and his son at the other. V. swore that he knew nothing about the dog being left by the owner with his son until he heard it at the trial. The trial judge ordered a nonsuit, which was set aside by the full court and a new trial ordered. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (28 N. B. Rep. 472), that there was ample evidence for the jury that V. harboured the dog with knowledge of its vicious propensities and the nonsuit was rightly set aside. Vaughan v. Wood, xviii., 703.

157. Suretyship—Condition—Letter of guarantee—Proof of loss—Account sales.—H. upon receipt of an order by telegram from the Exchange Bank to load cattle on a steamer for M. with guarantee against loss shipped cattle, 3 days after suspension of the bank, consigned to their own agents at Liverpool. Subsequently they filed a claim with the liquidators of the bank for an alleged loss of $7,965 on the shipments, and the claim being contested their only witness, one of their employees who knew nothing personally about what the cattle realized, put in account of sales, received by mail, as evidence of loss. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 7 Q. B. 317), that assuming there was a valid guarantee given by the bank, (upon which the court did not express any opinion) the evidence as to the alleged loss was insufficient to entitle H. to recover. —Per Taschereau, J. That the guarantee was subjected to a delivery of the cattle to M. and that H. having shipped the cattle in their own name could not recover on the guarantee. Hathaway v. Chaplin, xxi., 23.

158. Supreme and Exchequer Courts of Canada—Solicitor and client—Costs—Quantum meruit—Parol evidence—Art. 3597, R. S. Q.—In proceedings before the Supreme and Exchequer Courts, there being no tariff as between attorney and client, an attorney has the right to establish the quantum meruit of his services by oral evidence in an action for his costs. Paradis v. Bossé, xxi., 419.

159. Interrogatories on articulated facts—Evasive answers taken as affirmative—C. C. P. Arts. 228, 229.—Plaintiff alleged that he made for defendant 50,980 railway ties, according to a contract between defendant (acting by R. McG. his brother, agent and mandatory) on one part, and L. & D. on the other part, said L. & D. having made over to plaintiff all right, claims and interests in the contract; that 33,900 ties were delivered by plaintiff to defendant on the line of railway, and 17,080 on river banks and were of the price and value stipulated in the contract. Further, that he made for defendant and delivered to him 2,822 cull ties, for which defendant promised to pay $8 per 100 and which were worth that price. Lastly, having paid for defendant, for rent of ground, $40, making in all, according to price stipulated and value of ties, $6,855.89. He credited defendant $3,765, leaving $3,090.89 claimed.—Defendant met the whole claim by a general denial, and alleged that the contract was never entered into by himself, but by the said R. McG. in his personal name and capacity; that plaintiff did not fulfil his contract nor make the ties as stipulated, and that the amount which he received was sufficient payment for the ties which had been delivered. On articulated facts defendant answered, with one or two exceptions: "I do not know." The Superior Court, on motion to take the interrogatories pro confesso, held that these answers were evasive and insufficient, and that the facts, as articulated, must therefore be declared to be true and proved, and on these and on the evidence adduced condemned defendant to pay plaintiff $3,090.89 for balance on price and value of the ties, which judgment was affirmed by the Queen's Bench. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (4 Legal News 95), that defendant did not answer the interrogatories which referred to the matters in issue, in a categorical, explicit, and precise manner as he was bound to do. If he had no personal knowledge he should have obtained the information from his general agent, clerks and others acting for him in executing the contract. These interrogatories, therefore, were properly taken as affirmatively answered and proved the plaintiff's case. McGreevy v. Paillé, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 141.

160. Contract for extra work—Decision of engineer—Interrogatories on faits et articles—Taking pro confesso—Art. 229 C. C. P.—Practice.—The contention that the faits et articles submitted to the appellant should be taken pro confesso, because the answers thereto were not direct, categorical and precise is not open to a party who fails to move to that effect in the court of first instance. The case of McGreevy v. Paillé (4 Legal News 95), affirmed by Supreme Court (No. 159, ante), was not in point as, in that case, a motion had been regularly made and granted in the Superior Court. Nor has Douglas v. Ritchie (18 L. C. Jur. 274), any application, as there defendant made default and had not answered at all. Here defendant had answered, and if plaintiffs desired to have the answers set aside, they ought to have applied to the court by motion.—2. The appellant was entitled to reversal as to $1,882.15, allowed by oversight.—3. The $3,765.20 added by the Queen's Bench to Superior Court judgment should also be deducted the difference between 20 and 24 cents per yard for earth work done in 1878, there being sufficient evidence to establish that the engineer, who was to fix prices of extras, finally had fixed the price of such work at 20 cents.—Appeal allowed with costs and judgment varied. McGreevy v. McCarron, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 144.

161. Plaintiff's testimony—Want of corroboration—Contradictory evidence—Verdict against weight of evidence—New trial.—In an action for price of goods sold by the plaintiff to the defendant's brother, plaintiff gave evidence of an agreement with the defendant wherein the latter undertook to give notes at four months to retire notes at three months given by his brother, the purchaser of the goods; the agreement was carried out for a time, but defendant finally refused to continue it any longer. The evidence shewed that defendant always gave his notes to his brother who carried them to the plaintiff. Defendant, on the other hand, swore that he never made any such agreement, but only gave notes to his brother to help him in his business. The evidence of the plaintiff was entirely uncorroborated. A verdict was found for the plaintiff and the Supreme Court of New Brunswick refused a new trial. — Held, Ritchie, C.J., and Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the weight of evidence was not sufficiently in favour of the plaintiff to justify the verdict, and there must be a new trial.—Appeal allowed with costs and new trial granted. (See 24 N. B. Rep. 482; 26 N. B. Rep. 326.) Fraser v. Stephenson, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 575.

162. Seal Fishery (North Pacific) Act, 1893, 56 & 57 Vict. c. 23 (Imp.) ss. 1, 3, and 4—Judicial notice of order-in-council thereunder—Protocol of examination of offending ship by Russian war vessel, sufficiency of—Presence within prohibited zone—Bona fides—Statutory presumption of liability—Evidence—Question of fact.—The Admiralty Court is bound to take judicial notice of an order-in-council from which the court derives its jurisdiction, issued under the authority of the Act 56 & 57 Vict. c. 23 (Imp.). The Seal Fishery (North Pacific) Act, 1893.—A Russian cruiser manned by a crew in the pay of the Russian Government, and in command of an officer of the Russian Navy is a "war vessel" within the meaning of said order-in-council, and a protocol of examination of an offending British ship by such cruiser signed by the officer in command is admissible in evidence in proceedings taken in the Admiralty Court in an action for condemnation under the Seal Fishery (North Pacific) Act, 1893, and is proof of its contents. — The ship in question in this case having been seized within the prohibited waters of the thirty mile zone round the Komandorsky Islands, fully equipped and manned for sealing, not only failed to fulfil the onus cast upon her of proving that she was not used or employed in killing or attempting to kill any seals within the seas specified in the order-in-council, but the evidence was sufficient to prove that she was guilty of an infraction of the statute and order-in-council. The "Minnie" v. The Queen, xxiii., 478.

163. New trial—Negligence—Question for jury—Withdrawal of case from jury.—Action against defendant for negligence, causing the death of a servant. The trial judge withdrew the case from the jury and directed a verdict for defendant on the ground that there was no evidence of negligence. The full court granted a motion for a new trial with costs, and remitted the cause for further inquiry, and held, (Graham, J., dissenting), that the trial judge erred in withdrawing the case from the jury, as there was evidence of negligence and want of proper and reasonable care, which should have been submitted to the jury. The Supreme Court of Canada s. c. d.—19 held, affirming the decision appealed from (26 N. S. Rep. 268), that the new trial had been properly ordered. New Glasgow Iron, Coal & Ry. Co. v. Tobin, 7th November, 1894.

164 Bar to action—Foreign judgment—Estoppel—Res judicata—Judgment obtained after action begun—R. S. N. S. (5 ser.) c. 104, s. 12, s. 8. 7; orders 24 and 70, rule 2; order 35, rule 38.—The provision of R. S. N. S. (5 ser.) c. 104, order 35, rule 38, that evidence of a judgment recovered in a foreign country shall not be conclusive, in an action on such judgment in Nova Scotia, of its correctness, but that the defendant may defend such suit as fully as if brought for the original cause of action, cannot be invoked in favour of the defendant in Nova Scotia, who has brought an unsuccessful action in a foreign court against the plaintiff. Law v. Hansen, xxv., 69.

165. Evidence—Presumptions—Omnia præsumuntur contra spoliatores.—St. L. filed a petition of right to recover balance on a contract for public works. Certain time books and original documents from which his accounts had been made up, and also his books of account had disappeared. The judge found that these books and documents had been destroyed in view of a commission to inquire into the manner in which the works had been carried on, and dismissed the petition. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (4 Ex. C. R. 185), that the evidence did not warrant the finding that the documents had been destroyed with a fraudulent intent, and to prevent inquiry; that all that could have been proved by what was destroyed had been supplied by other evidence; and that the rule omnia præsumuntur contra spoliatores did not justify the judge in assuming that, if produced, the documents destroyed would have falsified St. L.'s accounts, the evidence on the trial shewing instead that the accounts would have been corroborated. St. Louis v. The Queen, xxv., 649.

166. Onus of proof—Expert testimony—Concurrent findings.—Defendants counter-claimed damages caused by the defective construction of a boiler for their steamer, which had collapsed: Held, reversing the decision appealed from (4 B. C. Rep. 101) that conclusive effect should not be given to the evidence of witnesses, called as experts as to the cause of the collapse, who were not present at the time of the accident; whose evidence was not founded upon knowledge, but was mere matter of opinion; who gave no reasons and stated no facts to shew upon what their opinion was based, and where the result would be to condemn as defective in design and faulty in construction all boilers built after the same pattern which the evidence shewed were in general use.—The judgment therefore allowing the counterclaim was set aside, though against the concurrent findings of two courts below. William Hamilton Mfg. Co. v. Victoria Lumbering and Mfg. Co., xxvi., 96.

167. Circumstantial evidence—Negligence—Cause of accident—Conjecture—Onus of proof.—Plaintiff's husband was accidentally killed whilst engineer in charge of defendant's engine and machinery. The evidence was altogether circumstantial, and left the manner in which the accident occurred a matter to be inferred from circumstances proved. Held, that in order to maintain the action it was necessary to prove by direct evidence, or by weighty, concise and consistent presumptions arising from the facts proved that the accident was actually caused by the positive fault, imprudence or neglect of the person sought to be charged with responsibility. Montreal Rolling Mills Co. v. Corcoran, xxvi., 595.

168. Will—Undue influence.—In order to set aside a will on the ground that its execution was obtained by undue influence on the mind of the testator, it is not sufficient to shew that the circumstances attending the execution are consistent with the hypothesis that it was so obtained. It must be shewn that they are inconsistent with a contrary hypothesis. Judgment appealed from (3 B. C. Rep. 513) affirmed. Adams v. McBeath, xxvii., 13.

169. Landlord and tenant—Loss by fire—Cause of fire—Negligence—Civil responsibility—Legal presumption—Rebuttal of—Onus of proof—Hazardous occupation.—To rebut the presumption created by art. 1629 C. C., it is not necessary for the lessee to prove the exact or probable origin of the fire, or that it was due to unavoidable accident or irresistible force. It is sufficient for him to prove that he has used the premises leased as a prudent administrator (en bon père de famille), and that the fire occurred without any fault that could be attributed to him or to persons for whose acts he should be held responsible.—Judgment appealed from (Q. R. 5 Q. B. 88) affirmed, Strong, C.J., dissenting. Murphy v. Labbé, xxvii., 126.

170. Negligence—Defective machinery—Evidence for jury.—T. was employed as a weaver in a cotton mill, and was injured while assisting a less experienced hand, by the shuttle flying out of the loom at which the latter worked, and striking her on the head. The mill contained some 400 looms, and for every forty-six there was a man, called the "loom fixer," whose duty it was to keep them in proper repair. The evidence shewed that the accident was caused through a bolt breaking by the shuttle coming in contact with it, and as this bolt served as a guard to the shuttle, the latter could not remain in the loom. The jury found that the breaking of the bolt caused the accident, and that the "loom fixer" was guilty of negligence in not having examined it within reasonable time before it broke. T. obtained a verdict, which was affirmed by the Court of Appeal. Held, (Gwynne, J., dissenting), that the "loom fixer" had not performed his duty properly; that the evidence as to negligence could not have been withdrawn from the jury; and that, as there was evidence to justify the finding, the verdict should stand.—Per Gwynne, J., that the finding of the jury that the negligence consisted in the omission to examine the bolt was not satisfactory, as there was nothing to shew that such examination could have prevented the accident, and there should be a new trial. Canadian Coloured Cotton Mills Co. v. Talbot, xxvii., 198.

171. Will—Sheriff's deed—Evidence—Proof of heirship—Rejection of evidence—New trial—Champerty—Maintenance.—A will purporting to convey all the testator's estate to his wife was attacked for uncertainty by persons claiming under alleged heirs-at-law of the testator and through conveyances from them to persons abroad. The courts below held that the will was valid.

Held, affirming judgment appealed from (23 Ont. App. R. 785), that as the evidence of the relationship of the alleged grantors to the deceased was only hearsay and the best evidence had not been adduced; that as the heirship-at-law was dependent upon the alleged heir having survived his father and it was not established, and the court would not presume that his father died before him; and that as the persons claiming under the will had no information as to the identity of the parties in interest who were represented in the transactions by men of straw, one of whom was alleged to be a trustee, and there was no evidence as to the nature of his trust, and there was strong suspicion of the existence of champerty or maintenance on the part of the persons attacking the will, the latter had failed to establish the title of the persons under whom they claimed, and the appeal should be dismissed. May v. Logie, xxvii., 443.

172. Action on disturbance—Possessory action—"Possession annale"—Arts. 946 and 948 C. C. P.—Nature of possession of unenclosed vacant lands—Boundary marks—Delivery of possession.—In 1890, G. purchased a lot of land 25 feet wide, and the vendor pointed it out to him on the ground, and shewed him the pickets marking its width and depth. The lot remained vacant and unenclosed up to the time of the disturbance, and was assessed as a 25 foot lot to G., who paid all municipal taxes and rates thereon. In 1895 the adjoining lot, which was also vacant and unenclosed, was sold to another person who commenced laying foundations for a building, and in doing so, encroached by two feet on the width of the lot so purchased by G., who brought a possessory action within a couple of months from the date of the disturbance. Held, that the possession annale, required by art. 946 of the Code of Civil Procedure, was sufficiently established to entitle the plaintiff to maintain his action. Gauthier v. Masson, xxvii., 575.

173. Master and servant—Negligence—Probable cause of accident.—Evidence which merely supports a theory propounded as to the probable cause of injuries received through an unexplained accident is insufficient to support a verdict for damages where there is no direct fault or negligence proved against the defendant, and the actual cause of the accident is purely a matter of speculation or conjecture. Canada Paint Co. v. Trainor, xxviii., 352.

174. Railways—Eminent domain—Expropriation of lands—Arbitration—Evidence—Findings of fact—Duty of appellate court—51 Vict. c. 29 (D.).—On an arbitration in a matter of the expropriation of land under the provisions of "The Railway Act," the majority of the arbitrators appeared to have made their computation of the amount of the indemnity awarded to the owner of the land by taking an average on the different estimates made on behalf of both parties according to the evidence before them. Held, reversing the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench and restoring the judgment of the Superior Court (Taschereau and Girouard, JJ., dissenting), that the award was properly set aside on the appeal to the Superior Court, as the arbitrators appeared to have proceeded upon a wrong principle in the estimation of the indemnity thereby awarded. Grand Trunk Ry. Co. v. Coupal, xxviii., 531.

175. Trustee — Misappropriation — Surety — Knowledge by cestui que trust — Estoppel — Parties.—Funds held by F. as trustee for C. were misappropriated by being deposited with the firm of F. F. & Co., of which F. was a member, and after being so kept for upwards of 6 years, were lost through failure of the firm. In an action against defendants, (sureties of F.), to recover the funds so misappropriated and lost, the defence relied upon knowledge of the misappropriation on the part of C., shewn by the fact that payments of interest were made to C. from time to time, by cheque by the insolvent firm.—The court en banc held, that the manner in which these payments were made was not evidence of knowledge by C., that she was bound to communicate to the sureties; that at most it shewed nothing more than assent by C. to the deposit of the income to which she was entitled, with the firm of which her trustee was a member; that the trial judge could have disposed of the contention raised on behalf of the defendants without making C. a party to the suit; and, semble, that knowledge by C. that some part of the trust fund had been placed by the trustee temporarily with F. F. & Co., awaiting investment on good security, would not be held to be knowledge, assent or acquiescence by C., in the misconduct of the trustee which led to the loss of the funds.—The Supreme Court of Canada affirmed the decision appealed from (30 N. S. Rep. 173, sub nom. Eastern Trust Co. v. Forrest), and dismissed the appeal with costs. Bayne v. Eastern Trusts Co., xxviii., 606.

176. Marine insurance — Partial loss on cargo — Stranding — Jury trial.—On a voyage from Porto Rico to Halifax the "Donzella" put into Barrington, N. S., for shelter, the wind being south-east with a heavy snow storm prevailing. She was anchored near the light ship with one anchor out, but, as the wind increased a second anchor was put out. Subsequently during a heavy gale that sprang up from the north-west, with thick snow, both chains parted. The vessel was then on a lee shore studded with reefs and shoals, and the tide low. She was abandoned by the master and crew, and the following morning was not visible from shore. Some time afterwards she was picked up at sea by salvors, and was brought into port and put upon the slip and repaired. When brought in she had four feet of water in her hold, and her cargo was badly damaged. On being put upon the slip it appeared that twelve feet of the shoe were off abaft the main chains, and another twelve feet about off forward under the main chains. The butts on the bottom were open. The keel was more or less chafed and broken. The rudder was damaged and the rudder braces started off. There was a scar on the bilge on the port side which looked as if the vessel had dragged or pounded on something. The sides of the keel were bruised more or less and pieces off of it. The main keel was broomed up. The flying jib-boom and main boom were broken, and the fore boom was split.—The judgment appealed from (30 N. S. Rep. 380) dismissed a motion for a new trial, and held that there was sufficient evidence to warrant the jury in coming to the conclusion that the vessel had been on shore, and beating on the rocks for some time, and on which they could properly find a verdict for the plaintiff, and that the trial judge had acted properly, under the circumstances, in refusing to withdraw the case from the jury. Held, that the judgment of the Supreme Court

(N. S.) should be affirmed, and the appeal dismissed with costs. British and Foreign Marine Ins. Co. v. Rudolf, xxviii., 607.

177. Negligence — Use of dangerous material — Trespass.—Work on the construction of a railway was going on, near the unused part of a public cemetery, in connection with which were used detonating caps containing fulminate. M., a boy of fifteen years of age, in passing through the cemetery with some companions, found some of these caps lying about on the bank above the works, in front of a tool box used by one of the gangs of workmen, and put them in his pocket. Later on the same day he was scratching the fulminate end of one of them with a stick when it exploded and injured his hand. On the trial of an action against the contractors for damages, there was no direct evidence as to how the caps came to be where they were found, but it was proved that when a blast was about to take place the workmen would hurriedly place any explosives they might have in their possession under their tool box, and then run away. It also was proved that caps of the same kind were kept in the tool box near which those in question were found by M., and were taken out and put back by the workmen as occasion might require. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that in the absence of evidence of circumstances leading to a different conclusion, the act of placing the caps where they were found could fairly be attributed to the workmen, who alone were shewn to have had the right to handle them; that it was incumbent on defendants to exercise a high degree of caution to prevent them falling into the hands of strangers; that the act of M. in exploding the cap as he did did not necessarily import want of due caution, and if his negligence contributed to the accident the jury should have so found; and that whether or not M. was a trespasser, was also a question for the jury, who did not pass upon it. Makins v. Piggott, xxix., 188.

178. Deed — Delivery — Retention by grantor — Presumption — Rebuttal.—The fact that a deed, after it has been signed and sealed by the grantor, is retained in the latter's possession is not sufficient evidence that it was never so delivered as to take effect as a duly executed instrument. The evidence in favour of the due execution of such a deed is not rebutted by the facts that it comprised all the grantor's property, and that while it professed to dispose of such property immediately the grantor retained the possession and enjoyment of it until his death.—Judgment appealed from (31 N. S. Rep. 333) reversed. Zwicker v. Zwicker, xxix., 527.

179. Highway — Dedication — User.—In order to establish the existence of a public highway by dedication it must appear that there was not only an intention on the part of the owner to dedicate the land for the purposes of a highway but also that the public accepted such dedication by user thereof as a public highway.—In a case where the evidence as to user was conflicting, and the jury found that there had been no public user of the way in question, the trial judge disregarded this finding and held that dedication was established by a deed of lease filed in evidence, and this decision was affirmed by the full court. Held, that as such decision did not take into account the necessity of establishing public user of the locus, it could not stand. Judgment of the Supreme Court (N. B.) reversed. Moore v. Woodstock Woollen Mills Co., xxix., 627.

180. British ship at foreign port — Merchants' Shipping Act — Distressed seaman — Recovery of expenses — Proof of ownership and payment.—A certificate of the Assistant Secretary of the Board of Trade that expenses for the relief of a distressed seaman left in a foreign port were incurred and paid, under the provisions of "The Merchants' Shipping Act, 1854," s. 213, is sufficient proof of payment under the Act though the above section does not provide for a mode of proof by certificate.—Notwithstanding the provision in the Imperial Interpretation Act of 1889 that the repeal of an Act shall not affect any suit, proceeding or remedy under the repealed Act, in proceedings under The Merchants' Shipping Act of 1854, proof of ownership of a ship may be made according to the mode provided in The Merchants' Shipping Act, 1894, by which the former Act is repealed.—Under the Act of 1894 a copy of the registry of a ship registered in Liverpool, certified by the Registrar General of Shipping at London is sufficient proof of ownership. The Queen v. The Sailing Ship "Troop" Co., xxix., 662.

181. Company—Judgment creditor—Action against shareholders—Transfer of shares.—Judgment creditors of an incorporated company being unable to realize anything on their judgment, brought action against H. as a shareholder in which they failed from inability to prove that he was owner of any shares. They then brought action against G. in which evidence was given, not produced in the former case, that the shares once held by G. had been transferred to H., but were not registered in the company's books. On this evidence the courts below gave judgment in favour of G. Held, affirming such judgment, that the shares were duly transferred to H. though not registered, as it appeared that H. had acted for some time as president of, and executed documents for, the company, and the only way he could have held shares entitling him to do so was by transfer from G. Held, also, that although there appeared to be a failure of justice from the result of the two actions, the inability of the plaintiffs to prove their case against H. in the first case could not affect the rights of G. in the subsequent suit. Hamilton v. Grant, xxx., 566. Judgment appealed from 33 N. B. Rep. 77 affirmed.

182. Copyright — Infringement — Evidence — Textual copy.—In an action for infringement of copyright in a dictionary the unrebutted evidence shewed that the publication complained of treated of almost all its subjects in the exact words used in the dictionary first published and repeated a great number of errors that occurred in the plaintiff's work. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (Q. R. 10 Q. B. 255), that the evidence made out a prima facie case of piracy against the defendants which justified the conclusion that they had infringed the copyright. Cadieux v. Beauchemin, xxxi., 370.

183. Negligence—Findings of jury—Operation of railway—Lights on train—Evidence.—A conductor in defendant's employ while engaged in the performance of the duty for which he was engaged at the Windsor station of the Canadian Pacific Railway in Montreal, was killed by a train which was being moved backwards in the station-yard. There was no light on the rear end of the last car of the train nor was there any person stationed there to give warning of the movement of the train. Held, that by omitting to have a light on the rear end of the train the railway company failed in its duty and this constituted prima facie evidence of negligence. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. v. Boisseau, xxxii., 424.

184. Controverted election—Status of petitioner—Evidence — Certified copy of voters' list—Imprint of Queen's Printer—61 Vict. c. 14, s. 10 (D.)—On the hearing of preliminary objections to a controverted election petition the production of a list appearing on its face to be an imprint emanating from the Queen's Printer, certified by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to be a copy of the voters' list used at the election, and upon which the name of the petitioner appeared as a person having a right to vote at such election, is sufficient proof of the status of the petitioner. A copy of a list of electors bearing upon its face a statement that it is issued by the Queen's Printer makes proof of its contents without further verification. Two Mountains Election Case; Ethier v. Legault, xxxi., 437.

185. Donatio mortis causa — Deposit receipts — Cheques and orders — Delivery for beneficiaries—Corroboration—Construction of statute.—McD., being ill and not expecting to recover, requested his wife, his brother being present at the time, to get from his trunk a bank deposit receipt for $6,000 which he then handed to his brother telling him that he wanted the money equally divided among his wife, brother and sister. The brother then, on his own suggestion or that of McD., drew out three checks or orders for $2,000 each payable out of the deposit receipt to the respective beneficiaries which McD. signed and returned to his brother who handed to McD.'s wife the one payable to her and the receipt and she placed them in the trunk from which she had taken the receipt. McD. died eight days afterwards. Held, affirming the judgment appealed against (35 N. S. Rep. 205) Sedgewick and Armour, J.J., dissenting, that this was a valid donatio mortis causa of the deposit receipt and the sum it referred to notwithstanding there was a small amount for interest not specified in the gift.—By R. S. N. S. [1900] c. 163, s. 35, an interested party in an action against the estate of a deceased person cannot succeed on the evidence of himself or his wife or both unless it is corroborated by other material evidence. Held, that such evidence may be corroborated by circumstances or fair inferences from facts proved. The evidence of an additional witness is not essential. McDonald v. McDonald, xxxiii., 145.

219. Improbable statement—Parol contradiction of written instrument—Judicial admissions — Aveu judiciaire — Deed — Error in stating consideration — False statement — Art. 1243, C. C.—Art. 231 C. C. P. (old text)—Dividing answers.]—In May, 1875, McN. purchased printing materials from C. The price, $5,000, was paid; but the deed erroneously stated it to be $7,188.40, which was therein acknowledged. C. remained in possession and carried on the printing business in partnership with M. for several months, when they failed, appellant being assignee to their estate. In March, 1876, McN. claimed the plant, stating they purchased in good faith, and paid the agreed price, but the deed erroneously stated the price at $7,188.40. The assignee claimed payment of $2,188.40, balance between the consideration mentioned and $5,000 paid, before delivery. The evidence for the assignee was the testimony of McN. that the price, $5,000, as agreed, had been paid, corroborated by C. Held, affirming the judgment of the court below, that the only evidence in support of appellant's contention being that of respondent, the appellant could not divide the admission in order to avail himself of what was favourable and reject what was unfavourable.—Per Strong, J., dissenting. That the part of the admission, objected to, appeared improbable and rendered it divisible; that the unconfirmed testimony of the parties thereto was insufficient to contradict, to vary or to shew that there was an error, or even a false statement in the deed. Fulton v. McNamee, ii., 470.

220. Boundaries — Description in deed of land—Parol testimony.—Extrinsic evidence of monuments and actual boundary marks is admissible to control the deed, but if reference is made by the deed to such monuments and boundaries, they control, though they call for courses, distances, or computed contents which do not agree with those in the deed. (See 14 Ont. App. R. 685.) Grassett v. Carter, x., 105.

221. Written instrument — Collateral parol agreement — Work and labour done—Security—Lien.—By agreement in writing B. contracted to cut for A. a quantity of wood and haul and deliver the same at a time and to a place mentioned, B. to pay for the same on delivery. The agreement made no provision for securing to A. the payment of his labour, but when it was drawn up there was a verbal agreement between the parties that in default of payment by B. the wood could be held by A. as security and sold for the amount of his claim. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (4 Man. L. R. 76), Henry, J., dissenting, that evidence of this verbal agreement was admissible on the trial of an action of replevin for the wood by an assignee of A., and that its effect was to give B. a lien on the wood for the amount due him. Byers v. McMillan, xv., 194.

222. Commercial matters — Receipt—Error—Parol evidence — Prohibitive law — Arts. 14, 1234, C. C.—The prohibition of art. 1234, C. C. against the admission of parol evidence to contradict or vary a written instrument, is not d'ordre public, and if such evidence is admitted without objection at the trial it cannot subsequently be set aside in a court of appeal.—Parol evidence in commercial matters is admissible against a written document to prove error. Etna Ins. Co. v. Brodie (5 Can. S. C. R. 1) followed. Schwarsenski v. Vineberg, xix., 243.

223. Contract — Deed of land — Undisclosed trust — Security by deed to third party—Specific performance—Proof by parol.—M. agreed by written contract to give to B. as security for a loan an absolute deed to be held by B. in trust for the time the loan was to run. By B.'s directions the deed was made out in his daughter's name. She claimed to have purchased absolutely for her own benefit, and action was brought against her and B. for specific performance of contract with B. and a declaration that she was a trustee only subject to re-payment of the loan.

Defendants denied collusion and conspiracy charged and pleaded the Statute of Frauds. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (19 Ont. App. R. 602), Strong, J., dissenting, that the evidence shewed that the daughter was aware of the agreement made with B., and the Statute of Frauds did not prevent parol evidence being given of such agreement. Barton v. McMillan, xx., 404.

224. Varying terms of writings—Deed intended to operate as mortgage—Evidence.—Evidence of a most conclusive and absolute character is necessary to induce the court to declare a deed, absolute on its face, to operate as a mortgage only. McMicken v. Ontario Bank, xx., 548.

225. Statute of Frauds — Bill of redemption — Absolute deed to take effect as a mortgage — Parol evidence — Evidence of plaintiff—Corroboration—36 Vict. c. 10 (O.)—The bill, filed in 1876 by the heirs-at-law of J. W. R., alleged that deceased had, in 1861, conveyed certain real estate to his brother, I. N. R., upon express trust that he would advance him $1,000, and hold the property as security for the re-payment of that sum with interest; that he never did advance that sum; that J. W. R. died in 1872; that I. N. R. died in 1874, having devised this property to his son; that the trusts upon which it had been conveyed had been fulfilled; and sought an account of I. N. R.'s dealings therewith. The defendant, the executor and executrix of I. N. R., set up an absolute sale, and relied on the Statute of Frauds and the Statute of Limitations.—The evidence in part consisted of the testimony of C. H. R., one of the plaintiffs, a son of J. W. R., to the effect that his father being in difficulties in 1861, I. N. R. told him (C. H. R.) that he would take an assignment of the property, pay off certain mortgages thereon, advance J. W. R. $1,000 and re-convey it at any time.—Proudfoot, V.-C., made a decree directing an account, and allowing plaintiffs to redeem the lands on payment of the amount due to defendants in respect of the advances made. The Court of Appeal for Ontario reversed the decree (3 Ont. App. R. 309). Held, that parol evidence was admissible to shew that the absolute conveyance was intended to take effect as a mortgage, but the judgment appealed from, so far as it proceeded upon the ground that the testimony of the plaintiff, C. H. R., required corroboration, was correct and ought to be affirmed. Rose v. Hickey, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 534.

226. Duress — Undue influence — Valuable consideration — Action to set aside deed.—An action was brought by an executrix to have a deed set aside and cancelled, on the grounds of undue influence, and incompetence on the part of the grantee. The deed had been executed about two months prior to the will. The executrix alleged that the testator was eighty years of age and of child-like simplicity, that the grantees under the deed had kept him under their control, treated him with violence, and prevented him leaving their house, and that when he had requested the executrix to live with him and take care of him until he died, they would not permit her to do so. The deed purported to have been made in consideration of the grantees paying the testator's debts and maintaining him for the rest of his life.—Held, affirming the decision of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, that the evidence shewed that the deed had been given for valuable consideration, that there had been no evidence establishing that undue influence had been resorted to in order to obtain it, and that the action to set aside the deed could not be maintained. Corbett v. Smith, 1st May, 1893.

227. To vary or explain deed—Construction of deed—Title to lands—Ambiguous description—Possession—Conduct of parties—Presumptions from occupation of premises—Arts. 1019, 1238, 1242, 1473, 1599, C. C.—47 Vict. c. 87 s. 3 (D.)—48 & 49 Vict. c. 58 s. 3 (D.)—45 Vict. (Q.) c. 20.—By a deed made in August, 1882, the appellant ceded to the Government of Quebec, which subsequently conveyed to the respondent, an immovable described as part of lot No. 1937, in St. Peter's Ward, in the City of Quebec, situated between the streets St. Paul, St. Roch, Henderson and the River St. Charles, with the wharves and buildings thereon erected. The respondents entered into possession of the lands by virtue of said deeds and remained in possession for twelve years without objection to the boundaries. They then brought an action to have it declared that, by the proper construction of the deeds, an additional strip of land and certain wharves were included and intended to be transferred. They contended that the description in the deed was ambiguous, and that Henderson street as a boundary should be construed as meaning Henderson street extended, and they sought to establish their case by the production of certain correspondence which had taken place between the parties prior to the execution of the deed of August, 1882. Held, reversing the judgment of the Queen's Bench (C. J. and King, J., dissenting), that the words "Henderson street" as used in the deed must be construed in their plain natural sense as meaning the street of that name actually existing on the ground; that the correspondence was not shewn to contain all the negotiations or any finally concluded agreement, and could not be used to contradict or modify the deed which should be read as containing the matured conclusion at which the parties had finally arrived; that the deed should be interpreted in the light of the conduct of the parties in taking and remaining so long in possession without objection, which raised against them a strong presumption, not only not rebutted but strengthened by the facts in evidence, and that any doubt or ambiguity in the deed, in the absence of evidence to explain it, should be interpreted against the vendees, and in favour of the vendors. City of Quebec v. North Shore Ry. Co., xxvii., 102.

228. Contract — Oral agreement — Withdrawal of questions from jury—New trial.—D. gave instructions in writing to H. respecting the sale of a coal mine on terms mentioned and agreeing to pay a commission of 5 per cent. on the selling price, such commission to include all expenses. H. failed to effect a sale. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (6 B. C. Rep. 505), that in an action by H. to recover expenses incurred in an endeavour to make a sale, and reasonable remuneration, parol evidence was admissible to shew that the written instructions did not constitute the whole of the terms of the contract, but there had been a collateral oral agreement in respect to the expenses, and that the question as to whether or not there was an oral contract in addition to what appeared in the written instructions was a question that ought to have been submitted to the jury. Dunsmuir v. Lowenberg, Harris & Co., xxx., 334.

229. Sale of goods—Evidence to vary written instrument—Admission of evidence.—Plaintiffs carried on business at Montreal under the style of "A. R. Williams & Co." and sued respondent for the price of an engine, ordered by respondents in writing, and other machinery supplied in connection with repairs to the foundry, amounting to $495.91. The order was given through the plaintiffs' agent W. The principal defence was that the company supposed it was dealing with a company carrying on business in Toronto as "The A. R. Williams Machinery Co." with which it had previous dealings, and which, at the time, had in its possession machinery belonging to the defendant of the value of $780 which it was agreed with W. should be accepted in payment for the machinery ordered. The Supreme Court, Gwynne, J., dissenting, affirmed the judgment appealed from (33 N. S. Rep. 21) affirming the trial judge (33 N. S. Rep. 22), who found that the business carried on in Montreal was distinct from that carried on in Toronto, but that at the time the order was given defendant believed it was contracting with the Toronto company, and that there were surrounding circumstances to lead to the belief that the business carried on in Montreal and Toronto were one and the same. He held that the plaintiffs were bound by the bargain made with W., and, on the ground that it was not inconsistent with the written agreement to prove that payment was to be made otherwise than in cash, he received evidence of the agreement relied on by the defendant. *Wilson v. EXECUTION.

1. Will — Prohibition to alienate—Exemptions from seizure—Judgment against executor—Res inter alios acta.]—The will gave extensive powers of discretion to the executor in respect to the administration of the affairs of the succession, the partition of the property among the beneficiaries and dispensed with the necessity of an inventory or rendering of accounts. It also provided that the property bequeathed should be exempt from seizure, save for debts due by the succession. The executor indorsed promissory notes for the accommodation of one of the beneficiaries, upon which judgment was recovered under which lands belonging to the estate were seized in execution. Held, that the transaction in respect to the notes was an affair dehors the estate and that effect should be given to the provision of the will as to exemption from seizure. Lionais v. Molsons Bank, x., 526.

2. Sale of railway shares en bloc—Arts. 595, 599 C. C. P.]—Where a number of shares of railway stock were seized and advertised to be sold in one lot, neither the defendant nor any one interested in the sale requesting the sheriff to sell the shares separately, and such shares were sold for an amount far in excess of the judgment debt for which the property was taken in execution, such sale in the absence of proof of fraud or collusion was held good and valid. Judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 2 Q. B. 303) affirmed. Connecticut & Passumpsic Rivers Ry. Co. v. Morris, xiv., 318.

3. Writs — Seal — Signature.]—In Nova Scotia writs of execution need not be signed by the prothonotary of the court. It is the seal of the court which gives validity to such writs, not the signature of the officer. Archibald v. Hubley, xviii., 116.

4. Real Property Act—Registration — Unregistered transfers — Equitable rights — Sales under execution — R. S. C. c. 51—51 Vict. (D.) c. 20.] — The provisions of s. 94 of the Territories Real Property Act (R. S. C. c. 51), as amended by 51 Vict. (D.), c. 29, do not displace the rule of law that an execution creditor can only sell the real estate of his debtor subject to the charges, liens and equities to which the same was subject in the hands of the execution debtor, and do not give the execution creditor any superiority of title over prior unregistered transferees, but merely protect the lands from intermediate sales and dispositions by the execution debtor.—If the sheriff sells, however, the purchaser by priority of registration of the sheriff's deed would under the Act take priority over previous unregistered transfers. *Jellett v. EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

1. Joint executors—Liability for moneys received—Uncollected debts—Débats de compte—Taking accounts—Interest—Prescription—Arts. 913, 2242 C. C.—Respondents, representing one of the universal residuary legatees sued appellants as joint testamentary executors of W. D., sen., for an account and the balance of the estate in their hands. On a débat de compte the total value of the estate was proved to be $44,525.65, and appellants, as appeared by an account rendered by them, took possession of $14,510.33 as such executors. The remaining $30,015.33 appeared by the books of the commercial firm of W. D. & Co., to be due to the estate of W. D., sen., by W. D., Jun., one of the executors, and to have never come into the possession of the other executors. — Held, Taschereau, J., dissenting, that under art. 913 C. C. appellants were jointly and severally responsible only for the amount of which they took possession in their joint capacity, and that, therefore, W. D., Jun., was alone responsible for the amount of such balance. — Testamentary executors cannot legally be charged more than a rate of six per cent. for interest on moneys collected by them, after their account has been demanded, unless there is proof that they realized a greater rate of interest by the use of such moneys.—An action against executors for an account of their administration, and moneys received, or which ought to have been collected by them in their capacity as such executors, is not prescribed otherwise than by the long prescription of 30 years. Darling v. Brown, ii., 26.

2. Administrator—Misconduct—Refusal to facilitate liquidation—Costs.—The plaintiff wished to administer to the estate of his brother, but was unable to give the necessary bond, until W. and J. agreed to become his bondsmen, securing themselves by having the estate placed in the hands of the defendants. A portion of the estate consisted of some English railway stock, which the defendants wished to convert into money, but plaintiff would not assist them in doing so.—In passing the accounts of the estate in the Probate Court of Westmoreland County, it was found that there were several persons entitled to participate as next of kin of the deceased, and the respective amounts due the several claimants were settled by the court.—Owing to the plaintiff's refusal to join in realizing the stock, however, the defendants were unable to pay some of these parties their respective shares, and finally plaintiff filed a bill to compel the defendants to pay him his portion of the estate with $1,000, which he claimed as commission, and also to hand over to him the shares of the next of kin. A decree was made directing that the estate be disposed of by the defendants, and that they were entitled to their costs as between solicitor and client, which could be retained out of the plaintiff's share of the estate. On appeal from the master's report the Vice-Chancellor reversed that portion of the decree which made the plaintiff's share of the estate liable for the defendants' costs, but the Court of Appeal restored the original judgment. Held, affirming the Court of Appeal (10 Ont. App. R. 76), that as the misconduct of the plaintiff had caused all the litigation, the Court of Appeal had acted rightly in refusing to compel any of the other next of kin to bear the burden of the costs. O'Sullivan v. Harty (22 C. L. J. 17), xi., 322.

3. Testamentary appointment—Irregularities in administration—Removal of executor—Arts. 282, 285, 917 C. C.]—Art. 282 C. C. does not apply to executors chosen by the testator, and in an action for the removal of one of several executors, the existence of a lawsuit between such executor and the estate he represents, and the evidence of irregularities in his administration but not exhibiting any incapacity or dishonesty, are not sufficient cause for his removal. Strong, J., dissenting. Mitchell v. Mitchell, xvi., 722.

4. Will—Legacy—Trust—Claim on assets—Priority—Registration—Charge on realty—Notice.]—H. and his brother were partners in business; the latter died and H. became by will his executor and residuary legatee. Part of a legacy to E. H., was paid and judgment recovered against the executor for the balance. H. having incumbered both his own share and that devised to him, one of his creditors, mortgagee of the property, obtained judgment against him and the appointment of receivers of his estate. E. H. asked to have it declared that his judgment for balance of legacy was a charge upon the moneys in the receivers' hands in priority to the personal creditors of H. Held, affirming the Supreme Court (B. C.), that the moneys held by the receivers being personal assets of the testator, or proceeds thereof, E. H. was entitled to priority of payment though his judgment was registered after those of the other creditors. Held, also, that the legacy was a charge upon the realty of the testator, the residuary devise being of "the balance and remainder of the property and of any estate" of the testator, and the words "property" and "estate" being both sufficient to pass realty. This charge upon realty operated against the mortgagees, who were shewn to have had notice of the will. Cameron v. Harper, xxi., 273.

5. Administration of estate—Powers—Hiring and service of clerk—Yearly salary—Money paid out—Prescription—Arts. 914, 2260, 2261 C. C.]—Action against the heirs of Y. for services as clerk to his executor, in administering the estate and for money paid and laid out for estate.—Pleas: That all demands for salary were prescribed, by two years under art. 2261 C. C., and all sums advanced and paid by five years under par. 6, art. 2260 C. C. That the executor, who received $400 per annum under the will, had no right to employ a clerk at expense of estate to do the work thereof, and R.'s work was done for executor, against whom alone he had a claim.—The Superior Court held that the only prescription for yearly salary was that of 5 years, under par. 6, art. 2260, C. C., while that of 30 years alone was applicable to the claim for moneys laid out for estate. That the general powers of an executor include the engagement of clerks to keep the books of the estate and to carry on its affairs (art. 914 C. C.); and $1,754 was awarded to R.—These holdings of law were affirmed, but the action was dismissed in the Queen's Bench (Tessier and Cross, JJ., dissenting), on the ground that there was evidence that R. had agreed to accept $400 per annum and had been paid that sum.—The Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench and varied that of the Superior Court by increasing the amount awarded R. to $5,607. Rattray v. Young, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 149.

6. Removal of for waste—Fraudulent administration—Husband and wife—Will—Rejection of evidence.]—An action to remove executrix. Appellant is the sole surviving executrix of the will of the late J. R., and the appellant and the respondent are the remaining legatees under the will. The respondent complained:—1st. Appellant had given a power of attorney to her husband to manage the estate in violation of the terms of the will; 2nd. Fraud in charging the estate with sums not legally chargeable to the estate; in charging a commission to remunerate her husband for the management of the estate, while paying one T. a commission for the same services; in taking bonuses for certain leases granted; in making a fraudulent lease to C. at a notoriously insufficient rent to the injury of the estate; in agreeing to pay $1,200 to H. and T. for cancellation of the lease of part of the estate; 3rd. Waste in pulling down and erecting buildings on the estate.—Appellant denied waste and fraud, and maintained that she had a right to give her husband a power of attorney.—As to the first point respondent relied on these words: "And it is furthermore my will and wish, that neither of the husbands of any of said daughters nor any of my daughters' future husbands, shall have any power over, control or interference in any manner, with the foregoing devise and bequest to them, but shall be as absolutely free from such power, control or interference, as if they had remained unmarried and single."—Appellant complained that the testimony of her husband had been excluded, and that it was competent to the court to allow her husband to be examined. (Art. 252 C. C. P.; 35 Vict. c. 6, s. 9).—The Superior Court, while admitting that under the will the husband could act as his wife's attorney, removed appellant, on the grounds that the administration of the estate had been fraudulent and wasteful, that the lease to C. had been imprudent and looked fraudulent, that in the receipt of bonuses by her husband, there had been fraud, for which she was liable, and there had been other irregular transactions.—The Queen's Bench held that it was competent for the appellant under the will to appoint her husband her general attorney and agent; that the trial judge not having admitted the husband's evidence, under the circumstances it would not be the duty of the court, even if it had the power, to send back the record to allow him to be examined; that removal of an executrix, daughter of the testator, herself a legatee, ought not to be ordered on evidence of small payments, which might have been avoided; that payment of a commission to her husband for appreciable services, such as collections, would not be ground for removing the executrix selected by the testator; but affirmed the judgment on account of the transaction with C. and the taking of bonuses on several occasions without accounting for them.—On appeal, Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the transaction with C. was sufficient cause for removal and that the evidence of the husband on behalf of his wife had been properly rejected. Ross v. Ross, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 306.

7. Building—Want of repair—Damages—Art. 1055 C. C.—Trustees—Personal liability of—Executors—Arts. 921, 981 (a) C. C.—Procedure.]—The owner of property abutting on a highway is under a positive duty to keep it from being a cause of danger to the public by reason of any defect, either in structure, repair, or use, and management, which reasonable care can guard against.—A. T. sued J. F. and M. W. F., personally as well as in their quality of testamentary executors and trustees of the will of the late J. F., claiming $4,000 damages for the death of her husband who was killed by a window falling on him from the third story of a building, which formed part of the general estate of the late J. F., but which had been specifically bequeathed to one G. F., and his children, for whom the said J. F. and M. W. F. were also trustees. The judgment of the courts below held the appellants liable in their capacity of executors of the general estate and trustees under the wills. Held, that the appellants were responsible for the damages resulting from their negligence in not keeping the building in repair as well personally as in their quality of trustees (d'héritiers fiduciaires) for the benefit of G. F.'s children, but were not liable as executors of the general estate.—Where parties are before the court quâ executors, and the same parties should also be summoned quâ trustees, an amendment to that effect is sufficient, and a new writ of summons is not necessary. Ferrier v. Trépannier, xxiv., 87.

8. Testamentary succession—Executors—Balance due by tutor—Practice—Action for account—Provisional possession—Envoie en possession—Parties.—The appeal was from the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada (Q. R. 6 Q. B. 34), which reversed the decision of the Superior Court, District of Quebec, and dismissed the plaintiff's action and incidental demand, and held, that on failure of testamentary executors to render an account, the heirs of the testator have no direct action against them for alleged balances in their hands; that their proper recourse would be by an action for account, which should embrace the whole of the administration of the succession of the executors, and could not be restricted to particular or isolated matters; that a demand for provisional possession (envoie en possession), of a testamentary succession against an executor who has had the administration thereof should implead all the heirs as plaintiffs, and that failure in the joinder of any one of them would be fatal, and the defendant could not be compelled to call them in as parties to the action, and further, that, in a case where there were several executors, such actions must be brought against them jointly, and could not be validly instituted against one of them even with the extra judicial consent of the others.—The Supreme Court of Canada affirmed the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench, and dismissed the appeal with costs. Cream et al. v. Davidson, 1st May, 1897, xxvii., 362.

9. Will—Powers of executors—Promissory note—Advancing legatee's share.—M., who was a merchant, by his will gave special directions for the winding up of his business and the division of his estate among a number of his children as legatees, and gave to his executors, among other powers, the power "to make, sign, and indorse all notes that might be required to settle and liquidate the affairs of his succession." By a subsequent clause in his will he gave his executors "all necessary rights and powers at any time to pay to any of his said children over the age of thirty years the whole or any part of their share in his said estate for their assistance either in establishment or in case of need, the whole according to the discretion, prudence and wisdom of said executors," &c. In an action against the executors to recover the amount of promissory notes given by the executors and discounted by them as such in order to secure a loan of money for the purpose of advancing the amount of his legacy to one of the children who was in need of funds to pay personal debts. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the two clauses of the will referred to were separate and distinct provisions which could not be construed together as giving power to the executors to raise the loan upon promissory notes for the purpose of advancing the share of one of the beneficiaries under the will. Banque Jacques-Cartier v. Gratton, xxx., 317.

10. Donatio mortis causâ—Ratification by will—Scizin—Payment of legacy—Sale of land—Charges—Action hypothécaire.—On appeal the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench (Q. R. 8 Q. B. 511), in an hypothecary action by which it was also asked that a discharge by executors should be set aside. C. sold land to A. W. M. and C. B. M. for $150,000 secured by privilege of baillieur de fonds, of which $50,000 was payable to respondent after vendor's death. C. afterwards by his will ratified the donation and delegation of payment. A. W. M. and C. B. M. being named testamentary executors. The C. C. Co. acquired the land assuming the obligation of paying this $50,000. The executors discharged the debt and the hypothec by which it was secured. It was held by the court below, that even if the delegation were null on account of the donatio mortis causâ by acte entre vifs, the will validated it and the credit passed to the respondent with all its accessories including the hypothec and special privilege of baillieur de fonds; and further, as the executors were seized only for the execution of the will, and there was no necessity to use this credit to pay debts of the succession, they had no power to grant the discharge. Consumers Cordage Co. v. Converse, xxx., 618.

11. Appeal—Jurisdiction—Matter in controversy—Removal of executors—Acquiescence in trial court judgment—Right of appeal—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 29.—The Supreme Court of Canada has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal in a case where the matter in controversy has become an issue relating merely to the removal of executors though, by the action, an account for over $2,000 had been demanded and refused by the judgment at the trial against which the plaintiff had not appealed. Noël v. Chevretils (30 Can. S. C. R. 327) followed; Laberge v. The Equitable Life Assurance Society (24 Can. S. C. R. 59) distinguished. Donohoe v. Donohue, xxxiii., 134.

1. Succession duties — Property exempt—Sale under will—Duty on proceeds—Costs—Proceedings by or against the Crown.]—Debentures of the Province of Nova Scotia are, by statute, "not liable to taxation for provincial, local or municipal purposes" in the province. L. by his will, after making certain bequests, directed that the residue of his property, which included some of these debentures, should be converted into money to be invested by the executors and held on certain specified trusts. This direction was carried out after his death, and the Attorney-General claimed succession duty on the whole estate. Held, affirming the judgment appealed against (35 N. S. Rep. 223), Sedgewick and Mills, JJ., dissenting, that although the debentures themselves were not liable to the duty either in the hands of the executors or of the purchasers, the proceeds of their sale when passing to legatees were.—Costs will be given for or against the Crown as in other cases. EXPROPRIATION OF LANDS.

1. BY THE CROWN, 1-7.
2. BY MUNICIPAL AUTHORITIES, 8-20.
3. FOR RAILWAYS, TRAMWAYS, &c., 21-32.

1. BY THE CROWN.

1. Town plot sub-division — Valuation—Assessment of damages—Government railway—Crossings.—The claimant contended that the land was held for sale as building lots. It had not been sub-divided prior to expropriation, and none of it had been sold for building purposes. There was, however, a remote probability that the land would become available for such purposes upon the extension of the limits of an adjoining town.—The absence of a crossing prevented access to the shore, and caused claimant loss in the use and occupation of the remaining property.—The Exchequer Court (2 Ex. C. R. 21), decided that while remote probability added some value to the property, compensation should not be based on any supposed value for building purposes at the time of expropriation, and also, that claimant was entitled to compensation in respect of damage resulting from the want of a crossing.—On appeal by claimant, the Supreme Court of Canada, Held, that the amount of compensation awarded should be increased, on the ground that it did not appear that such compensation was assessed in view of the future damage that might result from the want of a crossing. Kearney v. The Queen, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 313.

2. Petition of right — Public work—Injury to property — Obstruction of canal—Use of canal.—The appellant, claiming to be owner of the Shubenacadie Canal in Nova Scotia, brought suit by petition of right to recover damages from the Crown for expropriating part of his property in construction of public works and for obstructing the use of the canal. The Exchequer Court (4 Ex. C. R. 130), without deciding as to the title of appellant, which was disputed, held that expropriation had not been proved, and refused damages for obstruction on the ground that the canal was not open for traffic. The judgment included a declaration that appellant was entitled, whenever it should be so opened and the traffic obstructed by the public work, to have the obstruction removed.—The Supreme Court of Canada affirmed the judgment of the Exchequer Court, and dismissed the appeal with costs. Fairbanks v. The Queen, xxiv., 711.

3. Expropriation of land—Damages—Valuation—Evidence.—The Crown expropriated land of L. and had it appraised by valuers who assessed it at $11,400, which sum was tendered to L., who refused it and brought suit by petition of right for a larger sum as compensation. The Exchequer Court awarded him $17,000. On appeal by the Crown.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from,

Girouard, J., dissenting, that the evidence given on the trial of the petition shewed that the sum assessed by the valuers was a very generous compensation to L. for the loss of his land and the increase by the judgment appealed from was not justified.—The court, while considering that a less sum than that fixed by the valuers should not be given in this case expressly stated that the same course would not necessarily be followed in future cases of the kind. The King v. Likely, xxxii., 47.

2. BY MUNICIPAL AUTHORITIES.

8. Expropriation — Award of arbitrators—Interference on appeal.—In a matter of expropriation, the decision of the majority of the arbitrators, men of more than ordinary business experience, upon a question merely of value, should not be interfered with on appeal. Lemoine v. City of Montreal; Allan v. City of Montreal, xxiii., 390.

9. Municipal corporation — Expropriation proceedings — Negligence—Interference with proprietary rights—Abandonment of proceedings—Damages — Servitudes established for public utility—Arts. 406, 407, 1053 C. C.—Eminent domain.—Where, under authority of a statute, authorizing the extension of a street, a servitude for public utility was established on private land which was not expropriated and the extension was subsequently abandoned, the owner of the land was not, in the absence of any statutory authority therefor, entitled to damages for loss of proprietary rights while the servitude existed. Perrault v. Gauthier et al. (23 Can. S. C. R. 241) referred to. The Chief Justice dissented. Hollester v. City of Montreal, xxix., 402.

10. Expropriation of land — Lands injuriously affected—Damages —Interest—Award.—If in the construction of a public work land of a private owner is injuriously affected and the compensation therefor is determined by arbitration, interest cannot be allowed by the arbitrator on the amount of damages awarded. Leak v. City of Toronto, xxx., 321.

11. Municipal corporation — Widening streets—Abandonment of proceedings—Réinté-grande—Measure of damages.—The city commenced expropriation proceedings and forthwith took possession of plaintiff's land, constructed works thereon and incorporated it with a public street. Subsequently, in virtue of a statute granting permission to do so, the city abandoned the expropriation proceedings without paying indemnity or returning the lands so occupied and used.—Held, that the plaintiff had been illegally dispossessed of his property and was entitled to have it returned to him in the state in which it was at the time it had been so taken possession of and also to recover compensation for the illegal detention. Held, further, that, in the present case, the measure of damages, as representing the rents, issues and profits of the lands usurped by the city, should be the interest upon the value of the property during the period of its illegal detention. (Judgment appealed from, Q. R. 8 Q. B. 534, varied). City of Montreal v. Hogan, xxxi., 1.

12. Municipal corporation — Montreal City charter — Local improvements — Expropriation for widening street — Action for indemnity — 52 Vict. c. 79 (Que.) — 54 Vict. c. 78 (Que.) — 59 Vict. c. 49 (Que.) — Assessment of damages.—Where the City of Montreal, under the provisions of 52 Vict. c. 79, s. 213, took possession of land, for street widening, in October, 1895, under agreement with the owner, the fact that the price to be paid remained subject to being fixed by commissioners to be appointed under the statute was not inconsistent with the validity of the cession of the land so effected and, notwithstanding the subsequent amendment of the statute in December of that year, by 59 Vict. c. 49, s. 17, the city was bound, within a reasonable time, to apply to the court for the appointment of commissioners to fix the amount of the indemnity to be paid, to levy assessments therefor and to pay over the same to the owner, and, having failed to do so, the owner had a right of action to recover indemnity for his land so taken. Hogan v. City of Montreal (31 Can. S. C. R. 1) distinguished.—The assessment of damages by taking the average of estimates of the witnesses examined is wrong in principle. Grand Trunk Ry. Co. v. Coupal (28 Can. S. C. R. 531) followed. Fairman v. City of Montreal, xxxi., 210.

13. Assessment of damages—Reservation of recourse for future damages—Expropriation—Res judicata—Right of action.—A lessee of premises used as an ice-house recovered indemnity from the city for injuries suffered in consequence of the expropriation of part of the leased premises and, in his statement of claim, had specially reserved the right of further recourse for damages resulting from the expropriation. In an action brought after his death by his universal legatee to recover damages for loss of the use of the ice-house during the unexpired term of the lease: Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the reservation in the first action did not preserve any further right of action in consequence of the expropriation and, therefore, the plaintiff's action was properly dismissed by the courts below, as, in such cases, all damages capable of being foreseen must be assessed once for all and a defendant cannot be twice sued for the same cause. The City of Montreal v. McGee (30 Can. S. C. R. 582), and The Chaudière Machine and Foundry Co. v. The Canada Atlantic Ry. Co. (33 Can. S. C. R. 11) followed. Anctil v. City of Quebec, xxxiii., 347.

3. FOR RAILWAYS, TRAMWAYS, &C.

21. Land taken for railway purposes — Award—Riparian rights — Obstruction—Accès et sortie—Tort.—In an award for land expropriated for railway purposes where there is an adequate and sufficient description, with convenient certainty of the land intended to be valued, and of the land actually valued, such award cannot afterwards be set aside on the ground that there is a variation between the description of the land in the notice of expropriation and in the award.—A riparian proprietor on a navigable river is entitled to damages against a railway company for any obstruction to his rights of accès et sortie, and such obstruction without parliamentary authority is an actionable wrong: Pion v. North Shore Ry. Co., (14 App. Cas. 612) followed.—Taschereau, J. was of opinion that the award in this case included compensation for the beach lying in front of plaintiff's property, which belongs to the Crown, and, for that reason, should be set aside. Bigaouette v. North Shore Ry. Co., xvii., 363.

22. Railway — Estimating damages — Prospective capabilities—Unity of possession — Increased advantages—Town plot—Set-off.—In assessing damages for expropriation regard should be had to the prospective capabilities of the lands arising from situation and character, and in awarding compensation the value to the owner should be considered, not that to the authority making the expropriation.—The unity of the estate should also be considered, and if, by the severance of one of several lots so situated that the possession and control of each gives an enhanced value to them all, the remainder is depreciated in value, such depreciation is substantive ground for compensation.—Advantages to a paper town from being made the terminus of a Government railway, with station-houses and other buildings constructed within its limits, should be taken into account by way of set-off under 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, s. 31.—

Judgment appealed from (2 Ex. C. R. 149) affirmed. Paint v. The Queen, xviii., 718.

23. Railway expropriation — Award — Additional interest — Confirmation of title — Diligence — The Railway Act, 1888, ss. 126, 170, 172.—On a petition to the Superior Court, praying that a railway company be ordered to pay into the hands of the prothonotary of the Superior Court a sum equivalent to six per cent. on the amount of an award previously deposited in court under s. 170 of the Railway Act, and praying further that the company should be enjoined and ordered to proceed to confirmation of title, with a view to the distribution of the money, the company pleaded that the court had no power to grant such an order, and that the delays in proceeding to confirmation of title had been caused by the petitioner, who had unsuccessfully appealed to the higher courts for an increased amount. Held, reversing the judgment of the court below, that by the terms of s. 172 of the Railway Act it is only by the judgment of confirmation that the question of additional interest can be adjudicated upon. Held, further, that assuming the court had jurisdiction, until a final determination of the controversy as to the amount to be distributed, the railway company could not be said to be guilty of negligence in not obtaining a judgment in confirmation of title. (Railway Act, s. 172). Fournier, J., dissenting. The Atlantic and North-west Ry. Co. v. Judah, xxiii., 231.

24. Railway — Expropriation of land — Title to land — Tenants in common — Propriétaires par indivis — Construction of agreement — Misdescription — Plans and books of reference — Satisfaction of condition as to indemnity — Registry laws — Estoppel — R. S. Q. arts. 5163, 5164 — Art. 1590 C. C.—In matters of expropriation where the railway company has complied with the directions and conditions of arts. 5163 and 5164, Revised Statutes of Quebec, as to deposit of plans and books of reference, notice and settlement of indemnity with the owners, or with at least one-third of the owners par indivis, of lands taken for railway purposes, the title to the lands passes forthwith to the company for the whole of the property by mere operation of the statute, even without the consent of the other owners par indivis, and without the necessity of formal conveyance by deed or compliance with the formalities prescribed by the Civil Code as to registration of real rights. The Quebec, Montmorency and Charlevoix Ry. Co. v. Gibsone; Gibsone v. The Quebec, Montmorency and Charlevoix Ry. Co., xxix., 340.

25. Railways — Construction of statute — Tramway for transportation of materials — Expropriation — 51 Vict. c. 29, s. 114 (D.) — 2 Edw. VII. c. 29 (D.)—The place where materials are found referred to in the one hundred and fourteenth section of "The Railway Act" means the spot where the stone, gravel, earth, sand or water required for the construction or maintenance of railways are naturally situated and not any other place to which they have been subsequently transported.—Per Taschereau and Girouard, JJ. The provisions of the one hundred and fourteenth section of "The Railway Act" confer upon railway companies a servitude consisting merely in the right of passage and do not confer any right to expropriate lands required for laying the tracks of a tramway for the transportation of materials to be used for the purposes of construction. Quebec Bridge Co. v. Roy, xxxii., 572.

FERRIES.

1. License — Construction — Disturbance — Long user — Establishment of limits.]—The Crown granted a license to the Town of Belleville (in 1858), to ferry "between the Town of Belleville to Ameliasburg," Held, a sufficient grant of a right of ferriage to and from the two places named.—Under this license the Town of Belleville leased to the plaintiff granting the franchise "to ferry to and from the Town of Belleville to Ameliasburg," a township having a water frontage of about ten or twelve miles, directly opposite to Belleville, such lease providing for only one landing place on each side, and a ferry was established within the limits of Belleville on the one side, to a point across the Bay of Quinté, in Ameliasburg, within an extension of the east and west limits of Belleville. The defendants established another ferry across another part of the Bay of Quinté, between Ameliasburg and a place in the Township of Sidney, which adjoins Belleville, the termini being on the one side two miles from the western limits of Belleville, and on the Ameliasburg shore about two miles west from the landing place of the plaintiff's ferry. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (7 Ont. App. R. 341), that the establishment and use of the plaintiff's ferry within the limits aforesaid for many years had fixed the termini of the ferry, and that the defendants' ferry was no infringement of the plaintiffs' right. Anderson v. Jellett, ix., 1.

2. *Ferry license—Interference — Tortious breach of contract — Bridges within ferry limits.—R. S. C. c. 97.]—On appeal the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the Exchequer Court of Canada (6 Ex. C. R. 414), which held that the granting of leases and other privileges by the Crown of land for the purpose of building and utilizing railway bridges and the extension of railway tracks to connect with railways across the Ottawa River, did not constitute a breach of the contract on the part of the Crown arising out of the grant of a ferry license, including within its limits the localities in question, between the City of Ottawa and the City of Hull, and that the construction of the bridges, with approaches and track extensions, did not constitute an interference with the ferry rights of the suppliant which would entitle him to recover damages against the Crown. *Brigham v. FISHERIES.

1. Canadian waters—Three-mile limit — Territorial jurisdiction—Bay of Chaleurs — The Fisheries Act, 31 Vict. c. 60 (D.)—14 & 15 Vict. c. 63 (Imp.)—Seizure—Fishery officer — "On view."—Under the statute 14 & 15 Vict. c. 63 (Imp.) defining the boundary between Canada and New Brunswick, the whole of the Bay of Chaleurs is within the present boundaries of Quebec and New Brunswick, within the Dominion of Canada and subject to The Fisheries Act, 31 Vict. c. 60 (D.) and, therefore, drifting for salmon in the Bay of Chaleurs, although more than three miles from either provincial shore, is a drifting in Canadian waters and within the prohibition of the last mentioned Act and the regulations made in virtue thereof.—2. The term "on view" in s. 4 of s. 16 of the Fisheries Act. is not to be limited to seeing the net in the water while in the very act of drifting. If the party acting "on view" sees what, if testified to by him, would be sufficient to convict of the offence charged, that is sufficient for the purposes of the Act. Judgment of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick (3 P. & B. 252) reversed. Mowatt v. McFee, v., 66.

2. Regulation and protection—31 Vict. c. 60 (D.)—B. N. A. Act, 1867, ss. 91, 92, 109.—License to fish—Riparian proprietors—Ungranted lands—Right of fishing—Navigable stream.]—On January 1st, 1874, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries under s. 2. c. 60. 31 Vict., executed to the suppliant a lease of fishery, whereby Her Majesty leased for 9 s. c. D.—20 years a portion of the South-west Miramichi River, N. B., for fly-fishing for salmon therein, the locus in quo being thus described in the special case:—"Price's Bend is about 40 or 45 miles above the ebb and flow of the tide. The stream for the greater part from this point upward is navigable for canoes, small boats, flat-bottomed scows, logs and timber. Logs are usually driven down the river in high water in the spring and fall. The stream is rapid. During summer it is in some places, on the bars, very shallow."—Some persons who had conveyances of a portion of the river, and claimed the exclusive right of fishing in such portion, interrupted suppliant in the enjoyment of his fishing under the lease, and put him to expenses in endeavouring to assert and defend his claim to the ownership of the fishing of that portion of the river included in his lease.—The Supreme Court of New Brunswick decided adversely to his exclusive right to fish in virtue of the lease, and he filed a petition of right, and claimed compensation for loss of fishing privileges and expenses incurred. The Exchequer Court Held, inter alia, that an exclusive right of fishing existed in the persons who held the conveyances, and that the minister consequently had no power to grant a lease or license under s. 2 of the Fisheries Act of the portion of the river in question, and in answer to the question, "Where the lands (above tide water) through which the said river passes are ungranted, could the Minister of M. and F. lawfully issue a lease of that portion of the river?" Held, that the Minister could not lawfully issue a lease of the bed of the river, but that he could lawfully issue a license to fish as a franchise apart from the ownership of the soil in that portion of the river.—On an appeal on the main question, whether or not an exclusive right of fishing did so exist; Held, affirming the judgment of the Exchequer Court, 1. That the general power of regulating and protecting the fisheries under the B. N. A. Act, 1867, s. 91, is in the Parliament of Canada, but that the license granted by the Minister of the locus in quo was void, because said Act only authorizes the granting of leases "where the exclusive right of fishing does not already exist by law," and in this case the exclusive right of fishing belonged to the owners of the land through which that portion of the Miramichi River flows.—2. That although the public may have in a river, such as the one in question, an easement or right to float rafts or logs down, and a right of passage up and down, wherever the water is sufficiently high to be so used, such right is not inconsistent with an exclusive right of fishing nor with the right of the owners of property opposite their respective lands ad medium filum aquæ.—3. That the rights of fishing in a river, such as in that part of the Miramichi from Price's Bend to its source, are an incident to the grant of the land through which such river flows, and where such grants have been made, there is no authority given by the B. N. A. Act, 1867, to grant a right to fish, and the Dominion Parliament has no right to give such license.—Per Ritchie, C.J., and Strong, Fournier and Henry, J.J., reversing the judgment of the Exchequer Court on the question submitted, that the ungranted lands in the Province of New Brunswick being in the Crown for the benefit of the people of New Brunswick, the exclusive right to fish follows as an incident, and is in the Crown as trustee for the benefit of the people of the province, and therefore a license by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to fish in streams running through provincial property would be illegal. The Queen v. Robertson, vi., 52.

3. Riparian ownership—Fishery officer—Trespass—31 Vict. c. 60, ss. 2, 19 (D.)—Notice—Exclusive damages—New trial.—Three actions for trespass and assault were brought by riparian proprietors of land fronting on rivers above the ebb and flow of the tide, against V., for forcibly seizing and taking away their fishing-rods and lines, while they were fly-fishing for salmon in front of their respective lots. V. was a fishery officer, under 31 Vict. c. 60 (D.) and justified seizure on the ground that plaintiffs were fishing without licenses in violation of an order-in-council of 11th June, 1879, in pursuance of s. 19 of the Act, prohibiting "fishing for salmon, except under licenses from the Department of Marine and Fisheries." V. was armed and in company with a sufficient number to have enforced the seizure if resistance had been made. There was no actual injury, but damages were recovered for $1,500, $1,200 and $1,000 respectively by the plaintiffs. (See 22 N. B. Rep. 639). Held, that ss. 2 and 19 of the Fisheries Act, and the order-in-council did not authorize V., as inspector of fisheries, to interfere with the exclusive rights of the riparian proprietors to fish at the locus in quo; but that the damages were in all the cases excessive, and therefore new trials should be granted. Held, also, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that when V. committed the trespasses complained of, he was acting as a Dominion officer, under the instructions of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and was not entitled to notice of action under C. S. N. B. c. 89, s. 1. or c. 90, s. 8. Venning v. Steadman, Hanson and Spurr, ix., 206.

4. Maritime law—Foreign vessel within British waters—Fishing within three mile limit—License—Forfeiture—R. S. C. c. 94, s. 3—Evidence—Onus probandi.—Section 3 of the "Act respecting Fishing by Foreign Vessels" (R. S. C. c. 94), prohibits fishing by foreign vessels in British waters within three marine miles of the coasts of Canada, without a license from the Governor-in-Council, on pain of forfeiture. In an action in rem in the Nova Scotia Admiralty District, the local judge (McDonald, C.J.), of the Exchequer Court of Canada, Admiralty Side, adjudged the condemnation and forfeiture of the vessel in question, her furniture and cargo, with costs (4 Ex. C. R. 419), and held, that where the Crown alleged in the petition in an action in rem for condemnation and forfeiture, that a certain vessel had violated the provisions of the above mentioned Act by fishing in prohibited waters without the necessary license, but offered no evidence in support of such allegation, the burden of proving the license to fish was upon the defendant. On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, the decision of the Exchequer Court was affirmed and the appeal dismissed with costs. The "Henry L. Phillips" v. The Queen, 18th February, 1895; xxv., 691.

5. Canadian waters—Property in beds—Public harbours—Erections in navigable waters—Interference with navigation—Right of fishing—Power to grant—Riparian proprietors—Great lakes and navigable rivers—Operation of Magna Charta—Provincial legislation—R. S. O. (1887) c. 24, s. 47—55 Vict. c. 10, ss. 5 to 13, 19 and 21 (O.)—R. S. Q. arts. 1375 to 1378.—Riparian proprietors before confederation had an exclusive right of fishing in non-navigable, and in navigable non-tidal lakes, rivers, streams, and waters, the beds of which had been granted to them by the Crown. Robertson v. The Queen (6 Can. S. C. R. 52) followed.—The rule that riparian proprietors own ad medium flum aque does not apply to the great lakes or navigable rivers. — Where beds of such waters have not been granted the right of fishing is public and not restricted to waters within the ebb and flow of the tide.—Where the provisions of Magna Charta are not in force, as in the Province of Quebec, the Crown, in right of the province, may grant exclusive rights of fishing in tidal waters, except in tidal public harbours in which, as in other public harbours, the Crown in right of the Dominion may grant the beds and fishing rights. Gwynne, J., dissenting. — Per Strong, C.J., and King and Girouard, J.J. The provisions of Magna Charta relating to tidal waters would be in force in the provinces in which such waters exist (except Quebec), unless repealed by legislation, but such legislation has probably been passed by the various Provincial Legislatures; and these provisions of the charter so far as they affect public harbours have been repealed by Dominion legislation.—The Dominion Parliament cannot authorize the giving by lease, license or otherwise the right of fishing in non-navigable waters, nor in navigable waters, the beds and banks of which are assigned to the provinces under the British North America Act. The legislative authority of Parliament under s. 91, item 12, is confined to the regulation and conservation of sea-coast and inland fisheries under which it may require that no person shall fish in public waters without a license from the Department of Marine and Fisheries, may impose fees for such license and prohibit all fishing without it, and may prohibit particular classes, such as foreigners, unconditionally from fishing. The license as required will, however, be merely personal conferring qualification, and gave no exclusive right to fish in a particular locality.—Section 4 and other portions of c. 95, Revised Statutes of Canada, so far as they attempt to confer exclusive rights of fishing in provincial waters, are ultra vires. Gwynne, J., contra.—Per Gwynne, J. Provincial Legislatures have no jurisdiction to deal with fisheries. Whatever comes within that term is given to the Dominion by the British North America Act, s. 91, item 12, including the grant of leases or licenses for exclusive fishing.—Per Strong, C.J., Taschereau, King and Girouard, J.J. R. S. O. c. 24, s. 47, and ss. 5 to 13 inclusive of the Ontario Act of 1892, are intra vires, but may be superseded by Dominion legislation.—R. S. Q. arts. 1375 to 1378 inclusive, are intra vires.—Per Gwynne, J. R. S. O. c. 24, s. 47 is ultra vires so far as it assumes to authorize the land covered with water within public harbours.—The margins of navigable rivers and lakes may be sold if there is an understanding with the Dominion Government, for protection against interference with navigation. The Act of 1892, and R. S. Q. arts. 1375 to 1378 are valid if passed in aid of a Dominion Act for protection of fisheries. If not, they are ultra vires. In re Jurisdiction over Provincial Fisheries, xxvi., 444.

marine miles from the coast of Nova Scotia, and the seine pursued up and secured to a foreign vessel, and the vessel was afterwards seized with the seine still so attached within the three mile limit, her crew then being engaged in the act of baling the fish out of the seine:—Held, Strong, C.J., and Gwynne, J., dissenting, affirming the decision of the court below, that the vessel when so seized was "fishing" in violation of the convention of 1818 between Great Britain and the United States of America, and of the Imperial Act, 59 Geo. III., c. 38, and the Revised Statutes of Canada, c. 94, and consequently liable with her cargo, tackle, rigging, apparel, furniture, and stores to be condemned and forfeited. *Ship "Frederick Gerring, Jr." v. the Minister of Railways." By 50 & 51 Vict. c. 56, s. 5, the location of the company's line of railway between Port Moody and the City of Westminster, including the foreclosure of Burrard Inlet at the foot of Gore Avenue, Vancouver City, was ratified and confirmed. The Act of Incorporation of the City of Vancouver, 49 Vict. c. 82 s. 213, (B.C.), vests in the city all streets, highways &c., and in 1892 the city began the construction of works extending from the foot of Gore Avenue, with the avowed object to cross the railroad track at a level, and obtain access to the harbour at deep water.—On an application by the railway company for an injunction to restrain the city corporation from proceeding with their work of construction and crossing the railway:—Held, affirming the judgment of the court below, that as the foreshore forms part of the land required by the railway company, as shewn on the plan deposited in the office of the Minister of Railways, the jus publicum to get access to and from the water at the foot of Gore Avenue is subordinate to the rights given to the railway company by the statute, 44 Vict. c. 1, s. 18 (a), on the said foreshore, and therefore the injunction was properly granted. *City of Vancouver v. FRAUD.

1. *Artifice to secure acceptance of insolvent succession—Acts of administration—Conservatory acts—Notary—Arts. 646, 650 C. C.—[Illiteracy].—A., who had a claim against an insolvent estate, purchased a right of redemption which the insolvent had at the time of his death and in order that his children might, by assuming to act as heirs, be deemed to have accepted the insolvent succession he caused to be prepared by a notary a deed of assignment of this right of redemption to B. et al., who, a few days after the death of their father, had been induced for a sum of $50 to consent to redeem. The notary prepared the deed without the knowledge of B. et al., but returned it to A., not wishing to receive the deed because he believed that in signing it B. et al. would make themselves heirs, and he believed that if they knew that in signing the deed they accepted the succession and responsibility for the debts, they would not sign. Another notary residing at a distance was sent for by A., to whom he gave the deed as prepared, and the notary then went to the residence of B. et al., read the deed to the parties, and without any explanation whatever passed and executed it. On being informed of the legal effect of their signatures,*

B. et al. formally renounced the succession. There was evidence that B. et al. had done some conservatory acts and acts of administration for their mother, but it was not proved that in any of these transactions they had taken the quality of heirs. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (3 Dor. Q. B. 123), that when an acceptance of an insolvent succession is the result of artifices practised by an interested party, it is null and without effect; that in this case, as A. had obtained the signatures to the deed in question by deceit and artifice, the defendants did not thereby become burthened with the debts of their insolvent father. Held, also, that it is the duty of a notary when executing a deed to explain to an illiterate grantor the legal and equitable obligations imposed by the deed, and consequent on its execution. (Henry, J., dissented.) Ayotte v. Boucher, ix., 460.

2. Rescission of contract—Title to land—Evidence of deceit.—A party who seeks to set aside a conveyance of land executed in pursuance of a contract of sale, for misrepresentation relating to a matter of title, is bound to establish fraud to the same extent and degree as a plaintiff in an action for deceit. *Bell v. 3. Preferences—Badge of fraud—Authority.—In an assignment for benefit of creditors authority to the assignee not only to prefer parties to accommodation paper but also to pay all "costs, charges, and expenses to arise in consequence" of such paper is a badge of fraud. *Kirk v. 1. Insolvency — Assignment for benefit of creditors—R. S. O. (1887) c. 124, s. 2—Preference—Intent — Pressure—Criminal liability.]—R. S. O. (1887) c. 124, s. 2 makes void any conveyance of property by a person in insolvent circumstances made "with intent to defeat, delay or prejudice his creditors, or to give to any one or more of them a preference over his other creditors or over any one or more of them, or which has such effect." Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (16 Ont. App. R. 323), (Fournier and Patterson, JJ., dissenting), that the words "or which has such effect" in this section apply only to the case of "giving any one or more of (his creditors) a preference over his other creditors or over any one or more of them."—Further, that the preference provided against in the statute is a voluntary preference and a conveyance obtained by pressure from the grantee would not be within its terms.—W. having become insolvent, and wishing to secure of an estate of which he was an executor monies which he had used for his own purposes gave his co-executors a mortgage on his property for the purpose, and proceedings were taken by a creditor to set aside this mortgage under the above section. Held, Fournier and Patterson, JJ., dissenting, that the mortgage was not void under the statute.—Per Strong, Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ., that there was no preference under the statute as the persons for whose benefit the security was given were not creditors of the grantor, but they stood in the relation of trustee and cestui que trust.—Per Strong and Taschereau, JJ., that the grantor being criminally responsible for misappropriating the money of the estate of which he was executor, the fear of penal consequences was sufficient pressure on him to take from the mortgage the character of a voluntary preference. Molsons Bank v. Halter, xviii., 88.

See No. 2, infra.

2. Debtor and creditor—Insolvency—Preference — Pressure — 49 Vict. c. 45, s. 2 (Man.)] — By 49 Vict. c. 45, s. 2 (Man.), "Every gift, conveyance, &c., of goods, chattels or effects . . . made by a person at a time when he is in insolvent circumstances . . . with intent to defeat, delay or prejudice his creditors, or to give to any one or more of them a preference over his other creditors or over any one or more of them, or which has such effect, shall as against them be utterly void." Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (6 M. L. R. 496), Patterson, J., dissenting, that the word "preference" in the Act imports a voluntary preference, and does not apply to a case where the transfer has been induced by pressure; and further, that a mere demand by the creditor without even a threat of legal proceedings, is sufficient pressure to rebut presumption of preference.—The words "or which has such effect" in the Act apply only to a case where that had been done indirectly which, if it had been done directly, would have been a preference within the statute.—The preference mentioned in the Act being a voluntary preference, the instruments to be avoided as having the effect of a preference are only those which are the spontaneous acts of the debtor. Molsons Bank v. Halter (18 Can. S. C. R. 88) approved and followed.—Held, per Patterson, J., that any transfer by an insolvent debtor which has the effect of giving one creditor a priority over the others in payment of his debt, or which is given with the intent that it shall so operate, is void under the statute whether or not it is the voluntary act of the debtor or given as the result of pressure. Stephens v. McArthur, xix., 446.

C.*]—On 20th December, 1883, the creditors of L. resolved to accept a composition payable by his promissory notes at 4, 8, and 12 months. At the time L. was indebted to the Exchange Bank (in liquidation), which did not sign the composition in $14,000. B. et al. the appellants, were at that time accommodation indorsers for $7,415 of that amount, but held as security a mortgage dated 5th September, 1881, on L.'s real estate. The bank having agreed to accept $8,000 cash for its claim B. et al. on 8th January, 1884, advanced $3,000 to L. and took his promissory notes and a new mortgage registered on 13th January for the amount, having discharged and released on the same day the previous mortgage of 5th September, 1881. This new transaction was not made known to D. et al., the respondents, who on 14th January, 1884, advanced $3,000 to L. to enable him to pay off the Exchange Bank and for which they accepted L.'s promissory notes. L., having failed to pay the second instalment of his notes, D. et al., who were not original parties to the deed of composition, brought an action to have the transaction between L. and appellants set aside and the mortgage declared void on the ground of having been granted in fraud of the rights of the debtor's creditors. Held, reversing the Court of Queen's Bench, Ritchie, C.J., and Taschereau, J., dissenting, that the agreement by the debtor with appellants was valid, the debtor having at the time the right to pledge a part of his assets to secure the payment of a loan made to assist in the payment of his composition.—Per Fournier, J. The mortgage having been registered on 13th January, 1884, the respondent's right of action to set aside the mortgage was prescribed by one year from that date. Brossard v. Dupras, xix., 531.

4. Insolvency—Debtor and creditor—Simulated sale.—Action instituted in 1883, by L. to annul a deed of sale made by G., one of the defendants to R., the other defendant, of all real estate belonging to G., in the City of Quebec, for $54,000, on 23rd February, 1878. G. had been for several years previous to the action carrying on business at Quebec in partnership with the uncle and tutor of L. who lent money belonging to his ward to the firm of G. L. & Co., of which he was a member, and credit in the books of that firm was given to L. for the loan.—In April, 1883, G. L. & Co. became insolvent whilst owing L. $26,759.75, for which he recovered judgment. L. contended that in February, 1878, when the sale by G. to R. was made, the firm was hopelessly insolvent, that R. was aware of this insolvency and that the sale to him, though nominally for $54,000 in cash, was in reality collusively made for the purpose of covering the debt of the firm to R. Appellant pleaded that the firm was represented to him at the time of the sale to be solvent, that he had reason to believe that this statement was true, that he bonâ fide paid the price in notes, which he afterwards took up, and that the whole transaction was in good faith and caused no loss to the creditors of G. or to the firm. After a long and contradictory enquête, the action was, on 7th June, 1886, maintained and the deed set aside as a collusive transaction for the purpose of giving a preference to a creditor. The judgment was affirmed by the Queen's Bench, Church, J., dissenting.—On appeal, the Supreme Court of Canada (Ritchie, C.J., dissenting), took the view of the evidence adopted by Church, J., in the Queen's Bench, that there was not sufficient evidence to establish that the sale was simulated, nor that it was intended illegally and fraudulently to give R. an advantage over the other creditors of G. L. & Co., nor that R. knew on 23rd February, 1878, of the insolvency of the firm; and the appeal was allowed and the action dismissed with costs. Ross v. Laird, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 351.

5. Estoppel — Conveyance by married woman—Agreement—Recital—Bona fides.—B., a married woman, in order to carry out an agreement between her husband and his creditors consented to convey to the creditor a farm, her separate property, in consideration of the transfer by her husband to her of the stock and other personal property on it and of indemnity against her personal liability on a mortgage against said farm. The conveyance, agreement and bill of sale of the chattels were all executed on the same day, the agreement, to which B. was not a party, containing a recital that the husband was owner of the said chattels but giving the creditor no security upon them. The chattels having subsequently been seized under execution against the husband it was claimed, on interpleader proceedings, that the bill of sale was in fraud of the creditor. Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, that the recital in the agreement worked no estoppel as against B.; that as it appeared that the husband expressly refused to assign the chattels to his creditor there was nothing to prevent him from transferring them to his wife, and that the Court of Appeal rightly held the transaction an honest one, and B. entitled to the goods and to indemnity against the mortgage. Boulton v. Boulton, xxviii., 592.

6. Voluntary conveyance of land—13 Eliz. c. 5 (Imp.) — Solvent vendor — Action by mortgagee.—A voluntary conveyance of land is void under 13 Eliz. c. 5 (Imp.) as tending to hinder and delay creditors though the vendor was solvent when it was made if it results in denuding him of all his property and so rendering him insolvent thereafter.—A mortgagee whose security is admittedly insufficient may bring an action to set aside such conveyance and that without first realizing his security.—Judgment appealed from (7 B. C. Rep. 189) reversed, Gwynne, J., dissenting. Sun Life Ass. Co. v. Elliott, xxxi., 91.

FRAUDULENT PREFERENCE.

1. Judgment in default of appearance—Facilitating recovery—R. S. O. (1877) c. 118—Premature execution—Irregularity—Nullity — Ontario Judicature Act, 1883.—On the 28th March, 1882, a writ was issued by C. against M. for $32,155.33, indorsed, in accordance with the Judicature Act, with particulars of claim on account stated and settled between C. and M., such amount being arrived at by allowing to M. a discount of 5 per cent. for an unexpired balance of the term of credit on purchase of goods. No appearance was entered, and on the 8th April judgment was recovered for the amount, and writs of execution issued. The appellants, creditors of M., instituted an action against him on the 8th April, 1882, and obtained judgment on the 14th April, and on the same day writs of execution were issued.—The stock-in-trade was sold by the sheriff at public auction, under all the executions in his hands, to C., the highest bidder.—On an interpleader issue to try whether or not appellants' execution was entitled to priority over that of C., and whether or not C.'s judgment was void for fraud, and as being a preference; and whether or not C.'s executions were void as against appellants, on account of having issued before the expiration of eight days from the last day for appearance, Armour, J., directed judgment to be entered in favour of the appellants. That judgment was reversed by the Queen's Bench Division, whose judgment was affirmed by the Court of Appeal for Ontario (10 Ont. App. R. 92). Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that what the debtor did in this case did not constitute a fraudulent preference prohibited by R. S. O. c. 118, and that the premature issue of the execution of the respondents was only an irregularity, and not a nullity. Macdonald v. Crombie, xi., 107.

2. Security for debt — Simulation—Insolvent company—Chattel mortgage—Preference over other creditors—R. S. O. (1877) c. 118—Bona fides — Pressure.—The Hamilton Knitting Co. being indebted to L., and believing that their charter did not permit them to give a mortgage to secure an overdue debt, gave a chattel mortgage in consideration of an advance by L. of more than the debt, the actual amount being returned to the mortgagees, and the balance of the amount advanced on the mortgage, after paying the debt, was put into the business of the company.—At the time this was done the company believed that by getting time from these creditors they would be able to carry on their business and avoid failure. This hope was not realized, however, and they shortly after stopped payment, and in consequence, certain of their creditors, the respondents, obtained judgments and issued executions. The property secured by the chattel mortgage was seized under these executions, and an interpleader issue brought to test the title.—The chancellor gave judgment for the execution creditors, holding the mortgage void under the statute relating to fraudulent preferences, R. S. O. (1877) c. 118, and the Court of Appeal affirmed this judgment by an equal division. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (12 Ont. App. R. 137), that as the company bona fide believed that by getting an extension of time from L. they would be able to continue their business, it could not have been given with a view of preferring the appellants and of defrauding the other creditors, and therefore the appellants were entitled to judgment. Long v. Hancock, xii., 532.

3. Chattel mortgage — Security for debt—Insolvency — Suit by creditors to set aside mortgage — Parties plaintiffs—Trust deed not attacked.—Where a trader who was in insolvent circumstances had given a chattel mortgage on his stock-in-trade to secure a debt, and shortly after executed an assignment in trust for the benefit of his creditors.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (12 Ont. App. R. 593), that the mortgage was void under the statute, and that certain simple contract creditors of such trader could maintain a suit, on behalf of themselves and all other creditors except the mortgagees, to set aside the mortgage without including the mortgagees as plaintiffs, and without attacking the assignment in trust. McCall v. McDonald, xiii., 247.

4. Capias — Petition for discharge—Final judgment—Judicial proceeding — Appeal, R. S. C. c. 135, s. 28—Arts. 819-821 C. C. P.—Secretion — Art. 798 C. C. P. — Promissory note discounted — Arts. 1036, 1953 C. C. — Remedy by indorser.—A writ of capias having been issued against M. under art. 798 C. C. P. he petitioned to be discharged under art. 819 C. C. P., and issue having been joined on the pleadings under art. 820 C. C. P., the petition was dismissed by the Superior Court, that judgment being affirmed by the Queen's Bench (15 R. L. 34). Held, that the judgment was a final judgment in a judicial proceeding within the meaning of R. S. C. c. 135, s. 28, and therefore appealable.—Taschereau, J., dissenting. Stanton v. Canada Atlantic Ry. Co. (Cass. Dig. 2 ed. 37) reviewed. On the merits it was:—Held, per Ritchie, C. J., Fournier and Taschereau, JJ., that a fraudulent preference to one or more creditors is a secretion within the meaning of art. 798 C. C. P. Also, that an indorser of a note discounted by a bank has the right under art. 1953, C. C. to avail himself of the remedy provided by art. 798, C. C. P. if the maker fraudulently disposes of his property. Strong, Henry, and Gwynne, JJ., contra.—The court being equally divided the appeal stood dismissed without costs. Mackinnon v. Keroack, xv., 111.

5. Insolvent debtor—Assignment for benefit of creditors—Book debts—R. S. O. 1877, c. 113 — 48 Vict. c. 26, s. 2 (O.)—N. owed defendants money which he was unable to pay in full, and assigned to them all his book debts and accounts, providing that the book debts should be placed in the hands of financial agents for collection, who should account to the defendants for the proceeds less the commission, and whatever remained in defendants' hands after their debts were paid should be paid over to N. Plaintiffs, judgment creditors of N., brought action to set aside this assignment as having the effect of hindering, delaying and defeating them in the recovery of their claim and giving defendants a preference over other creditors, and so being void under R. S. O. 1877, c. 113 as amended by 48 Vict. c. 26, s. 2 (Ont.). Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (15 Ont. App. R. 324), Gwynne, J., dissenting, that N. being unable to meet the demands of his creditors for payment must be deemed insolvent within the meaning of the said Act; that book debts are a species of property included in the provisions of 48 Vict. c. 26, s. 2 (Ont.), and that the assignment by N. to the defendants was void under that section. Klæpfer v. Warnock, xviii., 701.

6. Debtor and creditor — Insolvency — Mortgage — Pressure — R. S. O. (1887) c. 124, s. 2.—A mortgage given by a debtor who knows that he is unable to pay all his debts in full is not void as a preference to the mortgagee over other creditors if given as a result of pressure and of a bona fide debt and if the mortgagee is not aware of the debtor being in insolvent circumstances. Molsons Bank v. Halter (18 Can. S. C. R. 88) and Stephens v. McArthur (19 Can. S. C. R. 446) followed. Judgment appealed from (18 Ont. App. R. 159) affirmed. Gibbons v. McDonald, xx., 587.

7. Mortgage by insolvent — Bonâ fide advance—Consideration partly bad—Effect on whole instrument—R. S. O. 1887, c. 124, s. 2—Statute of Eliz.—R. being in insolvent circumstances applied to P., his uncle, for a loan of $5,000, which he received, P. mortgaging his house for part of the amount and giving his note for the balance which R. had discounted. The security for this loan was a chattel mortgage on R.'s stock of goods in his store. The money was applied by R. chiefly in taking up notes made by him and indorsed by his relatives. P. knew when he advanced the loan that R. was insolvent, but it was not shewn that he knew how the money was to be applied.—R. gave another chattel mortgage to M. for another loan of money applied in the same way, but it was shewn that part of the loan was R.'s own money though alleged to have been advanced by his wife.—An action was brought on behalf of R.'s creditors to have these mortgages set aside as being void under R. S. O. (1887) c. 124, s. 2, and both were set aside. The Court of Appeal reversed the decision setting aside the mortgage to P., and affirmed that setting aside the mortgage to M., holding as to the latter, following Commercial Bank v. Wilson (3 E. & A. Rep. 257), that the mortgage being void in part for illegal consideration the whole instrument was void. Held, affirming Campbell v. Patterson (18 Ont. App. R. 646, sub nom. Campbell v. Roche), that the mortgage to P. being given for an actual bonâ fide advance the provisions of R. S. O. (1887) c. 124, s. 2, did not apply to it especially as P. was not shewn to have knowledge of R.'s motive in procuring the loan. Held, also, overruling Mader v. McKinnon (18 Ont. App. R. 646, sub nom. McKinnon v. Roche), in so far as Commercial Bank v. Wilson was followed, that that case was decided under the Statute of Eliz. and is not now law under the Ontario statute, and a mortgage may be set aside as to part and maintained as to the remainder, but affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal on the ground that the evidence shewed the whole of the consideration for M.'s mortgage to be illegal and bad. Appeals dismissed with costs. Campbell v. Patterson; Mader v. McKinnon, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 122.

8. Sheriff — Trespass — Sale of goods by insolvent — Bona fides — Judgment of inferior tribunal — Estoppel — Bar to action — Res judicata — Pleading.—K. was a trader, and in insolvent circumstances when he sold the whole of his stock-in-trade to D. At the time of this sale D. was aware that two of D.'s creditors had recovered judgments against him. The sheriff afterwards seized the goods so sold, under executions issued upon judgments subsequently obtained, and upon an interpleader issue tried in the County Court the jury found that K. had sold the goods with intent to prefer the creditors who held the prior judgments, but that D. had purchased in good faith and without knowing of such intention on the part of the vendor. Judgment was thereupon entered against D. in the County Court, and the judgment was affirmed by the Supreme Court of British Columbia en banc.—In an action afterwards brought by D. against the sheriff for trespass in seizing the goods he obtained a verdict, which was, however, set aside by the court en banc, a majority of the judges holding that the County Court judgment was a complete bar to the action.—On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada: Held, reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, that as the evidence shewed that the goods had been purchased in good faith by D. for his own benefit, the sale was not void under the statute respecting fraudulent preferences; that the County Court judgment, being a decision of an inferior tribunal of limited jurisdiction, could not operate as a bar in respect of a cause of action in the Supreme Court, beyond the jurisdiction of the County Court, and further, that even if such judgment could be set up as a bar, it ought to have been specially pleaded by way of estoppel, by a plea setting up in detail all the facts necessary to constitute the estoppel, and that from the evidence in the case it appeared that no such estoppel could have been established. Taschereau, J., dissented. Davies v. McMillan, 1st May, 1893. Appeal to Privy Council dismissed from - pro.

9. Assignment for benefit of creditors — Preferences — R. S. N. S. c. 92, ss. 4, 5, 10 — Chattel mortgage — Statute of Eliz.—An assignment is void under the Statute of Elizabeth as tending to hinder or delay creditors if it gives a first preference to a firm of which the assignee is a member and provides for allowance of interest on the claim of the said firm until paid, and the assignee is permitted to continue in the same possession and control of business as he previously had, though no one of these provisions taken by itself would have such effect.—A provision that "the assignee shall only be liable for such moneys as shall come into his hands as such assignee unless there be gross negligence or fraud on his part" will also avoid the assignment under the Statute of Elizabeth. Kirk v. Chisholm, xxvi., 111.

10. Insolvency — Pressure — Assignment of expected profits—Statute of Elizabeth—Assets exigible in execution.—The appeal was from the judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, affirming the judgment of Street, J., in the High Court of Justice, which dismissed the action of the plaintiff with costs. The action was brought to set aside an assignment, by way of security, to the defendant of an interest in the profits expected to be earned under a contract for the performance of work, on the ground that it was made to defeat, hinder, defraud, delay and prejudice the creditors of the assignor, (who was insolvent), and to give the assignee an unjust preference. In the trial court the decision in favour of the defendant was based on the ground that the assignment had been made under pressure, and was therefore valid. The Court of Appeal affirmed this judgment, but upon other grounds, holding that as the subject of the assignment did not consist of assets which could be reached by creditors at the time when it was made, the assignment did not come within the Act Respecting Assignments and Preferences (24 Ont. App. R. 153).—The Supreme Court of Canada dismissed the appeal with costs, adopting the reasoning of the judges in the Court of Appeal for Ontario. Blakely v. Gould, xxvii., 682.

11. Insolvency — Assignment — Preference — Payment in money — Cheque of third party—R. S. O. c. 124, s. 3.—Appeal from a judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario (23 Ont. App. R. 439), which held that indorsing and giving a creditor the unaccepted cheque of a third person in the debtor's favour is not a payment of money to the creditor within the meaning of the third section of chapter 124 of the Revised Statutes of Ontario (1887), and overruling Armstrong v. Hemstreet (22 O. R. 366). — The Supreme Court of Canada affirmed the decision of the Court of Appeal and dismissed the appeal with costs. Fraser v. Davidson & Hay, xxviii., 272.

12. Debtor and creditor — Insolvency — Fraudulent preferences — Chattel mortgage — Advances of money — Solicitor's knowledge of circumstances—R. S. O. (1887) c. 124—54 Vict. c. 20 (Ont.)—58 Vict. c. 23 (Ont.) —In order to give a preference to a particular creditor, a debtor who was in insolvent circumstances, executed a chattel mortgage upon his stock-in-trade in favour of a money-lender by whom a loan was advanced. The money, which was in the hands of the mortgagee's solicitor, who also acted for the preferred creditor throughout the transaction, was at once paid over to the creditor who, at the same time, delivered to the solicitor, to be held by him as an escrow and dealt with as circumstances might require, a bond indemnifying the mortgagee against any loss under the chattel mortgage. The mortgagee had previously been consulted by the solicitor as to the loan, but was not informed that the transaction was being made in this manner to avoid the appearance of violating the Acts respecting Assignments and Preferences and to bring the case within the ruling in Gibbons v. Wilson (17 Ont. App. R. 1). Held, that all the circumstances, necessarily known to his solicitor in the transaction of the business, must be assumed to have been known to the mortgagee and the whole affair considered as one transaction contrived to evade the consequences of illegally preferring a particular creditor over others, and that, under the circumstances, the advance made was not a bona fide payment of money within the meaning of the statutory exceptions. Burns & Lewis v. Wilson, xxviii., 207.

13. Assignment for benefit of creditors — Preferred creditors — Money paid under voidable assignment — Levy and sale under execution—Statute of Elizabeth.—Where an assignment has been held void as against the statute, 13 Eliz., c. 5, and the result of such decision is that a creditor who had subsequently obtained judgment against the assignor and, notwithstanding the assignment, sold all the debtor's personal property so transferred, becomes entitled to all the personal property of the assignor levied upon by him under his execution, such creditor has no legal right and no equity to an account or to follow moneys received by the assignee or paid by him under such assignment in respect to which he has not secured a prior claim by taking the necessary proceedings to make them exigible. Cummings & Sons v. Taylor, xxviii., 337.

14. Debtor and creditor — Transfer of property — Delaying or defeating creditors — 13 Eliz. c. 5.—A transfer of property to a creditor for valuable consideration, even with intent to prevent it being seized under execution at the suit of another creditor, and to delay the latter in his remedies or defeat them altogether, is not void under 13 Eliz., c. 5, if the transfer is made to secure an existing debt, and the transferee does not, either directly or indirectly, make himself an instrument for the purpose of subsequently benefiting the transferror. Mulcahy v. Archibald, xxviii., 523.

15. Assignment for benefit of creditors — Fraudulent preference — Bribery — Promissory note — Illegal consideration—Nullity — Costs.—A secret arrangement whereby the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure respecting equal distribution of the assets of insolvents are defeated and advantage given to a particular unsecured creditor is a fraud upon the general body of creditors notwithstanding that the agreement for the additional payment may be made by a third person who has no direct interest in the insolvent's business. A promissory note given to secure the amount of the preference payable under such an arrangement is wholly void. Brigham v. Banque Jacques-Cartier, xxx., 429.

16. Money paid — Voluntary payment — Insolvency of debtor — Action by assignee—Status.—S., a trader, in August, 1899, procured the consent in writing of his creditors to payment of his debts then due and maturing by notes at different dates extending to the following March. V., one of the creditors, insisted on more prompt payment of part of his claim, and took from S. notes aggregating in amount $708, all payable in September, which S. agreed in writing to pay at maturity, and did pay. In November, 1899, S. assigned for benefit of his creditors when the arrangement between him and V. first became known and the assignee and other creditors brought an action to recover the said sum of $708 from V. as part of the insolvent estate. Held, affirming the judgment of the Court of Appeal (3 Ont. L. R. 5), and that at the trial (32 O. R. 216), that S. having paid the notes voluntarily without oppression or coercion could not himself have recovered back the amount and his assignee was in no better position.—Held, per Taschereau, J. As anything recovered by the assignee would be for the benefit of his co-plaintiffs only who would thus receive what would have been an unjust preference if stipulated for by the agreement for extension the plaintiffs had no locus standi in curia. Langle v. VanAllen, xxxii., 174.

17. Debtor and creditor—Collusion—Pressure—R. S. B. C. cc. 86, 87—The Bank Act, s. 80—Company law—Mortgage by directors —Ratification—B. C. Companies Acts, 1890, 1892, 1894.—The action was to set aside a mortgage by an incorporated company to the bank, an assignment of book debts and judgment by the bank against the company on grounds: (1) that the mortgage was voluntary, fraudulent and void under the Statute of Eliz.; (2) void as a fraudulent preference; (3) not executed in accordance with the Companies Act; (4) that the assignment was void for same reasons and contrary to the Bank Act; and (5) the judgment voluntary, fraudulent and void under the Statute of Elizabeth. It was contended that moneys received by the bank were exigible under plaintiffs' executions and an order asked accordingly. The judgment appealed from (8 B. C. Rep. 314) affirmed the trial judgment and held that there was good consideration for the mortgage, that it was given under pressure and should not be set aside although comprising the whole of the debtor's property and given under insolvent circumstances to the knowledge of the mortgagee and deprived the other creditors of their remedy; also, that the mortgage given by the company's directors without proper authority had been legally ratified by subsequent resolution of the shareholders. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment appealed from, Gwynne, J., taking no part in the decision, and subsequently the Privy Council refused leave for an appeal (8 B. C. Rep. 337). *Adams & Burns v. GAMING.

*Criminal Code, s. 575 —Persona designata —Officers de facto and de jure—Chief constable—Common gaming house—Confiscation of gaming instruments, moneys, &c.—Evidence —The Canada Evidence Act, 1893, ss. 2, 3, 20 and 21.] — Section 575 of the Criminal Code, authorizing the issue of a warrant to seize gaming implements on the report of "the chief constable or deputy chief constable" of a city or town does not mean that the report must come from an officer having the exact title mentioned, but only from one exercising such functions and duties as will bring him within the designation used in the statute. Therefore, the warrant could properly issue on the report of the deputy high constable of the City of Montreal. Girouard, J., dissenting.—The warrant would be good if issued on the report of a person who filled de facto the office of deputy high constable though he was not such de jure.—In an action to revendicate the moneys so seized the rules of evidence in civil matters prevailing in the province would apply, and the plaintiff could not invoke "The Canada Evidence Act, 1893," so as to be a competent witness in his own behalf in the Province of Quebec.—Per Strong, C.J. A judgment declaring the forfeiture of money so seized cannot be collaterally impeached in an action of revendication. *O'Neil v. GAS COMPANY.

Construction of contract—Construction of statute—12 Vict. c. 183, s. 20—Notice to cancel contract—Gas supply shut off for non-payment of gas bill on other premises—Mandamus.—An agreement to furnish gas contained an express provision that either of the contracting parties should have the right to cancel the contract by giving twenty-four hours' notice in writing. Notices were sent in writing to the consumer that his gas would be shut off, at a certain number on a street named, unless he paid arrears of gas bills due upon another property. Held, that such notices could not be considered as notices given under the contract for the purpose of cancelling it.—The Act to amend the Act incorporating the New City Gas Company of Montreal and to extend its powers (12 Vict. c. 181), provides:—"That if any person or persons, company or companies, or body corporate supplied with gas by the company, should neglect to pay any rate, rent or charge due to the said New City Gas Company, at any of the times fixed for the payment thereof, it shall be lawful for the company or any person acting under their authority, on giving twenty-four hours' previous notice, to stop the gas from entering the premises, service pipes, or lamps of any such person, company or body, by cutting off the service pipe or pipes, or by such other means as the said company shall see fit, and to recover the said rent or charge due up to such time, together with the expenses of cutting off the gas, in any competent court, notwithstanding any contract to furnish for a longer time, and in all cases where it shall be lawful for the said company to cut off and take away the supply of gas from any house, building or premises, under the provisions of this Act, it shall be lawful for the company, their agents and workmen, upon giving twenty-four hours previous notice to the occupier or person in charge, to enter into any such house, building or premises, between the hours of nine o'clock in the forenoon and four in the afternoon, making as little disturbance and inconvenience as possible, and to remove, take and carry away any pipe, meter, cock, branch, lamp, fittings or apparatus, the property of and belonging to the said company." Held, Tascheureau, J., dissenting, that the powers given by the clause quoted are exorbitant and must be construed strictly; that the company has not been thereby vested with power to shut off gas from the buildings and premises of the same proprietor or occupant, when he becomes in default for the payment of bills for gas consumed in one of them only; and that the provision that the notice to cut off must be given "to the occupier or person in charge," indicates that only premises so occupied and in default should suffer. *Cadiou v. GIFT.

1. Gift—Confidential relations—Evidence—Parent and child—Public policy—Principal and agent.—The principle that where confidential relations exist between donor and donee the gift is, on grounds of public policy, presumed to be the effect of those relations, which presumption can only be rebutted by shewing that the donor acted under independent advice, does not apply so strongly to gifts from parent to child or from principal to agent. Thus, in case of a gift to the donor's son, for benefit of the latter's children, when said son had for years acted as manager of his father's business, when he was the only child of the donor having issue, and when the donor, nine years before his death, had evidenced his intention of making the gift by signing a promissory note in favour of the son, by renewing it six years later and by voluntarily paying it before he died, such presumption does not arise. — Judgment of the Court of Appeal (2 Ont. L. R. 251) reversing that of the Divisional Court (31 O. R. 414) affirmed, Sedgewick and Davies, J.J., dissenting. Trusts and Guarantee Co. v. Hart, xxxii., 553.

2. Donatio mortis causa—Deposit receipts—Cheques and orders—Delivery for beneficiaries—Corroboration—Construction of statute.—McD., being ill and not expecting to recover, requested his wife, his brother being present at the time, to get from his trunk a bank deposit receipt for $6,000 which he then handed to his brother telling him that he wanted the money equally divided among his wife, brother and sister. The brother then, on his own suggestion or that of McD., drew out three cheques or orders for $2,000 each payable out of the deposit receipt to the respective beneficiaries which McD. signed and returned to his brother who handed to McD.'s wife the one payable to her and the receipt, and she placed them in the trunk from which she had taken the receipt. McD. died eight days afterwards. Held, affirming the judgment appealed against (35 N. S. Rep. 205), Sedgewick and Armour, J.J., dissenting, that this was a valid donatio mortis causa of the deposit receipt and the sum it referred to notwithstanding there was a small amount for interest not specified in the gift.—By R. S. N. S. [1900] c. 163, s. 35, an interested party in an action against the estate of a deceased person cannot succeed on the evidence of himself or his wife or both unless it is corroborated by other material evidence. Held, that such evidence may be corroborated by circumstances or fair inferences from facts proved. The evidence of an additional witness is not essential. McDonald v. McDonald, xxxiii., 145.

3. Marriage covenant — Universal community—Don mutuel—Registry laws — Arts. 807, 819, 1411 C. C. — Construction of contract.—A marriage contract contained the following clause:—"Les futurs époux se sont faits et se font par ces présentes au survivant d'eux ce acceptant, donation viagère, mutuelle, égale et réciproque de tous les biens meubles et immeubles, acquêts, conquêts, prepres et autres biens généralement quelconques qui se trouveront être et appartenir au premier mourant au jour de son décès de quelque nature qu'ils soient, et à quelque lieu qu'ils soient situés, pour par le dit survivant en jouir en usufruit sa vie durant à sa caution juratoire et gardant vuidité." It was admitted that the only thing affected consisted of property belonging to the community. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, that the donation was one within the provisions of art. 1411 C. C. and, as such, did not require registration as the clause is divisible and the stipulation in question as to universal community merely a simple marriage covenant and not subject to the rules and formalities applicable to gifts. *Huot v. GUARANTEE.

1. Construction of agreement—Guarantee.—A., a wholesale merchant, had been supplying goods to C. & Co. when, becoming doubtful as to their credit, he insisted on their account being reduced to $5,000, and security for further credit. W., who had indorsed to secure a part of the existing debt, thereupon gave A. a guarantee in the form of a letter, as follows:—"I understand that you are prepared to furnish C. & Co. with stock to the extent of $5,000 as a current account, but want a guarantee for any amount beyond that sum. In order not to impede their operations I have consented to become responsible to you for any loss you may sustain in any amount upon your current account in excess of the said sum of five thousand, but the total amount not to exceed eight thousand dollars including your own credit of five thousand, unless sanctioned by a future guarantee." . . . A. then continued to supply C. & Co., with goods, and in an action by him on this guarantee:—Held, affirming the decision of the Court of Appeal, Gwynne, J., dissenting, that there could be no liability on this guarantee unless the indebtedness of C. & Co. to A. should exceed the sum of $5,000, and at the time of action brought such indebtedness, having been reduced by payments from C. & Co. and dividends from their insolvent estate to less than such sum, A. had no cause of action. Alexander v. Watson, xxiii., 670.

2. Patent of invention—Business agreement to manufacture under—Letter of guarantee—Failure of scheme—Liability of guarantor.—The chief object of an agreement between A. and B. was the profitable manufacture and sale of wares under a patent of invention issued to A., and in consideration of advances by B. to an amount not exceeding $6,000, C. by a letter of guarantee agreed "to become a surety to B. for the repayment of the $6,000 within 12 months from the date of the agreement if it should transpire that, for the reasons incorporated in said agreement, it should not be carried out."—On action brought by B. against C. for $6,000 it was proved at the trial that the manufacturing scheme broke down through defects of the invention. Held, affirming the judgment of the court below, that C. was liable for the amount guaranteed by his letter. Angus v. Union Gas and Oil Stove Co., xxiv., 104.

3. Principal and surety—Guarantee bond—Default of principal — Non-disclosure by creditor.—W. was appointed agent of a company in 1891 to sell its goods on commission, and gave a bond with sureties for faithful discharge of his duties. His appointment was renewed year after year, a new bond with the same sureties being given to the company on each renewal. His agreement with the company only authorized W. to sell for cash, but at the end of each season he was in arrear in his remittances, which he attributed to slow collections, and which he settled by giving an indorsed note, retiring the same before the bond for the next year was executed. After the season of 1894 the company discovered that W. had collected moneys of which he had made no return and brought an action to recover the same from the sureties. Held, reversing the decision of the Court of Appeal, that each year there was an employment of W. distinct from, and independent of, those of preceding years; that the position of the sureties on re-appointment was the same as if other persons had signed the bond of the preceding year; and that the company was under no obligation, on taking a new bond, to inform the sureties that W. had not punctually performed his undertakings in respect of previous employment, nor did the non-disclosure imply a representation to the sureties when they signed a new bond that they had been punctually performed. *Niagara District Fruit Growers' Stock Co. v. HABEAS CORPUS.

1. *Questions of fact—Conviction by J. P.—Arrest on warrant—Inquiry as to evidence—Jurisdiction—Certiorari — Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 49 — Supreme Court Amendment Act, 1876, s. 34—R. S. O. (1877) c. 70.]—The Chief Justice, in chambers, dismissed an application on behalf of a person arrested on a warrant issued on conviction by a magistrate, for a writ of habeas corpus and for certiorari to bring up the proceedings based on lack of evidence to warrant the conviction.—On appeal, Held, Henry, J., dissenting, that the conviction having been regular, and made by a court in exercise of its authority, and within its jurisdiction, the only objection being that the magistrate erred on the facts, and that the evidence did not justify the conclusion which he arrived at as to the guilt of the prisoner, the Supreme Court could not go behind the conviction, and inquire into the merits of the case by the use of a writ of habeas corpus and thus constitute itself a court of appeal from the magistrate's decision.—The only appellate power conferred on the court in criminal cases, is by s. 49 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, and it could not have been the intention of the legislature, while limiting appeals in criminal cases of the highest importance, to impose upon the court the duty of revision in matters of fact of summary convictions by magistrates. — Section 34 of the Supreme Court Amendment Act, 1876, does not in any case authorize the issue of a writ of certiorari to accompany a writ of habeas corpus, granted by a judge of the Supreme Court in chambers; and, as the proceedings before the full court on habeas corpus arising out of a criminal charge are only by way of appeal from the decision of such judge in chambers, that section does not authorize the court to issue a writ of certiorari in such proceedings; to do so, would be to assume appellate jurisdiction over the inferior court.—Semble, per Ritchie, C.J., that R. S. O. (1877) c. 70, relating to habeas corpus,* does not apply to the Supreme Court of Canada. In re Trepanier, xii., 111.

C. — Constitution — Commission to judge presiding — Trial of prisoner — Change of venue — Provision for increased expenses—Practice — Absence of prisoner—Evidence—Return to writ.]—Section 51, Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, does not interfere with the inherent right which the Supreme Court of Canada has, in common with every superior court incident to its jurisdiction, to inquire into and judge of the regularity or abuse of its process, and to quash a writ of habeas corpus and subsequent proceedings thereon when, in the opinion of the court, such writ has been improvidently issued.—That section does not constitute the individual judges of the Supreme Court of Canada separate and independent courts, nor confer on the judges a jurisdiction outside of and independent of the court, and obedience to a writ issued under said section cannot be enforced by the judge but by the court, which alone can issue an attachment for contempt in not obeying its process. (Fournier and Henry, J.J., dissenting).—Per Strong, J. The words of s. 51 expressly giving an appeal when the writ of habeas corpus has been refused or the prisoner remanded, must be attributed to the excessive caution of the legislature to provide all due protection to the subject in the matter of personal liberty, and not to an intention to deprive the court of the right to entertain appeals from, and revise, rescind and vary orders made under this section.—The right to issue a writ of habeas corpus being limited by s. 51 to "an inquiry into the cause of commitment in any criminal case under any Act of the Parliament of Canada," such writ cannot be issued in a case of murder, which is a case at common law. (Fournier and Henry, J.J., dissenting). — Per Fournier and Henry, J.J. The restriction imposed by s. 51 to "an inquiry into the cause of commitment in any criminal case under any Act of the Parliament of Canada," is merely intended to exclude inquiry into the cause of commitment for the infraction of some provincial law; and the words "in any criminal case" were inserted to exclude the habeas corpus in civil matters; it is sufficient to give jurisdiction if the commitment be in virtue of an Act of the Parliament of Canada.—Quere. Is s. 51, Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, ultra vires?—Semble, That when a judge in a province has the right to issue a writ of habeas corpus returnable in term as well as in vacation, a judge of the Supreme Court might make the writ he authorizes returnable in said court in term as well as immediately (Fournier and Henry, J.J., dissenting).—An application to the court to quash a writ of habeas corpus as improvidently issued may be entertained in the absence of the prisoner (Henry, J., dissenting).—After a conviction for a felony by a court having general jurisdiction over the offence charged, a writ of habeas corpus is an inappropriate remedy.—If the record of a superior court, produced on an application for a writ of habeas corpus, contains the recital of facts requisite to confer jurisdiction, it is conclusive and cannot be contradicted by extrinsic evidence (Henry, J., dissenting).—A* return by the sheriff to the writ setting out such conviction and sentence, and the affirmation thereof by the court of error is a good and sufficient return. If actually written by him or under his direction the return need not be signed by the sheriff (Henry, J., dissenting.) — The Supreme Court of British Columbia is clothed with all the powers and jurisdiction, civil and criminal, necessary or essential to the full and perfect administration of justice, civil or criminal, in the province; it has powers as full and ample as those known to the common law and possessed by the superior courts of England.—The various statutes of British Columbia providing for the holding of courts of oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery render unnecessary a commission to the presiding judge. — Per Strong, J. The power of issuing a commission, if necessary, belonged to the Lieutenant-Governor of the province (Henry, J., contra). — An order made pursuant to Dominion statute 32 and 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 11, directing a change of venue, would be sufficient, although containing no reference to any provision for expenses, when the indictment has been pleaded to and the trial proceeded with without objection and, even in a court of error, there could be no valid objection to a conviction founded on such order. — Even if a writ of habeas corpus in this case had been rightly issued, the prisoner was not entitled to his discharge on the materials before the judge, but should have been remanded. In re Sproule, xii., 140.

See No. 5 infra.

3. Appeal — Procedure — Time for filing case.—In habeas corpus appeals the first step is the filing of the case with the registrar.—This must be done within 60 days from the pronouncing of judgment appealed from. In re Smart, xvi., 396.

4. Appeals—Criminal matters—Section 51, Supreme Court Act—Jurisdiction—Court of Appeal for Ontario—Presence of prisoner—Short notice of hearing—32 & 33 Vict. c. 32, s. 19—38 Vict. c. 47—Legislative jurisdiction—Summary trial by police magistrate.—On the 16th January, 1879, the prisoner was charged for that he did “unlawfully and maliciously cut and wound one Mary Kelly with intent then and there to do her the said Mary Kelly grievous bodily harm,” and being tried summarily before the police magistrate at Ottawa was found guilty, and sentenced to the central prison at Toronto, at hard labour for one year. On being brought before the Court of Queen’s Bench for Ontario upon a writ of habeas corpus issued from that court, the prisoner was remanded; whereupon he appealed to the Court of Appeal for Ontario; which dismissed his appeal. (8 Ont. Pr. R. 20.) Notice was given of appeal from this judgment to the Supreme Court of Canada, and the case in appeal was received too late to be set down for hearing at the May sessions, whereupon application was made to Fournier, J., for leave to bring the appeal on for hearing and to give short notice of hearing, which was refused, on the ground that no appeal would lie in such a case to the Supreme Court of Canada. An application was then made for a writ of habeas corpus to Gwynne, J., who held that the application should be refused for two reasons: 1st. The applicant was convicted of an offence, being a misdemeanour as stated sufficiently in the conviction, which could not be avoided for matter of form; the misdemeanour of which he was so convicted was an offence cognizable by the Court of General Sessions of the Peace, and for such offence the statute of 1875 authorized a punishment to be inflicted such as the Court of General Sessions could award for the like offence, and the punishment awarded was such as the Court of General Sessions might have awarded. 2ndly. The decision of the Court of Appeal should be considered conclusive, and should not be interfered with by a single judge of any court sitting in chambers, but the applicant must be left to any recourse he might have against the adjudication of the Court of Appeal for Ontario (19th June, 1879.) On 23rd June an application for a writ of habeas corpus was made to Henry, J., who granted an order for a writ, returnable before the Chief Justice or any judge of the Supreme Court in chambers, such order providing that, counsel for the prisoner consenting, the actual presence of the prisoner should be dispensed with, and providing also for service of the order on the Attorney-General of the Province, or his deputy, or his agent at Ottawa. The writ was returned before Ritchie C.J., in chambers on 5th July, 1879. The Chief Justice held that he could not deal with the matter without the prisoner being brought before him according to the exigency of the writ, but was also of opinion that the prisoner should not be discharged on habeas corpus; and he therefore refused the application for his discharge. On 18th September, 1879, another application was made to Henry, J., in chambers, who granted an order for the writ, returnable before himself in chambers, dispensing with the actual presence of the prisoner on the return of the writ (counsel for the prisoner consenting), and providing for service of the order on the Attorney-General of the Province. On 1st October, 1879, upon the return of the writ, after hearing counsel for the prisoner and the Attorney-General, Henry, J., held, 1st. That the police magistrate derived his power to try the prisoner as he did from 38 Vict. c. 47, but reference to 32 & 33 Vict. c. 32 was necessary to decide upon the nature of the charge and the conviction. In the information the prisoner was charged in the very words of the first clause of s. 19 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 32, and the punishment awarded was that warranted by the terms of the enactment, and the additional words as to the intent should be considered nothing more than surplusage. 2ndly. That 38 Vict. c. 47, giving power to police and stipendiary magistrates to try in a summary manner felonies and misdemeanours, was intra vires of the Dominion Parliament. 3rdly. That it was necessary to consider the point whether the prisoner should be brought before him according to the exigency of the writ, no objection having been taken, and his judgment being unfavourable to the prisoner on the other grounds. Application to discharge the prisoner refused. Application was then made to Fournier, J., in chambers, for leave to bring the appeal on for hearing at the next session of the Supreme Court of Canada, and to serve short notice of hearing, but it was refused because sufficient grounds were not shewn to take the case out of the regular course of procedure. — On 10th November, 1879, application was renewed before the full court, but being made ex parte and without notice the court refused to hear it.— On 15th November, 1879, application was again made to the full court, when the Attorney-General of Ontario shewed cause, and it was Held, that no appeal could lie in such a case to the Supreme Court of Canada, but even if it did, under all the circumstances and delays that had occurred, the court should not go out of its way to exercise any discretion as to granting leave.—Per Ritchie, C.J. As regards habeas corpus in criminal matters, the court has only a concurrent jurisdiction with the judges of the Superior Courts of the various provinces, and not an appellate jurisdiction, and there is no necessity for an appeal from the judgment of any judge or court, or any appellate court, because the prisoner can come direct to any judge of the Supreme Court individually and, upon that judge refusing the writ or remanding the prisoner, he could take his appeal from that judgment to the full court. Application refused. In re Boucher, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 325; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 54.

5. Murder—Crimes at common law—Statutory offences.—In a case of commitment by a coroner for murder, application was made to Strong, J., for a writ of habeas corpus. Held, that under the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, s. 51, the writ is to be issued for the purpose of an inquiry into a commitment only "in any criminal case under any Act of the Parliament of Canada," and the Act of the Parliament of Canada (1869) does not create the offence of murder, but only defines the punishment which may be awarded for such offence. Writ refused. In re Poitvin, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 327; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 54.

6. Application for writ—Imprisonment of execution debtor—Discharge—R. S. N. S. (5 ser.) s. 118—Examination of debtor—Fraud—Remand for six months—Order dated on Sunday—New order—Costs on appeal.—J. was in custody on execution for debt, and applied to a County Court judge under R. S. N. S. (5 ser.) c. 118 to be examined as to his affairs with a view to obtaining his discharge. The examination was held by the judge, who, on 23rd January, 1886, made an order to the effect that J. was adjudged guilty of fraud in respect to the delay of payment of his debt to the execution creditors, and in regard to the disposal of his property, and by such order remanded J. to jail, without privilege of jail limits, for a further period of six months from date of remand. When the order was drawn up it was dated 24th January, 1886, which was Sunday, and directed that J. be confined in the county jail for six months from that date.—J. was taken back to jail, the order dated on Sunday being delivered to the jailer, and counsel for the execution creditors on Monday, 25th January, procured from the judge another order dated the 25th, ordering J. to be imprisoned for six months from 23rd January.—An application to the Supreme Court (N. S.) for discharge on habeas corpus, was refused, the majority of the court holding that he was rightly held in custody, if not on the order of the County Court judge, then on the original cause of his detention, the writ of execution.—An appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada was dismissed without costs. In re Johnson, Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 329.

7. Jurisdiction—Form of commitment—Territorial division—Judicial notice—Jurisdiction in matters of habeas corpus—R. S. C. c. 135, s. 32.—A warrant of commitment was made by the stipendiary magistrate for the police division of the municipality of the County of Pictou, in Nova Scotia, upon a conviction for an offence stated therein to have been committed "at Hopewell, in the County of Pictou." The County of Pictou appeared to be of a greater extent than the municipality of the County of Pictou,—there being also four incorporated towns within the county limits—and it did not specifically appear upon the face of the warrant that the place where the offence had been committed was within the municipality of the County of Pictou. The Nova Scotia statute of 1895 respecting county corporations (58 Vict. c. 3, s. 8), contains a schedule which mentions Hopewell as a polling district in Pictou County entitled to return two councillors to the county council. Held, that the court was bound to take judicial notice of the territorial divisions declared by the statute as establishing that the place so mentioned in the warrant was within the territorial limits of the police division. Held, also, that the jurisdiction of a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada in matters of habeas corpus in criminal cases is limited to an inquiry into the cause of imprisonment as disclosed by the warrant of commitment. Ex parte Macdonald, xxvii., 683.

8. Appeal—Change of position of parties.—Upon the calling for hearing of the appeal (which was from a judgment of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, refusing a writ of habeas corpus for the possession of Quai Sing, a Chinese female under age), counsel for the respondent produced to the court an order of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, dated subsequently to the judgment appealed from, by which it appeared that the respondent, the matron of a rescue home, had been appointed by that court as guardian to the infant in question, whereupon the Chief Justice intimated that, under the circumstances, it was useless to proceed with the hearing of the appeal, it being impossible that any order could be made thereon respecting the possession of the infant being given to the appellant.—The appeal was consequently dismissed with costs. Seid Sing Kaw v. Bowes, 17th May, 1898.

9. Appeal—Habeas corpus—Extradition—Necessity to quash.—By s. 31 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act (R. S. C. c. 135, s. 31), "no appeal shall be allowed in any case of proceedings for or upon a writ of habeas corpus arising out of any claim for extradition made under any treaty." On application to the court to fix a day for hearing a motion to quash such an appeal. Held, that the matter was coram non judice and there was no necessity for a motion to quash. In re Lazier, xxix., 630.

10. Practice—Habeas corpus—Binding effect of judgment in provincial court.—An application for a writ of habeas corpus was referred by the judge to the Supreme Court of the province and, after hearing, the application was refused. On application subsequently made to a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in chambers:—Held, that under the circumstances it would be improper to interfere with the decision of the provincial court. In re White, xxxi., 383.

HARBOURS.

1. *Canadian waters — Grant under great seal of P. E. I.—Foreshore in public harbour —B. N. A. Act, 1867, s. 108—25 Vict. c. 19 (P. E. I.) —Title to land.] — Under s. 108, B. N. A. Act, 1867, the soil and bed of the foreshore in the harbour of Summerside, P. E. I., belongs to the Crown, as representing the Dominion of Canada, as it is comprised in and forms part of a public harbour and, therefore, a grant of foreshore lands between high and low water mark therein made by the Province of Prince Edward Island is void and inoperative. Holman v. Green, vi., 707.*

[NOTE.—Followed in Re Provincial Fisheries (26 Can. S. C. R. 444.)]

2. *Canadian waters — Property in beds — Public harbours — Erections in navigable waters — Interference with navigation — Right of fishing — Power to grant — Riparian proprietors — Great lakes and navigable rivers — Operation of Magna Charta—Provincial legislation — R. S. O. (1887) c. 24, s. 47—55 Vict. c. 10, ss. 5 to 13, 19 and 21 (O.)—R. S. Q. arts. 1375 to 1378.]—The beds of public harbours not granted before confederation are the property of the Dominion of Canada. Holman v. Green (6 Can. S. C. R. 707) followed. The beds of all other waters not so granted belong to the respective provinces in which they are situate, without any distinction between the various classes of waters.—Per Gwynne, J. The beds of all waters are subject to the jurisdiction and control of the Dominion Parliament so far as required for creating future harbours, erecting beacons or other public works for the benefit of Canada, under the British North America Act, s. 92, item 10, and for the administration of the fisheries.—*R. S. C. c. 92, “An Act respecting certain works constructed in or over navigable rivers” is intra vires of the Dominion Parliament.—The Dominion Parliament has power to declare what shall be deemed an interference with navigation and to require its sanction to any work in navigable waters.—A province may grant land extending into a lake or river for the purpose of there being built thereon a wharf, warehouse or the like, and the grantee on obtaining the sanction of the Dominion may build thereon subject to compliance with R. S. C. c. 92.—Where the provisions of Magna Charta are not in force, as in Quebec, the Crown in right of the province may grant exclusive rights of fishing in tidal waters, except in tidal public harbours, in which, as in other public harbours, the Crown in right of the Dominion, may grant the beds and fishing rights. Gwynne, J., dissenting.—Per Gwynne, J. R. S. O. c. 24, s. 47, is ultra vires so far as it assumes to authorize the sale of land covered with water within public harbours.—The margins of navigable rivers may be sold if there is an understanding with the Dominion Government for protection against interference with navigation.—The Act of 1892 and R. S. Q. arts. 1375 to 1378 are valid if passed in aid of a Dominion Act for protection of fisheries. If not they are ultra vires. In re Jurisdiction over Provincial Fisheries, xxvi., 444.

1. *Construction of will — “Own right heirs” — Limiting testamentary powers of devise — Conditional limitations — Appeal — Acquiescence by appellants in judgment appealed from—Costs—Vesting of estate.]—Under a devise to the testator’s “own right heirs” the beneficiaries would be those who would have taken in the case of intestacy unless a contrary intention appears, and where there was a devise to the only daughter of the testator conditionally upon events which did not occur, and, under the circumstances, could never happen, the fact of such a devise was not evidence of such contrary intention, and the daughter inherited as the right heir of the testator. *In re Ferguson, Turner v. 1. DEDICATION.

1. Lost record — Dedication — Public highway — Expropriation — Presumption — User.—K. brought an action for trespass to his land in laying pipes to carry water to a public institution. The land had been used as a public highway for many years and there was an old statute authorizing its expropriation for public purposes, but the records of the municipality, which would contain the proceedings on such expropriation if any had been taken, were lost. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (20 N. S. Rep. 95), that in the absence of any evidence of dedication of the road it must be presumed that the proceedings under the statute were rightly taken and K. could not recover. Dickson v. Kearney, xiv., 743.

2. Public highway — Registered plan—Dedication — User—Statute, construction of—Retrospective statute 46 Vict. c. 18 (O.)—Estoppel.—The right vested in a municipal corporation by 46 Vict. c. 18 (O.) to convert into a public highway a road laid out by a private person on his property can only be exercised in respect to private roads to the use of which the owners of property abutting thereon were entitled. Gooderham v. City of Toronto, xxv., 246.

3. Municipal corporation — Highways — Old trails in Rupert's Land — Substituted roadway — R. S. C. c. 50, s. 108 — Reservation in Crown grant — Dedication — User—Estoppel — Assessment of lands claimed as highway—Evidence.—The user of old travelled roads or trails over the waste lands of the Crown in the North-West Territories of Canada, prior to the Dominion Government survey thereof, does not give rise to the presumption that the lands over which they passed were dedicated as public highways.—The land over which an old travelled trail had formerly passed, leading to the Hudson Bay Trading Post at Edmonton, N. W. T., had been closed by the owner, divided into town lots and assessed and taxed as private property by the municipality, and a new street substituted therefor, as shewn upon registered plans of subdivision and laid out upon the ground, had been adopted as a boundary in the description of lands abutting thereon in s. c. D.—21.

the grants thereof by letters patent from the Crown. Held, reversing the decision of the Supreme Court, N. W. T., that under the circumstances there could be no presumption of dedication of the lands over which the old trail passed as a public highway either by the Crown or by the private owner, notwithstanding long user of the same by settlers in that district prior to the Dominion Government survey of the Edmonton Settlement. Heiminck v. Town of Edmonton, xxviii., 501.

See No. 4, infra.

4. Old trails in Rupert's Land — Crown grant — Squatter's plan of subdivision—Substitution of new way — Dedication — Highway — Adopting new street as a boundary.—A squatter in possession of public lands near the old Hudson Bay Trading Post at Edmonton, who afterwards became patentee of the greater part of the lands he occupied, had made a plan of subdivision thereof into town lots which shewed a new roadway or street laid down in the place of the old travelled trail across said lands leading to the trading post, and subsequently, the Crown, in making grants, described several parcels of the lands in the patents as being bounded and abutting upon the said street or roadway, so laid down on the plan. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (1 N. W. T. Rep. pt. 4, p. 39), that the space as shewn upon the plan, as laid out for a street, had been adopted and dedicated by the Crown as and for a public street and highway in substitution of the old travelled trail or roadway across said lands. Brown v. Town of Edmonton (24th May, 1894), xxviii., 510.

See No. 3, ante.

5. Dedication — User — Evidence.—In order to establish the existence of a public highway by dedication it must appear that there was not only the intention on the part of the owner to dedicate the land for the purposes of a highway but also that the public accepted such dedication by user thereof as a public highway.—In a case where the evidence as to user was conflicting and the jury found that there had been no public user of the way in question, the trial judge disregarded this finding and held that dedication was established by a deed of lease filed in evidence, and this decision was affirmed by the full court. Held, that as such decision did not take into account the necessity of establishing public user of the locus, it could not stand. Judgment of the Supreme Court (N. B.) reversed. Moore v. Woodstock Woolen Mills Co., xxix., 627.

10. *Repair of streets — Pavements — Assessment on property owner—Double taxation—24 Vict. c. 39 (N. S.)—53 Vict. c. 60, s. 14 (N. S.)—By s. 14 of the Nova Scotia Statute, 53 Vict. c. 60, the City Council of Halifax was authorized to borrow money for paving the sidewalks of the city with concrete or other permanent material, one-half the cost to be a charge against the owners of the respective properties in front of which the work should be done, and to be a first lien on such properties. A concrete sidewalk was laid under authority of this statute, in front of L.'s property, and he refused to pay half the cost on the ground that his predecessor in title had in 1867, under the Act 24 Vict. c. 39, furnished the material to construct a brick sidewalk in front of the same property, and that it would be imposing a double tax on the property if he had to pay for the concrete sidewalk as well. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (28 N. S. Rep. 268), that there was nothing dubious or uncertain in the Act under which the concrete sidewalk was laid; that it authorized no exception in favour of property owners who had contributed to the cost of sidewalks laid under the Act of 1861; and that to be called upon to pay half the cost of a concrete sidewalk in 1891 would not be paying twice for the same thing because in 1867 the property had contributed bricks to construct a sidewalk which, in 1891, had become worn out, useless and dangerous. (Ont.) c. 48, ss. 422, 426 — Municipal Acts — Obstruction of highway.] — The plaintiff claimed in right of his wife under deed to her, dated 1st October, 1867, of S. ½ lot 9, 5th concession, Haldimand, the original allowance for road between lots 8 and 9 by reason of the justices of the Quarter Sessions having in 1837, under 50 Geo. III. c. 1, and 4 Geo. IV. c. 10, laid out a road across this south half in lieu of the original allowance; and he sued defendant for having destroyed a fence which plaintiff had recently erected across the original allowance for road at its point of intersection with the cross-roads.—Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (3 Ont. App. R. 175), that from 36 Vict. (Ont.) c. 48, and the preceding Municipal Acts, it is apparent that where the original allowance in lieu of which a new road had been opened, lay between lands owned by different persons, as the road in question does, the owner of the land appropriated for the new road had no claim whatever to the original allowance further than to receive a conveyance from the municipality of a part only, and that only in case the municipality, in its* discretion, should be of opinion that the original allowance was useless to the public, in which case the municipality would have to express that opinion by a by-law passed for closing the original allowance. The plaintiff, therefore, must fail, for there never was any person entitled to call for a conveyance of the road in question, and the municipality had never pronounced it to be useless to the public.—2. The road in question lay along the whole length of the defendant's lot, and therefore came within s. 422 of 36 Vict. c. 48 (Ont.), and the municipality could not close it or deprive the defendant of the peculiar benefit he might derive from it as a highway adjoining his lands within that section, and perhaps, also, s. 373, which provides for compensation for any damage to owners of property injuriously affected.—3. Further, the proper conclusion from the evidence was that the road established under the authority of the Quarter Sessions was not a road laid out in lieu of the original road allowance, but a wholly independent road. Cameron v. Wait, 7th May, 1879; Cass. Dig. (2 ed.) 332.

34. Title to land — Middle of roadway — Quebec North Shore Turnpike Road trustees — Petitory action — Possession by trustees — User by public — Eminent domain — 36 Geo. III. c. 9—4 Vict. c. 17—18 Vict. c. 100, s. 41 (Q.)—The trustees of a turnpike road, from Quebec to Saut-a-la-Puce, instituted the suit to rectify an encroachment upon the road, alleging: "that in June, 1880, or about that time, defendant illegally and without any right whatsoever, unjustly took possession of a part of the property belonging to plaintiffs, to wit: of a part of the road, about 20 feet by 6 feet in depth, situate in the parish of Château Richer on the north side of said road, opposite a lot of land belonging to and possessed by defendant. . . . That defendant dug deeply in and under the road and erected and built on the said piece of land a building or cellar, and committed other acts and encroachments, which he had no right to commit, thereby decreasing the legal width of the road by at least 5 feet."—The time limited for action en démolition being expired, plaintiffs asked to be declared proprietors in possession of said road and to have the said building or cellar removed in the ordinary course of law.—Pleas:—(1) general issue, (2) peremptory exception that the part of the said road which ran through his land was a portion of said land; that he acquired said land at sheriff's sale; that he was owner of the land on each side of the road, which in the said place was bounded on the north by a ditch and on the south by a fence, and that the building of the said cellar in no way encroached upon the road in question.—The road was put under control of the trustees by 16 Vict. c. 235, s. 5, s.s. 9, in 1853. The width of main roads or the King's highways was regulated then by 36 Geo. III. c. 9, s. 2, at 30 feet (French measure) between 2 ditches, each 3 feet wide, and of sufficient depth to drain off the water, and where the said highways were not already 30 feet wide, the Grand Voyer, if he thought it necessary and practicable, should cause them to be widened by the person bound to repair the same.—The trust ordinance, 4 Vict. c. 17, s. 3, vested the trustees with all powers which were vested in Grand Voyers or municipal councils by 36 Geo. III. c. 9, and by ordinance, 4 Vict. c. 4, ss. 37 and 45; 8 Vict. c. 40, ss. 28 and 30; 10 & 11 Vict. c. 7, ss. 33 and 39, and enacted that the trustees, in the manner which they deem fit, might cause the said roads, and the bridges thereupon, to be improved and widened, repaired and made anew, and might, for the purposes aforesaid, or any of them, by themselves, their agents and servants, go into and enter upon, and take any land or real property.—In support of their contention that the road should be 36 feet wide (French measure) the ditches forming part of the road, appellants cited 18 Vict. c. 100, s. 41, as to the width of highways, and argued that this Act must have been based on the general custom which had existed up to that time of making all front roads 36 feet wide (French measure).—In 1854 appellants macadamized the road and made the ditch on the north side, thereby fixing, themselves, the limit of the road; and the evidence shewed they placed it there because there is on the north side of the road a hill which terminates at the ditch, and at the distance of one foot, and one foot nine inches from the edge of the ditch, in front of the cellar, the ground is four feet some inches higher than the level of the road, therefore it was not possible to pass there, or to make a ditch to drain the road.—The appellants made the ditch at the foot of the hill, the only place where it was practicable to make it; and they thereby left beyond the ditch and consequently beyond the road the ground they claimed as forming part of the road. The south side of the road was bounded by a fence, and between the fence and the north-east side of the ditch there was a width of 30 feet, and from the edge of the north-east side of the ditch to that of the corner of the cellar, there was a width of one foot nine inches; at the north corner the width was nine inches less.—The action was maintained in the Superior Court and the Queen's Bench reversed the judgment (3 Dor. Q. B. 65).—On appeal the trustees claimed that: 1st. They had a right to bring the action; 2ndly. The road in question should be 38 feet 3 inches (equal to 36 feet French measure) wide at least; and 3rdly. Respondent had decreased the legal width of the road by at least 5 feet, which he was bound to restore to the appellants.—Held, per Ritchie, C.J., and Fournier and Henry, JJ., that the road was an ancient road which was not of the width of 30 feet (French measure) when the appellants received control of it; that the law clearly recognized such roads, and contemplated that the Grand Voyer, if he should think it necessary and practicable, should cause such roads to be widened, and this he had never done as regards this road; that the appellants, in 1854, appear to have taken the road in the state it then was, and never to have exercised the power of widening it given them by 4 Vict. c. 17, upon paying an indemnity to the proprietor; and that whether or not the road was the legal width the appellants had no right to any ground beyond what formed part of the road, and served as such for the use of the public and for the ditches, if any, and therefore could not claim the ground beyond the ditch on the north side of the road which could not be, and never was, used by the public, and never formed part of the road.—Per Strong and Henry, JJ., that the property of the road was vested in the Crown, and the effect of the statutes was not to take the property out of the Crown and vest it in the trustees, but to make them custodians of the road and the tolls for the benefit of the bondholders and the public. The appellants failed to shew either title or possession, and the action therefore failed.—Appeal dismissed with costs. (Gwynne, J.,

C.—Costs—Clerical error—Amendment after hearing.*—On the 17th February, 1841, C. and wife (son-in-law and daughter of S. N. and P.), acknowledged by deed that they were indebted to S. N., widow of P., in $140, due to her late husband, and also in an annual life-rent, in consideration of real estate given to them previously by P. and S. N., by deed of gift, 16th February, 1830. On 19th February, 1841, the widow married J. B. L. On the 21st January, 1870, J. B. L. and his wife, S. N., transferred to P. L. (grandson of J. B. L.), all the arrears of life-rent due by C. and his wife as well as the $140 obligation.—In an action by P. L. against C. and his wife, to recover 26 years of life-rent, and the amount of the obligation.—Held, 1. Affirming the judgment appealed from, that the arrears of the life-rent which accrued during the second marriage of S. N. belonged to the community between her and her second husband; that the husband, as head of the community, could legally dispose of his share, viz., one-half of said arrears, in favour of his grandson, but the transfer, as to the other half belonging to his wife, was null, as S. N. could not transfer to any of her husband's descendants, who are, in such a case, interposed to secure directly to the husband a benefit which cannot be conferred upon him directly.—Held, reversing the judgment appealed from, that although the $140 formed part of the first community, yet the half belonging to S. N. at the time of her second marriage formed part of the second community, and her husband, J. B. L., could legally dispose of his share, viz., $35 in favour of his grandson, the transfer of the balance, $105, being null and void.—In this case the parties took separate appeals to the Supreme Court, and the respondents having succeeded in getting the judgment reversed on one point and confirmed on another, were allowed costs of a cross-appeal.—Plaintiff's declaration alleged that the arrears of rent claimed were due in virtue of a deed of cession, dated 16th February, 1828. In the Superior Court, after hearing, a motion was made by plaintiff to discharge the délibéré as it was discovered at the argument that a clerical error, serious to the interests of the plaintiff, had inadvertently occurred in an authentic document, invoked in support of his action, as to the date of a donation upon which it was mainly based; and as such error could not easily be remedied by referring to the notarial minute, this motion was granted. A second motion was made by the plaintiff en reprise d'instance, to amend the declaration by adding: "That the date of the constitution of the rent above mentioned was erroneously mentioned in the deed of transfer above related as being made by and in virtue of the contract of marriage of the said A. C., dated the 7th February, 1828. —" That the said constituted rent is made by a deed of the 16th February, 1830, as it appears from an authentic copy of said deed forming part of exhibit number one of the plaintiff in this cause, and that the intention of the parties to the said deed of transfer at the time of the execution thereof was to transfer the arrears of rent constituted by the said defendant on the 16th February, 1830. The said rent being the only one due by the said A. C., to the said S. N." Held, affirming the judgments of the courts below, that the error in the transfer, as to the date of the deed under which the life-rent was due, was a mere clerical error; that there was no other life-rent to which the transfer could apply but the one in question, and that the claim was sufficiently identified by the description of the deeds and the date of their registration, under the special allegations of the plaintiff and the evidence adduced. Pilon v. Brunet, v., 318.

2. Practice in Nova Scotia—Improper joinder—Abatement—Amendment of record.—Under the practice in Nova Scotia, where the wife is improperly joined as co-plaintiff with the husband, the suit does not abate, but the wife's name must be struck out of the record. Caldwell v. Stadacona Fire and Life Ins. Co., 12th January, 1883; xi., 212.

3. Wife's separate estate—Sale by wife to secure debt due by husband—Simulated deeds—Art. 1301 C. C.—Where the sale of real estate by the wife, separate as to property, to her husband's creditor is shewn to have been intended to operate as a security only for the payment of her husband's debts, such sale will be set aside as a contravention of art. 1301 C. C.—Per Strong, J., dissenting. The trial judge's finding in the present suit that the deeds of sale were not simulated, should be affirmed. Klock v. Chamberlain, xv., 325.

4. 26 Geo. III., c. 11 (N. B.)—Statute of Distributions—Statute of Frauds—Restoration of former law—Intestate estate—Feme covert—Husband's right to residue—Next of kin.—26 Geo. III. c. 11, ss. 14, 17 (N. B.), re-enacted 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 10 (Statute of Distributions) as explained by 29 Car. II. c. 3, s. 25 (Statute of Frauds), which provided that nothing in the former Act should be construed to extend to estates of femes covertes dying intestate, but that their husbands should enjoy their personal estates as theretofore.—When the statutes were revised in 1854 the Act 26 Geo. III. c. 11, was re-enacted, but s. 17, corresponding to s. 25 of the Statute of Frauds, was omitted. In the administration of the estate of a feme covert her next of kin claimed the personalty on the ground that the husband's rights were swept away by this omission. Held, that the personal property passed to the husband and not to the next of kin of the wife.—Per Strong, J. The repeal by R. S. N. B. of 26 Geo. III. c. 11, passed in the affirmance of the Imperial Acts, operated to restore s. 25 of the Statute of Frauds as part of the common law of New Brunswick.—Per Gwynne, J. When a colonial legislature re-enacts an Imperial Act it enacts it as interpreted by the Imperial courts, and a fortiori by other Imperial Acts. Hence, when the English Statute of Distributions was re-enacted by 26 Geo. III. c. 11 (N. B.), it was not necessary to enact the interpreting section of the Statute of Frauds, and its omission in the Revised Statutes did not affect the construction to be put upon the whole Act. Held, per Ritchie, C.J., Fournier, Gwynne and Patterson, JJ., that the Married Woman's Property Act (C. S. N. B. c. 72), which exempts separate property of a married woman from liability for her husband's debts and prohibits any dealing with it without her consent, only suspends the husband's right in the property during coverture, and on the death of the wife he takes the personal property as he would if the Act had never been passed.—The Supreme Court (N.B.) while deciding against the next of kin on his claim to the residue of the estate of a feme covert, directed that his costs should be paid out of the estate. On appeal the decree was varied by striking out such direction. Lamb v. Cleveland, xix., 78.

5. Married woman—Community—Personal injuries—Right of action—Pleading—Exception à la forme—Arts. 14, 116, 119 C. C. P. (Old Text.)—Appeal—Questions of procedure.—The right of action for damages for personal injuries sustained by a married woman, commune en biens, belongs exclusively to her husband and she cannot sue for the recovery of such damages in her own name, even with the authorization of her husband.—Where it appears upon the face of the writ of summons and statement of claim that the plaintiff has no right of action, it is not necessary that objection should be taken by exception à la forme. Absolute want of legal right of action may be invoked by a defendant at any stage of a suit. Judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, 3 Q. P. R. 1, overruled on the motifs, but affirmed in its result. McFarren v. Montreal Park and Island Ry. Co., xxx., 410.

6. Community—Continuation of community—Inventory—Procès-verbal de carence—Tripartite community.—At the time of the dissolution of community by the death of one of the consorts in 1845, the common assets consisted of bare necessities of small value and exempt from seizure. There was no inventory or procès-verbal de carence made and subsequently the survivor contracted a second marriage. In an action by a child of the first marriage claiming a share in continuation of community:—Held, that there was no necessity for an inventory of property of such insignificant value and that failure to make an inventory or procès-verbal de carence did not, under the circumstances, effect a continuation of community. King v. McHendry, xxx., 450.

7. Husband and wife—Separate property of wife—Married Woman's Property Acts (N. S.)—Action by wife against husband.—Under the Married Woman's Property Acts of Nova Scotia, a promissory note indorsed to the maker's wife can be sued on by the latter against her husband. Michaels v. Michaels, xxx., 547.

Judgment appealed from (33 N. S. Rep. 1) reversed.

8. Husband and wife—Judicial separation as to property—Debts incurred by husband before dissolution of community—Obligation by wife—Art. 1301 C. C.—Nullity—Public policy.—On appeal the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the Court of Review, at Montreal (6 Rev. de Jur. 13), by which the female defendant was relieved from liability under a deed to which she had become a party for the purpose of guaranteeing claims against her husband. The question at issue was the validity of a deed of dation en paiement to which both husband and wife were parties, executed after dissolution of the community and acceptance of the same by the wife. *Bastien v. *Treaties with Indians — Contingent annuities—B. N. A. Act (1867) s. 112—Debts of late Province of Canada—Res judicata.]—The award complained of by the Province of Quebec determined that certain payments made by the Dominion of Canada in virtue of the Huron and Superior Treaties with the Ojibway Indians for arrears of augmented annuities with interest, from 1867 to 1873, and for increased annuities in excess of the fixed annuities with interest paid subsequently should be taken into account and included in the debt of the late Province of Canada mentioned in s. 112 of the British North America Act, 1867. Held, affirming the decision of the arbitrators, that the question of these contingent annuities had been considered and decided by Her Majesty's Privy Council in the case of Attorney-General of Canada v. Attorney-General of Ontario ([1897] A. C. 199), and that the payments so made by the Dominion were recoverable from the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec conjointly in the same manner as the original annuities. *Province of Quebec v. 2. 41 Vict. c. 14, s. 4 (Que.)—Damages—Probable cause—Extra expenses.—Where a registered shareholder of a company, finding the annual reports of the company misleading, applies after notice for a writ of injunction to restrain the company from paying a dividend, and upon such application the company do not deny even generally the statements and charges contained in the plaintiff's affidavit and petition, there is sufficient probable cause for the issue of such writ; and consequently, the defendant, who upon the merits has succeeded in getting the injunction dissolved, has no right of action for damages resulting from the issue of the injunction. Montreal St. Ry. Co. v. Ritchie, xvi., 622.

3. Ex parte order — Interim injunction—Order dissolving — Appeal—Trespass—Decision on merits.—In an action of trespass and for an injunction to restrain the defendants from proceeding with the digging of trenches and laying of pipes, an ex parte restraining order was granted without notice to the defendant, on the affidavit of the plaintiff alone. On motion to set aside this order, an order passed dissolving the injunction which was affirmed by the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia in banco.—On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, Held, on the merits, that the order of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia should not be interfered with.—Appeal dismissed with costs. Kearney v. Dickson, Cass Dig. (2 ed.) 431; Cass. S. C. Prac. (2 ed.) 31.

4. Municipal corporation — Waterworks—Extension of works—Repairs—By-law—Resolution—Agreement in writing—Highways and streets — R. S. Q. art. 4485 — Art. 1033 (a) C. C. P.—By a resolution of the council of the Town of Chicoutimi, on 9th October, 1890, based upon an application previously made by him, L. obtained permission to construct waterworks in the town and to lay the necessary pipes in the streets wherever he thought proper, taking his water supply from the River Chicoutimi, at whatever point might be convenient for his purposes, upon condition that the works should be commenced within a certain time and completed in the year 1892. He constructed a system of waterworks, and had it in operation within the time prescribed, but the system proving insufficient, a company was formed in 1895 under the provisions of R. S. Q. art. 4485, and given authority by by-law to furnish a proper water supply to the town, whereupon L. attempted to perfect his system, to alter the position of the pipes, to construct a reservoir and to make new excavations in the streets for these purposes, without receiving any further authority from the council. Held, (Gwynne, J., dissenting), reversing the judgment appealed from (Q. K. 5 Q. B. 542), that these were not merely necessary repairs, but new works, actually part of the system required to be completed during the 1892, and which after that date could not be proceeded with except upon further permission obtained in the usual manner from the council of the town. Held, further, that the resolution and the application upon which it was founded constituted a "contract in writing" and a "written agreement" within the meaning of art. 1033 (a) of the Code of Civil Procedure of Lower Canada, and violation of its conditions was a sufficient ground for injunction to restrain the construction of the new works. Ville de Chicoutimi v. Légaré, xxvii., 329.

5. Trade-mark—Infringement—Use of corporate name—Fraud and deceit—Evidence.—The plaintiffs, incorporated in the United States of America, have done business there and in Canada manufacturing and dealing in india rubber boots and shoes under the name of "The Boston Rubber Shoe Company," having a trade line of their manufactures marked with the impression of their corporate name, used as a trade-mark, known as "Bostons," which had acquired a favourable reputation. This trade-mark was registered in Canada, in 1897. The defendants were incorporated in Canada, in 1896, by the name of "The Boston Rubber Company of Montreal," and manufactured and dealt in similar goods to those manufactured and sold by the plaintiffs, on one grade of which was impressed the defendants' corporate name, these goods being referred to in their price lists, catalogues and advertisements as "Bostons," and the company's name frequently mentioned therein as the "Boston Rubber Company" without the addition "Montreal." In an action to restrain defendants from the use of such mark or any similar mark on the goods in question, as an infringement on the plaintiffs' registered trade-mark; Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (7 Ex. C. R. 187), that under the circumstances, defendants' use of their corporate name in the manner described was a fraudulent infringement of plaintiffs' registered trade-mark calculated to deceive the public and so to obtain sales of their own goods as if they were plaintiffs' manufactures, and, consequently, that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction restraining the defendants from using their corporate name as a mark on their goods manufactured in Canada. *Boston Rubber Shoe Co. v. (See 2 Russ. & Geld. 90.) Creighton v. Chittick, vii., 348.

5. Fraudulent preference—Assignment for benefit of creditors — Power to sell on credit — R. S. O. c. 118, s. 2.]—An assignment for benefit of creditors provided that the assignee could sell, by auction or private contract, as a whole or in portions, for cash or on credit, and generally on such terms and in such manner as he should deem best or suitable, all the property thereby assigned to him. No fraudulent intention of defeating or delaying creditors was shewn. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (8 Ont. App. R. 402), that the authority to sell upon credit did not, per se, invalidate the deed nor could it on that account be impeached as a fraudulent preference within the Act, R. S. O. c. 118, s. 2. Slater v. Badenach, x., 296.

6. Defaulting assignee — Insolvent Act of 1875, ss. 28, 29, 30—Sureties.—Where an official assignee under the Insolvent Act of 1875 has taken possession of an insolvent estate in that capacity, and subsequently the creditors have, by a resolution passed at a meeting of the creditors, continued him as assignee to the estate without exacting any further security, and while acting as such assignee he makes default to account for moneys of the estate, the creditors have recourse upon the bond given for the due performance of his duties as official assignee. Letourneau v. Dansereau, xii., 307.

7. Assignment for benefit of creditors—Accidental omission from schedule—R. S. O. (1877), c. 118, s. 2.—An insolvent made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, for the purpose of satisfying, without preference or priority, all creditors, and the trust declared was: 1. To pay in full the debts of the several persons or firms named in a schedule to said deed, or, if not sufficient to pay the same in full, to divide the assets of the insolvent estate pro rata among such scheduled creditors, and: 2. To pay the surplus, if any, to the said insolvent. It appeared that there was a small creditor of the insolvent whose name was not on said schedule.—Held, per Ritchie, C.J., and Fournier and Taschereau, J.J., reversing the judgment appealed from (10 Ont. App. R. 405), Henry, J., dissenting, that the consideration for the deed, as expressed on its face was that there should be a distribution of the estate of the insolvent among all his creditors, and the assignee was not bound to confine such distribution to the creditors named in the schedule.—Per Strong, J. That the assignee was confined to the schedule but effect must be given to the word "intent" in the statute, and as the evidence shewed that a bona fide effort was made to ascertain the names of all the creditors before the execution of the deed it did not appear that the insolvent intended to prefer the scheduled creditors, and the deed, therefore, was not void under R. S. O. (1877) c. 118, s. 2.—Semble, per Strong, J. That the word "preference" in R. S. O. (1877) c. 118, s. 2, imports a "voluntary preference" and is not applicable to the case of a deed obtained by a creditor or creditors, who to obtain it have brought pressure to bear on the debtor. McLean v. Garland, xiii., 366.

3. COMPOSITION AND DISCHARGE.

9. Pleading — Puis darrein continuance—Composition and discharge pending suit —

Discharge not pleaded—Judgment after confirmation — Execution — Estoppel — Appeal — Supreme Court Act, s. 17.—W. sued B., who assigned in June, 1873, under the Insolvent Act of 1869. In August, B. secured a deed of composition, and in October pleaded, puis darrein continuance, that since action commenced he assigned under the Act, and by deed of composition and discharge was discharged of all liability. In November the Insolvent Court confirmed the deed of composition and discharge, but B. neglected to plead this confirmation. Judgment was given in favour of W. in January, 1874, and in May, 1876, execution issued. In June, 1876, a rule nisi to set aside judgment and execution was obtained and made absolute. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (2 R. & C. 419), that B., having neglected to plead his discharge before judgment, as he might have done, was estopped from setting it up afterwards to defeat the execution. (Strong, J., dissented on the ground that the rule or order of the court below was not one from which an appeal could be brought under the Supreme and Exchequer Court Act; *Sir W. B. 4. FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES.

11. Sale of bulk of estate — Contrivance to defeat creditors — Evidence — Fraud — Preference — Insolvent Act, 1875, s. 13, s.s. 1, 3—Insolvent Act, 1869, ss. 86 and 88—Arts. 993, 1033, 1035, 1040, 1981, 1982 C. C.]—F. being largely indebted, sold to B., his principal creditor, on the 13th January, 1875, the bulk of his estate, comprising a hotel and furniture, for $15,409.50, the hotel, assessed at $22,000, being put down for $10,000. The sale was subject to redemption by F., on reimbursing, within three years, the $15,409.50, and interest at 8 per cent; and provided that, in case of insolvency or default of payment, this right should cease. No delivery took place, F. remained in possession under a lease from B. of same date as the sale, and 10 months later F. became bankrupt. In the meantime B., with F.'s consent, had leased the furniture to T. & J., in whose hands it was when F.'s assignee revindicated it as part of the insolvent estate. T. & J. did not defend, but B. intervened and claimed the effects under the deed of sale. The assignee contested and the intervention was dismissed, and the deed declared to have been made in fraud of creditors. On appeal from the Queen's Bench judgment, reversing this decision, Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (3 Q. L. R. 214), that as there was sufficient evidence to prove that the object of the transactions was to defeat F.'s creditors generally, and therefore the deeds of sale and lease of the 19th January, 1875, were null and void under arts. 993, 1033, 1035 & 1040, C. 5. FRAUDULENT PREFERENCES.

21. Insolvent Act of 1875, s. 133—Mortgage—Contemplation of insolvency — Fraudulent preference — Merchant Shipping Act, 1854—Conflicting statutes.]—F., a ship-owner in Yarmouth, N. S., employed as his agents in Liverpool, J. & Co., the defendant J. being a member of this firm, and, as agents in New York, the firm of S. P. B., of which the defendant S. was a member. In course of dealings with these agents he became indebted to both firms for acceptances by them of drafts made when he was in want of money, towards payment of which they received the freights of his vessels and remittances in money. On one occasion he said that he would give to the Liverpool firm a mortgage on the "Tsernogora," or the "Magnolia," when they should require it, and, in a subsequent conversation with a member of the firm, he agreed to give such mortgage on conditions which were not carried out. He promised to give the New York firm security "in case anything happened," and mentioned as such security a mortgage on the "Tsernogora." According to F.'s own statement, he had sufficient property to pay his liabilities when these conversations took place. A few weeks after these conversations F. executed a mortgage of 20 shares of the "Tsernogora," in favour of the defendants J. & S., and had the same recorded, and within 30 days thereafter attachment in insolvency issued against him. Plaintiff, assignee of F.'s estate, filed a bill to have the mortgage set aside. J. did not answer. The other defendants denied that the mortgage was made in contemplation of insolvency, and that, as it was made under "The Merchant Shipping Act," (Imp.) it was not affected by the "Insolvent Act of 1875." The trial judge made a decree in favour of plaintiff and ordered the mortgage to be set aside. The Supreme Court (N. S.) dismissed an appeal from that judgment (5 Russ. & Geld, 244). Held, affirming the judgment appealed from, Henry, J., dissenting, that the promise to give security "in case anything should happen" could only mean "in case the party should go into insolvency," and that the transfer was void under s. 133 of the Insolvent Act of 1875. Held, also, that the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act did not prevent the property in the ship passing to the assignee under the Insolvent Act. Jones v. Kinney, xi., 708.

22. *Sheriff — Trespass — Sale of goods by insolvent — Bona fides — Judgment of inferior tribunal — Estoppel — Bar to action—Fraudulent preferences—Pleading — Res judicata.]—K., who was a trader in insolvent circumstances, sold the whole of his stock-in-trade to D., at a time when two of his creditors had, to D.'s knowledge, recovered judgment against him. The sheriff afterwards seized the goods under executions issued upon judgments subsequently obtained, and, upon an interpleader issue tried in the County Court, the jury found that K. had sold the goods with intent to prefer the creditors holding the prior judgments, but that D. had purchased in good faith and without knowing of such intention on the part of the vendor. Judgment was thereupon entered against D. in the County Court, and this judgment was affirmed by the Supreme Court en banc. In an action afterwards brought by D. against the sheriff for trespass in seizing the goods, he obtained a verdict, which was, however, set aside by the court en banc, a majority of the judges holding that the County Court judgment was a complete bar to the action. — On appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada: Held, reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, that as the evidence shewed that the goods had been purchased by D. in good faith for his own benefit, the sale was not void under the statute respecting fraudulent preferences. Held, also, that the County Court judgment, being a decision of an inferior court of limited jurisdiction, could not operate as a bar in respect of a cause of action in the Supreme Court beyond the jurisdiction of the County Court. Held, further, that even if such judgment could be set up as a bar, it ought to have been specially pleaded by way of estoppel by a plea setting up in detail all the facts necessary to constitute an estoppel, and that from the evidence in the case it appeared that no such estoppel could have been established.—Tasche-reau, J., dissented. (See 3 B. C. Rep. 35, 72.) Davies v. McMillan, 1st May, 1893.*

[NOTE.—An appeal to the Privy Council was dismissed for non-pros.]

23. *Assignment — Preference — Payment in money — Cheque of third party — R. S. O. c. 124, s. 3.]—Appeal from a judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario (23 Ont. App. R. 439), which held that indorsing and giving a creditor the unaccepted cheque of a third person in the debtor's favour is not a payment of money to the creditor within the meaning of the third section of chapter 124 of the Revised Statutes of Ontario (1887) and overruling Armstrong v. Hemstreet (22 O. R. 366). The Supreme Court of Canada affirmed the decision of the Court of Appeal* and dismissed the appeal with costs. Fraser v. Davidson & Hay, xxviii., 272.

24. Pressure — Assignment of expected profits — Fraudulent preferences — Statute of Elizabeth—Assets exigible in execution.—The appeal was from the judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, affirming the judgment of Street, J., in the High Court of Justice, which dismissed the action of the plaintiffs with costs. The action was brought to set aside an assignment, by way of security, to the defendant of an interest in the profits expected to be earned under a contract for the performance of work, on the ground that it was made to defeat, hinder, defraud, delay and prejudice the creditors of the assignor (who was insolvent), and to give the assignee an unjust preference. In the trial court the decision in favour of the defendant was based on the ground that the assignment had been made under pressure, and was therefore valid. The Court of Appeal affirmed this judgment, but upon other grounds, holding that as the subject of the assignment did not consist of assets which could be reached by creditors at the time when it was made, the assignment did not come within the Act Respecting Assignments and Preferences. (24 Ont. App. R. 153.) — The Supreme Court of Canada dismissed the appeal with costs, for the reasons given by the judges in the Court of Appeal for Ontario. Blakely v. Gould, xxvii., 682.

25. Assignment for benefit of creditors — Fraudulent preference — Bribery—Promissory note — Illegal consideration—Nullity—Costs.—A secret arrangement whereby the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure respecting equal distribution of the assets of insolvents are defeated and advantages given to a particular unsecured creditor, is a fraud upon the general body of creditors notwithstanding that the agreement for the additional payment may be made by a third person who has no direct interest in the insolvent's business. A promissory note given to secure the amount of the preference payable under such an arrangement is wholly void.—An agreement for a payment to an inspector of an insolvent estate to influence his consent to an arrangement which is not for the general benefit of the creditors is a bribe which is, in itself, sufficient reason to adjudge the transaction, to induce which it was given, corrupt, fraudulent and void. 6. LEGISLATIVE JURISDICTION.

37. Foreign Bankruptcy Act — Assignment thereunder — Lands in Canada — Lex loci.—D., who owned lands in Canada, resided and carried on business in partnership with H. & S., in New York. In November, 1873, the firm of D. H. & S. became insolvent, and in February, 1874, under the United States Bankruptcy Act, they executed a deed purporting to "convey, transfer and deliver all their and each of their estate and effects" to a trustee for the creditors. In September, 1874, an execution against D.'s lands in Canada was filed by the respondents, who had in the meantime recovered judgment against him. Subsequently D., by way of further assurance, and in pursuance of the deed of February, 1874, granted to the trustee his lands in Canada, specifying the parcels. A bill was filed for a declaration that the lands were not affected by the writ. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (24 Gr. 356), that an assignment made under the provisions of a foreign bankruptcy Act did not transfer immoveable property in Canada. Held, also, that the deed of February, 1874, was not effectual, either as a deed of bargain and sale, or a deed of grant to pass any legal title or interest in the lands of D. in Canada. Macdonald v. Georgian Bay Lumber Co., ii., 364.

38. Debt incurred abroad—Fraud — Purchasers on credit — Constitutional law—Demurrer—38 Vict. c. 16, s. 3—Pleading—Insolvent Act, 1875, ss. 136, 137—Confession and avoidance—Costs.—The plaintiffs, carrying on business in England, sued on the common counts, and to bring defendants within s. 136 of the Insolvent Act of 1875 alleged that purchases of goods were made at times when the defendants had cause for believing themselves unable to meet their engagements and they concealed the fact from plaintiffs, their creditors, with intent to defraud. Defendants pleaded that the contract out of which cause of action arose was made in England and not in Canada, and to this plea plaintiffs demurred. The pleadings were treated as alleging that defendants were traders and British subjects resident and domiciled in Canada at the time of the purchase of the goods in question and subsequently became insolvent under the Insolvent Act of 1875 and amendments thereto. Held, Taschereau and Gwynne, JJ., dissenting, that although the judgment appealed from was a decision on a demurrer to part of the action only, it was a final judgment in a judicial proceeding within the meaning of the Supreme Court Amendment Act of 1879, and that an appeal would lie. Per Ritchie, C.J., and Fournier, J. That s. 136 of the Insolvent Act of 1875 is intra vires of the Parliament of Canada.—That the charge of fraud in the present suit is merely a proceeding to enforce payment of a debt under a law relating to bankruptcy and insolvency, over which subject matter the Parliament of Canada has power to legislate.—Although the fraudulent act charged was committed in another country beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the courts in Canada, the defendant was not exempt for that reason from liability under the provisions of s. 136 of the Insolvent Act, 1875, and therefore the plea demurred to was bad and the appeal should be dismissed.—Per Gwynne, J. The demurrer does not raise the question whether s. 136 of the Insolvent Act of 1875 is or is not ultra vires of the Dominion Parliament, for whether it be or be not the plea demurred to is bad, inasmuch as it confesses the debt for which the action is brought and that such debt was incurred under circumstances of fraud, and offers no matter whatever of avoidance or in bar of the action; therefore if the appeal is entertained it must be dismissed.—Per Strong, Henry and Taschereau, JJ. There being nothing either in the language or object of s. 136 of the Insolvent Act to warrant the implication that it was to have any effect out of Canada, it must be held not to extend to the purchase of goods in England by defendant, stated in the second count of the declaration. In this view it is unnecessary to decide as to the constitutional validity of the enactment in question, and the appeal should be allowed.—The court being equally divided the appeal was dismissed without costs. *Shields v. 44. Claim against insolvent—Collateral security—Pledge — Collocation — Joint and several liability.—A creditor who by way of security for his debt holds a portion of the assets of his debtor, consisting of goods and promissory notes indorsed over to him for the purpose of effecting a pledge of the securities, is not entitled to be collocated upon the estate of such debtor in liquidation under a voluntary assignment for the full amount of his claim, but is obliged to deduct any sum of money he may have received from other parties liable upon such notes or which he may have realized upon the goods. Judgment appealed from (M. L. R. 5 Q. B. 425; 17 R. L. 173) affirmed, Fournier, J., dissenting, on the ground that the notes having been indorsed over to the creditor, as additional security, all the parties thereto became jointly and severally liable, and that under the common law the creditor of joint and several debtors is entitled to rank on the estate of each of his co-debtors for the full amount of his claim until he has been paid in full without being obliged to deduct therefrom any sum received from the estates of the co-debtors jointly and severally liable therefor, and Gwynne, J., dissenting, on the ground that there being no insolvency law in force the respondent was bound upon the construction of the agreement between the parties, viz., the voluntary assignment, to collocate the appellants upon the whole of their claim as secured by the deed. Benning v. Thibaudeau, xx., 110.

B. 407), Strong and Fournier, JJ., contra, that a creditor is not entitled to rank for the full amount of his claim upon the separate estates of insolvent debtors jointly and severally liable for the amount of the debt, but is obliged to deduct from his claim the amount previously received from the estates of the other parties jointly and severally liable therefor.—Per Gwynne and Patterson, JJ., that a person who has realized a portion of his debt upon the insolvent estate of one of his co-debtors, cannot be allowed to rank upon the estate (in liquidation under the Winding-up Act) of his other co-debtors jointly and severally liable without first deducting the amount he has previously received from the estate of his co-debtor.—Held, also, affirming the judgment appealed from, that a person who makes a deposit with a bank after its suspension, consisting of cheques of third parties drawn on and accepted by the bank in question, is not entitled to be paid by privilege the amount of such deposit. *Ontario Bank v. 10. SALE OF ASSETS.

48. Assignment in trust for creditors—Sale of estate to insolvent's wife—Guarantee by creditor and inspector—Trustee—Account for profits.—The plaintiffs were creditors of the insolvent estate of J., who assigned under the Act relating to Assignments and Preferences to Creditors. The defendant A. was also a creditor, and the defendant L., an inspector of the estate. The assets were offered for sale by tender and purchased by the insolvent's wife, who gave, as security for payment, notes indorsed by defendant A. After the tender of the purchaser had been approved by the inspectors, A. induced the defendant L. to join him in securing themselves. The estate paid a small dividend on the stock so purchased to protect themselves. The estate paid a small dividend, and the plaintiffs brought an action to have defendants account for any profit they may have made out of the sale of the stock. On the trial, judgment was given for the plaintiff, and a reference ordered to ascertain what profit the defendants had received. The Divisional Court varied this judgment (23 O. R. 573), by declaring that plaintiffs should receive the difference between their claims against the estate and what they would have received in common with the other creditors by way of dividend, with liberty to apply to the court if the amount could not be agreed upon. The Court of Appeal for Ontario reversed the decision of the Divisional Court and dismissed the action, holding that no loss to the estate had been proved. (21 Ont. App. R. 242).—The Supreme Court of Canada allowed an appeal and restored the judgment of the trial judge, (Taschereau, J., dissenting), holding that the defendant L., as inspector, could not obtain an advantage for himself from his position, and that the creditors were entitled to a reference to ascertain what profit, if any, he had derived from the transaction. Segsworth v. Anderson, xxiv., 699.

49. Purchase of insolvent estate—Refusal to complete — Action by curator — Completion of purchase after judgment — Subsequent action for special damages—Res judicata.—A merchant in Ottawa, Ont., purchased the assets of an insolvent trader in Hull, Que., but refused to accept delivery of the same. The curator of the estate brought an action in the Superior Court of Quebec to compel him to do so and obtained judgment, whereupon he accepted delivery and paid the purchase money. The curator subsequently brought another action in Ontario for special damages alleged to have been incurred in the care and preservation of the assets from the time of the purchase until the delivery.—Held, reversing the judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, that under the law of Quebec, by which the case was governed, the curator was entitled to recover the expenses and disbursements which, as a prudent administrator, he was obliged to make for the safe-keeping of the property.—Held, also, that these special damages, most of which could not be ascertained until after the purchase was completed, could not have been included in the action brought in the Quebec courts, and the right to recover them was not res judicata by the judgment in that action, Hyde v. Lindsay, xxix., 595.

INSURANCE, ACCIDENT.

1. Condition — Voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger—Contributory negligence.—A policy had a condition that:—"No claim shall be made under this policy when the death or injury may have happened in consequence of voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger, hazard, or perilous adventure." Deceased was killed by a railway train coming against the vehicle in which he was driving alone on a dark night in a network of tracks in the station yard at Toronto, at a place where there was no roadway for carriages. Held, affirming the judgment appealed from (7 Ont. App. R. 570), that the deceased came to his death in consequence of voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger, and the defendant was therefore entitled to a nonsuit. Neill v. Travellers' Ins. Co., xii., 55.

2. Condition precedent — Immediate notice — Waiver—External injuries producing erysipelas—Proximate or sole cause of death — Expected risks.—An accident policy payable in case "the bodily injuries alone shall have occasioned death within 90 days from the happening thereof, and provided that the insurance should not extend to hernia, &c., nor to any bodily injury happening directly or indirectly in consequence of disease, nor to any death or disability which may have been caused wholly or in part by bodily infirmities or disease, existing prior or subsequent to the date of this contract, or by the taking of poison or by any surgical operation or medical or mechanical treatment, nor to any case except where the injury aforesaid is the proximate or sole cause of the disability or death," also provided that in the event of any accident or injury for which claim might be made, immediate notice should be given in writing, addressed to the manager of the company at Montreal, stating full name, occupation and address of insured, with full particulars of the accident and injury; and failure to give such immediate written notice should invalidate all claims under the policy. — On 21st March, 1886, insured was accidentally wounded in the leg by falling from a verandah, and within 4 or 5 days the wound which appeared at first to be slight was complicated by erysipelas, from which death ensued on 13th April following.—The local agent of the company at Simcoe, Ont., received a written notice of the accident some days before the death, but the notice of the accident and death was only sent to the company on 29th April and received at Montreal 1st May. The manager acknowledged receipt of proofs of death which were subsequently sent without complaining of want of notice, and ultimately declined to pay the claim on the ground that the death was caused by disease, and therefore the company could not recognize their liability.—There was conflicting evidence as to whether the erysipelas resulted solely from the wound, but the court found on the facts that the erysipelas followed as a direct result from the external injury. Held, reversing the judgment appealed from (which had affirmed the Superior Court judgment (M. L. R. 6 S. C. 4), Fournier and Patterson, J.J., dissenting), that the company had not received sufficient notice of the death to satisfy the requirements of the policy, and that by declining to pay the claim on other grounds there had been no waiver of any objection which they had a right to urge in this regard.—Per Strong, Fournier and Patterson, J.J., that the external injury was the proximate or sole cause of death within the meaning of the policy. Accident Ins. Co. of North America v. Young, xx., 280.

3. Renewal of policy—Payment of premium—Promissory note — Instructions to agent—Agent's authority — Finding of jury. — A policy in favour of P. contained a provision that it might be renewed from year to year on payment of the annual premium. One condition was that it was not to take effect unless the premium was paid prior to any accident on account of which claim should be made, and another that a renewal receipt, to be valid, must be printed in office form, signed by the managing director and countersigned by the agent. P. was killed in an accident and payment was refused on the ground that the policy had expired and not been renewed. In an action by the widow for the insurance it was shewn that the local agent of the company had requested P. to renew and had received from him a note for $15 (the premium being $16), which the father of assured swore the agent agreed to take for the balance of the premium after being paid the remainder in cash. He also swore that the agent gave P. a paper purporting to be a receipt, and gave secondary evidence of its contents. The agent's evidence was that while the note was taken for a portion of the premium it was agreed between him and P. that there was to be no insurance until it was paid, and that he gave no renewal receipt, and was paid no cash. Some four years before this all agents of the company had received instructions from the head office not to take notes for premiums as had been the practice theretofore. The note was never paid, but remained in possession of the agent, the agent knowing nothing about it. The jury gave no general verdict, but found in answer to questions that a sum was paid in cash, the note given and accepted as payment of balance of premium, and that the paper given to P. by the agent was the ordinary renewal receipt of the company. Upon these findings judgment was entered against the company. Held, affirming the Supreme Court (N.S.), Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the fair conclusion from the evidence was, that as the agent had been employed to complete the contract and had been entrusted with the renewal receipt, P. might fairly expect that he was authorized to take a premium note, having no knowledge of any limitation of his authority, and the policy not forbidding it; and that notwithstanding there was no general verdict, and the specific question had not been passed upon by the jury, such inference could be drawn by the court according to the practice in Nova Scotia. Held, further, that there was evidence upon which reasonable men might find as the jury did; that an inference might fairly be drawn from the facts that the transaction amounted to payment of the premium, and it was to be assumed that the act was within the scope of the agent's employment; the fact that the agent was disobeying instructions did not prevent the inference though it might be considered in determining whether or not such inference should be drawn; and that a new trial should not be granted to enable the company to corroborate the testimony of the agent that he had no renewal receipt in his possession except one produced at the trial, as the company might have supposed that the plaintiff would seek to shew that such receipt had been obtained and were not taken by surprise. Manufacturers' Accident Ins. Co. v. Pudsey, xxvii., 374.

4. Condition in policy — Notice—Condition precedent. — A condition in a policy of insurance against accidents required that in the event of an accident thereunder, written notice, containing the full name and address of the insured, with full particulars of the accident, should be given within thirty days of its occurrence to the manager for the United States or the local agent. — Held, reversing the Supreme Court (N.B.), Gwynne, J., dissenting, that the giving of such notice was a condition precedent to the right to bring an action on the policy. Employers' Liability Ass. Corporation v. Taylor, xxix., 104.
